The COURT. If, of course, as I have assumed, it is predicated upon inferences to be drawn from the legal control that was given to the board of trustees and officers over the conduct of the Association, if merely inferences are to be drawn from those things, then there is no need for any supplemental offer; but if it goes beyond that and shows that contrary to and outside of the authority and duties laid down in these instruments, these corporate instruments, the officers in fact did assume to impose their will upon the doctors to the point which amounted to actual interference in a particular case, then I want to know that.

Mr. LEWIN. And I suppose counsel for the Government would get the information at the same time?

The COURT. It goes beyond that, because it is not a question of whether they did it under this offer, but whether that was known to the defendants.

I think that clears the situation up. My idea was to clarify these things that we have and then permit you gentlemen to add anything new in the way of argument that occurs to you, in the hope that I might dispose of this by 1:30 and go on with the evidence. But now the suggestion has been made by counsel for the Government that they would like a little time to consider these things more fully and that I ought to give them until 1:30 to do it. If I do that I will be in no position, of course, to dispose of it, because I do not want to have my mind reaching conclusions until any argument of counsel is completed. In other words, I want the views all before me before I attempt to consider the question. I do not want to lose time. It is getting to be a matter of anxiety to me, the way the case is being continued. Whether we would gain time by that or not I do not know.

Mr. LEWIN. What would your Honor think of this suggestion—adjourning for three quarters of an hour to let us get our thoughts in order?

The COURT. But that does not give me much time to think things over. It takes you gentlemen a little time to think, and it takes me a little time to think, too. The matter has been pretty well argued yesterday and supplemented by briefs, and I understand the points pretty well.

Mr. LEWIN. Let us submit it without argument, then.

Mr. LEAHY. I really do not know just where we are. Did you want time to look over something?

Mr. LEWIN. Yes. If you are going to make an argument on this thing, I would like to prepare myself to make an argument in answer to it.

The COURT. Let me ask defense counsel this, without scaring you. I have no conclusions at all at the present moment about it. If I should rule against you, would you be ready to go on on the basis of such a ruling?

Mr. LEAHY. Would your Honor indicate in respect to what points?

The COURT. With respect to the point of legality and belief, both of those questions.

Mr. LEAHY. Of course I would try to do the best I could. It would be pretty difficult, if your Honor please, and I should like to be heard on that question.

The COURT. Are you in position to argue that?

Mr. LEAHY. Yes; I will argue it now.

The COURT. You are, too, are you not?

Mr. LEWIN. I will be prepared to go on, I think.

Mr. RICHARDSON. We did not finish our arguments yesterday.

The COURT. No; the arguments were cut short yesterday.

Mr. LEAHY. If Mr. Lewin would like some time, subject to your Honor's own discretion in the matter, I do not want to object, because I know these questions come up, on both sides.

The COURT. If we do not go on, and I allow the decision to go over until Monday, you will be ready at that time to proceed?

Mr. LEAHY. Oh, yes.

The COURT. You have got to anticipate the decision either way.

Mr. LEAHY. Yes. I will not delay the court. We will be ready.

Mr. LEWIN. I do not want to be in the position of appearing to want delay, because I am really not in that position; but how would you feel about limiting the arguments so that you have plenty of time for the decision?

The COURT. I might give you a half hour apiece. Too much argument confuses me. I can digest just so much of it.

Mr. LEWIN. Suppose we start in at 1:30 and had an hour's argument and then your Honor took the rest of the day to consider these questions and gave us the decision today?

The COURT. It is not going to inconvenience you, because they are putting in their case now.

Mr. LEWIN. No; I was suggesting it from their point of view.

The COURT. Mr. Leahy says they will be ready.

Mr. LEWIN. I thought he said he had to have more time.

The COURT. They will have time to prepare themselves to meet the decision, whichever way it goes. I think on both sides you are entitled to a little further argument. I cut the defense counsel off, or they were cut off yesterday, by reason of developments. They had some ten or fifteen minutes left. Mr. Leahy was about to speak, I believe.

Mr. LEAHY. Yes, your Honor.

The COURT. And I should like to go on now so that I shall not have to come back here. When I have an important question to decide I like to get the argument over with and have time to think.

Mr. LEAHY. May I have about five minutes to step up to the Bar library?

The COURT. Yes. Don't you think you can meet the situation?

Mr. LEWIN. I will if your Honor wants me to.

The COURT. Your argument may not be quite as perfect in diction, and so forth, but I am sure you have the thought well in hand.

Mr. LEWIN. I feel a little bit unprepared, in view of this new development here.

The COURT. If it will help you any, I will give you until 11 o'clock.

Mr. LEWIN. I think that is fine. Would your Honor suggest the question or point you would care to hear argument on? Or don't you feel you would care to do that? Then we can narrow our endeavors.

The COURT. I do not want any repetition of what occurred yesterday.

Mr. KELLEHER. Would your Honor like to hear argument on legality of the contract and on the binding effect of the decision of Mr. Justice Bailey?

The COURT. You covered those points yesterday.

Mr. KELLEHER. I beg your Honor's pardon; I do not mean to contradict you, but I believe Mr. Lewin argued yesterday mainly that even if it were illegal it was not an issue in this case. We also take the position that the grant was a perfectly legal grant.

The COURT. I will not indicate to you what your argument shall be. I have indicated it to you in going over this paper, mentioning the things that concern me, and you have those general questions. I hesitate to allow my mind to reach any hasty conclusion. I would rather keep my mind open. I think it would be only fair if you want to supplement what you said yesterday, and I will give you an opportunity to do that before they speak. I think that would only be fair. If you find anything new that you want to discuss, then I think it would be better for you to lay that before me first, so that counsel will be in position to answer. I will give you until 11 o'clock. I expect to hold you to another hour. You have had your 30 minutes; you have had 30 minutes as against 20 minutes for the defendants, so far. I will add another hour to the argument. You get 20 minutes and they get 40 minutes.

(Thereupon an informal recess was taken until 11 o'clock a. m., at the conclusion of which the following proceedings took place:)

Mr. KELLEHER. Your Honor, as I understand it, we have 25 minutes and counsel for the other side have 35 minutes?

Mr. LEAHY. No—40 and 20.

The COURT. Don't waste any of it.

U. S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFF CE: 1943

of the District of Columbia to refuse to approve a contract between one of its members and a corporation illegally practicing medicine, or which it reasonably thinks is illegally practicing medicine. If this were not true, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia would be required to approve a contract between one of its members and a corporation illegally practicing medicine. The result of such an approval would subject the doctor in question and the Medical Society to a prosecution for violation of a law. The action of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia in refusing to approve such a contract is not evidence of a conspiracy in restraint of Group Health Association, Inc., but directly an effort to prevent its members from contracting with a corporation illegally practicing medicine. If the Medical Society of the District of Columbia cannot so enforce the provisions of its constitution it will be destroyed."

The Government objected to the receipt of any evidence on the issues described on the ground that such matters were incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; that the illegality of Group Health, the fact that its practice violated the principles of ethics of the defendants, that it was subsidized by the Government, or that these facts were believed by the defendants and that government officials such as the United States Attorney, the Corporation Counsel, the investigating committees of the House of Representatives and Senate of the United States, the Comptroller General of the United States had so ruled and publicly announced their rulings, and that legal proceedings were instituted for the purpose of having the legality of Group Health and its operations determined, were all incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

The Court ruled that none of the evidence described in the offer of proof of the defendants was admissible upon any of the grounds urged, sustained the objections of the Government, refused to receive any evidence of the character described in the offer and ruled as follows:

"The immediate question involves admissibility of certain evidence set forth in defendants' offer of proof. By understanding between court and counsel the offer covers in detail a broad range of evidence. In connection with evidence already in, it forms the basis for defendants' claim that Group Health Association, Inc., was illegally engaged in the practice of medicine. It is contended that the Anti-trust Act does not embrace a business illegal in its nature, and that the restraints forbidden relate only to lawful trade and commerce.

Further, it is contended that even if it be held that Group Health Association, Inc., was not an illegal enterprise, nevertheless defendants honestly believed it to be so, and therefore in defense may rightfully justify their acts by proving such beliefs and the facts supporting them, including advice of their counsel, an opinion of the Comptroller of the Treasury and a report of a congressional committee. It is argued that evidence of this kind is material and competent to refute a criminal intent, by showing that defendants' acts were taken only to protect themselves the profession and the public interests against supposed illegal activities of Group Health Association, Inc., and that if restraints did result they were under the circumstances reasonable.

The questions thus presented are important. The future course of the case awaits their determination. For obvious reasons my views must be but briefly stated.

1. As to illegality of Group Health Association, Inc., I do not think it was engaged in medical practice. It should be regarded merely as a convenient medium adopted by a group of persons for concerted action to secure for themselves and their dependents medical care upon a fixed prepayment plan. The association did not render medical service. It simply provided the personnel and facilities pursuant to the corporate plan adopted by the members. Licensed physicians so employed treated the patients without interference of the lay officers. Nor were the cooperative non-profit features of the plan calculated to commercialize or exploit the practice of medicine. In an actual, realistic sense, which I think is contemplated by the 'Healing Arts Practice Act', the doctors alone rendered the medical service. Only they were practicing medicine.

The situation was not altered by the contract whereby $40,000 were furnished by Home Owners Loan Corporation. If we assume the transaction to have been a wrongful diversion of public funds, that did not outlaw the business of Group Health Association, Inc., any more than would have been the case had a private trustee misapplied trust funds to the benefit of Group Health Association, Incorporated. However, culpable, it would not have the effect of transforming the corporate business into a lawless venture.

2. I do not think evidence of defendants' belief as to illegality of Group Health Association, Incorporated, or the reasons upon which it rested, is material. At best it could bear only on motive—not intent. However impelling the reasons which may lead one to commit a criminal act, they cannot legally justify or excuse, though they may mitigate. Motive, that ultimate desire or purpose which leads to the formation of the intent to do a prohibited act, is often easily confused with the intent itself; but the two are distinct, and only the latter presents a relevant issue. Then too, mistake of law will not ordinarily excuse. I do not understand that counsel dispute this general rule. But they do argue that one element of the offense here charged is a specific intent to restrain trade, hence that defendants' belief becomes material as bearing upon the particular purpose alleged. I doubt that as defined by the statute the offense technically involves a specific intent; but if so, it is not of a nature to bring the case within the very limited field in which ignorance or mistake of law can legally bear upon the intent.

3. Further, I understand the argument to be that an honest and reasonable belief that Group Health Association, Inc., was operating illegally would, under the appellate court's decision, afford the defendants a proper ground to justify restraints 'as reasonable regulations of professional practice' to protect and support their standards, methods, and economic interests. But the thesis is too broad. The language of the court has reference to the right of medical societies to reasonably regulate and discipline their members, to the end of raising and maintaining high standards of medical practice. Control, of course, is over the members only, and that must be limited to reasonable restraints in their practice of the profession. Even within that field I fail to see how defendants' belief, or the grounds giving rise to it, can have any relevancy to a question concerning the reasonableness of such regulatory controls. Reasonableness of belief is not the issue.

4. Finally, it is urged that the belief of illegality would supply a reason to support defendants' right of persuasion and argument in protecting their standards of professional practice and their economic interests. Of course legitimate argument and persuasion was and is available in seeking those objectives. But the contention is beside the point, for no restraint based upon argument and persuasion is alleged, nor could it constitute a legal charge.

The reasons stated lead me to the conclusion that the proof offered by defendants is not admissible upon any of the grounds urged. Therefore the Government's objection is sustained and the offer rejected.

"The offer of proof, as I have treated it, is the written paper filed March 14, 1941, as orally amended, revised and explained by counsel for the defendants. Many of the documentary items contained in the written offer are already in evidence. They can be dealt with later in keeping with this decision.

(Signed) James M. Proctor, Justice.

Dated March 17, 1941."

Exception noted.

DR. RICHARD H. PRICE, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am a practicing physician in active duty in the Naval Reserve, stationed at Norfolk, Virginia. I took my preliminary education at the Auburn, New York, High School; at Geneseo, New York, Normal School I received the medical student's qualifying certificate from the University of the State of New York; I graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Boston; I received most of my medical education at the University of Buffalo, New York; I did graduate work at Buffalo and post-graduate work at the University of Chicago and University of Pennsylvania, and have had ten years of hospital work. Besides internship my hospital work was mostly general medicine, internal medicine, neurology, and psychiatry. I have done medical work for many Government hospitals, United States Public Health Service, the Veterans Administration, and in hospitals at Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, East Norfolk, Massachusetts, Perryville, and Augusta.

I joined the staff of Group Health without pay in December of 1937 and went on their salary roll in January, 1938, in charge of general medicine, having done prior thereto X-ray work without pay. In 1938 I worked full time at Group Health from 9 in the morning until 6 p. m., and then the rest of the 24 hours, making calls in Virginia, Maryland, and the District. At first there were five doctors on the staff of Group Health, and then later possibly seven or eight. I generally made examinations and prescribed treatment, but didn't do major surgery, obstetrical or pediatric work. I made applications to two local hospitals, one in the spring of 1938, to Homeopathic, and one in the fall, to Garfield Hospital, seeking courtesy privileges in medical cases. This was my letter over my signature. I didn't acquire privileges at Homeopathic. I was given courtesy privileges at Garfield Hospital which covered only medical cases. I have never been a member of the District Medical Society. I have been a member of the AMA and ceased my membership in January, 1941.

I could not fix the date when it was that I obtained privileges at Garfield, but it was not very long after I made application; I think it was within a month after I made application. I am quite sure it was in the fall of 1938. I do not know whether I got them before December 20, 1938.

Q. Did you have any patients at all in any of the hospitals in Washington prior to December 20, 1938?

A. I am not certain about that.

Q. You are not certain?

A. No.

Mr. Leahy: Have you got the date, so that we can be sure of it?

Mr. Lewin: I think it was December 19.

Mr. Leahy: The day before?

Mr. Lewin: Yes.

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. You got your privileges on December 19, 1938. How long before that time did you make application for the privileges?

A. I believe it was about a month before.

Q. What difficulty did you have in obtaining privileges from Garfield Hospital, Doctor?

A. I did not have any difficulty in obtaining privileges.

Q. After you wrote the letter, and following a period of approximately a month, then what occurred?

A. I received the privileges asked for.

While I was on the staff of Group Health and particularly during the year 1938 up to December 20, 1938 I found that the quality of medical care which Group Health was able to give to its patients was not the care that I wanted to give patients. In other words, I did not think that it was adequate medical care. I would say that it was an attempt to practice medicine wholesale; and I think that adequate medical care would be the opposite. In other words personal service is the keynote of adequate medical care. My ability to give personal service to the patients that I had in Group Health was very limited. This was due to many factors. My final opinion was that it was due to the type of setup, rather than to any other possible factor. There were other factors, of course. It was an organization trying to take the place of the family physician, of the personal physician. That was the fundamental trouble with it. If I were sick in the middle of the night and would want medical care—if I were a member of an organization such as that and called for medical care and a doctor would come to see me who was not familiar with my case, and I would be too sick to go into details, I would not have the confidence in him that I would have in a doctor who knew me. If I may take just a minute or so—I believe we are not as individuals just the sum of our hearts and lungs and arms and legs; we are more than that. In other words, personality is more than just the sum of the things that we can determine by X-ray examination. If you are sick it is more important to me as a physician what you think about yourself than the way your heart sounds. I found upon visiting patients that they had had other doctors than myself. I had to attempt to care for more patients than I could give proper care to. During 1938 there were nearly a hundred patients who had been promised operations and were not given them during that time. The chief reason they were not given them was because the organization did not feel they had the money to pay for the hospitalization. I asked about this of the Medical Director many times. I didn't have any patients with Group Health whom I considered were my own. Concerning the failure to give operations to patients I was told by the Medical Director that it would be necessary to stall these operations off, which we did. The doctors I met, members of the Medical Society, were without exception very friendly to me, and kind in their attitude, and they didn't interfere with my practice with Group Health patients. I had occasion to seek advice and ask consultations with a member of the Medical Society, Dr. Thomas Lee. Dr. Lee visited the patients and sent me reports of what he found.

In 1938 I saw as many as 60 patients a day, and I, as a physician, couldn't render adequate medical service to as many as that. The other doctors on the staff were all overworked. I was called upon to see house calls in all types of cases except obstetric and pediatric ones. In making calls the patients didn't always receive the same doctor who had treated the patient formerly. The doctor making the call would not have the patient's record available and wouldn't know what the other doctor found or what the other doctor had prescribed; and the patient therefore would not have confidence in the new doctor. The doctor-patient relationship in Group Health was lost because we were attempting to practice wholesale.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

I had a serious heart case while at Group Health of a man over 40 years of age; in fact, I had two heart cases. In the man's case it was rather acute. When in private practice in Delaware I had available an electrocardiograph in the office of the duPont Company, and while at Group Health I had one. There is a great deal of discussion as to how much an electrocardiograph will indicate; it will not make a diagnosis, that takes a doctor. I felt the need in the heart cases of consulting a specialist, and called a member of the District Medical Society, Dr. Thomas Lee.

Q. Were you able to get a consultation with him?
A. May I express it in a few words?
Q. Won't you answer the question?
A. I cannot say no, and I cannot say yes.
Q. Were you able to get a consultation with him?
A. I called Dr. Lee on the telephone and asked him about the same case and he said, "Doctor, I would like to see the case with you, but there is some question, which I hope will be settled soon, about the legality of Group Health. Until that is settled I would rather see the patient myself and send you a report."

Q. Is that all he told you?

A. At that time.

Q. Did you ask him to come in consultation with you?

A. I asked him to see the patient. I am not sure whether I asked him to see the patient with me or not. But whether I asked the question directly, as to whether or not he would see the patient with me, his answer was as I have told you. I had not even met Dr. Lee.

Q. Did you ask him to come in consultation with you over that case?

A. I can't answer that yes or no.

Q. Did you testify before the grand jury of the United States that returned this indictment?

A. I did.

Q. Were you asked to tell about this case that I am asking you about now?

A. That is right.

Defendants objected to the use of the grand jury transcript on the ground that it should be shown to the witness and the witness asked if that refreshed his memory. Objection overruled and exception noted.

Q. As a matter of fact, you testified before the grand jury on October 31, 1938, did you not, toward the end of your association with Group Health Association? Is that right?

A. So far as I remember. I see that it is that date.

Q. And that is after you had been with Group Health Association something over ten months; is that right?

A. That is correct; yes.

Q. I point to this answer which you gave there and ask you if that refreshes your recollection as to whether or not you called Dr. Lee in consultation with you?

A. I should say that I did.

Q. You told us that Dr. Lee expressed some doubt as to the legality of Group Health Association. Was that your testimony?

A. That is what he said on the telephone. It was not that he expressed the doubt. He said there was a question, but I don't think he had any doubt about it.

Q. Did he not say that he would be glad to come in consultation with you, but he could not do it because you were a Group Health doctor and it was a Group Health patient?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did he not give the reason for that the instructions of the local District Medical Society?

A. He said they questioned the legality of it.

Q. Did he not say that he had been instructed by the local Association not to hold consultations with any doctors on the staff of Group Health?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that what he said?

A. That is correct.

• • • • • • •

Q. As a matter of fact, he did not consult with you, did he?

A. Not with me; no.

Q. He saw the patient independently, did he not?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was abnormal procedure, was it not, when you had asked a doctor to come in consultation with you?

A. Well, it is not exactly the usual view of consultation.

Q. What is the usual view?

A. I suppose the very meaning of the word would be coming together.

Q. Is there any advantage in that?

A. There is in many cases.

Q. But you were deprived of that advantage in this case, were you not?

A. That is correct, to that extent.

• • • • • • •

Q. Did you not have another patient also seriously ill with heart trouble?

A. That is right.

Q. An old lady over 60 years of age?

A. Yes.

Q. And was she not so sick that you thought she was going to die in your office?

A. In the office of Group Health Association.

Q. And did you not try again to get Dr. Lee in consultation?

A. I did; I called him again.

Q. Did you not get the same response from him, that the District Medical Society would not let him come?

A. The response was the same as the other time.

Q. Have I correctly characterized what the response was, that the District of Columbia Medical Society had a rule which forbade him to have any consultation with Group Health doctors?

A. He did say that the District Society questioned the legality of Group Health; I am pretty sure, both times. He said he did not have anything against me personally; there was not anything personal at all. He simply said that he hoped the thing would be settled soon.

Q. Did he not say in that case that the Medical Society still prevented him from having a consultation with you?

Mr. Leahy: I object to this constant repeating, if your Honor please, and doing by indirection what your Honor has told him not to do directly.

The Court: While I do not think Mr. Lewin so intended, it might be open to that objection.

Mr. Lewin: It is simply a question of holding it in my mind. I want to be accurate about it. I might have transcribed this into notes, and there could not be any question about my using them.

The Court: It is a little difficult to decide. Proceed.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Will you answer that question?

A. Of course—would you mind repeating the question?

Q. Did he not tell you in connection with this old lady's case that the Medical Society still prevented him from having consultation with you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he not say that he hoped matters would be straightened out so that you could have consultations in the usual way?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Richardson: I would like to suggest that this alleged grand jury transcript be taken away from in front of counsel. He is simply reading from it and avoiding your Honor's ruling with reference to it.

Mr. Lewin: I do not think I am.

Mr. Richardson: Why not put it out of the way?

Mr. Lewin: Why do you have any doubt about the authenticity of it? Why can I not read it?

The Court: It is pretty difficult for the court to control that. Suppose it were some other paper that he was refreshing his recollection from: you could not object to it. Suppose he had copied it off from these pages to another piece of paper. The difficulty has arisen from identifying that as the report of the grand jury proceedings. That is where the mistake arose, not by the use of the paper itself.

Mr. Richardson: Of course his producing it is not our fault; but having produced it and identified it, standing there and turning the pages and reading it leaves the impression that the grand jury testimony is being read to the witness.

The Court: The mistake has been made in identifying those notes as particular notes. It is just one of those things that will happen. I cannot wipe that out.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Is it not true that while you were with Group Health you had a number of other cases where you would have had the usual consultations but could not get them—let me change that—and could not have them because of this rule?

Mr. Leahy: What rule?

Mr. Lewin: The rule of the District Medical Society—just what Dr. Lee gave as his reason.

A. I do not recall any. There may have been.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Do you not recall other cases in which you would like to have had face to face consultations with specialists in the District of Columbia, members of the District Medical Society, if you could have obtained them?

A. I think there probably were.

Q. Were you not blocked from obtaining them or trying to obtain them because of this experience which you had with Dr. Lee in those two cases?

A. I think I can say yes to that, in the same way.

I was with Group Health as late as December 20, 1938. At that time I was a member of the AMA through the Newcastle County, Delaware, Medical Society.

Q. Had you not received some instructions from the American Medical Association at that time that you would have to change your membership to some other local society?

A. I do not recall that now; no, sir.

Q. Would you like to have your memory refreshed?

A. I don't recall anything about it right now.

Q. Let me show you this and see if it refreshes your recollection (handing transcript to the witness). Had you not had instructions from the AMA that you must apply to the District Medical Society for membership if you wanted to retain your membership in the AMA?

Defendants objected on the ground that it was immaterial and outside the scope of the direct examination. Objection overruled and exception allowed.

The Witness: I had a letter something about applying locally, but I do not think it said the District Medical Society.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. What did it mean by applying locally?

A. If I recall now, it was a ruling of the American Medical Association that a doctor away from his former place of practice more than a year should apply in his new locality for membership rather than to maintain his membership in the old location.

Q. And your new locality was the District of Columbia, was it not?

A. Not my residence; Group Health was, yes.

. . . . . .

Q. As a matter of fact, throughout the whole period of 1938, from the time you joined Group Health Association until October 31, 1938, were you not able to give better treatment to your patients, and superior treatment to your patients, while you were with Group Health, than you were able to do in your private practice in Delaware?

A. No.

Q. Let me see if I can refresh your recollection.

May I do that, your Honor?

The Court: I think you may, for that.

(Mr. Lewin handed transcript to the witness.)

A. In some ways, yes, but not in every way.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Did you not believe in October, 1938 that we, meaning Group Health Association, could give better medical care than could be given in private practice?

A. No; I don't believe that we could.

Mr. Lewin: Now, your Honor, may I confront him more directly? I would like to show this to your Honor (handing transcript to the court).

The Court: You may let him see it.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. You have seen this portion of your grand jury testimony, have you not (indicating)?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your testimony since you have seen this answer to my last question?

A. I still think that at the present time we could not give them as good attention.

Q. What did you think while you were with them in October, 1938, and throughout that whole period, from January, 1938, to October, 1938? What was your opinion then?

A. I did mention something about the patient's pocketbook, and so forth, that we did not have to worry about the patient's pocketbook. But, on the other hand, I feel certain now——

Q. Now, wait a minute. I am asking you what you thought then. That is not responsive.

Mr. Leahy: I object, if your Honor please. The proper thing to do is to say, "Were you not asked this question and did you not give this answer?"

* * * * * * *

Q. In October, 1938, were you not asked this question and did you not give this answer:

"What about the kind of treatment that you can give patients at Group Health as compared with the kind of treatment you could give patients in your private practice in Delaware?"

And did you not give this answer:—

Mr. Leahy: I object to the use of this transcript, which your Honor has again and again called to counsel's attention. It does not do any good for your Honor to give a direction; he just simply walks over it.

Mr. Kelleher: That is not a fair statement.

The Court: I will permit him to ask the question. I have seen the answer. Exception noted.

Q. Did you not give this answer to that question?

"Well, the treatment and care are superior here, because we have the association with other men in the various specialties and have complete and adequate laboratory facilities, and also because we can devote our entire time to medical work and not have to think about the patient's pocketbook and so on. So I believe we can give the patients better medical care."

What is your answer?

A. That I did say that; yes.

Mr. Richardson: May we now inspect the transcript that counsel just read?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Kelleher: May we approach the bench?

The Court: Not on that. Counsel has the right to see it.

Mr. Kelleher: All we mean is to be sure that the limitation is correctly expressed. They can see the part that is addressed to the witness.

The Court: Yes.

Thereupon, the portion of the grand jury transcript from which the witness was questioned was handed to defense counsel.

Redirect examination:

I described the condition of the patient to Dr. Lee over the phone and told him I would like to have him see the patient, and he said he would be glad to see the patient and send me a report. Dr. Lee said there was a question of the legality of Group Health, the association with which I was connected. Dr. Lee did so, sending me as soon as possible a full report, and the patient got better. With reference to the lady, Dr. Lee repeated again in substance what he had previously told me concerning my gentleman patient, and consulted with me over the phone, and that such discussion, over the phone, while not face to face, is a consultation.

I discussed with Dr. Lee over the telephone the condition of each of these patients; he went into full details about their conditions and his findings. He visited the lady patient as soon as possible, and she got better.

Q. Now, referring to these questions asked with reference to the character and type of care, do you recall whether at any time shortly after October, 1938, along about December, 1938, or January, early January, 1939, there came a time when you resigned from G. H. A.?

The Government objected on the ground it was beyond the scope of the indictment and improper redirect examination. Defendants stated there is an attempt made at impeachment and it can be shown that at or about the same time the same sentiments were expressed concerning Group Health.

Objection was sustained and exception allowed. The defendant then offered to prove through the witness that he had publicly announced his aforesaid reasons for resigning from Group Health; that Group Health later rehired him and gave him assurance the conditions of which he complained, and under which the witness believed he could not give adequate and complete medical care, would be corrected by the employment of more doctors; that on returning to the employ of Group Health these conditions were not cured by Group Health and he resigned again for the same reasons. This offer was refused by the Court and the exception of the defendants was noted.

I recall no other case of consultations with doctors over the telephone and such cases must be hypothetical rather than actual.

PERCY S. BROWN, a witness for the defendants.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am treasurer and trustee of the Twentieth Century Fund, and secretary treasurer and executive director of the Good Will Fund. I know very little about Health Economics Association, Incorporated, which was supported by the Twentieth Century Fund, of which Mr. Rickcord was director. I am joint secretary and treasurer of the joint committee of the two funds—Twentieth Century and Good Will Fund, Inc. I identify Def. Ex. 31 as the auditor's report entitled "Twentieth Century Fund, Inc.—Report on Examination of Account, March 1, 1936, to February 28, 1937"; Def. Ex. 32 as the auditor's report entitled "Twentieth Century Fund, Inc.—Report on Examination of Account, March 1, 1937, to February 28"; Def. Ex. 33 as the auditor's report entitled "Good Will Fund, Inc.—Report on Examination of Account, December 29, 1936, to December 31, 1938"; Def. Ex. 34 as the auditor's report entitled "Good Will Fund, Inc.—Report on Examination of Account, January 1, 1939, to December 31, 1939"; Def. Ex. 35 as the auditor's report entitled "Good Will Fund, Inc.—Report on Examination of Account, January 1, 1940, to December 31, 1940"; Def. Ex. 35-A as the auditor's report entitled "Twentieth Century Fund, Inc.—Report on Examination of Account, March 1, 1938, to February 28, 1939"; Def. Ex. 36 as the report of the joint committee of the two funds entitled "Joint Committee, Twentieth Century Fund and Good Will Fund—Financial Report—November 9, 1938, through December 31, 1939"; Def. Ex. 37 as the report of the joint committee entitled "Joint Committee, Twentieth Century Fund and Good Will Fund—Financial Report—Twelve Months Ended December 31, 1940"; Def. Ex. 38 as the pamphlet issued by the Twentieth Century Fund entitled "The Twentieth Century Fund, Annual Report—1938 (March 1, 1938 to February 28, 1939)"; Def. Ex. 39 as the pamphlet issued by the Twentieth Century Fund entitled "The Twentieth Century Fund, Annual Report—1937"; Def. Ex. 40 as the pamphlet issued by the Twentieth Century Fund entitled "Twentieth Century Fund, Annual Report—1936"; and Def. Ex. 41 as the pamphlet issued by the Twentieth Century Fund entitled "The Twentieth Century Fund, Annual Report—1935". The audits were made by the auditor, Herbert P. French. The financial statements of the joint committee are the statements of the committee. The annual reports are the regular published annual reports of the Twentieth Century Fund. All of the papers are produced from the files and records of the Twentieth Century Fund and Good Will Fund, Inc., and the joint committee of these funds. The reports of the joint committee were prepared in my own office by my own secretary, who was also the bookkeeper and who prepared them under my supervision and direction, and they are part of the joint committee records. As treasurer of the Twentieth Century Fund I am required to have an audit made every year, and copies of these audits are mailed to each of the trustees and filed. These audits were taken up at the annual meetings of the board of trustees of each organization and have them approved, and have become part of the records of each organization. I have a recollection of these records in so far as they pertain to Group Health Association and the entries made in these exhibits actually represent what they purport to represent, and are original records. I will initial the items which refer to Group Health. (Witness initials exhibits.) Health Economics Association, Inc., was set up by Twentieth Century Fund.

Q. And, Mr. Brown, of your own personal knowledge do you know whether it was the Health Economics, Inc., which was instrumental in having HOLC set up GHA?

This question was objected to by the Government as immaterial. Whereupon the defendants offered to prove by the witness and through the various reports and audits identified by him that Health Economics Association, Inc., was instrumental in setting up Group Health and furnishing it with financial support, for the purpose of showing that Group Health Association was subsidized, and to meet the testimony of the witnesses Penniman and Zimmerman. The evidence offered was, upon objection by the Government, refused and an exception noted.

Mr. Leahy: Just one more question, Mr. Brown: Showing you Defendants' Exhibit 33 for identification, I am drawing your attention to an item which is numbered 2, under "appropriations and Grants" and "Good Will Fund, Inc." Does this have anything to do whatsoever with GHA?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Would you so indicate by your initials? (The witness complied.)

DR. ROSCOE GENUNG LELAND, a defendant, and witness for the defendants.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am a doctor. I reside in Chicago. I am director of the Bureau of Medical Economics of the American Medical Association and have been for the past ten years. I graduated from the Mendon, Michigan, High School, graduating from the University of Michigan, Department of Literature, Science, and the Arts, with a degree of Bachelor of Arts, in 1907; in 1909 I graduated from the Michigan University with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, took an assistant internship at the University of Michigan, and from 1910 to 1919 engaged in private practice of medicine for nine years in southwestern Michigan. During this period I entered the service of the Army of the United States, and served in the United States, France, and England, for 26 months, until May of 1919. Then I went on the staff of the Ohio State Department of Health as administrative head of the Division of Health, which division comprised the Bureaus of Tuberculosis, Hospitals, Public Health Nursing, Venereal Diseases, Social Protective Measures, and Care of Ophthalmia or Prevention of Ophthalmia in the newborn, for six years. I then went to Toledo, Ohio, as executive secretary of the Toledo Public Health Association, consisting of 26 private organizations, where I remained for 15 months. In 1927 I went to Chicago to become assistant in the Bureau of Health and Public Instruction of the AMA, with which Bureau, which is still in existence, I remained four years; the function of that Bureau is to provide information on health matters and the preservation of health and the prevention of disease for the public, circulating that information through the health magazine published by the AMA known as Hygeia. The Bureau also publishes a large number of publications on health subjects and has in charge a radio program, which latter has been devised to carry information concerning the medical profession and health to the public, particularly to children in grade and high schools. The Bureau publishes about 50 or 75 magazines, in addition to providing radio program items, which number several hundred. This literature is distributed free of charge on request.

Later I became director of the Bureau of Medical Economics of the AMA, formed in 1931, in which work I have three associates and 25 clerks. The Bureau undertakes to discover and collect information on sickness and the way in which people get their hospital and medical care, and meet their bills. It keeps vital statistics pertaining to births and deaths and the types and amount of diseases. A large amount of this information is collected from official organizations such as the U. S. Census Bureau, International Labor Organization in Geneva, Switzerland, and a large number of organizations that are engaged in the collection of information pertaining to vital statistics, and also from medical organizations that have conducted studies in various parts of the country. Some articles of the Bureau are published in the Journal. In publishing articles the Bureau of Medical Economics tries definitely to present both sides. On some subjects there is probably only one side. In publishing scientific articles we endeavor to bring to the examination of the subject under consideration the highest degree of scientific treatment in order to arrive at a most sound judgment.

I first heard of Group Health at the AMA meeting at Atlantic City in June 1937. I don't recall seeing a copy of the letter of Major General Ireland (Gov. Ex. 295-A) that was said to have been sent to my Bureau, and which was read here at this trial. Dr. Woodward at the convention made a brief report or statement on Group Health to the House of Delegates. I don't recall any action taken concerning Group Health at the June meeting. The next time I heard of Group Health was when I was asked to accompany Dr. Woodward to Washington in July, 1937 to confer with members of the District Medical Society. The only instructions I had when I came to Washington then were to secure as much information as possible about the nature and operation of Group Health. I had made no effort prior to that time to find out anything about Group Health, and knew nothing about the existence of such an organization. I came to Washington in July, 1937, and attended a meeting of the Medical Society. The only physicians I remember there were Dr. Conklin, Dr. Macatee, Dr. Hooe, and Dr. McGovern. I had met Dr. McGovern and Dr. Macatee but not Dr. Hooe prior to the meeting. I had met Dr. Christie in connection with some work on the cost of medical care; I have never met Dr. Custis, Dr.

Martel; Dr. Neill, Dr. Reede, Dr. Sprigg, Dr. Stanton, Dr. Warfield, Dr. Wilson, Dr. Young prior to the trial. I met Dr. Groover in 1937, Dr. Mattingly in 1937 and Dr. Yater in 1935. At meetings of the District Society I obtained no further information than what I had already had concerning Group Health, which pertained to the articles of incorporation and some information about financing. The only other detail of the meeting I remember is that Dr. Woodward suggested that the District Society ought to have counsel. I made a suggestion for the Medical Society itself pertaining to a method by which prepayment medical care could be organized. I never attended any other meetings of the District Medical Society concerning Group Health. I have attended other meetings of the District Medical Society. On returning to Chicago I made a verbal report of the visit to Washington to Dr. West, and did nothing further. From the time of my talk with Dr. West I have done nothing in any way, shape or form with reference to Group Health. In November, 1938, I discussed with a committee of the District Medical Society a plan to provide people of the low-income group with medical services on a prepayment basis. The Society was formulating a plan as the outgrowth of a plan they developed in 1935. I never discussed with the officers or members of the District Society any matters, ways or means of anyone hindering or restraining Group Health and had no correspondence on the subject. I paid no attention to Group Health after the meeting in July, though I may have asked an occasional question or two of Dr. Woodward concerning it.

I attended a meeting on November 6, 1937 with Drs. McGovern, Hooe, West, and Woodward, but took no part in that meeting and did not say a word. In 1937 and 1938 I had two assistants in the Bureau, trained to take care of certain studies and certain correspondence. The correspondence of the Bureau varies from 3,000 to 8,000 letters a year. A great deal of this correspondence is inquiries necessitating considerable research in order to return intelligent and satisfactory replies. The Bureau has no jurisdiction to fix any policy concerning group payment or prepayment plans of medicine as policies are established by the House of Delegates of the AMA. In 1934 the House of Delegates adopted ten principles intended to assist state and county medical societies in the organization of plans of prepayment care. Later the House of Delegates also adopted ten principles which apply to the organization and administration of group hospitals. The only opposition that the Bureau has had, which was established by the House of Delegates, is opposition to compulsory sickness insurance. No other policy whatsoever has characterized the work of the Bureau.

Mr. Laux and Mr. Simons, who worked in my Bureau, have carried on a considerable amount of correspondence I have never seen. I had no knowledge, until I heard it read at the trial, of the contents of the correspondence dictated by Mr. Laux and Mr. Simons. I read only bits of correspondence coming into the Bureau which I felt I should answer myself and sometimes correspondence which I pass on to associates to handle. Gov. Ex. 265 looks familiar as it bears the stamp of the Bureau. I have no recollection that I ever read it myself. I wrote Gov. Ex. 264. It is an answer to Gov. Ex. 265. Dr. Arthur J. Cramp was the director of the Bureau of Investigation of the American Medical Association, an independent bureau that collects information concerning the operations of quacks, charlatans, patent medicines and a lot of curious devices for the treatment of people. The information collected is published in the Journal of the AMA.

"March 16, 1934.

DEAR DR. CRAMP:

I am enclosing a copy of a circular which we have just received through our Los Angeles representative. This is designed to interest our Los Angeles agencies as a group to avail themselves of whatever service this medical clinic has to offer at the fee schedule, as I understand, which is quoted herein.

Before instructing our general agent in Los Angeles as to what they shall do relative to this matter, I should like your opinion concerning the ethics of this group, and whether the principle on which such a medical group is operated is consistent with the highest medical ethics.

Doubtless, there is available to you full information concerning the staff of physicians who make up this particular medical group. In so far as you know, are they all men of ability and integrity?

I should greatly appreciate your opinion concerning this matter and any recommendation which you n ay have regarding this type of medical practice.

Very truly yours, Ernest J. Dewees, Assistant Medical Director, Providence Mntual Life Insurance Company."

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 264 to the jury as follows:

"March 23, 1934.

DEAR DR. DEWEES:

The Los Angeles Medical Association, I believe, will be glad to give you a more recent report on the personnel and activities of the Ross-Loos medical group than can be given from this bureau.

I am personally of the opinion that the methods used by many of the organizations similar to this one do not contribute to the best interests of either the public or medical profession.

The Secretary of the Los Angeles Medical Association is Dr. Harry H. Wilson, whose office is at 1925 Wiltshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, California.

It may be of some interest to you to note a newspaper report under date of March 6, 1934, states that Dr. H. C. Loos and Donald Ross 'were banished from the Los Angeles County Medical Association Monday night for engaging in a plan of health insurance.'

For that and other reasons, I believe it might be more satisfactory for you to secure the information you desire from the Los Angeles Medical Association.

Sincerely yours, R. G. Leland."

In writing this letter we had information concerning the organization and operation of the Ross-Loos medical group, but this information concerning the newspaper item was entirely news. We had nothing on which to verify that statement, therefore, it seemed to me that checking with the local people was the wise procedure. The AMA has never taken any action against the Ross-Loos Clinic. The AMA had no jurisdiction over the activities of the Los Angeles Medical Association. The question of the Ross-Loos Clinic came to the Judicial Council of the AMA late in 1935 or in 1936 as an appeal from an action of the California

Medical Association. The appeal was by Doctors Ross and Loos. The AMA reversed the action of the California Medical Society and I believe that Doctors Ross and Loos are members of the AMA at this time.

In stating to Dr. Dewees that: "I am personally of the opinion that the methods used by many of the organizations similar to this one do not contribute to the best interests of either the public or the medical profession," I referred to information that had come to the Bureau of Medical Economics concerning a considerable number of organizations that had become legally involved in California. I believe there were some 143 of such organizations in California, and many of them had become organized in late 1933, or early 1934—a few some years before that—and about 1933 some of those organizers were indicted and sent to prison. There was a list of 143 of them that were being investigated and, as I recall it, at least six or seven individuals were finally indicted and sentenced.

There are some 2,000 or more medical industrial care plans. There are 300 student health services in colleges and universities; about 300 organizations of the type known as mutual health and hospital organizations, called consumer groups. About 500, including the 143 from California, of these plans are operating. There are 19 flat-rate plans used by hospitals; 54 hospital insurance companies; 78 group hospital plans operating, and 60 more proposed; 350 group medical plans, 24 union sick benefit plans, and 350 rural medical plans sponsored by the Farm Security Administration. The only action taken by the AMA concerning these plans is to secure information about them and, in some instances, to publish the facts concerning them. As director of our Bureau I have taken no action against any one of these plans. The methods used by many of these organizations, as I mentioned in my letter to the Providence Mutual Life Insurance Company as not tending to contribute to the public interest, were those used by institutions in California which took money away from people and were not in existence and did not give the service when the people needed the service.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 268 in reply to Gov. Ex. 269.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 269 to the jury as follows:

"May 25, 1934.

GENTLEMEN:

We have out here in Los Angeles a medical group called the Ross-Loos medical group. Could you advise me if this organization meets with the unqualified endorsement of the AMA? I have been of the opinion that it was not exactly ethical and for that reason didn't care to endorse it.

Thanking you for this information,

Yours truly, George Horton."

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 268, just identified by Dr. Leland as his reply, dated May 31, 1934, to the inquiry (Gov. Ex. 269) to the jury as follows:

"The Los Angeles Medical Association, I believe, will be able to give you a more recent report on the personnel and activities of the Ross-Loos medical group than can be given from this bureau.

The Secretary of the Los Angeles Medical Association is Dr. Harry H. Wilson, whose address is 1925 Wiltshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, California.

I am personally of the opinion that the methods used by many of these organizations similar to this one do not contribute to the best interests of either the public or the medical profession.

It may be of some interest to you to know that a newspaper report under date of March 6, 1934, states that Doctors H. C. Loos and Donald Ross 'were banished from the Los Angeles County Medical Association Monday night for engaging in a plan of health insurance.'

For that and other reasons I believe it might be more satisfactory for you to secure the information you desire from the Los Angeles Medical Association."

In expressing my opinion concerning many of these organizations, I also had in mind in addition to the situation heretofore stated that many of them used advertising and solicitation, which are not considered ethical practices, as they afford opportunity to make exaggerated and unwarranted claims for the advertised benefits, and the same holds true as to solicitation, which involves a certain amount of mouth advertising.

I have no personal recollection at the present time of Gov. Ex. 271, but Gov. Ex. 270 is a letter which I wrote in reply to Gov. Ex. 271.

Defense counsel read to the jury as follows:

Gov. Ex. 271 is a letter of inquiry from R. H. Ludden, M. D., physician and surgeon, Viroqua, Wisconsin, directed to the American Medical Association, attention of R. G. Leland.

June 2, 1934.

"GENTLEMEN:

Could you please send me information on the Ross-Loos medical group, Los Angeles, California?

Yours very truly, R. H. Ludden, M. D."

Gov. Ex. 270 is a carbon of a reply which Dr. Leland states he has written to Gov. Ex. 271. It is dated June 5, 1934, directed to Dr. Ludden. It was read from, as follows:

"The Los Angeles Medical Association, I believe, will be able to give you a more recent report on the personnel and activities of the Ross-Loos medical group than can be given from this Bureau."

Q. Now, Doctor, have you seen the Ross-Loos Clinic since 1932, when you stated you visited it?

A. I have not.

Mr. Leahy:

"I am personally of the opinion that the methods used by many of the organizations similar to this one do not contribute to the best interests of either the public or medical profession."

Then he gives the name of the Secretary of the Los Angeles Medical Society; then the same paragraph as to the newspaper account of March 6, 1934, and concludes:

"For this and other reasons, I believe it might be more satisfactory for you to secure the information you desire from the Los Angeles Medical Association."

In 1934 I learned from a newspaper account that Doctors Ross and Loos had become involved somewhat with the Los Angeles Medical Association and that was why I referred some inquiries to Los Angeles Medical Association.

I don't recall Gov. Ex. 273 at this time, but I wrote Gov. Ex. 272 in reply:

Defense counsel then read to the jury as follows:

This in an inquiry from Drs. Rigby and Hargrave, at Shreveport, Louisiana; it is Gov. Ex. 273, dated January 22, 1935. It is addressed to the American Medical Association.

"GENTLEMEN:

Due to the fact that I am chairman, of the Economics Committee, of the Shreveport Medical Society, I desire to get all the information that is obtainable on Medical Economics. We have, in this vicinity, some members of the medical fraternity, who do not belong to our local or state society and who engage in extensive advertising to further their practice of medicine. We have one, who claims to be a Fellow of Procology, and there are others whom I could name operating in various branches of medicine. I also have in my possession, some information from the Ross-Loos Medical Group, Los Angeles, California. I would like to know if the Ross-Loos Medical Group of Los Angeles, are an ethical group of Doctors and if they belong to organized medicine.

Any information you may be able to give me will be appreciated."

To this Dr. Leland wrote the original of which Gov. Ex. 272 is a copy, dated March 4, 1935.

Gov. Ex. 272 read by defense counsel to the jury as follows: (Excerpt.)

"The Los Angeles Medical Association, I believe, will be able to give you a more recent report on the personnel and activities of the Ross-Loos Medical Group than can be given from this bureau.

The Secretary of the Los Angeles Medical Association is Dr. Harry H. Wilson," giving his address.

"I am personally of the opinion that the methods used by many of the organizations," and the same paragraph again.

"It may be of some interest," and the same paragraph.

"For this and other reasons, I believe it might be more satisfactory for you to secure the information you desire from the Los Angeles Medical Association.

Under separate cover I am sending you a complete set of the publications of this bureau which I trust will be of interest and benefit to you."

During the time between my letters of June, 1934 and this letter in March, 1935 I had received no additional information on the Ross-Loos Clinic. These various inquiries did not induce me to make any investigation of the Ross-Loos Clinic for or on behalf of the AMA. In 1932 I made an investigation of the Ross-Loos Clinic on my own initiative. I called at the Ross-Loos Medical Clinic where I was received very cordially. I met Doctors Ross and Loos and a considerable number of the staff. I was shown the clinic building and the facilities used for diagnosis and treatment of patients, to acquaint me with the methods and personnel of the Ross-Loos medical group. This was a routine visit made shortly after the organization of the Bureau of Medical Economics for the purpose of collecting information. I visited many other groups that year. We collected additional information and published it. The AMA never took any other action on this information.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 274. It was in reply to an inquiry from Mr. Baker, Executive Secretary of the Hennepen County Medical Association, Minneapolis, Minnesota and my letter is dated April 30, 1935.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 274 to the jury as follows:

"DEAR MR. BAKER:

The Kansas City Industrial Hospital Association agreement with the Butler Manufacturing Company is but another example of similar types of contract practice that exist in other parts of the United States. Patients are not given freedom of choice of physician but must accept the physician furnished by the Industrial Hospital Association. The agreement states that members may at their own expense call or employ their own physician. Nothing is said as to the manner in which hospital care will be provided, although it is inferred that beneficiaries must be taken care of in hospitals of the Association in the event hospital care is necessary.

This type of organization has been brought to the attention of the medical profession on several occasions. It is one which, in my opinion, ought to be discouraged.

Under separate cover I am sending you several copies of our reprint 'New Forms of Medical Practice,' in which several types of this form of arrangement are discussed.

Sincerely yours,"

When I said that it was similar to other forms of contract practice that existed in other parts of the United States I meant forms of contract practice that existed in various parts of the United States for many years; but there seems to have been a concentration of contract practice of a low type in certain sections, some in West Virginia; some in the State of Washington, and some in Oregon; and on the basis of the performances of these types of contract practice I believe that those particular types ought to be discouraged. Those types of contract practice, group and individual, were organized to provide a certain amount of service under contract at a very low cost. It was the custom for others, individuals or groups, to organize similar services with contracts to provide medical care or hospital care, or both, offering either the same amount of service for less money, or more services for the same amount of money. In some cases this competition, if it can be called that, or solicitation, went from bad to worse by constantly lowering the quality of medical care offered. I could give you some examples; some of the bad features. I refer to such an example as the amputation of a man's arm, instead of carrying the man through to the reasonable restoration of that arm to function, because it would require less time than the process of treatment and rehabilitation. There were a large number of these low grade organizations all over the country.

Gov. Ex. 277 refers to a situation in Cincinnati, Ohio. A representative of the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati had made some investigation of prepayment plans and has proposed a special form of prepayment arrangement to be organized and operated in Cincinnati.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 277 to the jury as follows:

On the stationery of the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, dated March 2, 1936, to Dr. Leland:

"The Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati is confronted with the following problem:

Dr. George H. Cook, after some service with the Ross-Loos at Los Angeles, is preparing to start such a clinic in Cincinnati. Some of the members of the Academy of Medicine whom he has approached have asked the Academy whether an association with this clinic will jeopardize their standing with the Academy. The Executive Council of the Academy has ruled that this question must be answered by the entire County Society. This will be brought to a vote on Tuesday, March 10th. Have you any information about this clinic or have you any experience which will guide us in handling this matter?

The Executive Council will meet on Friday afternoon, March 6th, and I would appreciate hearing from you by that time if possible.

Thanking you in advance for any information you can give us, and with very best wishes, I am Sincerely yours, Edward D. King, President."

Gov. Ex. 276 is the letter which I wrote in reply.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 276 to the jury as follows:

That's numbered Gov. Ex. 276 and runs to Dr. King, President of the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati, dated March 4, 1936.

"This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 2nd, relative to the formation of a clinic similar to the Ross-Loos Medical Group in Los Angeles.

The effect of association with such a group by members of the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati must be determined by the Academy, which has the original jurisdiction over the ethical conduct of its members."

Q. Doctor, why did you write that to Dr. King?

A. Well, because it's true.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the ethical conduct of members of the Academy in Cincinnati?

A. Only in so far as I might discuss the matter with the Secretary or some member of the Academy. I had no authority nor jurisdiction over the members of the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati.

Q. For instance, if the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati wanted to start a clinic, what jurisdiction did your bureau have over it?

A. Not a particle.

Q. What jurisdiction did the American Medical Association have over it?

A. Nothing, nothing.

Q. In other words, was the Academy entirely independent of you and the American Medical Association, anything it wanted to do?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. (Continuing reading from Gov. Ex. 276): "I believe that you should bear in mind that the press, which has socialistic leanings, has energetically taken up the cudgel for the Ross-Loos Medical Group."

Now, what did you mean by that statement, Doctor, when you said: that the press which had "socialistic leanings"?

A. Well, I think many of us have seen certain publications that have a very liberal view and that have from time to time published articles and have assumed the attitude that the socialization of medicine would be a good thing for the people and for the profession of the United States.

Mr. Leahy (Reading): "An attempt is being made to show that the Ross-Loos method is the most desirable method of providing medical care.

I believe that in the discussion of this matter, your Executive Council and the membership of the Academy as well, should bear in mind the Ten Principles adopted by the House of Delegates at the Cleveland Session in 1934, as a measure of the necessity for, and the method of providing medical services. For example, the 3rd Principle states, 'Patients must have absolute freedom to choose a legally qualified doctor of medicine, who will serve them from among all those qualified to practice and who are willing to give service.' Since I do not have before me the details of the proposal by Dr. George H. Cook, I do not know whether his plan contemplates such a freedom of choice of physician.

Again, the 8th Principle states, 'Any form of medical service should include within its scope all legally qualified doctors of medicine of the locality covered by its operation, who wish to give service under the conditions established.'

Under separate cover, I am sending you a copy of the Special Report of this Bureau entitled, 'Medical Service Plans,' adopted by the House of Delegates at the Atlantic City Session. However, I am calling your special attention to these two principles.

There are other factors which must be considered in examining any proposal to supplement the regular practice of medicine. In many instances these factors may not be apparent in the proposals themselves, but develop later in the operation of the scheme. I refer particularly to the quality of medical care and other methods by which subscribers or participants are obtained. In many schemes which have come to my attention, the amount charged for the medical care has been so small that there could be but one outcome—a reduction in either the amount or the quality of the medical services given, and in many instances, both these factors are involved. The manner of securing subscribers involves a practical application of the Principles of Medical Ethics, especially as these principles pertain to solicitation and unfair commercial competition.

It is my understanding that the Ross-Loos Medical Group was composed of a number of very competent physicians."

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. Did you believe that when you wrote it, Doctor?
A. I did.

Mr. Leahy (Reading): "As far as I know, the quality of medical care given seems to be good. I am unable to give you all the details of the operation of this medical group or their methods of securing subscribers. However, I am enclosing a copy of an article which appeared in the Los Angeles City Employees Magazine. I am also enclosing a copy of a pamphlet of Information for Subscribers of the Ross-Loos Medical Group.

It is my further understanding that the Ross-Loos Medical Group in Los Angeles entered into contracts with certain groups of municipal employees and others, under the terms of which medical services would be furnished by the members of the Ross-Loos group for certain stipulated sums. Furthermore, it is my understanding that each member of the groups concerned was required to pay a certain amount each week or month, and that this sum would be used to pay the cost of service rendered by the Ross-Loos clinic. I am informed that the Los Angeles County Medical Association objected to the operation of this plan, by the Ross-Loos group, and the charges were finally preferred against Doctors Ross and Loos. These charges were substantiated by the Council of the Los Angeles Medical Association, and on appeal, the California Medical Association upheld the action of the Los Angeles Medical Association whereby Doctors Ross and Loos were expelled from membership. This case was appealed to the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association. The decision of the Council may be found in the Journal of January 25, 1936," the volume stated. "You will note, however, that the Judicial Council decision expresses no opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the appellants in connection with any unethical practices alleged and charged against them.

If at any time you believe I may be of some assistance to you, I shall be pleased to help to the limit of my ability."

In 1935 the Bureau published a report entitled "Medical Service Plans," listing the service plans which had come to our attention throughout the United States in the form of state medical society plans, county medical society plans, and the various classifications of services which they gave, either for indigents or low-income groups, including post-payment and prepayment plans. In 1935 there were very few plans operated by the medical societies throughout the country for the prepayment of the cost of medical care. There were plans being operated by groups of different kinds. Perhaps they might be designated either consumer or producer prepayment groups, but there were only a few throughout the country.

I think I have seen Gov. Ex. 280. Gox. Ex. 279 is a letter from R. A. Swink, Executive Secretary of the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati, in which he transmits to me the letter marked Gov. Ex. 280, relative to the proposal of Dr. George H. Cook in Cincinnati to organize a prepayment plan. Gov. Ex. 278 is a carbon copy of a reply which I made to Mr. Swink.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 279 to the jury as follows:

Gov. Ex. 279 has been just identified as a letter dated March 20, 1936, from Mr. Swink, the Executive Secretary, to Dr. Leland, on the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati letterhead:

"Some days ago Dr. Edward King, President of the Academy, wrote you for some information pertaining to the Ross-Loos Clinic at Los Angeles. We very much appreciated the information furnished by you.

In order that you might be acquainted with what has occurred here recently, I am enclosing a carbon copy of a letter sent to Charles S. Nelson, Executive Secretary of the Ohio State Medical Association, in which a fairly complete statement is given of just what has occurred to date. I feel certain you would be interested in knowing of this action.

If you have any special pamphlets, or can give me any other references that would enable us to make a more complete statement of organized medicine's viewpoint on the whole insurance scheme, I would very much like to have it.

Yours truly, R. A. Swink."

Defense Counsel read Gov. Ex. 280 to the jury as follows:

It is dated March 19, 1936, and numbered Gov. Ex. 280, on the same stationery head, directed to Nelson:

"Last fall Dr. George H. Cook, a graduate of the University of Cincinnati, but not a member of the Academy here, made it known to some of the members of Council and to others, that he had just returned from Los Angeles, where he had spent some months getting complete information on the operation of the Ross-Loos Clinic. He stated that it was his intention to organize a similar group in Cincinnati.

Reports of his activities were heard from time to time, mostly in the form of rumors, until early in February of this year when a letter was received from him by Council, together with a prospectus of his proposed group. In this letter, he asked Council to let him know what attitude would be taken toward members of the Academy who might become members of his group.

Immediately upon receipt of this letter and prospectus, the entire matter was referred for study to the standing committee on the Cost of Medical Care, of which Dr. Albert H. Freiberg is chairman. After many hours of consideration covering several meetings, this committee recommended to Council that it should reply to Dr. Cook by saying that a request such as he had made, could be considered only when presented by a member of the Academy; and secondly that if such a request is later made by a member, it would then be advisable for Council to call a special meeting of the Academy, so that the entire membership could participate in the discussion and have a final vote as to the policy of the Academy in respect to this matter.

These recommendations were adopted by Council and Dr. Cook was accordingly notified of the action. Within a few days thereafter, a letter was received from Dr. E. E. Rhoads, a member of the Academy, stating that he was seriously considering the invitation to become a member of Dr. Cook's group and asking whether 'belonging to the George H. Cook Medical Group will in any way jeopardize my standing in the Academy.' Upon receipt of Dr. Rhoads' letter, Council called a special meeting and decided to make consideration of this matter a special order of business to come before the Academy at its regular meeting on March 10, 1936. A copy of notice sent to all members is enclosed herewith.

Interest in this matter attracted a large attendance at the meeting on March 10th. A rough count indicated that there were approximately 325 to 350 members present. As a result of thorough discussion on the part of Council at two special meetings prior to this meeting of the entire Academy, Council prepared a statement to be read by the President, Dr. King, by way of introduction to the entire matter and a statement of the issues involved.

After giving a brief history of the events leading up to the calling of the meeting, Council called attention in its statement to Article VI, Section 2 of the 'Principles of Ethics' of the A. M. A., and then informed the Academy that, in the opinion of Council, the thing for the members to do was to answer certain questions, with the understanding that those answers would become the rules which Council would feel obliged to enforce in a situation that might arise as suggested in Dr. Rhoads' letter. The questions on which Council desired an answer were these:

1. Does practice under a prepayment group plan such as is being here proposed, and which does not include all of the legally qualified physicians of the community, but restricts itself to a small group, constitute a violation of Article VI, Section 2 of the 'Principles of Ethics' of the AMA?

2. Shall membership in the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati be withheld from physicians who are practicing in violation of this rule?

3. Shall violation of this rule by a member of the Academy constitute sufficient reason for the termination of his membership?

It is not necessary for me to relate the entire discussion that occurred at that point other than to say that a motion was immediaely made by Dr. Robert Carothers to the effect that practice under a prepayment group plan such as was being proposed, does constitute a violation of Article VI, Section 2 of the 'Principles of Ethics.' That motion was by way of saying yes to question No. 1. After prolonged discussion on the motion in which only one member, Dr. Samuel Iglauer, spoke in opposition to the matter, a rising vote was taken and practically everyone present voted in favor of the motion. There were 3 or 4 who voted against the motion and possibly 15 or 20 others who did not vote either way.

With the first motion disposed of, motions on the other two questions were immediately put and voted on, with similar results.

The enclosed clipping from the Enquirer on the morning following the meeting is indicative of the reports appearing in all the newspapers of the action taken. The next day after that is when the editorial appeared in the Enquirer entitled, 'A Danger Involved,' and in which the Academy was accused of 'boycotting' any physician who undertakes to give medical service on a group basis.

I trust that this rather lengthy review of the situation will be of interest to you and if you have any suggestions or comments to make, I am sure, Council will be very glad to receive them.

Yours truly,

R. A. Swink."

I did not try to give Mr. Swink, Mr. Nelson or Dr. King any advice with reference to this matter. The matter was completely within the jurisdiction of the local society. Gov. Ex. 278 dated March 25, 1936 is my letter which I wrote in reply to Mr. Swink.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 278 to the jury as follows:

"I am greatly obliged to you for your letter with the enclosed carbon copy of your communication to Mr. Nelson. I am personally of the opinion that the Academy of Medicine of Cincinnati proceeded in a wise course on the matter under consideration.

This Bureau is now preparing a publication on 'Economics and the Ethics of Medicine.' This publication will probably bear more directly than any other one we have on the question under discussion, however, I am unable to give you the date at which this will be ready for distribution. In the meantime, I am enclosing some publications of the Bureau in the hope that they may be of some help to you."

When I stated that I am personally of the opinion that the Academy acted wisely, I referred to the procedure that they had adopted in arriving at the end. They had made an investigation, they had framed their own questions, and they had put them to the vote of their own membership, and the membership had expressed itself. With that expression I had only an academic interest.

I received Gov. Ex. 259 from Dr. Conklin and I wrote Gov. Ex. 260 in reply.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 259 to the jury as follows:

This is on the Medical Society of the District of Columbia stationery, and it is dated June 5, 1937, over the signature of Dr. Conklin, and addressed to Dr. Leland:

"I am enclosing herewith a plan that has recently come to our attention for development of prepayment medical service in governmental bureaus. The potentialities of such a plan, if and when it is put in force in the capital city, should be readily understood.

With hopes that I will have the pleasant opportunity of seeing you during the coming week, I am,"

Postscript:

"I regret that I was not 'at home' when you called at my office recently. I am hoping for better luck next time."

I called at Dr. Conklin's office several times. I remember that I called once and he was out. I don't connect it at all with Group Health, because I called on the secretary several times as a matter of courtesy and interest and on matters of medical society affairs, having nothing to do with Group Health. Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 260, dated August 18, 1937, from Dr. Leland to Dr. Conklin, to the jury as follows:

"Since your letter arrived just as I was leaving the office for my vacation, I have had no opportunity to answer it until today.

The suggestion which I made at the committee meeting is, in my opinion, a very simple one, involving nothing but cash payments to those who wish to participate. It is based largely on the type of arrangement that has been in effect for many years and operated by health and accident insurance companies."

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. To what are you referring in that paragraph, Doctor?

A. I am referring to the principle of cash payments made by health and accident insurance companies on the basis of a contract between them and their policyholders, by which they agree to pay in cash directly to the insured the amount of any claims that are made against the company under a contract.

Q. Well, I notice you state, "The suggestion which I made at the committee meeting."

A. I made the suggestion at the committee meeting, which was in July of 1937, the suggestion to the Medical Society that they might take under advisement the idea of organizing a cash indemnity plan which would be similar to the cash indemnity plan operated by health and accident insurance companies, if they could qualify under the laws of the District.

Mr. Leahy (Reading):

"Briefly, the plan would be for any group who desires to spread the cost of medical care to organize a benefit association or a mutual insurance company. The dues or premiums per member would depend on the amount of benefits to be provided. Benefits would be paid in cash to the beneficiary. They should be limited to $250 or $400 or $500 in any one year, but the benefits for any illness should not exceed 75 to 80 percent of the total amount of the medical and hospital bills for that illness.

There would be no medical panel; every member would have the right to choose any physician in the District of Columbia or anywhere else in the United States; there would be no designation of approved hospitals; the patient would be perfectly free to choose his own hospital or go to the hospital to which his physician ordinarily takes his patients; physicians in hospitals would submit their bills to the organization according to the regular schedule of charges.

The sole function of the organization would be to collect the dues or premiums from the members and to pay in cash to the members the amount of claims for medical or hospital services up to a specific limit for any one year and not to exceed 75 or 80 percent of the medical or hospital bills incurred for any single illness. Physicians and hospitals would then take their chances on collecting from the patients the amounts paid them for claims. There should be some sort of an identification card to indicate that the patient is a member of the organization. This would serve only to apprise the physician or the hospital that the patient would be reimbursed up to 75 or 80 percent for the services rendered.

If the District Medical Society chose, it might authorize a 10 or 15 percent reduction from the regular fees for members of such an organization providing such an organization would be willing to make a settlement with the patient and physician or hospital jointly. This is being done in some places, and apparently works entirely satisfactorily. In Iowa, for example, the reimbursements to members for the cost of hospitalization is made by check payable jointly to the member and the hospital. This affords an opportunity for the hospital to collect since the member cannot cash the check without the signature of the hospital.

If there are any further details in connection with this which you desire, I shall be glad to do my best to clarify such points as may not be entirely clear.

"Sincerely yours,"

And down in the bottom is marked: copy to Dr. Woodward.

The notation at the bottom shows that a copy was sent to Dr. Woodward.

I received Gov. Ex. 258 and Gov. Ex. 257 is my reply.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 258 to the jury as follows:

Gov. Ex. 258 is a letter from Dr. T. J. Williams, Evanston and Chicago, Illinois, dated July 21, 1938, to the American Medical Association, Chicago, Illinois:

"GENTLEMEN:

Will you be kind enough to send me what information you have relative to the doctors' Donald Ross and Clifford Loos, private group clinic in Los Angeles, as well as the Trinity Hospital group in Little Rock, Arkansas, and other similar groups who provide medical service, hospitalization, drugs, services of specialists, etc., to the man and his family for a specified monthly payment.

Kindly send same to the above Evanston address. Thanking you,

T. J. Williams."

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 257 to the jury as follows:

July 25, 1938, from Dr. Leland to Dr. T. J. Williams, Evanston, Illinois:

"DEAR DR. WILLIAMS:

The Medical Service Plan of Trinity Hospital, Little Rock, Arkansas, is one type of several prepayment plans for medical care that have been attempted. The plan was inaugurated in 1931 and is operated by a staff of six physicians. Under the plan, six weeks of hospitalization, including operating room, anesthetics, and general nursing, as well as medical and surgical services, are offered for a rate of $2.50 a month for individuals; $2 a month for persons enrolled in groups; and $5 a month for families, regardless of size. Hospitalization is restricted to Trinity Hospital, and the medical treatment and surgical care are performed by the staff of Trinity Hospital only."

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. Do you recall where you got what purport to be the facts in that letter, Doctor?

A. No, I do not at this time.

Mr. Leahy (reading): "The Hospital does not appear in the American Medical Association Register, and the staff members are no longer associated with the local medical society. Solicitors are reported to be employed on a percentage basis to secure members from groups of employees in business organizations and by house-to-house canvasses.

The Trinity Hospital Plan has sold about 2,000 contracts covering about 5,000 people. Subscribers include wealthy persons in the community as well as factory employees, and persons from towns as far as 140 miles from Little Rock. We have not been able to obtain any financial information concerning the plan other than that the premiums received from members paid 56.3 per cent of the charges for similar services rendered private patients which is approximately the same as if the members of the staff had accepted a 40 percent reduced fee schedule. Part of this reduction is said to be made up because most of the credit losses ordinarily incurred in private practice are reduced. The staff members have also been willing to participate in such a plan because additional income for special services could be secured from subscribers to the plan. Likewise, staff members do not provide free medical services for persons in the community."

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. To what do you refer, Doctor, where it says, "The staff members have also been willing to participate in such a plan because additional income for special services could be secured from subscribers to the plan"?

A. It means that the plan did not give complete medical service, but that certain items of medical care were charged for at regular rates and were not included on the regular monthly premiums stated.

Q. And those, added to the premiums stated, would make up the additional income which you speak about?

A. They increased the income to the organization.

Mr. Leahy (reading): "The objections to such an arrangement are the same as the objections to other types of contract practice which prohibit free choice of physician and rely on advertising or solicitation to secure patients. Aside from violating ethical principles which are designed to promote good medical services for the patient, such arrangements do not lower the cost of medical care. The advertised rate does not, as a general rule, provide for complete medical and hospital services and the plan is not supported solely by the dues collected from members. No insurance or prepayment plan which must add administrative costs can provide the same average services now received in private practice for lower than average charges. Either the services offered are not so complete or special charges are made for numerous services. It is also not uncommon to find that deficits are made up by the profits from extra activities such as soda fountain, magazine, and drug sales or income from nonmembers.

There are several possible arrangements to assist persons to meet medical or hospital bills which avoid most of the objections to contract arrangements for such services. The essential feature of these plans is that the benefits are payable in cash. A number of mutual benefit associations and community health associations have been operating satisfactorily on a cash benefit basis. The July 2nd, 1938 issue of the Journal, page 59, contains the report of the reference committee on cash payments for medical services which was adopted by the House of Delegates. Under separate cover we are forwarding to you some of our publications in which the questions indicated before are discussed fully.

In reply to your inquiry regarding the Ross-Loos Clinic in Los Angeles, we are giving you some of the essential points in its operation:

The cost to the subscribers is $2 per month per subscriber, and there are some additional charges for other members of the family. In an address by H. Clifford Loos to the women of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Chicago, December 7, 1935, he stated that 'the entire cost to the subscriber for this service, including the charges that are made for dependents, hospitalization, drugs, etc., averages $2.68 per month. The cost of the medical group for hospitalization is 20.2 cents per subscriber per month.' The service is supposed to be an all-inclusive one covering a complete medical service, including hospitalization; there are, however, some extras and some cases excluded. The contract provides that the subscriber may choose any one of the physicians on the staff and the management of the plan claims that an effort is made to maintain a permanent family physician relation.

Statements have been made both ways as to whether the group 'contributes to the charity load in Los Angeles County in a degree proportionate to the other physicians residing in the county.' It scarcely seems probable that they do so contribute, but it would be necessary to get opinions direct from Los Angeles before any worthwhile conclusion could be drawn. If you will communicate with Dr. George D. Maner, Secretary of the Los Angeles County Medical Association, 1925 Wiltshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, California, he will probably be able to give you more recent and more detailed information concerning the personnel and the activities of the clinic.

This information is given at your request and is confidential. Opinion is given merely as a business courtesy. No responsibility is to attach to the American Medical Association or its officers personally for information herein given.

Yours very truly,"

The Bureau has not opposed voluntary prepayment plans but has opposed plans which are made compulsory by law. The policy of the Bureau for voluntary prepayment plans has been to collect all information in order to be in a better position to assist those individuals or organizations that wish to organize plans for the benefit of low-income people. There are numerous individuals and groups, both in industry and in the community, as well as in state and county medical societies, that we have assisted, and that I have personally assisted in the development of prepayment plans. Some of those now in operation, such as the California Medical Service, adopted in 1938; the Michigan State Medical Society Plan; the New Jersey State Medical Society Plan, and several plans organized in three sections of the State of New York. We have opposed certain conditions under the contract practice of medicine when in opposition to certain of the sections of the Principles of Ethics of the AMA. As a result of a process of development over quite a number of years, ten principles have been developed, which were adopted in 1934 by the House of Delegates as a guide to county and state medical societies that undertook to organize prepayment medical plans. Principle 6 was modified in 1935 to read:

"In whatever way the cost of medical service may be distributed, it should be paid for by the patient in accordance with his income status and in a manner that is mutually satisfactory."

This amendment to Principle 6 operated to advance or assist in a better interpretation of the yardstick or measures that should be applied in the organization of prepayment arrangements, as the principle, prior to the amendment, stated payment should be made at the time the service was rendered, which is private practice. Members of the AMA in fairly large number are conducting contract practice of medicine, probably several thousand. There are in the United States 350 medical groups, called group practice groups; only 17 of them are employing any form of prepayment medical plan, using instead fee-for-service plans.

My Bureau never took any position whatsoever concerning Group Health and has never even made an independent study of it. I realized that Dr. Woodward was making a very careful and continuous attempt to get information on it and I knew that any information that he was able to secure would be made readily available to me if at any time I needed it. The only report the Bureau has on Group Health is the article published in the Journal of October 2. Aside from the trip to Washington I have not cooperated or collaborated in any way with Dr. Woodward concerning Group Health. I had nothing to do with the preparation of his article in the Journal and didn't even know it was being written. In the correspondence received in evidence, and in other correspondence I have written, I had no idea of discouraging prepayment plans. I didn't conspire with anyone for the purpose of restraining trade in the District; for the purpose of restraining Group Health; for the purpose of restraining doctors on the staff of Group Health; for the purpose of restraining doctors not on the staff of Group Health in the District, or for the purpose of restraining the Washington hospitals in the business of operating such hospitals. I didn't discuss with anybody anything concerning the Washington hospitals and Group Health. I never approached anyone or advised anyone not to join Group Health as a member. I have never talked with any doctor on the staff of Group Health. I have never tried to do anything personally with anybody whatsoever on the medical staff or membership of Group Health, and no such idea ever entered my mind. The first time I ever saw the building in which the clinic of Group Health is located was about three days ago. I have never discussed the clinic.

Except the letters that came to me personally, I know nothing of the letters of the District Medical Society and had no information at all until I heard them read at this trial and the same as to the minutes of the meetings of the District Medical Society. I don't remember even being present with Dr. Woodward at any meeting of the District

Medical Society, aside from the meeting of the executive committee in July of 1937.

I am a Fellow of the American Public Health Association; a member of the American Statistical Association, the American Economic Association, the Royal Economic Society of London, and various medical societies. My Bureau and I are now personally engaged in the present national preparedness work conducting a census of physicians for the Committee on Medical Preparedness of the AMA.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

A copy of the Ireland letter (Gov. Ex. 295) was made for me and I assume it was sent to me. It is a fact that Gov. Ex. 295-A is from my files and is marked with my name. I may have read it, but I don't recall. The type of information contained in that letter falls under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Medical Economics.

The first time I heard about Group Health was at the AMA convention about June 6, 1937 when Dr. Woodward spoke.

Q. And didn't you say that when you came down to Washington with Dr. Woodward on July 14, that the only information you had with regard to Group Health Association was what he had told you?

A. Well, I had learned in Atlantic City.

Q. From Dr. Woodward?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that right?

A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. And isn't it also a fact that before you went down to Atlantic City Dr. Conklin had sent you the confidential prospectus of the health plan for Washington?

A. Well, I received a prospectus, but I didn't connect the two in any way.

Q. Well, did you know——

A. They were named—they had different names.

Q. Well, didn't it outline a group practice plan on a prepayment basis?

A. I had no way of connecting the two, the prospectus that he sent with the H.O.L.C. or Group Health Association.

Q. Did you know of any other plan in Washington?

A. No.

Q. At that time?

A. No.

Q. Didn't his letter tell you that it was in relation to a prepayment medical service in government bureaus?

A. Well, there might be more than one.

Q. Was there more than one?

A. I didn't know.

Q. Do you mean to say you made no connection between that plan that you received from Dr. Conklin——

A. That's right.

Q. —and the plan that was under discussion at Atlantic City?

A. That's right.

Q. Didn't Dr. Conklin write you, "I am enclosing herewith a plan that has recently come to our attention for development of a prepayment medical service in governmental bureaus"?

A. (The witness nodded his head.)

Q. "The potentialities of such a plan, if and when it is put in force in the Capital City, should be readily understood"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And didn't you read that plan?

A. I did.

Q. And when you came down here on the 14th didn't you connect that plan which you had read with the plan that you were asked to come down here and advise the District Medical Society on?

A. No, I did not.

Q. No connection between the two?

A. No, sir.

Q. You thought it related to some other plan than Group Health Association?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other plan did you think it related to?

A. Well, it had different names, some other—some other federal employees, but I have no way of knowing who.

Q. Wasn't it referred to as "a cooperative medical service plan"?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever find out that there was any other cooperative medical service plan that fitted that description except Group Health?

A. Well, I didn't feel that that description fitted Group Health, with the information that I had at that time.

Q. Did you make any later study to find out what was referred to in that prospectus?

A. No. That is the last I ever heard of that.

Q. Didn't you ever at any time connect that prospectus with Group Health Association?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you refer to that prospectus in a written report which you made to Dr. West in connection with Group Health Association?

A. I don't recall that I ever made a written report to Group Health.

Q. All right. We will come to that in a moment.

I came to Washington with Dr. Woodward to confer with the District Medical Society. I was formally authorized to come to Washington and advise the District Medical Society with regard to Group Health. I did come to Washington for that purpose and I did advise the District Medical Society. I did talk at the July 14th meeting.

Q. And didn't you know that Dr. West had suggested another cooperative plan to be set up by the District Medical Society to offset the effect of Group Health Association?

A. I knew that after I returned home.

Q. When you wrote to Conklin and explained your plan, you knew that what he wanted was the details of a plan to offset Group Health Association, didn't you?

A. I don't believe I did at that time.

Q. Oh, you said you knew it after you got home. And you wrote Conklin in August, didn't you, and told him in detail what you had proposed when you were down there advising the District Medical Society?

A. Perhaps I did.

Q. All right. Then you knew that what you were advising them was to set up a plan for the first time, a prepayment plan, in competition with Group Health Association; isn't that right?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you know that Dr. West had suggested that the District Medical Society, for the first time in its history, organize a prepayment plan to offset Group Health Association?

A. That wasn't my understanding of it. I understand that it was an outgrowth of a plan that they had had in operation for some two years and wanted to go on further with it.

Q. Did you have a talk with Dr. West about that time?

A. Oh, I had lots of times. I presume so.

Q. Well, you say you found out that that was his plan when you got back to Chicago. Did you find it out from Dr. West?

A. I don't know the day; I heard Dr. West mention the fact that he had been here and made some suggestions.

Q. Yes. And didn't Dr. West tell you that his suggestion was to set up a plan in competition with Group Health?

A. He may have. I don't recall it now.

Q. Well, does this refresh your recollection, his letter to Verbrycke (Gov. Ex. 152), which is in evidence (indicating)?

The Court: Point out the part you have in mind.

Mr. Lewin: I have. I have done so.

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Didn't he say this in that letter: that "If I were a member of the committee of the District Society I would want to consider the advisability of organizing a sort of co-operative movement under the auspices of the Society to offset the effect of the cooperative movement that is now being promoted by certain agencies in Washington"?

A. That's what he said in the letter.

Q. Yes. And then when you advised Conklin in August of 1937 (Gov. Ex. 260), you knew you were advising him of your pool for that purpose, didn't you?

A. That isn't the purpose I had in mind.

Q. And wasn't the suggestion that you made for a co-operative movement simply a collection agency for private practice?

A. No, not that at all.

Q. Wasn't that the effect——

A. No, sir.

Q. —of what you wrote Dr. Conklin?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you suggest that there be a pool of money set up by prepayment and out of that pool of money doctors be paid on fee-for-service basis?

A. It was a cash indemnity prepayment plan.

Q. Yes. And it planned, didn't it, that the patient would receive the cash?

A. That is right.

Q. And pay the same fee for service—doctors on the same fee-for-service basis?

A. You may speak of it that way.

Q. And didn't contemplate any group practice whatever?

A. No.

Q. Isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Yes. Well, now, you said, I think, on your direct examination, that when you went back to Chicago you did nothing more except to make an oral report to Dr. West?

A. That's right.

Q. You stand on that testimony?

A. There is a report that carries my name.

Q. Well, didn't you authorize it? I show you the report (Gov. Ex. 200).

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you and Dr. Woodward make a written report to Dr. West?

A. I didn't collaborate with Dr. Woodward.

Q. Do you mean to say that Dr. Woodward acted without your authority?

A. Well, he had a perfect right to.

Q. Is that your testimony? He had a perfect right to. Then, he was authorized to make this report?

A. I put my name—I authorized him to put my name on it.

Q. Oh. You read it, I suppose, did you not?

A. I think I must have, yes, sir.

Q. And weren't you responsible for this little statement at the end, in writing to Dr. West, that "this Group Health Association is obnoxious to public policy, for obvious reasons"?

A. No, sir. That's not my language.

Q. Wasn't that your idea?

A. That's not my language.

Q. Maybe not your language. Isn't that what you wanted to stand behind as your report?

A. I would stand behind it, yes.

Q. You would stand behind it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is what you reported to Dr. West?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Kelleher: The reference to prospectus in there.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. I will ask you to look at it again and see if that is not a reference to that prospectus that you said you never connected to Group Health Association.
A. Yes, sir. The first thing.
Q. Yes. Very first thing?
A. That's right.
Q. It says, this, doesn't it? "A prospectus for a plan for a cooperative medical service on a periodic payment basis for federal employees and their families in Washington was circulated sometime ago. The prospectus is not dated, and the time of its issue is not known. It was circulated anonymously." And then you describe the plan, don't you?
A. (The witness nodded his head.)
Q. And that's the plan that you think is Group Health, don't you?

Mr. Richardson: Now you mean?
Mr. Lewin: Then.
Mr. Richardson: Well, say then.
Mr. Kelleher: Oh, he understood the question.
Mr. Lewin: I'll say now and then, both.
The Witness: Well, I can't be sure that this cooperative —plan for cooperative medical service is the same prospectus that I received in the letter from Conklin.

Q. Well, do you know of any other prospectus that was headed that way?
A. No, I do not.
Q. It has the same heading, doesn't it?
A. As far as I know.
Q. And doesn't that description you give of it fit it on all fours?
A. It fits G.H.A.
Q. Doesn't it fit prospectuses that you had received from Conklin as early as June 5?
A. I don't remember the prospectus.
Q. And had read before you went to Atlantic City?
A. I don't remember the prospectus.

Q. Well, did you find it?

A. If I could see the prospectus I could tell.

Mr. Lewin: All right. You may see it. Let's give him the prospectus.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Here is a photostatic copy of the prospectus (Gov. Ex. 104). Is that the one you received from Conklin?

* * * * * * * * *

The Witness: It is still my opinion that this does not necessarily refer to Group Health Association.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. This is the prospectus, is it not, that you referred to in your joint report with Dr. Woodward to Dr. West, dated July 16?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is. And you were reporting on Group Health at that time and you intended so to report?

A. We were reporting on more than Group Health.

Q. Were you reporting on a different plan than Group Health?

A. Reporting on information that we'd had up to date.

Q. Well, had you had any information at that time that there was another plan other than Group Health of that same character here?

A. Apparently from this.

Q. Well, now, you came down here on the 14th. Did you hear any discussion of another plan here?

A. We heard discussion of a plan for federal employees.

Q. And that's what you thought was Group Health, isn't it?

A. Not necessarily. There could have been two.

Q. Well, now, what is your testimony? Were there two that were discussed or was there one Group Health?

A. There was one about which there was a considerable amount of doubt as to whether it would merge into Group Health or whether it was another outgrowth.

Q. You mean to say that was at this discussion with the District of Columbia doctors.

A. At a committee meeting, so far as I can recall.

Q. There was a discussion of two plans in the District of Columbia for prepayment basis—of group practice on a prepayment basis?

A. I think I recall a discussion of a plan about which there was considerable doubt.

Q. Well, that was Group Health Association, was it not?

A. That was another plan for group—for federal employees, of a very vague nature.

Q. Well, whose plan was that?

A. This one here which we're—about which we have the prospectus.

Q. Well, did you point out in your report to West that there were two plans that you considered on your trip to Washington and that conference that you had with the District Medical Society (handing Gov. Ex. 200 to the witness)?

A. We reported to Dr. West that there was a prospectus, and we also had certificates of incorporation of Group Health.

Q. Well, what was the difference between the two?

A. A vast difference.

Q. What was the difference?

A. One was a prospectus, and the other were certificates of incorporation.

Q. Well, what was the difference in the plan, between the two?

A. Well, they are very similar as far as the——

Q. Well, what was the difference?

A. Well, I can't tell you the difference except——

Q. Well,——

A. Unless I study it over.

Q. Don't you remember any differences? You say they were two different plans?

A. Yes, sir.

I am a full time, salaried employee of the AMA. I advised the District Medical Society in July. I had not discussed the situation with Dr. Woodward on the train. I hadn't seen the charter of Group Health at that time. I saw it after I had been to Washington. At the meeting I offered a suggestion, entirely separate from Group Health, for the information of those who were considering the development of a prepayment plan for the District Medical Society.

Q. All right, after you were back in Chicago, did you tell Dr. Woodward that you would be willing to elaborate for the District Medical Society or its committee anything you had told them that was not clear?

A. I don't recall telling him anything in those words, but I might have.

Q. And did you tell Dr. Woodward around August 18, 1937, that you didn't at that time have any further plan for forestalling Group Health Association?

A. I don't recall any such conversation.

Q. Would you say you hadn't told him that?

A. No.

Q. You may have told him that?

A. My answer is the same as before.

Q. Just what?

A. That I don't recall any conversation of that kind.

Q. But you may have done so?

A. I don't recall it.

Q. Let me read you Gov. Ex. 202, which is in evidence, a letter from Dr. Woodward to Dr. Conklin, dated August 18th, 1937:

"I understand from your letter that everything that was said and done by Dr. Leland and me in the course of our recent conference with the Committee then having Group Health under consideration is now before the committee newly appointed to study the matter.

If there is anything in what either of us said or did that was obscure or calls for explanation or elaboration, I shall be glad to undertake to explain or elaborate it for the information and guidance of the committee.

Neither of us has at the present time any further proposal looking toward forestalling the growth of the Group Health Association, or towards preventing the organization of similar groups in the District of Columbia."

Did you give Dr. Woodward the information on which he could have based that letter?

A. Let me see it.

(Thereupon Court and counsel engaged in an informal conference at the bench, which was not reported.)

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Dr. Leland, isn't it a fact that you kept in contact with the District Medical Society or its representative with regard to Group Health during the late summer or early fall of 1937?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you come down here some time in October and go to Dr. Conklin's office and have a conversation with him in regard to Group Health Association?

A. I was in Washington some 12 or 14 times during 1937 and 1938, and all but one time of which I have any recollection now, were on other matters; other association matters.

Q. Would you deny that you went to see Dr. Conklin in his office in October with regard to Group Health Association?

A. I have no recollection of seeing him about Group Health, but I presume I did go to his office because that was my custom to go to the office of the secretary of the Medical Society while I was in the city.

Q. I would ask you whether you went to see him on this subject.

A. I have no recollection.

I do not know Dr. Earl Templeton. I don't remember making any suggestion to Dr. Templeton about employing a public relations counsel.

Q. • • • Let me read this excerpt from the minutes of October 6th, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37):

(Excerpt)

"Dr. E. R. Templeton said that Dr. Leland suggested," and this was in connection with the matter of employing a public relation counsel:

"Dr. Leland suggested that the wisest thing would be to employ a former newspaper man."

Does that refresh your recollection as to your ever having made that statement?

A. What was that?

Q. That you suggested a former newspaper man as the one to be the Society's public relations counsel?

A. As I recall it now, the question which I discussed with someone, whom I don't recall at present, was in connection with the employment of an Executive Secretary, and I did make some suggestions on that.

Q. Did you make this suggestion that Dr. Templeton said you did?

A. I don't recall the exact statement, but I did have some discussion concerning the method of going about the employment of an executive secretary for the Society.

Q. Now, Dr. Leland, you knew in the fall of 1937, didn't you, that the Medical Society of the District of Columbia believed it to be the duty of the American Medical Association to oppose Group Health Association with all its might?

A. I don't know that I would go quite that far.

Q. Didn't you hear that?

A. I heard them make some statement that they would like some assistance.

Q. And that is all you heard?

A. I wouldn't be sure, but that is all I recall at the moment.

Q. Didn't you hear them say that it was the duty of the American Medical Association to "combat" Group Health Association vigorously?

A. It is possible, but I do not recall it.

* * * * * * *

Q. Didn't you hear this resolution read by Dr. Hooe at that meeting on November 6th, which you attended with Doctors Hooe, McGovern, and Woodward:

"The Medical Society of the District of Columbia at its regular meeting held November 3rd, 1937, adopted the following resolution.

1. That inasmuch as the movement threatens to be nation-wide in its scope, and affect every component organization of the American Medical Association, it is the duty of the American Medical Association to oppose immediately with all its might this entering and possibly illegal wedge to the socialization of medicine,

2. That in view of the tremendous import of the Group Health Association movement to the membership of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and also to the profession at large and to the public, it is the opinion of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia that it is the duty of the American Medical Association to combat vigorously Group Health Association, Incorporated."

Didn't you hear that resolution read at that meeting?

A. November 6th?

Q. Yes.

A. I think I did, yes.

Q. And you were one of these "proper officials" of the American Medical Association that was being asked to do this?

A. I was at the meeting.

Q. Will you answer my question: Weren't you one of the proper officials as referred to in that resolution?

A. I think so.

Q. And you knew also, didn't you, that there wasn't any question of the jurisdiction of the American Medical Association to interfere with the local society in this case, was there?

A. I don't quite understand the question.

Q. Didn't you say on your direct examination that the AMA held aloof and had no jurisdiction over these local bodies, wasn't that your testimony?

A. I don't think so; it might have been.

Q. As a matter of fact, you knew at that time that the District Medical Society had expressly waived any such question and had conferred jurisdiction over this matter on the American Medical Association?

A. I didn't know that.

Q. Didn't you know that it had passed a resolution that they waived any question of regional interference on the part of the AMA?

A. I didn't know that.

Q. What is meant by "waiving regional interference"?

A. I can't give you a legal definition.

Q. I am not asking for that: What did it mean to you?

A. I don't recall ever hearing it read.

Q. All right, let me continue reading it.

"Thirdly, That the Medical Society of the District of Columbia waives any question of regional interference by the American Medical Association.

4. That the American Medical Association give a definite and immediate expression of its intended action in this matter."

Did you hear that resolution read?

A. I did.

Q. That was the resolution that you gentlemen were assembled there to discuss?

A. In part.

Q. And didn't you hear Dr. West speaking for you gentlemen, and the American Medical Association, say that in answer to that last request that the AMA had been fighting this thing; he thought it had been fighting it even before the District Medical Association got interested and it would continue to do so until it was called off?

A. I heard that.

Q. Did you object to that?

A. I said nothing.

Q. Did you intend silence to be consent?

A. There wasn't anything for me to say.

Q. You think it was decided for you. What were you there for? Wasn't it to discuss this very question?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Did you tell Dr. Hooe and Dr. McGovern that you were not in sympathy with what had been expressed by Dr. Hooe and Dr. West as being the policy of the AMA?

A. No.

Q. Did you know at this time that the committee of the District of Columbia Medical Society had met and decided to bring proceedings against Doctors Lee and Scandiffio because they were members of the staff of Group Health?

Mr. Leahy: I object to the form of the question.

Mr. Lewin: On the ground that it is leading; this is cross-examination.

Mr. Leahy: No, because you are not bringing in the ground on which the District Medical Society did bring these disciplinary proceedings.

Mr. Lewin: If there is one thing that is clear in this case, that is.

The Court: The question then is whether he knew they were bringing disciplinary proceedings because of their connection with Group Health?

Mr. Leahy: It is not that at all; it is because of their violation of the articles of the constitution under which the local society regulated the conduct of its members. I object to the statement that it was because of something which is not in evidence and which is contrary to the fact and the evidence.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. What is your answer?

A. The first time I heard anything about or the names of these two physicians was at this meeting.

Q. Did you hear that the committee of the District Medical Society had brought disciplinary proceedings against those two doctors because of their connection with GHA?

A. Whatever was reported at that meeting I heard.

Q. Can you answer my question?

A. I don't recall the wording.

• • • • • • •

Q. I would like to know whether you didn't hear and realize at that time that the committee of the District Medical Society brought disciplinary proceedings against Doctors Lee and Scandiffio because of their connection with GHA.

A. I don't recall the exact language but whatever was reported by those gentlemen at that meeting I heard.

Q. Didn't you know in substance that very thing?

A. I didn't know it.

Q. Didn't you know it at the very start of that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, I am going to read you the third paragraph of that conference and see if that doesn't refresh your recollection. The first two paragraphs deal with the resolution that I have read you. Here comes the very first business of that meeting:

"The operations of Group Health Association, Inc., began on Monday last. Two men who contacted with Group Health Association, Inc., were members of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, and the third had sent in his application which had been withdrawn in the past ten days. There is nothing to be done about this third member at the present time. The resignations of the other two were received by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia within the week. A letter was sent to each of them asking him to appear before the Compensation Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee. They didn't appear but the committee received a communication from one of them.

The Committee unanimously recommended to the executive committee of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia that disciplinary measures be taken."

Did you hear that?

A. My answer is as was stated previously. That is the first I heard anything of that instance.

Q. You did hear it then?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you object to it then?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't that strike a responsive chord in your mind with regard to your own attitude as to such doctors?

A. I don't understand.

Q. Didn't you believe that that statement was a wise course to pursue on the part of the District Medical Society?

A. The jurisdiction lies entirely with the District Medical Society and if they believed they had charges to prefer against any physician because of the violation of some of their regulations that was the proper thing to do.

Q. You knew that they were there seeking your advice for their guidance?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew this was the first business they took up with you?

A. Yes

* * * * * * *

Q. Didn't you regard similar proceedings against doctors similarly situated as a wise course to pursue, and hadn't you similarly instructed a local medical society to pursue the same course in that case?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Hadn't you been told by the local society in Cincinnati that a Dr. Cook who had been with the Ross-Loos Clinic had come back to Cincinnati and wanted to start up a similar clinic in Cincinnati?

A. I had had information to that effect, yes, sir.

Q. Yes. And didn't that local society write you and ask you for information about the Ross-Loos Clinic and any experience which would guide them in handling this matter?

A. They asked me for information.

Q. Well, was my statement correct (handing a photostat to the witness)?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And didn't you respond to that letter?

A. I did.

Q. And didn't you tell them two things about the Ross-Loos Clinic: one, that it was your understanding that the Ross-Loos medical group is composed of a number of very competent physicians; and, as far as you know, the quality of medical care seems to be good?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And secondly this: it is your understanding that each member of the group concerned was required to pay a certain amount per week, prepayment plan, and you were informed that the Los Angeles County Medical Association—which, by the way, is one of your component societies, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —objected to the operation of this plan by the Ross-Loos group, and that charges were finally preferred against Doctors Ross and Loos. You told them that, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told them that those charges were substantiated by the council of the Los Angeles Medical Association, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told them that on appeal the California Medical Association upheld the action of the Los Angeles Medical Association whereby Doctors Ross and Loos were expelled from membership?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told them that that had been appealed to the AMA, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told them that the AMA had made a decision which expressed no opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the appellants in connection with any unethical practices alleged and charged against them?

A. Yes, sir.

. . . . . .

Q. Did you intend to leave the impression with this jury yesterday, with regard to that appeal, that the American Medical Association on appeal had exonerated Ross and Loos?

A. I intended to leave the impression that the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association had reversed the actions in so far as procedure was concerned.

Q. Yes. Did you intend to leave the impression that they had exonerated Ross and Loos?

A. They had no—the question of ethics did not enter into the action of the Judicial Council.

Q. Yes. It was purely a procedural question. And isn't it true that they expressed no opinion as to the guilt or innocence of those appellants?

A. That is right.

Q. And didn't you say so in this letter?

A. I did.

Q. All right. Now, they were the two bits of information that you supplied, are they not: first, that the Ross-Loos Clinic was giving, as far as you know, competent care of competent physicians; and, secondly, that these two men had been expelled from your local societies in California?

A. That is right.

Q. And you gave that to them as information for guidance of the Cincinnati society, did you not?

A. I gave them information that they requested.

Q. Yes. You were responding to his request for information to guide them, weren't you, in handling their matter?

A. That's right.

Q. All right.

A. That's right.

Q. Now then, weren't you informed that after they got your information they had a meeting in Cincinnati, and they decided that any member—no; they first decided that anybody who ran a clinic like the Ross-Loos Clinic would be guilty of unethical practice and violating your Society medical ethics? Didn't you hear that?

A. I didn't hear it.

Q. Weren't you told that——

A. No.

Q. In the letter?

A. Yes, sir. I read it.

Q. All right. And weren't you also told that they had passed a resolution that in that event nobody could join their society who had any connection with that kind of an organization?

A. They had taken a vote on it, yes, sir.

Q. You were told that, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were told also that they had taken a vote on it and passed it, that no member of their society who had anything to do with that kind of an organization could remain a member of their society?

A. That's right.

. . . . . .

Q. Now, Dr. Leland, one more question with regard to the Cook situation: Isn't it true that when you got that information as to what the local society did in that case, you wrote back to them and said that you regarded that as wise proceedings, or words to that effect?

A. Exactly.

Q. Now, didn't you feel the same way when you heard Dr. Hooe tell you that on somewhat similar grounds similar proceedings were being brought against Doctors Lee and Scandiffio?

A. I think the two were quite different. The one in Cincinnati was an expression of my satisfaction over the fact that the Cincinnati Academy of Medicine had investigated the situation itself and had voted upon the issues and had settled them within its own jurisdiction.

Q. Do you mean by that to say that your only interest in that thing was as to a matter of form and not as to a matter of substance?

A. I had interest in the substance, but the reference I made in my letter was to the matter of procedure, as I said. Had proceeded wisely.

Q. But you did feel the same satisfaction with regard to the substance that had been achieved, didn't you?

A. The substance hadn't entered my—wasn't expressed in the letter at all, as far as I recall.

Q. Although you had been asked for information and experience to guide them in what they were doing?

A. Well, that was prior to the Society's action.

Q. All right, sir. Now, you learned also at that meeting, did you not, that there had been an attempt on the part of the local Society to influence the local hospitals against Group Health Association?

A. I learned it the first time then.

Q. Yes. And it was discussed rather fully there, wasn't it?

A. I think so.

Q. Yes. And again did you express any disapproval of that course?

A. I expressed no—made no expressions of any kind during the meeting.

Q. Even though you knew those men were there to get your advice about the subject matters that they brought on?

A. That's what they came for.

Q. And did you hear any criticism of it from your colleagues, Dr. West and Dr. Woodward?

A. I did.

Q. And wasn't that criticism that they didn't know whether such a policy could be effected? Wasn't that Dr. West's criticism, in substance?

A. I think he made more criticism than that.

Q. Yes?

A. As I recall it, he questioned whether it was a wise thing to do.

Q. Now you have an independent recollection now of what transpired at that conference?

A. Oh, I have heard that read. I have read it several times since the trial began.

Q. All right. You look at that. You look at this and see if this doesn't refresh your recollection (indicating Gov. Ex. 117). Do you have any other information except what is contained here?

A. None that I recall independently.

Q. All right. And isn't this what happened: (reading)

"Dr. Hooe: In the matter of the HOLC what is your future program?

Dr. West: It is just exactly the same as it has been all the time. We shall continue fighting it every way we can. We are going to get all the help we can get. We are at least going to keep on until we are instructed otherwise.

Dr. Hooe: The executive committee recommended that a letter be addressed to the medical boards of the various affiliated hospitals in Washington calling attention to the HOLC health group insisting that the hospitals take cognizance of it and, among other things, calling attention to the fact that the physicians employed by such groups are not acceptable to the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

In reply to Dr. McGovern's question as to how far the Medical Society of the District of Columbia might go in controlling the hospitals, Dr. West expressed some doubt that the Society can effect such control."

Did you get anything more from Dr. West in response to that question?

A. I think there is more——

Q. Is there?

A. —later on.

Q. Will you find it for me?

A. Right there (indicating).

Q. Where? You are pointing to what Dr. Woodward said, or Dr. West? Oh, yes.

(Reading:)

"Dr. Hooe: Is it not in your opinion most reasonable that the hospitals should acquiesce in this matter?"

And Dr. West said, "It is reasonable that they should do it, but as to whether or not they will, that's another question. Suppose they don't?"

Is that all Dr. West said?

A. I don't recall any more that he said on that subject.

* * * * * * *

Q. Now, did you hear Dr. Hooe say this at the end of that colloquy:

"At a meeting of the group of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia last Sunday night"——

Last Sunday would be October 31st, wouldn't it? This was November 6th.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —"it was brought out that all the civilian hospitals in Washington except probably one had fallen right into line, which was very gratifying."

Now, when Dr. Hooe said that, didn't that mean to you that at least eleven private hospitals here in Washington had taken steps in line with the District Medical Society in opposition to Group Health Association?

The defendants objected on the ground that it was immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent and argumentative. Objection overruled and exception allowed.

Q. What is your answer?

A. My conclusion on that would be that they had seen fit to arrange their affairs in accordance with the resolutions and suggestions of the Medical Society. Whether they did that in connection with GHA I wouldn't know.

Q. Well, is that quite true, Doctor? Is that fair? Was there anything else that was being discussed with regard to the hospitals except Group Health Association (handing a photostat to the witness)?

A. That was certainly one issue, but there may have been other issues.

Q. There may have been. Was there any other issue?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know of any other?

A. From this record, do you mean (indicating)?

Q. No. From this record or from any independent recollection which you may have. Was there any other issue there being discussed with regard to the hospitals except to keep Group Health doctors out of them?

A. Well, the wording of this report doesn't indicate whether the matter was solely in connection with Group Health Association or not.

Q. Well, now, Dr. Leland, does it indicate that there was any other subject matter except Group Health Association and the hospitals that was the subject of that colloquy?

A. I don't know whether there was or not.

* * * * * * *

Q. All right. Now, Dr. Leland, did you attend the meeting of the secretaries of the local societies held in Chicago, November 18 and 19, 1937, I believe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did?

A. I think so, as well as I can recall now.

Q. And you knew that Group Health Association was to be a subject matter discussed there, didn't you?

A. I didn't know it in advance.

Q. Didn't you? Didn't Dr. West say that it was going to be, at this meeting of November 6th?

A. Oh, yes. I recall now.

Q. Didn't Dr. West say, "In thirteen days there will be a conference of secretaries and editors of the constituent state Medical associations, at which many other officers of constituent state and some component county societies will be present. The whole story of the H. O. L. C. movement will be brought before the conference, and the point of view of the members of the conference can be obtained and presented better than by spending money in writing material. The members of the conference will be given the entire picture, and Dr. Conklin and Dr. Yater, members of the conference, will be given full opportunity to say anything they want to say"?

A. That is correct.

Q. And didn't you know that Dr. West was specifically authorized by resolution of the board of trustees to explain the whole matter of the activities of Group Health Association before the conference of secretaries of constituent state medical associations and editors of state medical journals on Friday?

A. He was.

Q. He was. And didn't he actually appear with you before that meeting?

A. I don't quite understand what you mean?

Q. Didn't he go to the meeting with you? Wasn't he there, too?

A. Well, I don't know that he went with me.

Q. Oh, well.

A. He was at the meeting.

Q. That is right. He was at the meeting.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And didn't he discuss Group Health Association and the AMA's attitude toward it before them?

A. As I recall it he did.

Q. And weren't Doctors Conklin and Yater, defendants in this case, representing the District Medical Society there?

A. I believe so.

Q. Did they participate in that discussion with regard to Group Health?

A. As nearly as I can recall, they did.

Q. Did you do it, too?

A. I don't recall that I made any discussion.

Q. Yes. Was Dr. Holman Taylor, this gentleman you say was secretary of the State Medical Society of Texas, there?

Mr. Leahy: I object. It is immaterial, collateral.

The Court: He may answer that question.

The Witness: I presume he was there. He was a very regular attendant at those meetings.

Q. And weren't you informed shortly after that that Dr. Conklin had brought Dr. Selders' connection with Group Health to the attention of the societies in Texas?

A. I have no recollection of anything of the sort.

Q. Well, didn't you get a copy of Dr. Taylor's letter to the Board of Censors of the Harris County Medical Society (handing a photostat to the witness)?

A. Well, if I did I paid very little attention to it.

Q. Well, did you get it?

A. The stamp of the Bureau of Medical Economies is on it.

Q. Your name is on it at the top, isn't it?

A. That's not my handwriting.

Q. Well, would you say you got it or didn't get it?

A. I did get it.

Redirect examination:

I was asked on cross-examination whether I gave advice to District Medical Society with reference to public relations counsel and I said the advice which I gave was with reference to an executive secretary. I don't remember anything being said in addition to what is contained in the transcript of the Chicago meeting of November 6 (Gov. Ex. 117). I have no independent recollection of Dr. Woodward suggesting anything at that conference other than that the local society have competent counsel to advise it as its primary move is clearly to see whether the local District Attorney, Corporation Counsel, Board of Licensure or the Insurance Commissioner, will act on the facts.

Recross-examination:

Q. Did not Dr. Hooe ask what they could say to their colleagues back home, the District Medical Society?

A. I don't remember whether he did or not.

Q. Did he say (reading Gov. Ex. 117): "Can we say that we have the backing of the American Medical Association in that?"

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did Dr. West say: "You can say so very definitely, as that is absolutely in keeping with the policies of the organized medical profession of this country"?

A. That was said.

Q. Did Dr. West say this in response to Dr. McGovern: "Dr. McGovern. There is immediate sentiment of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia to formulate some plan." Was he not discussing some cooperative prepayment plan there?

Mr. Leahy: I object. The paper speaks for itself.
The Court: I think that is true.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Did not Dr. West say this: "I do not know whether or not you remember that I suggested, when in Washington some time ago, that you give the idea some consideration, but after thinking about it later I decided that probably I should not have offered that suggestion, because you already formulated a plan and I am not convinced that that plan did not have something to do with the stimulating of this HOLC movement. A plan almost inevitably tends to create a sentiment for the formation of other similar plans."
A. He said that.
Q. Did he not also say this——

The Court: Are you asking him what the paper says?
Mr. Lewin: I thought you asked me to do that.
The Court: Point it out to the jury yourself. Let us not take up so much time. That is what I suggested.
Mr. Lewin: I did not know what procedure your Honor wanted me to follow.
The Court: I thought if there was anything there that was contrary to what opposing counsel said about it, you might point it out.

Mr. Lewin (reading): "Dr. Hooe. In the matter of HOLC, what is your future program?
Dr. West: It is just exactly the same that it has been all the time. We shall continue fighting it in every way we can. We are going to get all the help we can get. We are at least going to keep on until we are instructed otherwise."

And then, after Dr. Hooe had outlined the situation, Dr. West said (reading further):

"Dr. Hooe has not made one statement of any kind that the American Medical Association has not fully considered and acted on where possible."

Thereupon the defendants stated to the Court that they desired to prove that Group Health was the recipient of subsidies during the period involved in the controversy, from the Twentieth Century Fund and associates of the Twentieth Century Fund, and bearing on the question of the approval or disapproval of Group Health by the local Medical Society, and as showing the income and charges of Group Health and that its operations violated the principles of medical ethics; defendants' rules and regulation and Constitution and By-Laws, and disrupted fair competition in the community among the doctors; also as bearing on the question whether Group Health could furnish the kind of medical service that it promised on dues received from members, and further as bearing on the question whether Group Health was in fact a spontaneous plan of HOLC employees, by showing that Group Health rather was a social experiment carefully planned by the executives of HOLC in collaboration with the Twentieth Century Fund and funds associated with it, or set up and financed by it for carrying out social schemes of doubtful legality for providing medical service on what was closely akin, if not in fact, an insurance basis; and proposed to show the background of Group Health and the Twentieth Century Fund, and associated organizations; and that the Twentieth Century Fund gave $6,000 to Health Economics Association, Inc., in 1936, to be used in connection with Group Health, and in January-February, 1937, gave Group Health $22,000 for use during the next year; that a large portion of that money was used to set up GHA; beginning in August, 1938, $500 a month was paid by the Good Will Fund to Perry Taylor, administrator of Group Health, and that continued up until the time of the indictment, and that in the spring of 1938 Group Health borrowed $5,000 from the Good Will Fund or Twentieth Century Fund; that on these various questions factual issues had been presented by the testimony of Government witnesses, notably Pennipan, who made the statement that Group Health was operated successfully on dues, with the one exception of the purchase of equipment, which was made under a $40,000 grant from the HOLC, and that there were no contributions from any other organization; that he didn't know what grants were made by Good Will Fund, or who paid the salary of the administrator, Perry Taylor, from August, 1938.

Defendants then offered in evidence excerpts from the following exhibits, which had been marked and identified by the witness Percy Brown as pertaining to Group Health:

"The Twentieth Century Fund

Annual Report, 1938

(March 1, 1938 to February 28, 1939)

"Background and Aims

"The Twentieth Century Fund was founded in 1919 by the late Edward A. Filene from whose gifts the Fund's activities have since been sustained. During the first years of its existence the Fund acted solely as a disbursing agency, making annual grants to outside organizations. In the years following 1929, however, the Trustees began to experiment with surveys, conducted by the Fund itself, or economic problems of crucial current importance. An increasing proportion of the Fund's income was devoted each year to the conduct of these surveys. Finally, during the fiscal year 1937-1938, the Trustees voted to cease making grants to outside agencies and to use the Fund's entire income thereafter in its own direct activities. This action changed the Fund's status from that of a foundation making grants to outside agencies to that of an institute devoted to economic research. * * *"

"I. Changes of the Year

"* * * During the year an agreement was reached between The Twentieth Century Fund and the Good Will Fund that a sum of $75,000 left by Mr. Filene be administered as a separate account, primarily for medical economics, by two Trustees each from each Fund—Messrs. Dennison and Fahey for the Twentieth Century Fund and Messrs. David K. Niles and Robert Szold for the Good Will Fund. This Joint Committee assumed control of the fund on October 31, 1938. Percy S. Brown, Director of the Good Will Fund, has acted as the Joint Committee's Executive Officer and Evans Clark, Executive Director of the Twentieth Century Fund has collaborated with him and the Committee.

"A total of $179,390.36 was received by the Fund during the fiscal year 1938-1939. Of this $21,091.85, or 11.8 per cent, came from income on the Fund's endowment; $150,000.00, or 83.6 per cent, from dividends on the Filene Company common stock; and $8,298.51, or 4.6 per cent, from sales of the Fund's publications."

In this connection defendants offered further to prove that the Corporation owned 150,000 shares of common stock of William Filene's Sons Company with approximately $20 per share.

During the first years of its existence the Fund acted solely as a disbursing agency, making annual grants to outside organizations. In the years following 1929, however, the Trustees began to experiment with studies, undertaken by the Fund itself, of social and economic questions of crucial current importance. An increasing proportion of the Fund's income has been devoted each year to the conduct of these studies, until finally, during the fiscal year 1937-1938, the Trustees took a step which will change the Fund's status from that of a foundation to that of an institute devoted to economic research and the formulation of economic policies.

"At the Annual Meeting of the Board in June 1937 it was voted to cease making grants to outside agencies after the fiscal year 1937-1938, and use the Fund's entire income thereafter in its own direct activities. Final grants were made during the year to those organizations which had received aid from the Fund in previous years, except for the Credit Union National Association to which the Fund had been obligated some years ago to make a final contribution in the year 1939-1940."

"With the special $5,000 appropriation from the Twentieth Century Fund the National Association employed in February 1938 Mr. James A. Dacus, until that time an outstanding man in the Federal Credit Union Section, to promote cooperative group medical service agencies among credit unions. After studying various group medical plans by personal contact (particularly the Standard Oil unit at Baton Rouge) he was sent at once to Greenbelt, Maryland, where he has since organized a medical unit. It is hoped that Mr. Dacus will develop a technique for group medical service plan organization capable of broad application through the credit union movement."

. . . . . .

"3. Health Economics Association

"The Health Economics Association was organized in 1936 to take over the work of promoting cooperative group medical service agencies which had been previously carried on by the Fund itself. The decision of the Board of Trustees of June 1937 to cease making grants to outside agencies after the fiscal year 1937-1938, however, meant the cessation of the Fund's support of the Health Economics Association. A final grant was made to the Association for the year under review to complete the obligations which it had already undertaken.

"During the first three months of the year—before the Board's decision was made—the Association had conducted its usual promotional and advisory activities. After the decision of the Trustees, the efforts of the staff of the Association were concentrated on finishing certain projects it had on hand and terminating its active operations. Employment of staff members was discontinued, after allowing for reasonable notice.

"The most important project assisted by the Association in 1937 was the organization set up by the employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to furnish, on a periodic payment basis, practically complete medical services for themselves and families. These employees formed the Group Health Association, Inc., a non-profit organization, chartered by the District of Columbia specifically for this purpose.

"This group started to furnish service on November 1, 1937, to approximately one thousand employees and their families. It now has a list of twenty-seven hundred subscribers, who, with their families, represent a membership of approximately ten thousand individuals. The Group Health Association has an income which amply meets its expenses in furnishing this service. This group has been subjected to severe attacks from the local medical association, as well as from certain District officials.

"At the time of the Fund's decision to withdraw from the field of medical economics, the Health Economics Association had started to furnish information and recommendations relating to a suitable group payment-group practice medical service plan for employees of New York City's Department of Sanitation. Employment conditions in the Department were investigated and a report with recommendations was completed and furnished to several of the officials of the City who were interested in the plan.

"Among the projects which were commenced, but which were not completed, during the year was a study of the legal status of group payment-group practice medical service in each of the several states. This was undertaken by the Legislative Drafting Bureau Fund of Columbia University at the request of the Health Economics Association and was financed by the Association. A description pamphlet on the medical service plan of the employees of the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana was also being prepared.

"The present status of the Health Economic Association is largely one of marking time. This is being done, however, in a way which would enable it to expand its activities if financial support can be obtained from sources other than the Twentieth Century Fund."

"I. Fund Activities

"* * * 1. The promotion of voluntary group payment medical service organizations; * * *"

"1. Medical Economics

"The Funds' activities in the field of medical economics were conducted by the Medical Economics Department from the beginning of the fiscal year to November 30, 1936. As in the previous year, these were under the immediate direction of Mr. R. V. Rickcord, who had begun his full-time connection with the Fund on November 1, 1935.

"The Fund's medical economics activities were transferred, on December 1, 1936, to a new, independent agency, organized as a non-profit membership corporation, and called the Health Economics Association. Mr. Rickcord was elected Executive Vice-President of the new Association. The government of the Association was placed in the hands of the following Board of Trustees:

"Prentiss L. Coonley, President,
"R. V. Rickcord, Executive Vice-President,
"Evans Clark, Treasurer,
"J. Frederick Dewhurst, Secretary,
"Walter Biddle Saul,
"M. D. Vincent.

"As a result of the activities of the Fund, and of the Health Economics Association, substantial progress has been made in the promotion of voluntary cooperative, group payment medical service organizations. At the end of the fiscal year twelve agencies of this kind had actually been organized, consisting mostly of small groups. A total of nine other organizations were definitely committed to such plans, of which one is actively engaged in establishing a plan and the others are in various stages of negotiations with organization officials and employees. Chief among these groups is the employees in the District of Columbia of the Home Owners Loan Corporation. Some seventeen other organizations have approved a group payment plan, but have not begun to put it into operation.

"In the prosecution of these promotional activities Mr. Rickcord and his associates discovered that the insurance and corporation laws of several states made it illegal or impracticable to set up genuine cooperative group payment agencies—except on a very limited scale. It became evident that a thorough knowledge of the legal situation was an essential prerequisite to effective action by those interested in group payment in every state. The Columbia University Legislative Drafting Bureau was retained by the Association to make a thorough study of the laws and judicial decisions of each state bearing upon this subject. This study will be completed before the end of 1937 and the sections on each state will be made available to interested groups as they are finished. The Association itself, however, will take no part in efforts to remove these legal barriers." • • • • •

"II. Activities of Beneficiaries

"Seven outside agencies were beneficiaries of grants made by the Fund during the fiscal year 1936-7. The name of each with the amount of each grant and its percentage of the total donations to outside organizations, and its percentage of the total disbursements of the Fund, is given in the following table:

"I. Fund Activities

"In addition to these activities considerable progress was made along the lines of the Fund's program in the field of medical economics, and a third report on American foundations was compiled and made public.

"A brief summary of each of the projects carried on by the Fund during the fiscal year follows:

I. Department of Medical Economics.

"The largest proposition of the Fund's resources was disbursed in the furtherance of the work of this Department. The chief activities of the staff, directed by Dr. Nathan Sinai during the previous year and up to October 1, 1935, were centered on giving advice and counsel to private and public agencies interested in the organization of group-payment plans for medical services.

"After a careful study of the activities of the Department during the first two years of its existence, however, the Trustees came to the conclusion that its main objective should be actively to promote the organization of group-payment agencies—i.e., organizations through which groups of people might obtain all-around medical and hospital care in return for small, fixed periodic payments. The Trustees, therefore, at the Annual Meeting of May 1935 approved a program directed toward this end. Mr. R. V. Rickcord was added to the Fund Staff in August to promote such group-payment experiments. In October he was appointed Director of Medical Economics when Dr. Sinai resigned his position to return to the University of Michigan as Professor of Public Health. Dr. Sinai, however, agreed that when needed he would act as consultant to the Fund in advising it and interested groups on the details of setting up group-payment plans.

"During the remainder of the period under review Mr. Rickcord and his assistants have carried on an aggressive campaign to start groups in several localities. The Department has attempted to interest such national organizations as the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the American Federation of Labor, the National Manufacturers' Association and local Chambers of Commerce in this program. An intensive drive has been made in the city of Philadelphia to start groups, both through the initiative of employers and of labor unions. As a result of this work one of the largest unions in Philadelphia is engaged in organizing a plan, and five large companies there and in other localities are doing likewise.

"The year's experience indicates that group-payment agencies meet a wide and imperative need, and that they can be organized in all parts of the country in direct proportion to the amount of funds and personnel available. As in the case of the credit union movement, however, one of the first requirements is legislation in the several states which will authorize, and provide for the regulation of, group-payment plans in the interest of the general public. . . ."

"15. How to Budget Health, by Evans Clark. Published by Harper and Brothers and now to be had from the Twentieth Century Fund only. Cloth. 328 pages. $4.00.

"A study, written with the advice and counsel of eminent physicians and laymen, which offers a concrete plan by which medical costs can be budgeted every year in advance through groups of family doctors and associated specialists, with hospital facilities, offering complete medical and hospital care on the basis of small, fixed, periodic payments."

The Government objected to this offer on the ground that all of these matters were incompetent, irrelevant, and im-material, and merely operated to becloud the fundamental issues in the case.

The Court: My statement is that I have reached my conclusion and do not consider the evidence admissible; therefore, I sustain the Government's objection to that line of evidence. I might briefly state my reasons, which are twofold.

First, I do not regard the financial and economic affairs of GHA as material to the issues of the case; secondly, as to its bearing upon the question of the Medical Society's approving GHA there is nothing to show that at the time of any action by the Medical Society, or any of its committee or representatives, they knew of any subsidy or financial assistance being given by these organizations. Hence, it could not in any wise enter into their considerations.

So far as the evidence now shows, there is nothing to indicate that the defendants knew anything of these alleged subsidies up until the time that the evidence was produced here.

Mr. Richardson: I feel I should say part of our offer is to prove knowledge.

The Court: Where would it go back to?

Mr. Richardson: In the first place, the evidence in the record as it stands now is replete with statements from the very start that this thing was financed by the Twentieth Century Fund.

The Court: The evidence shows that there was no financial assistance given to them until August, 1938.

Mr. Lewin: That is right.

The Court: How do you reconcile that? You don't claim that they gave them any financial assistance, do you—any of these organizations?

Mr. Richardson: Oh, yes, because we have the evidence of Mr. Rickcord, who was the man who actually set it up. They paid his full salary from December 1, 1936. He was instrumental in setting it up. They paid his office rent, paid his clerks. They paid his rent for the administrative offices of G.H.A.

The Court: I may not have a correct understanding of that. I do recall that there was testimony of one of the doctors in the early stages of the matter that indicated that Mr. Rickcord had something to do with it.

Mr. Lewin: I think it is in evidence that he talked to Mr. Rickcord generally about the plan.

The Court: I will put my decision upon a broad basis, and that is the first ground.

The second ground is put in as secondary, and I thought I was correct in my understanding of it.

I do recall that there is something in the evidence—I think it came out in the Government's evidence, perhaps, showing losses—indicating what may be termed a suspicion that the Filene Fund was back of it; but when you take your offer of evidence now, which indicates that no actual financial assistance was given, no actual support to the organization itself, after it got started was given until August, 1938. I do not see how that could bear upon anything that was done by the defendants previous to that time.

Objection sustained and exception allowed.

Dr. Olin West, a defendant and a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am a doctor. I have resided in Chicago since 1922. I was born in Alabama in 1874; was educated in public and private schools in Alabama and at Howard College, and later at Vanderbilt University, where I graduated in 1895, and received a degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1898. I taught chemistry at Vanderbilt, was in charge of the chemical laboratory, taught physics, was afterwards an assistant to the chair of chemistry, associate professor of chemistry and associate professor of materia medica and therapeutics; and an assistant to the chair of physiology. I practiced medicine from 1898 until 1910 at Nashville, Tennessee, serving also as secretary to the Tennessee State Medical Society; became director of public health for the State of Tennessee for the Rockefeller Sanitary Commission; later as state health officer and secretary of the State of Tennessee Board of Health. I became field secretary of the AMA in April, 1922; later I became secretary of the Bureau of Health and Public Instruction, and I am now secretary and general manager of the AMA. With reference to national defense at present I am secretary of the Committee on Medical Preparedness of the AMA. I am secretary of the Judicial Council, and secretary of the Council on Scientific Assembly of the AMA, although I have no vote on either council. The AMA is a federacy of constituent state and territorial associations. There are one or two states in which there are no county societies, but district societies. The House of Delegates of the AMA is the policy-making and legislative organization, and is composed of delegates from constituent state and territorial associations. Each scientific section of the general assembly has one delegate, and medical corps of the United States Army has a delegate, the medical corps of the United States Navy has a delegate, and the United States Public Health Service has a delegate. The House meets annually or when special sessions are called. The House is the body which formulates the policies of the AMA, and during the interim between meetings of the House the Board of Trustees is authorized to act for the House. The Board of Trustees has nine members, elected by the House of Delegates. The Executive Committee, consisting of three members of the Board of Trustees, meets once a month, except during the summer. The Board of Trustees has its own secretary. As secretary I report to the House of Delegates and keep minutes of the House of Delegates and perform such other duties as are stipulated in the by-laws. As general manager I am the representative of the Board to administer the affairs of the Association and its officers, with the cooperation of the official staff of the AMA. The AMA was formed in 1847 to promote the art and science of medicine, and to better the public health, and they are its only objects, and have been pursued ever since the constitution was written. The Association publishes a Journal and nine other scientific journals devoted to special fields, and are now publishing a journal devoted to military medicine, that is, the medicine of war. It publishes a quarterly cumulative index medicus, an index of the medical literature of the world, the only publication of its kind in existence, and through these publications there has been formed a medium for the discussion of scientific opinion not only in this country, but the world, thereby promoting the art and the science of medicine. It publishes a magazine for the general public called Hygeia, and has distributed millions of leaflets and pamphlets designed to instruct the public in the prevention of diseases, and on the subject of health. The publications are scientific publications with editorials pertaining to scientific matters. Abstracts from other publications about scientific medicine are published, as well as a section devoted to medical organization. Queries and answers are also published. In Hygeia an effort is made simply to disseminate information helpful to the public. Two bureaus of the Association answer from ten to twenty thousand letters a year, one, the Bureau of Health Education; the other, the Bureau of Investigation, though the latter is concerned largely with fighting frauds and quackery in medicine.

My first knowledge of Group Health came when I learned of the charter, but I was informed that a plan was under consideration possibly in April or May of 1937, though I have no documentary evidence to that effect. In May or June I came to Washington to discuss the matter of Group Health with members of the Medical Society. Of the doctors present, I had met Dr. Hooe, Dr. Ruffin, Dr. McGovern, Dr. Macatee, and Dr. Reede, but on that occasion I was in Washington on official business of an entirely different nature and was accompanied by no other person from the AMA. At the time I offered a suggestion that the Medical Society might consider a plan for providing medical service to members of the low-income group, as the Society had not only contemplated such a plan but had given one long consideration and had begun organizing it.

A prepayment plan for medical service of some group in Washington was discussed at the AMA meeting in Atlantic City in June, 1937, where Dr. Woodward made a statement, but I don't recall any instructions being formulated by the Board of Trustees with reference to anything that the AMA should do in the premises. In June, at the meeting of the House of Delegates, I received some information in letters from various persons concerning Group Health. Later in September the Board of Trustees instructed Dr. Fishbein and me to develop the facts on Group Health and publish them. We developed what information we could and Dr. Woodward, who was instrumental in getting a considerable part of that information, was asked to prepare a statement for publication in the Journal. My recollection is that such a statement was published in the October 2, 1937, issue of the Journal, though I didn't personally participate in the preparation of the article, except that I made a suggestion as to one or two sentences, perhaps paragraphs. In seeking information about Group Health I made inquiries in Washington and visited certain persons in official positions in an effort to secure facts to present to the medical profession and to the public. I conferred with Dr. Conklin, Senator Copeland, another Senator, and tried to secure a copy of the contract between Group Health and those who purchased its services, as I thought it was highly important to know what Group Health promised to deliver under such a contract; whether the plan was sound and whether it was to render medical service as an incorporation, which we believed to be an illegal thing; and whether it would have an adequate staff to provide good medical service in quantities indicated in its contract. I was unable to secure that information through any available source.

I was present at the November 6 meeting in Chicago, attended by Drs. McGovern, Hooe, Leland and Woodward, and an abstract of that conference read in evidence (Gov. Ex. 117) was prepared by a stenographer in my office, but it is not a verbatim report. I only recall attending one meeting of the District Medical Society and that was many years ago, and it had nothing whatsoever to do with Group Health. I did not attend any meeting of the District Medical Society pertaining to Group Health. I visited the offices of the Medical Society on possibly three occasions, but not specifically for the purpose of discussing Group Health, though it quite possibly was discussed. I never discussed Group Health with Dr. Cutter until considerably after the time of its organization and the beginning of its plan. I don't recall that I ever discussed the matter with Dr. Leland until after the Atlantic City session at which the matter was discussed and that discussion with Dr. Leland was purely incidental. After Group Health began its operations I had some discussion with Dr. Leland and many other persons, as the newspapers were full of it, and as I had been instructed to develop the facts, and publish them. I don't recall any conference that I ever had with Dr. Cutter, about the matter. I knew nothing of the minutes of the Medical Society meeting until they were read during this trial, though I may have seen some extracts from the minutes if they were sent to my office.

When mail comes into the AMA offices in Chicago, except that marked "Personal," it is sent to a central distribution point, and where letters are delivered in one department that probably should have been called to the attention of another department, a copy might be sent there.

Gov. Ex. 144 is a letter dated October 19, 1932, which I wrote as secretary of the Judicial Council and at the instruction of it, to Dr. R. W. Baird, Dallas, Texas.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 144 to the jury as follows:

"I have been instructed to send you a copy of the decision of the judicial council of the American Medical Association in the appeal of Dr. R. W. Baird, et al. from the decision of the Board of Councilors of the State Medical Association of Texas, this appeal having been heard by the judicial council in Chicago on September 21, 1932. This decision is as follows:"

This letter (Gov. Ex. 144) was sent on the instruction of the Judicial Council issued to me as secretary of the council. I had no knowledge of the facts which entered into the decision of the council, other than what I heard at the discussions at the time the Judicial Council gave its official consideration to this appeal.

I did not take part in the deliberations of the Judicial Council in 1932. I had nothing whatever to do except serve as secretary and perform the functions of that office. I had no vote.

Defense counsel continued reading Gov. Ex. 144 as follows:

"Decision by the Judicial Council.

"The fundamental issue in dispute in this case is the ethical character of certain contracts held by the appellants to give medical service to groups of people on a monthly per capita plan of payment. No essential facts of the contracts were in dispute.

"It is contended by the appellants that these contracts are not in violation of all or any of five conditions which the Judicial Council has declared at various times are conditions, which obtaining, make a contract unethical. The Dallas County Medical Society which sentenced these appellants to suspension contended that these contracts violated all five of these conditions. When, in its constitutional function as authority over ethical matters, the Judicial Council expounds the subject of contract practice and lays down certain principles which when present create an unethical contract it is not to be assumed that those are the only principles which may have that effect. A fundamental of medical ethics is that anything which in effect is opposed to the ultimate good of the people at large is against sound public policy and therefore unethical. On the five points mentioned the appellants presented a strong argument which might be convincing if a narrow or local view only is considered. Nevertheless the Judicial Council is of the unanimous opinion that this type of contract is unethical on the basis of being contrary to sound public policy.

"The appellants were at the same time convicted of violation of a by-law of the society forbidding the holding of certain contracts and pleaded error in the trial on a technical procedure. This phase of the appeal was not pressed by either side but from such records as were submitted to the Council it is of the opinion that no reversible error was proven."

I wrote Gov. Ex. 138.

Defense Counsel read Gov. Ex. 138 to the jury as follows:

"January 31, 1935.

DEAR DR. MCLEAN:

I regret exceedingly that because of the tremendous press of work, a massive correspondence and unusual demands on my time, I have found it utterly impossible to make prompt replies to many letters that have come to me within the last six weeks. Among those that have unavoidably accumulated on my desk is your letter of January 10."

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. Doctor, what occasion had you for writing this letter other than the letter written to you by Dr. McLean?

A. None, sir.

Mr. Leahy: "The Ross-Loos Clinic in Los Angeles was established some years ago and operated in the usual manner as a clinic quite similar to numerous other groups of physicians in various parts of the country. A year or two ago, more or less, this clinic group entered in agreements with the employees of certain organizations, or with the organizations themselves, whereby the clinic agreed to provide necessary medical service for stipulated sums, the idea being, as I understand it, that each employee concerned should pay a certain amount each month into a common fund and that the clinic should be paid on the basis of the number of employees concerned in the various groups. Among the groups that entered into this arrangement, as I am informed, was the group composed of firemen employed by the City of Los Angeles.

"It is claimed by the Ross-Loos Clinic and, according to my information, by the members of the groups who have arranged to secure medical service through that clinic that the plan has been mutually satisfactory. The Los Angeles County Medical Association, however, appears to have considered the scheme to be unethical. Doctors Ross and Loos were cited to appear before the proper official body of the Los Angeles County Medical Association and were dropped from membership in that organization after a hearing of the charges preferred against them. Doctors Ross and Loos appealed from the decision of the Los Angeles County Medical Association to the Council of the California Medical Association, and that Council upheld the decision of the county society. I understand that Doctors Ross and Loos intend to appeal to the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association, but up to this time no appeal has been filed.

"I can offer you nothing more than my personal opinion concerning contracts of the kind which seem to have been made between the Ross-Loos Clinic and various groups. That opinion is to the effect that all such arrangements are potentially dangerous to medicine and are not in the public interests. I am quite sure that some of the professional groups that have entered into such contracts are thoroughly capable and that they have no doubt given good service under these contracts. In my opinion, the weaknesses and dangers of contract practice are, however, inherent in all of these plans. When one such group of physicians appears to have succeeded financially in an undertaking of this kind, their success will almost surely stimulate the development of similar schemes under the direction and control of less competent and less responsible persons with the result that a vicious circle of underbidding will be established, and inevitable deterioration in the quality of medical service will result.

"I am asking our Bureau of Medical Economics to send you some printed material having a bearing on this general subject."

This exhibit merely reflects such facts and information as I had. The appeal mentioned did come to the Judicial Council and the decision of the California Medical Association was reversed in accordance with or on the groups of errors in procedure, and failure to be guided by the organization's law of the Los Angeles Medical Society, and the California State Medical Association, one or both. The constitution and by-laws of the AMA specifically stipulate that the jurisdiction of the Judicial Council in such appeals shall be only with respect to questions of law and procedure; that is, organization law and procedure. Following this reversal the Ross-Loos case has never come to the Judicial Council again, and Drs. Ross and Loos are still members of the AMA. When I expressed my personal opinion in the letter of the contracts of the kind made by Ross-Loos Clinic and various other groups, I referred to my belief that many of the schemes of this particular class are potentially dangerous. That belief was founded upon large observation and experience, not only of my own, but on the experience of the medical profession. Group practice has several definitions. My own conception of it is that of a practice carried on by a group of physicians acting on their own responsibilities, and not responsible to anyone else, who are combined together for the purpose of furnishing as complete as possible medical service to members. In regard to group practice, both consumer and producer groups, the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association in Cleveland, in 1934, adopted a set of principles that were intended to serve for the guidance of prepayment group plans for the provision of medical care to certain income groups. The AMA has not been opposed, as a general policy, to all group plans, whether prepayment or otherwise, in the United States, and has declared no policy against the group practice of medicine, as such. The type of character of group practice which the AMA has opposed is any group practice which offers to do more than it is believed can be done under the terms on which its service is to be delivered. It has opposed group practice that is controlled by corporations, because it believes that a corporation cannot be engaged in the practice of medicine and cannot qualify to engage in the practice of medicine. It has also opposed group practice where conducted by men known to be disreputable and irresponsible, and who have established a record for irresponsibility and for lack of professional qualifications and ethics. Where a group is practicing, and qualified to do so, and renders complete medical care in accordance with its contract, the AMA has no attitude to it other than to offer principles for the guidance of its work, and today many members of the AMA are engaged in the group practice of medicine of all types and have been over a period of years. When I made the statement in my letter of January 31, 1935:

"When one such group of physicians appears to have succeeded financially in an undertaking of this kind, their success will almost surely stimulate the development of similar schemes under the direction and control of less competent and less responsible persons with the result that a vicious circle of underbidding will be established."

I had in mind that a great number of contracts and group plans of all kinds had developed, some of which offered far more than they could deliver, and some of which had no intention of doing what they had agreed to do; in several instances where an organization of this kind was developed by responsible groups, irresponsible groups developed the same kind of program, offering far more for far less, when it was known it would be impossible for it to give good medical service. In other instances, a group is opposed when it delivers poor services, apt to be as harmful as helpful. The character of opposition that the AMA takes to such groups is none other than to attempt to develop the facts and make them known through publication in the associations' own publications and in reply to letters received. The AMA institutes no other methods of opposition that I know of.

Gov. Ex. 141 is a letter which I wrote to Dr. Frieburg, Cincinnati, Ohio, on February 6, 1936.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 141 to the jury as follows:

Q. Doctor, the very opening sentence of your letter as shown by the carbon copy under date of February 6, 1936, is (reading):

"Your letter of February 4 has just come to hand."

What other occasion had you for writing than the fact that you had just received a letter when you wrote No. 141, the carbon of which you hold in your hand?

A. I presume you want me to refer to any circumstances that may have occurred before I received this letter?

Q. What occasioned the writing of this letter?

A. I received a letter from Dr. Frieburg to whom my letter is addressed.

Q. Doctor, in this letter you state as follows (reading):

"I am sorry indeed to know that anybody in Cincinnati is preparing to begin operations of a plan made more or less famous, or infamous, according to the point of view, by Doctors Ross and Loos in Los Angeles. I am quite convinced that the Ross-Loos scheme is a violation of the principles laid down by the courts of California which have repeatedly insisted that the corporate practice of medicine is illegal in that state. I am just as strongly convinced that it is relatively easy to evade the law. What is in effect a corporation may be organized under the designation of partnership. I believe that schemes of the Ross-Loos type will inevitably tend to the creation of a demand for the solicitation of medical practice, and I am quite convinced that the operation of such schemes will inevitably cut the ground from under the feet of the private practitioner."

When you stated that "schemes of the Ross-Loos type will inevitably tend to the creation of a demand for the solicitation of medical practice,' to what did you refer?

A. I referred to the fact that, as I stated a few minutes ago, the operation of such plans very frequently leads to the development of other plans by less responsible persons, in many instances, who do not hesitate to resort to any method that may be available to them for securing practice.

Q. When you said "solicitation" what did you refer to by that?

A. I meant asking patients to come to an individual or to a clinic or anything else, whether it be an institution or an individual.

Q. Is the American Medical Association opposed to the solicitation of patients?

A. The principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association, which have been adopted independently by the constituent territorial associations, with perhaps one association that has adopted it in a way, but which has its own code of ethics also, distinctly declare that the solicitation of patients is an unprofessional procedure.

Q. What is the basis of the principle of ethics that solicitation is an unethical procedure?

A. Just a common sense basis, that a man who goes out and begs patients to come to him and offers them some attraction to come to him is guilty of an unethical practice. He has nothing to sell other than his own qualifications and knowledge and ability as a practitioner; and it certainly is not the part of an ethical physician to glorify himself to patients and to solicit patronage.

* * * * * * * *

Q. Were you speaking from personal knowledge, or otherwise, Doctor, when you made that statement in the letter to which I have just drawn your attention?

A. I was speaking entirely from the results of my own personal observation.

Q. You wrote in that same letter (reading):

"I am informed that Doctors Ross and Loos are thoroughly competent physicians and that they have associated with them young men who are well qualified. I have heard from various sources that the Ross-Loos clinic actually delivers good medical service. These two facts, of course, operate very strongly against any movement designed to put a stop to the utilization of mass production methods in the practice of medicine and to preserve the individual private practitioner as the most important entity in the field of medicine. It would take a great deal of argument to convince me that any scheme to use mass production methods will operate to the advantage of scientific medicine or in the interest of sound public policy."

Doctor, to what did you refer when you stated that mass production methods in the practice of medicine were not in accordance with what you believed to be good, sound public policy?

A. Of course I meant exactly what I said, that I did not believe it is possible to practice medicine on a mass production basis and do justice to the patient or to deliver the best quality of medical service under any such conditions.

Q. Why is that, Doctor?

A. Simply because one individual patient may require three hours for proper attention and another may require ten minutes; and what is good for one patient may not be good for another who has exactly the same diseased condition. They have got to be handled separately and examined separately, and all the factors that enter into the diagnosis and treatment have got to be individually considered.

Q. When you stated to Dr. Frieburg that you had information that Doctors Ross and Loos were both able and qualified men and that they had about them a staff of qualified physicians, were you giving the correct information that you had at hand at the time?

A. Yes, and I should like to say, if I may be permitted to do so, that this letter was written in 1936, and that in a letter, or maybe one or two letters, that I had previously written I had not made the same statements, for the reason that I did not then have that information.

Q. In other words, the information which you gave to Dr. Frieburg in 1936 was based upon information which had come to you in between the time of previous correspondence and this?

A. It had come later. I had written some of the other letters in which I did not make a similar statement. I tried to be perfectly fair to those men. I had lines from men who knew the quality of their practice, and I had conferred with Dr. Loos himself, and I did not hesitate to make the statement that is made in that letter, that I had information that they were competent physicians. I believe I stated in one place that they had surrounded themselves with a staff of competent physicians. I certainly had no idea of doing them any injustice, and I tried to do them full justice.

Q. (Reading further):

"I am rather inclined to the opinion that each separate county medical society will have to deal with the questions involved and the matters referred to in your letter on the basis of conditions that actually exist in its own community, and I am sorry that I cannot offer you any very helpful suggestion.

"With my sincere good wishes, I am

"Very truly yours,"

What did you refer to, Doctor, when you make the statement in the letter that "each separate county medical society will have to deal with the questions involved on the basis of conditions that actually exist in its own community"?

Mr. Lewin: Is there any ambiguity about that?

Mr. Leahy: Yes. It is very important.

Mr. Lewin: I object to it.

The Court: I think you may ask him to state his reasons for that statement.

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. Will you state the reasons for that statement? Oh, in other words, Doctor, what is there about the practice of medicine as it refers to group practice that is different in one community from conditions existing in another community?

A. Mr. Leahy, the American Medical Association—I hope I will not take too much time in making this statement.

Q. Make it as briefly as possible.

A. The American Medical Association has been rather severely criticized for not having produced a plan of private medical service for the members of low-income groups in all the United States. The American Medical Association has made a very determined, persistent, and honest effort to develop such a plan, but it becomes perfectly apparent on a study of the situation that it cannot be done. A plan that would serve satisfactorily in an industrial state, like New Jersey or Pennsylvania, could not possibly be applied successfully in an agricultural state like Mississippi. As a matter of fact, no single plan can be prepared or operated by anybody that will work with equal success in all parts of an individual large state; and we have become thoroughly convinced of that after careful and conscientious consideration of the factors involved. Moreover, the American Medical Association believes that it is the right and the duty of the component county medical societies to take the leadership and deal with affairs within their own jurisdictions; and the American Medical Association has no intention or desire to dictate to a component county society or state medical association what it shall do or shall not do. Its only purpose is to be helpful, simply to carry out the purposes declared in its constitution, to promote the art and science of medicine and the betterment of the public health. That can be done by the extension of medical service and by the protection of the quality of medical service; and that is all it can do.

Gov. Ex. 166 is a letter which I wrote to Dr. J. N. Baker, Montgomery, Alabama on February 29, 1936.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 166 to the jury as follows:

"I am greatly obliged to you for your kindness in sending me a copy of a communication dated February 25, addressed to the presidents of certain county medical societies in Alabama and to the chairman and members of the Committee on Public Relations of the Medical Society"—I guess that is "Association" written over—"of the State of Alabama.

"I am glad indeed to know that the Tennessee Valley Authority is in no way officially concerned with the problem of medical care. I sincerely hope that the county medical societies in the counties directly interested will give most careful and exhaustive consideration to any plans that may be proposed for providing medical service on a group basis. Confidentially I may say to you that the more I hear and think about many of the experimental plans now in operation the more concerned I become. I cannot but feel that there are grave dangers inherent in practically all of them and that they tend toward the development of a sentiment for state control of medical practice. I wonder if any of them have a sound actuarial basis. I wonder if it is wise to teach people that it is possible to render really good medical or really good hospital service for a nominal sum. Personally I do not believe that it is possible, whether it be done on a group basis or otherwise. I am very much afraid that a tendency has already developed to raise the ante, so to speak, in many of these experimental plans, either by increasing the incomes of the members of which are large enough to enable them to pay for needed medical service, or by increasing the membership fee. Moreover, I am fearful that the group hospital plans which are rapidly developing and which in many places are being tied up with other plans for providing medical service, may result in putting the hospitals directly into the practice of medicine. There is no doubt in my mind that this very development is now in progress, and I am almost willing to predict that it will not be very long in some places before the professional members of hospital staffs will find themselves dictated to by lay boards and lay administrators as to what they shall do and what they shall not do.

"Please understand that this letter is in the nature of a purely personal chat. I do not of course wish to discourage the efforts of any medical society that has given full consideration to the problems that have arisen within its own jurisdiction and that has become convinced that some sort of experimental plan is necessary."

When you wrote that last paragraph, Doctor——

"I do not of course wish to discourage the efforts of any medical society that has given full consideration to the problems that have arisen within its own jurisdiction"—— were you then referring to the statement which you gave us a moment ago that each local medical association should determine the problems within its own jurisdiction?

A. Yes; I was referring to that. I was also referring to the fact that the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association had encouraged societies that, after careful investigation of the facts on the basis of their best judgment, believed that it was necessary to develop some sort of unusual plan to provide service for the members of low-income groups and should undertake it on an experimental basis; and a number of societies in various parts of the country had initiated such plans after they had studied conditions within their own jurisdictions.

Q. Were they group plans?

A. They were plans that were organized by the medical societies themselves, and every member of which, that was willing to participate in it, was available for any person that desired his services.

Q. Were they on a prepayment basis?

A. I think most of them were. Some of them, according to my recollection, were not.

It is not only my custom, but my duty as secretary and manager of the AMA to attend each and every convention of the AMA. I recall a resolution or action taken by the House of Delegates with reference to hospitals practicing medicine, wherein it was suggested that there be cooperation between the Judicial Council and Dr. Cutter's bureau with reference to certain evils existing.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 143 in reply to Gov. Ex. 142.

Defense counsel read Gov. Exs. 142 and 143 to the jury as follows:

Gov. Ex. 142 is dated March 14, 1936, directed to Dr. West, the American Medical Association, Dearborn Street, Chicago, and reads as follows (reading):

"This is merely a personal note to you for your information and use as you may think best. It may be known to you that Dr. George H. Cooke has been and is trying to organize a group clinic in Cincinnati on the identical plan of the Ross-Loos clinic in Los Angeles. Dr. Cooke is a member of the Butler County Medical Society but not of the Cincinnati-Hamilton County Academy of Medicine. Cooke addressed the Council of the Academy asking what would be its attitude towards members joining his group. The Council referred this to the committee on the Costs of Medical Care of which I am chairman. This committee advised the Council that no reply to such a question was coming to anyone not a member. Upon advice of the committee the Council submitted the matter with full information regarding all of the circumstances to the Academy as the special order of business of March 10. They submitted three questions to which they requested specific replies. In substance these were (1) Does practice under such a prepayment group plan constitute a violation of Article 6, Section 2, of the Principles of Medical Ethics? (2) Should membership in the Academy be withheld from practitioners who are practicing in such violation? (3) Shall practice by members of the Academy in such violation be considered sufficient ground for the termination of membership?

"The meeting was well attended and the vote was in the affirmative, with only four dissenting. There was ample discussion with but one speaking for the negative. The meeting was not executive purposely. There was some adverse newspaper comment with the usual misunderstanding of the real issue.

"It is the object of this letter to furnish you with this information to invite your frank comment and to suggest that if you wish full information you write to the secretary of the Academy requesting it.

"With very kind personal regards, I am"——

To which Dr. West replied on March 18, 1936, Gov. Ex. 143 (reading):

"My dear Doctor Frieburg:

"I am greatly obliged to you for your personal letter of March 14. I am glad indeed to have the information submitted. I sincerely hope, of course, that the Cincinnati Academy of Medicine will be able to head off the establishment of all sorts of group schemes of the nature referred to in your letter, because I am quite convinced that these schemes do not operate to the advantage of medicine or the medical profession or of the public. I do believe that they are opposed to public policy. While I have frequently heard that the clinic mentioned in the first paragraph of your letter, which has been operating in Los Angeles for some time, has heretofore been rendering good medical service, I have heard it intimated within the last week that the quality of the service rendered by that concern is gradually deteriorating. As far as I am personally concerned, I am quite convinced that this is an inevitable result of the operation of such schemes.

"If I secure any further information from authentic sources I shall pass it on to you.

"With most cordial good wishes I am

"Very truly yours,"

When I wrote that "I have heard it intimated within the last week that the quality of the service rendered by that concern is gradually deteriorating" I was truthfully and correctly expressing information which I had at that time. It was within a week of the time of this letter that I heard that the quality of medical care of the Ross-Loos Clinic was deteriorating. But I will, in order to be perfectly fair to everybody concerned, be glad to state openly here that I later heard from quite as reliable sources that the Ross-Loos Clinic was continuing to render good medical service. I have no intention or desire to be unjust to anybody and I do not want to do anybody any harm, and I would be glad to make amends for any statement, even though I considered it to be reliable and authentic, that was later refuted by another statement from equally reliable and authentic sources.

I received Gov. Ex. 104 from Mr. Hendricks who is the executive secretary of the Indiana State Medical Association. My best recollection is that Mr. Hendricks had heard something of these plans and had talked to me either over the phone or in a personal visit, about the plans referred to in that statement.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 104 to the jury as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen, this is a letter dated June 22, 1937, on the official stationery of the Indiana State Medical Association, in which Thomas A. Hendricks, Executive Secretary, says to Dr. West (reading):

"We enclose a copy of the confidential report which gives details of the plan for a cooperative medical service in Washington for Federal employees."

The enclosure is a rather long one, marked "Confidential. For Private Circulation Only," and entitled "A Plan for a Cooperative Medical Service on a Periodic Payment Basis for Federal Employees and Their Families in Washington." I shall not take the time to read that exhibit, because it is a bit lengthy.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 103 to Mr. Hendricks, on June 27, 1937.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 103 to the jury as follows:

"I am very greatly obliged to you for your letter of June 22, for the memorandum attached to it, and for the copy of a plan for a cooperative medical service on a periodic payment basis for Federal employees and their families in Washington.

"While we already had a copy of this plan and practically all of the information submitted in the memorandum attached to your letter, we are nevertheless grateful to you for sending us the material that accompanied your letter, and especially for the information pertaining to the small group in Washington that seems to be acting as a steering committee for the organization of cooperative medical services among various governmental departments. We had not been able to secure this particular piece of information. We had information for two or three months that a movement has been started to organize medical service plans for government employees. We have made very diligent efforts to ascertain all the facts, and we are still persisting in those efforts.

"Since the Atlantic City session Dr. Woodward has been in Washington for a large part of the time and has had interviews with officials of the H.O.L.C., the Resettlement Administration, the Brookings Institute, and numerous others. The only thing we have tried very hard to secure is a copy of the contract to be entered into between the cooperatives and their members. Our own efforts as well as the efforts of persons in high official positions in Washington have been altogether unavailing, and we have not been able to secure a copy of the contract nor any specific information about its provisions. If you can succeed in securing any additional information we shall appreciate it if you will pass it on to us, just as we have fully appreciated your helpfulness in connection with other matters in the past.

"Very sincerely yours,"

I received Gov. Ex. 106 from Dr. Herbst and I wrote Gov. Ex. 105 in reply. (Defense counsel read Gov. Exs. 105 and 106 to the jury.) I recollect that I read Gov. Ex. 177. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 177 to the jury.) Gov. Ex. 135 is an extract from the minutes of the Board of Trustees of the AMA of June 29, 1937. Gov. Ex. 152 is a letter which I wrote. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 152 to the jury.) When I made the statement that "The principle of collective bargaining cannot properly be applied to medical service," (Gov. Ex. 152), I had in mind that you cannot apply mass production methods to medical service. I later withdrew (Gov. Ex. 152) my suggestion to the District Society that they develop a medical service plan under their own auspices.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 153 to Mr. Charles Wright who at the time this letter was written was a member of the Board of Trustees of the AMA. (Defense counsel read a portion of Gov. Ex. 153 to the jury.) Gov. Ex. 200 came to my attention. Gov. Ex. 294 came to my attention. It is a copy of the statement prepared by Dr. Woodward which later appeared as an article in the Journal on October 2, 1937. It is not exactly the same as some changes were made before publication. Gov. Ex. 293 is a copy of the Journal article of October 2, 1937.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 154.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 154 to the jury as follows:

This is Exhibit 154, dated October 7, 1937, directed to Dr. C. B. Conklin, Washington, D. C., Secretary, Medical Society of the District of Columbia (reading):

"DEAR DR. CONKLIN:

"I am grateful indeed to you for your kindness in sending me a copy of the resolutions to be presented by the Executive Committee of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and to be considered, as I understand it, at a meeting of that society to be held tonight.

"I confess that I feel somewhat concerned over the possibility of adoption of these resolutions by the District Society, because I am somewhat afraid that if they are adopted the promoters of Group Health Association, Inc. will be greatly encouraged and may be stimulated to exert efforts to extend these efforts beyond the scope that I understand they originally intended.

"I also entertain some fear that if the resolution is adopted as it now stands, the proponents of compulsory sickness insurance who are now devoting their efforts to the establishment of all sorts of voluntary insurance schemes, knowing full well that voluntary insurance has always been the forerunner of compulsory insurance, will redouble their efforts to bring about the establishment of all sorts of plans for group prepaid medical service. I fear that even the slightest implication of approval of the activities of incorporated groups may result in stimulating the organization of similar groups elsewhere than in the District of Columbia, and possibly give considerable impulse to the development of corporation practice.

"You know very well, of course, that I have no disposition whatever to intrude in the affairs of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, and I hope that neither you nor anybody else will feel that this letter is intended to be even in the least degree in the nature of such intrusion.

"With my sincere good wishes, I am

"Very truly yours,"

Well, about the time that letter was written there was a very determined effort being made to promote movements designed to bring about the establishment of systems of compulsory sickness insurance in some of the states, and the proposal had been made that such a system should be organized under the auspices of the Federal Government. It is true that in many of the instances where compulsory sickness and insurance plans have been put into effect the forerunners of those plans were voluntary sickness insurance plans. The American Medical Association has made most exhaustive and careful study of the workings of compulsory sickness insurance plans or systems in several countries, and is convinced beyond any doubt whatever that they do not contribute to the advancement of scientific medicine and that they do not serve the best interests of the public. The Association believes and its House of Delegates has repeatedly expressed its opinion and established its policy, that a system of compulsory sickness insurance in the United States on a Federal basis would be destructive of all the best values and elements——

I received Gov. Ex. 111. I wrote Gov. Ex. 110 to Dr. Conklin in reply to Gov. Ex. 111. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 110 to the jury.)

The annual conference of the secretaries of the constituent state medical societies is held at the office of the AMA each year to which the secretaries of all constituent state associations are invited along with the editors of all state medical journals and the officers of constituent state medical associations. The purpose of the conference is to give the secretary and editor of the various state associations an opportunity to become acquainted with the actions of the AMA, to confer among themselves, and with the official representatives of the Association, including the heads of departments and the members of the boards of trustees as to matters of common interest relative to the organization sources and the work of the state associations in relation to the work of the AMA, or their relation to other medical organizations.

I received Gov. Ex. 108 and wrote Gov. Ex. 109 in reply. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 108 and 109 to the jury.)

I wrote Gov. Ex. 112 to Dr. Tibbals who is secretary of the Utah State Medical Association. The only occasion for this letter was to reply to his letter of October 26. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 112, dated October 29, 1937, to the jury.)

Q. Doctor, when you made the statement:

"The American Medical Association has very actively opposed the plans of Group Health Association, Incorporated," to what did you refer as the opposition contained therein?

A. Our efforts to develop all the facts that could be had in order that they might be published for the information of the profession; the various medical organs of the country, and who else might be interested.

Q. What other form of opposition up to that time had been instituted in regard to anything connected with Group Health Association?

A. Nothing other than was incidental to efforts to collect the facts for the purposes indicated.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 114 to Dr. Conklin. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 114 to the jury.) I sent Gov. Ex. 115 and received Gov. Ex. 116. Following these telegrams the conferences of November 6 at Chicago between me, Dr. Hooe, Dr. McGovern, Dr. Woodward and Dr. Leland was held.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 113 to Dr. Tibbals and gave him additional information which he requested on November 4.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 113 to the jury.

Gov. Ex. 117 is a resume of the conference of November 6 held at Chicago. It is not a verbatim report.

Q. On page 7, I direct your attention to the statement made by Dr. Hooe, and the statement made by Dr. West. Did you hear those statements read as from that abstract, Doctor?

A. I think I heard it read here.

Q. Does that abstract correctly report what you said on that occasion?

A. No, it doesn't.

The Court: You may take the opportunity of reading that part of it.

The Witness: I don't know whether it is a matter of great importance; it does support my statement that it is not a verbatim report. It says:

"Dr. Hooe: Is it not, in your opinion, most reasonable that the hospitals should acquiesce in this matter?

"Dr. West: It is reasonable that they should do it, but as to whether or not they will, that's another question. Suppose they don't?"

Now, I am quite sure that I did not express a definite opinion as to whether it was reasonable, but I raised the question as to whether it would do any good to attempt what was proposed. As a matter of fact, I believed the hospitals should control their own affairs.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 161 to Dr. Knopf. The only occasion for writing this was in response to his letter of November 3. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 161 to the jury.) I wrote Gov. Ex. 118.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 118 to the jury as follows:

It is dated November 9, 1937, addressed to Dr. Robert A. Hooe, 1746 K Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C. (reading):

"MY DEAR DR. HOOE:

"I am sending you herewith by air mail special delivery two copies of an abstract of the notes taken at the conference held in my office on last Saturday. I am also sending you a copy of this abstract by registered mail.

"We were greatly pleased to have a visit from you and Dr. McGovern, and I hope that matters will be satisfactorily adjusted."

The abstracts referred to were those of the conference in Chicago on November 6 (Gov. Ex. 117). I received Gov. Ex. 156 to which Gov. Ex. 155 is my reply. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 156 and 155 to the jury.) The instructions referred to in Gov. Ex. 155 are those in Gov. Ex. 135, Minutes of Meeting of Board of Trustees, June 29, 1937, in which it is stated: "That Doctors Woodward and Leland be requested to go to Washington to see what they can learn and try to advise the Medical Society of the District of Columbia if that Society is willing to accept advice." Later other instructions were given at a meeting of the Board of Trustees where Dr. Fishbein, as editor of the Journal, and I, as secretary and general manager of the Association, were instructed to develop the facts as far as we could about Group Health and have a statement prepared for publication in the Journal.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 120 to Dr. Wise on November 16, 1937, simply by way of answer to a letter from him of November 12, 1937. In the preparation of replies to letters which I received from various individuals I did not collaborate with any of my fellow officers of the AMA, except, perhaps, if I wanted information that I did not have I may have asked them for it before I wrote the letter.

(Defense counsel read a portion of Gov. Ex. 137 to the jury.) I was present at this meeting of the Judicial Council and these minutes were prepared by me or under my supervision. Several complaints had been received about Dr. Richard Cabot, a brother of Dr. Hugh Cabot, and these were referred to the Judicial Council. Apparently the Judicial Council thought it had no jurisdiction over complaints of this character because I was instructed to refer them to the secretary of the Massachusetts State Society and that was the end of the matter.

(Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 120, letter dated November 16, 1937, from Dr. West to Dr. Wise, to the jury.)

Q. Doctor, when you stated in Gov. Ex. 120 that you had worked as closely as possible with the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, to what did you refer?

A. Well, the American Medical Association worked as closely as possible in cooperation with all consituent state and territorial associations, but I suspect that in this particular instance I had some reference to the matters that were at the time of interest in Washington.

Q. Do you recall now what you referred to when you stated that your efforts began before the Medical Society of the District of Columbia became very active?

A. I think that is true. I think we began an effort to develop the facts about this matter before the Medical Society of the District of Columbia began any action whatever, possibly before they were informed about it. I am not sure of that, but I think it is quite possible.

Q. And those were the efforts which you told us about yesterday?

A. To some extent; yes, sir.

Q. Were there any others which you can recall which related to other matters than the collection of data?

A. As I stated yesterday, anything that transpired was incidental to our efforts to develop the facts.

Gov. Ex. 136 is the minutes of the Board of Trustees meeting of November 18 and 19, 1937. I was present at this meeting as secretary and general manager of the AMA. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 136 to the jury.) I do not recall that the AMA had done anything further with reference to Group Health than is reported in these minutes. It had simply made an effort to develop the facts and to make ready to publish the facts.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 157. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 157 to the jury.) I wrote Gov. Ex. 159 merely in reply to Dr. Poling's letter. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 159 to the jury.) Gov. Ex. 162 is a letter which I wrote in reply to Dr. Poling's letter of December 27, 1937.

Defense Counsel read Gov. Ex. 162 to the jury as follows:

"DEAR DOCTOR POLING:

I have before me your letter of December 27 and am greatly obliged to you for your kindness in sending me a copy of the resolution adopted by the Mahoning County Medical Society pertaining to the Group Health Association, Inc., of Washington, D. C.

The American Medical Association has done all that it could to oppose this movement in Washington, having begun its efforts in that direction long before the corporation was formed. I am sure you will be interested to know that an official ruling has been issued in Washington to the effect that the appropriation of money by the Home Loan Bank Board for the purposes of the Group Health Association, Inc., was without authorization. However, I am informed that in spite of this ruling the corporation is going ahead with its plans. Doctor Woodward, Director of our Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation, has just returned from Washington, having gone there for the purpose of giving such aid as he could to the Medical Society of the District of Columbia in the effort which that Society is making to combat the activities of the Group Health Association, Inc.

As I see it, it is a rather remarkable thing that an agency of the federal government would appropriate money to support a corporation that is to engage in the practice of medicine in the face of the fact that the laws of many states specifically declare corporation practice to be illegal. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation—of the Home Loan Bank Board which is an affiliate of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation—in a brief that has been submitted, takes the position that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the Home Loan Bank Board are not agencies of the federal government in the same sense that departments and bureaus of the government are agents. As I understand it, the position is taken in this brief that the monies of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the Home Loan Bank Board are not appropriated directly by the federal government but are secured from the public, and that for that reason the Corporation and the Board are not amenable to the same rules as those that apply to other governmental units.

"A number of medical societies in different parts of the country have taken action somewhat similar to that which has been taken by the Mahoning County Medical Society. I presume that you saw the article which appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association some weeks ago pertaining to this matter.

"With my sincere good wishes for you and the Mahoning County Medical Society in the New Year, I am

"Very truly yours,"

Gov. Ex. 145 is an opinion of the Judicial Council signed by individual members of the Council. (Defense Counsel read Gov. Ex. 145 to the jury.) I was present during part of the hearing of this particular appeal.

I received Gov. Ex. 124.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 124 to the jury as follows:

Gov. Ex. 124, on the stationery of the Harris County Medical Society, Houston, Texas. It is signed "A. T. Talley, Chairman, Board of Censors, and directed to Dr. West."

"DEAR DOCTOR:

"One of our members has accepted a position on the surgical staff of the so-called Group Health Association, made up of the federal employees of the HOLC, located in Washington, D. C.

"Through correspondence with the District of Columbia Medical Society and the unanimous opinion of our local Society, this type of practice is considered unethical and we would appreciate a letter from you stating the view held by the national Association with reference to practice of this type.

"Appreciating an early reply, I am

"Yours very sincerely, A. T. Talley, Chairman, Board of Censors, Harris County Medical Society."

Gov. Ex. 123 is my reply to Gov. Ex. 124.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 123 to the jury as follows:

This Gov. Ex. 123 is dated February 24, 1938. It is directed to Dr. A. T. Talley, Chairman, Board of Censors, Harris County Medical Society, Houston, Texas.

"DEAR DOCTOR TALLEY:

"Your letter of February 16 was received while I was very busily engaged with a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the American Medical Association, in which fact is to be found the explanation for my delay in replying.

"The Group Health Association, Inc., of Washington, D. C., is, as its title indicates, an incorporated body. The laws of a number of the states and, as I understand it, the law of the District of Columbia specifically prohibits corporations from engaging in the practice of medicine. My information is to the effect that the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia and the Corporation Counsel of the District government have both rendered opinions to the effect that Group Health Association, Inc., in conducting the practice of medicine, is operating in violation of the law.

"I am informed that the officers of Group Health Association, Inc., maintain that the corporation is not itself engaged in the practice of medicine but that the physicians in its employ, licensed to practice in the District of Columbia, are practicing medicine in accordance with their rights under their licenses. In my opinion, this is, of course, simply an evasion since persons employed by a corporation are the servants of the corporation. I can hardly conceive that the physicians who have accepted employment with Group Health Association, Inc., are ignorant of the fact that they are employees of a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine and that in that capacity they are a party to a violation of the law since, certainly, it is reasonable to suppose that they are informed of all the facts. Based on the information available to us here, it is my purely personal opinion that a physician who becomes an agent of a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine violates the Principles of Medical Ethics. This, my personal opinion, is offered, of course, for whatever you may consider it to be worth.

"I understand that the officers of Group Health Association, Inc., have stated that if the courts decide that the corporation is illegally engaged in the practice of medicine, the enterprise will be organized on a different basis and will proceed with its operations.

"With most cordial good wishes, I am

"Very truly yours,"

I received Gov. Ex. 122. The original was forwarded by my office to Dr. Follansbee as chairman of the Judicial Council. Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 122 to the jury as follows:

"April 21, 1938.

"DR. WEST:

"Dear Doctor: Raymond E. Selders member of the Harris County Medical Society has been indicted by the Society of unethical practice for accepting a position on the surgical staff of the Group Health Association made up of federal employees of the HOLC located in Washington, D. C., due to the fact that Dr. Selders is doing this practice outside Harris County Texas we want an official opinion from the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association that is unethical for him to do this practice without which the Board of Censors will recommend to their Society that the matter be referred to the Judicial Council of the Medical Association direct for adjudication. An immediate answer by wire appreciated as trial comes up the 27th of this month.

"A. T. Talley."

Q. Why was it that this telegram which was directed to you at Chicago, was sent on to Dr. Follansbee?

A. Because it was a matter for decision by the Judicial Council and Dr. Follansbee is the chairman of that Council. It was not a matter I could decide.

Q. What other connection had you with the matter than that when you received the telegram you sent it to Dr. Follansbee?

A. I can't recall whether we had other communications relating to this particular matter or not, but in so far as I can now recall it was probably the first communication we received in connection with the matter pertaining to the membership of Dr. Selders in the Harris County Society and the situation which had developed in Washington.

Q. What other official connection did you take with regard to this matter than to forward this telegram as you have testified?

A. My recollection is that I notified Dr. Talley that the matter had been disposed of.

Q. Do you recall now of having personally done anything further in connection with the matter than what you have told us?

A. I have no recollection of anything other than to transmit any communications which the Judicial Council might have directed me to send to the Harris County Medical Society.

Gov. Ex. 125 is my reply to Gov. Ex. 122 and it is dated April 21, 1938. Gov. Ex. 147 is a letter which I sent to Dr. Follansbee on April 21, 1938.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 147 to the jury as follows:

"I am enclosing a telegram received this morning from Dr. A. T. Talley, Chairman of the Board of Censors, Harris County Medical Society, Houston, Texas. Doctor Talley has been informed that this telegram has been referred to you as Chairman of the Judicial Council.

"As I understand the matter, Dr. Raymond E. Selders, a member of the Harris County Medical Society, accepted a position with the Group Health Association, Inc. in Washington, D. C., a corporation now engaged in the practice of medicine in the District of Columbia. You may recall that this corporation was financed by the Home Loan Bank Board through the Home Owners Loan Corporation and that this action was rather severely criticized by an official committee of Congress.

"We were definitely informed that the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia has ruled that the Home Loan Bank Board had no legal authority for providing funds for the support of the Group Health Association, Inc., that official rulings have been issued by duly constituted authorities in Washington to the effect that corporations can not legally engage in the practice of medicine, and that the Group Health Association, Inc., is operating in violation of the insurance laws of the District of Columbia.

"The Medical Society of the District of Columbia has, as I understand it, expelled one member who accepted employment with the Group Health Association, Inc., and this action has created a great storm in Washington, which has been widely and persistently heralded in the local press. As stated in Doctor Talley's telegram, charges have been preferred against Doctor Selders, a member of the Harris County Medical Society, and apparently the board of censors of that society is undecided as to what should be done. It seems to me that the first thing the board of censors should do is to take the matter up with the council of the State Medical Association of Texas, but apparently the members of the board of censors feel that, as Doctor Selders is acting as an agent of the Group Health Association, Inc., outside of Texas, the matter is one for determination by the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association.

"Very sincerely yours,"

Gov. Ex. 148 was received by me and is in reply to Gov. Ex. 147.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 148 to the jury as follows:

"April 27, 1938.

DEAR DR. WEST:

Acknowledging receipt of yours of April 21st concerning the situation of Dr. Raymond E. Selders and the Harris County Medical Society of Texas.

The telegram of A. T. Talley, Chairman of the Board of Censors, Harris County Medical Society, asking for an official opinion and ruling by the Council, is a rather mixed-up situation, on which I would not express an opinion without further information. Upon receipt of your letter of April 21st I immediately wired Dr. Talley as follows:

'Is Selders in good standing in County Society? Has by-law procedure been strictly followed? Send air mail constitution and by-laws county and state.'

Up to this afternoon I have received no reply whatsoever. There would be a question in my mind of the jurisdiction of the Harris County Society to the extent of expelling a man for actions occurring so far away from the County Society as to be difficult of proof and also difficult to permit a defense by the accused. The statement in the telegram that the County Society would put this entire matter up to the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association as a primary organization for action, I believe is not provided for in our constitution except on investigation of the circumstances by the Judicial Council and request by them for action by the president. The telegram also says that the trial comes up on the 27th of this month, which is today. It seems strange to me that they should go so far as to be up against the actual trial of the man before they come to the Judicial Council for advice. It looks to me like a very precipitated action, a situation in which I am not satisfied to place the Judicial Council in any position where just criticism can be brought before them. I have not replied to Dr. Talley's telegram and will not until I receive further word from him.

If you have any further information or any suggestions on this case I shall be pleased to receive them.

Sincerely yours, Geo. Edw. Follansbee, Chairman."

I received Gov. Ex. 127. It is addressed to the Judicial Council, attention of Dr. Olin West, secretary. I think I forwarded this to the Judicial Council.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 127 to the jury as follows:

It is dated May 1, 1938. It is on the official letterhead of the Harris County Medical Society, of Houston, Texas. It is directed to the Judicial Council, and then underscored at the top "Attention of Dr. Olin West, Secretary."

"GENTLEMEN:

"The Harris County Medical Society met in executive session, April 27th, and passed the following resolution concerning the case of Dr. Raymond E. Selders' contract with the Group Health Association, Incorporated, 1328 Eye Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

'Dr. Raymond E. Selders, a member of our Society, was indicted by the Board of Censors for unethical practice upon a complaint from the District of Columbia Society, through Dr. Holman Taylor, Secretary of the State Medical Association of Texas, that he had accepted a position on the surgical staff to do contract practice for a group health association, made up of federal employees of the H.O.L.C. in Washington, D. C.

'Since reading the indictment to the Society at the March Business Meeting, the Board of Censors had had an opportunity to study the By-Laws of the American Medical Association in reference to this matter and we find in Chapter IX, Section 1, pertaining to duties of standing committees and councils words which according to our interpretation, mean that in any controversy between the District of Columbia and Dr. Selders, who is a member of the State Medical Association of Texas and constituent associations, should be referred by this Society directly to the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association for adjudication.

'This Board of Censors moves that this be done.'

In accordance with duly passed motion recited above, the Secretary herewith transfers this question of Dr. Selders' contract to the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association for adjudication, and attach herewith a copy of the By-Laws and Constitution of both the Harris County Medical Society and the Texas State Medical Association.

The Secretary wishes to outline the history of this case and attach such copies of correspondence as will help the Council in this Adjudication:

The first intimation we received concerning this contract was a copy of a letter from Dr. Holman Taylor, addressed to Dr. C. B. Conklin, Secretary of the District of Columbia Medical Society as follows:

'I thank you for your favor of October 30th, in reply to my letter of October 27th, and having to do with the health insurance situation in the District of Columbia, just received.

'I note with interest that a member of the Harris County (Texas) Medical Society is a member of the staff of the institution which is to be set up in Washington as a beginner in "State Medicine"; that, in fact, he will take charge of the surgery in the new set-up, Dr. Raymond Everett Selders.

'Please let me know just as soon as the situation has developed in the District of Columbia to such an extent that charges of unethical conduct may be successfully lodged against Dr. Selders. I will see that the facts in the case are laid before his society. I don't believe the members of that organization will stand for anything of this sort, but even so, they are very fair down there, and rather discriminating. They tend to their knitting like few other organizations of the sort with which I am acquainted. If we will give them the facts, they will act; without the facts, they will hardly do anything about it.

(Signed) Dr. Holman Taylor.'

This letter was read by me to our Society and they voted to refer it to our Board of Censors. Our Board of Censors wrote the following letter to Dr. Taylor:

'The Board of Censors of the Harris County Medical Society in meeting this date have read your letter re Dr. Selders and his alleged association with the "Beginning of State Medicine" in Washington, D. C. We are without any facts in the case and until we have same are powerless to act; Kindly let us have such facts as you may have. Signed by Board of Censors.'

Inquiry was also sent on January 14, 1938, by Dr. A. T. Talley, recently elected Chairman of our Board of Censors, to the Secretary of the Medical Association of Washington, D. C., and received prompt reply from Dr. C. B. Conklin as follows:

'In reply to your letter of January 14th, 1938, I would state that two members of this society accepted employment; one at $2,400.00 to take all calls, another at $4,800.00. The latter resigned from H.O.L.C. after his "trial" before an appropriate committee of the Society for violation of provisions of the Society's Constitution lasted one night. The other continued; his hearing is now completed. It would seem that he will lose his membership. It must be noted that much praise was given him by the full-time governmental attorneys who represented him.

(Signed) C. B. Conklin, Secretary.'

Inquiry was sent Dr. Holman Taylor regarding the status of this contract and prompt answer was received on February 18th, as follows:

'Replying at once to your letter of inquiry of February 16, with reference to the policies of the State Medical Association as relate to the employment of any of its members by such organizations as the Group Health Association of employees of the HOLC, at Washington, D. C., beg to say that said policy is definitely and directly against anything of the sort. I presume you do not care to have me go into detail and recite the basis of this conclusion. For my part I have personally studied the set-up in Washington referred to here, and it is my personal and official opinion that it is, or was a while back, in direct contravention of the policies of the American Medical Association, and of the State Medical Association, from an ethical point of view. I reiterate in order to make sure that I meet your wishes in this respect.

I am sure you will appreciate that your Councilor, and the Board of Councilors constitute our final authority in all matters of medical ethics. My reply is based entirely upon my duties as Secretary of the State Medical Association, and not in any particular as an authority on the problems of medical ethics.

(Signed) Holman Taylor.'

Inquiry was sent to Dr. Olin West and prompt reply was received on February 24th:

'The Group Health Association, Inc., of Washington, D. C., is, as its title indicates, an incorporated body. The laws of a number of the states and, as I understand it, the law of the District of Columbia specifically prohibits corporations from engaging in the practice of medicine. I can hardly conceive that the physicians who have accepted employment with Group Health Association, Inc., are ignorant of the fact that they are employees of a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine and that in that capacity they are a party to a violation of the law since, certainly, it is reasonable to suppose that they are informed of all the facts. Based on the information available to us here, it is my purely personal opinion that a physician who becomes an agent of a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine violates the Principles of Medical Rules. This, my personal opinion, is offered of course, for whatever you may consider it to be worth.

'I understand that the officers of Group Health Association, Inc., have stated that if the courts decide that the corporation is illegally engaged in the practice of medicine, the enterprise will be organized on a different basis and will proceed with its operation.

(Signed) Olin West.'

Based upon the above opinions, on March 9th, 1938, the Board of Censors of the Harris County Medical Society presented the following resolution to the Society:

'The Board of Censors of your Society does hereby formally prefer charges of unethical practice against one of your members, Dr. Raymond E. Selders.

'This indictment charges him with accepting a position on the surgical staff of a group health association, made up of Federal employees of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, located in Washington, D.C. This type of practice is unethical as judged by Article VII, Section 3 of the American Medical Association's Code of Ethics, in that:

'(1) The compensation is inadequate to secure good medical service.

'(2) It interferes with reasonable competition among the doctors in the City of Washington, D. C.

'(3) It interferes with the free choice of a physician by the patient.

'(4) It is contrary to sound public policy.

(Signed) Board of Censors'.

In accordance with the By-Laws and Constitution of our Society the Secretary notified Dr. Raymond E. Selders by registered mail and received his return receipt. He also received Dr. Selders' reply to these charges, copy of which is attached herewith.

On April 21st Dr. A. T. Talley, received the following wire in response to inquiry sent to Dr. Olin West:

'Your telegram has been referred to the Chairman of the Judicial Council.

(Signed) Olin West'

On April 23 the following telegram was received by Dr. Talley:

'Is Selders in good standing in County Society. Has By-Law procedure been strictly followed? Send Air Mail constitution and By-Laws County and State.

(Signed) Geo. Edw. Follansbee, Cleveland, Ohio.'

Inasmuch as the trial was set for April there was inadequate time for the Board of Censors to carry out the instructions of the Chairman of the Judicial Council, and inasmuch as the question of jurisdiction was an important one, there seemed to be no other proceeding other than to interrupt the trial with the resolution set forth in the beginning of this letter, and await the adjudication of the Judicial Council.

In reply to the above telegram, Dr. Raymond E. Selders was in good standing when the charges were read March 30th. On April 1st he became delinquent and is now on the rolls of the Harris County Medical Society and the Texas State Medical Society, and may upon payment of his dues within a year be reinstated.

It is my opinion that By-Law procedure both County and State has been strictly followed.

The Harris County Medical Society respectfully requests adjudication on this contract from the Judicial Council of the American Medical Society before proceeding with the trial of Dr. Selders on charges preferred by its Board of Censors.

Sincerely yours, Walter A. Coole, Secretary."

And then this appears:

"cc. Dr. Olin West, Dr. Holman Taylor, Dr. John T. Moore, Dr. A. T. Talley. Minutes Harris County Medical Society."

My recollection is that this matter received official consideration by the Judicial Council, and I think it is quite probable I communicated with the Harris County Medical Society to advise them of any conclusion that may have been reached by the Judicial Council. Gov. Ex. 126 is a letter which I sent to Dr. Walter A. Coole, Secretary, Harris County Medical Society, dated March 5, 1938.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 126 to the jury as follows:

"I have before me a carbon copy of your communication addressed to the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association under date of May 1, which will be referred at once to the Chairman of the Judicial Council.

I infer from a letter which I have received from Doctor Follansbee, Chairman of the Judicial Council, that he has communicated with Dr. A. T. Talley, Chairman of the Board of Censors of Harris County Medical Society. Doctor Follansbee informs me that he asked Doctor Talley to send him a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the Harris County Medical Society and a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the State Medical Association of Texas but that this material has not been received by him. I shall appreciate it very much if you will be good enough to send the copies of the constitutions and by-laws of the Harris County Medical Society and the State Medical Association of Texas to Doctor Follansbee, whose address is

Dr. George Edward Follansbee, 629 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. I shall appreciate it also, if it is not too much trouble, if you will send copies of such constitutions and by-laws to me so that I may have them available for the next meeting of the Judicial Council to be held about June 12.

Very sincerely yours,"

Gov. Ex. 128 is a letter which I wrote on May 5, 1938.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 128 to the jury as follows:

The letter which has just been identified is upon the official letterhead of the American Medical Association, dated as stated, directed over the signature of Dr. West to Dr. George Follansbee, at Cleveland, Ohio.

"DEAR DOCTOR FOLLANSBEE:

"I have been away for a few days and on returning this morning find on my desk your two letters of April 27 to one of which Miss Nichoff has already replied.

"I am enclosing a communication addressed to the Judicial Council which is signed by the secretary of the Harris County Medical Society."

Q. I ask you if the communication addressed to the Judicial Council and signed by the secretary of the Harris County Society is the communication which I just read to the jury, dated May 1, 1938.

A. I presume that it is.

Mr. Leahy:

"It appears that the Harris County Medical Society desires to make the Judicial Council responsible for any action that may be taken with respect to the membership status of Dr. R. E. Selders who, as I am informed, is now a member of the surgical staff of Group Health Association, Inc., of Washington. In so far as I am informed, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia has not taken any definite action with respect to Doctor Selders' membership in the Harris County Medical Society."

Then follows an asterisk, with a note in ink: In whose handwriting is that?

A. Mine.

Mr. Leahy:

"Except as the matter is referred to in the enclosed communication,

"There is, therefore, in so far as I can see, no question to be considered by the Judicial Council unless the Medical Society of the District of Columbia has registered complaint with the State Medical Association of Texas or with the Harris County Medical Society. If that has been done, I have not been informed of it.

"I have written Doctor Coole acknowledging receipt of the communication addressed to the Council and have asked him to send to you a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the Harris County Medical Society and a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the State Medical Association of Texas. I have also asked him to send copies to me so that they will be available at the meeting of the Judicial Council."

I don't think the Judicial Council ever took any action with respect to Dr. Selders' membership. It is my recollection that it was finally decided that it had no jurisdiction of the matter as it then stood. Nothing further was done except to notify the Harris County Medical Society that the Judicial Council had no jurisdiction in the matter as it then stood.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 165 in response to a letter from Dr. Erskine dated September 9, addressed to Dr. Fishbein.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 165 to the jury as follows:

"September 12, 1938.

DEAR DR. ERSKINE:

I have before me a copy of your letter of September 9 addressed to Dr. Fishbein.

I gather from your letter that you do not understand that the Group Health Association in Washington is a corporation engaging in the practice of medicine. Inasmuch as our information has been to the effect that the practice of medicine by a corporation is illegal under the laws of many states and that many court decisions have been handed down declaring the practice of medicine by corporations to be illegal, and because the American Medical Association has opposed illegal practice as well as for other reasons perfectly obvious to those who are familiar with the facts, the American Medical Association has opposed the Group Health Association, Inc. The opposition of the American Medical Association has been based on the policies established by its House of Delegates in which all constituent state medical associations are represented by their own duly elected delegates. Incidentally, there has been a very persistent effort on the part of certain agencies and groups to make it appear that members of the administrative personnel of the American Medical Association has presumed to attempt to define the policies of the Association which, of course, is quite untrue. The officers and members of the official bodies and members of the administrative personnel of the Association have done nothing more nor less than try to comply with official instructions received from the House of Delegates and to maintain and carry out the policies established by that body.

With most cordial good wishes, I am

Very truly yours,"

Q. Is it or is it not a fact that the administrative heads of the American Medical Association have no control over establishing policies of the American Medical Association?

A. It is a fact that they have nothing to do with the establishment of the policies of the American Medical Association. Those policies are established by the House of Delegates.

Q. What jurisdiction have the administrative personnel of the American Medical Association with respect to the policies other than to carry out the directions given by the House of Delegates?

A. Well, it is their simple duty to do what they can to maintain and carry out the policies established by the House of Delegates. It is a fact, of course, that under the constitution and by-laws the board of trustees is empowered to act for the House of Delegates in the interim between meetings of the House, and in certain instances matters have arisen in which action was essential and the board of trustees has been given instructions to the administrative personnel as to what should be done.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 129, dated September 21, 1938, to Dr. Erskine merely in response to his letter of September 9, 1938, to Dr. Fishbein.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 129 to the jury, as follows:

"I have before me your letter of September 9 addressed to Dr. Fishbein to which is attached a copy of a letter addressed to you by Dr. A. H. Woods.

"It seems evident to me that neither you nor Dr. Woods understand the situation that has developed in Washington. In the first place, Group Health Association, Inc., is a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine. The laws of many of the states and of the District of Columbia itself contain provisions declaring practice by corporations to be illegal. While it is true that one of the Judges of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia a trial court, not an appellate court, has handed down a decision declaring Group Health Association, Inc., to be legal, the fact remains that the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia specifically ruled that Group Health Association, Inc., was a corporation illegally engaged in the practice of medicine, and the Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia expressed his opinion to the effect that Group Health Association, Inc., was unlawfully engaged in the insurance business. Since the decision of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia a suit has been instigated by individual physicians in Washington seeking a decision from a higher court as to the legality of the activities of the Group Health Association, Inc.

"With respect to the activities of the Department of Justice pertaining to the American Medical Association, I am sure that you will be interested to know that we have never had any communication whatever from the Department of Justice with respect to this matter, although various newspaper statements have been released by an official of the Department of Justice which, designedly or not, have undoubtedly poisoned the public mind against the organized profesion in the United States. The timing of these newspaper releases has been a most interesting factor in the situation. The facts about these matters were submitted to the House of Delegates at San Francisco as well as to the House of Delegates at the special session held in Chicago last week, and the officers and members of the administrative personnel of the Association have been given definite instructions by the House of Delegates, which is the policy-making body of the Association

"The American Medical Association has announced that it has no objection whatever to any fair and reasonably conducted investigation of its affairs by any official agency. As a matter of fact, an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has recently visited the offices of the Association and has been shown everything that he asked to see. In my opinion it is highly important to remember that the Department of Justice has sent no communication about the matter to the officers of the American Medical Association, nor did it make any effort whatever to ascertain from the Association itself any facts pertaining to the matters referred to in these newspaper releases."

At or about this same time agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were in the offices of the AMA and they were at liberty to see anything that was in the files.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 132 to Dr. Erskine, president of the Iowa State Medical Society, on October 8, 1938. It was written merely in response to Dr. Erskine's letter of September 30.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 132 to the jury as follows:

"Your letter of September 30 was received in due time. I do not know how I can convince you that the statements made in my letter are not mistakes, other than to assure you that I know exactly what I said and I know that the situation is as stated.

"The American Medical Association has nothing whatever to do with the expulsion of any member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia. One member who was expelled has appealed to the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association and his appeal will be heard in due time.

"With reference to the statement at the end of the second paragraph of your letter urging me to make a complete and thorough investigation of the facts with respect to the situation that has developed in Washington, I wonder what you think we have been doing all this time. It is possible that you may be convinced that there was grave question as to the legality of the activities of Group Health Association, Inc., when I tell you that the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia held that that organization was engaged unlawfully in the practice of medicine, and the Corporation Counsel for the District of Columbia held that it was engaged unlawfully in the business of insurance. The matter came up before the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, a trial court, not an appellate court, and Judge Jennings Bailey, one of the judges of the District Court, handed down an opinion to the effect that Group Health Association, Inc., was not violating either of the laws named, but cited no authority for his decision with respect to the law relating to the practice of medicine. Whereupon three physicians in the District of Columbia, in their individual capacity, have instituted proceedings looking toward a determination as to whether Group Health Association, Inc., is practicing medicine in violation of law, and asking an order to restrain the Association if the court finds that it is.

'I believe that I have already stated to you in previous correspondence that the practice of medicine by corporations is forbidden under the laws of a number of the states and that a very considerable number of decisions, including decisions of Supreme Courts of several states, have declared the practice of medicine by corporations to be illegal.

"We have in our files a copy of the by-laws of Group Health Association, Inc., and have had it for some months. The staff of physicians of that corporation are employees of the corporation and are not employees of individual patients who have paid membership dues in the corporation in the sense that a person is a patient of a private physician. As I understand the matter, physicians in the employ of Group Health Association, Inc., are responsible to the board of directors of the organization and can be hired or discharged at the will of that board. However all this may be, please be assured that I appreciate your interest in writing and I shall be glad to hear from you at any time and to give you such information as I can offer that is available to me.

"With most cordial good wishes, I am

"Very truly yours,"

I wrote Gov. Ex. 133 to Dr. Fred Hammerly on October 12, 1938. The only occasion for writing this was in response to his letter of September 24 addressed to Dr. Fishbein.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 133 to the jury as follows:

"I have before me your letter of September 24 addressed to Dr. Morris Fishbein and referred to me for reply.

"My information is to the effect that Group Health Association, Inc., in Washington, D. C., is a corporation established for the purpose of providing medical service to its members through the instrumentality of an employed group of physicians. I am informed that the Medical Society of the District of Columbia has not approved the plans of that Association. I am further informed that the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia held that Group Health Association, Inc., was engaged unlawfully in the practice of medicine, and that the Corporation Counsel for the District of Columbia held that it was engaged unlawfully in the business of insurance.

"It is my understanding that the rulings of the United States District Attorney and of the Corporation Counsel were made the subject of an application to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, a trial court, not an appellate court, for a declaratory judgment and that one of the judges of the District Court held that Group Health Association, Inc., was not violating either of the laws named.

"It is also my understanding that an appeal has been taken from the decision of the judge in the trial court, although I have no authentic information concerning this.

"Very truly yours,"

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. Doctor, in writing this letter to Dr. Hammerly, which I have just read, did you or did you not state truthfully and accurately what information you had with reference to the matters and things about which you wrote?

A. Surely I did.

Q. Have you any independent recollection now of the occasion for writing those facts?

A. My recollection is that in this letter of Dr. Hammerly he asked for information about Group Health Association, and I have a more or less distinct recollection to the effect that he was contemplating possible connection with that organization, and I simply stated to him the facts as I knew them, as I believed I knew them, and I offered him no suggestion whatever, other than to state the facts as I believed I had them.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 149 to Dr. Holman Taylor on November 9, 1938.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 149 to the jury as follows:

"I am very greatly obliged to you for your kindness in sending me a copy of your letter addressed to Dr. Walter A. Coole, Secretary of the Harris County Medical Society, and a copy of the letter addressed to you by Mr. C. T. Freeman. I do not have available a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the Harris County Medical Society, but, generally speaking, there is a provision in the constitution and by-laws of many component county medical societies that membership in these societies shall be limited to local registered reputable physicians who reside and practice within the counties immediately concerned.

"It is my understanding that the gentleman referred to in the correspondence which you sent me is not engaged in practice in Harris County, but that he is actually engaged in the service of a corporation in a jurisdiction entirely outside of the State of Texas.

"The by-laws of the American Medical Association specifically provide that—

"'A member of a constituent association who removes to and engages in the practice of medicine at a location in another state in which there is a constituent association shall forfeit his membership in this Association and the secretary shall remove his name from the roster of the members of the American Medical Association unless within one year after such change of residence he becomes a member of the constituent association in the state to which he has moved.'

"With most cordial good wishes, I am"——

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. Doctor, have you any independent recollection of the occasion for writing the letter which I have just read?

A. Well, apparently I had received from Dr. Holman Taylor a copy of a letter which he had addressed to Dr. Coole, Secretary of the Harris County Medical Society, and a copy of a letter addressed to Dr. Taylor by Mr. C. T. Freeman, and this letter was written in reply to those communications, in so far as it applies; and it does apply.

Q. Do you recall now whether or not the letters to which this was a reply called for information or something of that character?

A. I think they must have done so, since I quote the by-laws of the Association with respect to membership in a constituent association after a certain period of time, as it relates to membership in the American Medical Association.

Q. Doctor, can you tell us now whether or not your connection with or relation to Group Health Association is pretty well indicated by these letters which we have just asked you about?

A. I am not sure that I understand your question.

Q. Can you recall now whether or not you performed any other acts or did anything else concerning Group Health Association other than what has already been brought to your attention?

A. No; I cannot, other than as I have testified on this stand.

Q. I mean, in general, from reading all of these letters. If you can, would you kindly indicate anything which may have escaped my attention in trying to refresh your recollection? If there was any act done or statement made to anyone on any occasion with reference to G. H. A., if you can recall it, will you kindly state it?

A. All I can say in reply to that question, Mr. Leahy, as I have already stated, is that what I did was concerned with the collection of facts for the purpose of publishing the facts, and of course these letters speak for themselves.

I never combined or conspired with anyone for the purpose of restraining trade in the District of Columbia. I never conspired for the purpose of restraining Group Health in its business of arranging for the provision of medical care and hospitalization to its members and their dependents on a risk-sharing prepayment basis. I never conspired for the purpose of restraining the members of Group Health in obtaining, by cooperative efforts, adequate medical care for themselves and their dependents from doctors engaged in group medical practice on a prepayment basis. I never conspired for the purpose of restraining the doctors serving on the medical staff of Group Health in the pursuit of their callings. I never conspired for the purpose of restraining doctors (not on the medical staff of Group Health) practicing in the District of Columbia, including the doctors so practicing who are made defendants herein, in the pursuit of their calling. I never conspired for the purpose of restraining the Washington hospitals in the business of operating such hospitals. I had no information as to what was being done with regard to the Washington hospitals during the period from January 1, 1937, to December 20, 1938.

Q. You will recall that on yesterday afternoon, in looking at the abstract of the minutes of the meeting of November

6 in Chicago (Gov. Ex. 117), you stated that the abstract did not correctly quote you as to what in accordance with your best recollection you stated with regard to a question put to you therein by Dr. Hooe to the effect——

"Do you not think it is reasonable for the Washington hospitals to agree with the opinion which Dr. Hooe then expressed"——

• • • • • • •

Q. Do you recall to what I refer, Doctor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you or did you not, when that statement was made, have any reference to agreeing with Dr. Hooe or Dr. McGovern or anybody else in that conference to restrain Washington hospitals?

A. Never in the world. I think even that statement that is attributed to me indicates that I clearly felt that the hospitals had the right and the duty to choose their own staffs.

Q. I want to ask you, Doctor, whether under these rules—and these rules refer to the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association—so interpreted, that is, as interpreted and applied by the American Medical Association and its affiliated and constituent and component societies, that the defendant American Medical Association and its affiliated constituent and component societies can and frequently do condemn as unethical group medical practice on a risk-sharing prepayment basis principally because such practice is in business competition with and threatens the income of doctors engaged in practice on a fee-for-service basis, and particularly doctors so practicing who are members of the defendant American Medical Association and its affiliated constituent and component societies.

A. I deny that statement absolutely. There is no such purpose in the mind of the American Medical Association.

Q. Doctor, in the declaration or interpretation of Principles of Medical Ethics by the American Medical Association and its affiliated constituent and component societies does it, in that interpretation, take into consideration that risk-sharing prepayment group medical practice threatens the income of doctors engaged in practice on a fee-for-service basis?

A. Well, I think it is true that in some instances they have threatened the income, but that is not the purpose of the American Medical Association in opposing such plans as it has opposed.

Q. Is the opposition of the American Medical Association to schemes of group practice, prepayment or otherwise, based upon any competition in dollars and cents between the members of the American Medical Association and those groups?

A. If it is, I have never heard of it, sir.

Q. What is the basis of the opposition of the American Medical Association to those group plans?

A. The basis of the opposition of the American Medical Association to such schemes as it has opposed has been due in practically all instances to the unsoundness of the plan——

The Court said that had been gone into yesterday and counsel said he did not want to repeat.

Q. Could you tell us, please, to clear up a point that seems to be a bit obscure in our minds just how are the principles of ethics of the American Medical Association controlling, if they are, on constituent or component societies?

A. I think it is true, Mr. Leahy, that every constituent state and territorial association, with one exception, has fully adopted the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association as the principles of medical ethics of its own, and I think it is true that in practically every instance component county societies of the constituent associations have likewise adopted the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association.

Q. Will you tell us whether such adoption is voluntary or obligatory?

A. So far as I know, sir, it is voluntary. There is one state association that has its own code of ethics. However, it is quite similar to the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association. I have recently been informed by one of its most active members who has occupied an official position, that it also observes the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association. That is the Medical Society of the State of New York, so that you may know definitely what it is.

Q. Doctor, do you consider that the principles of medical ethics are reasonable regulations of professional conduct in the practice of medicine?

A. I consider them to be so, yes."

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Gov. Ex. 658 is a copy of a section of the minutes of the Board of Trustees meeting for September 15-17, 1938.

Gov. Ex. 658 was offered in evidence. Defendants objected on the ground that these minutes were incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, and were not admissible as no conspiracy involving the AMA has been proven. Objection overruled and exception noted. Gov. Ex. 658 was received in evidence and read to the jury as follows:

"Representatives of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia. The representatives of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia came before the Board and presented information relative to the situation in Washington. No action was taken."

I presume that the reference to "the situation in Washington, D. C." was to Group Health. I presented the facts concerning Group Health to the Secretaries and Editors Conference in a very general way. Dr. Fishbein attends if he is in Chicago.

Q. Do you recall that a stenographic report of the meeting of the Secretaries' Conference in 1937 was kept?

A. I think there was a stenographic statement of the Conference.

Q. Now, Dr. West, as I understand your testimony, it is that the principles of medical ethics, a copy of which I have in my hand, have been adopted by every state society in the country except one, is binding upon the society and its members?

A. I think I said that is true.

Q. And I believe you also testified that every constituent society or component society rather, has done likewise?

A. I think that is true; practically all of them.

Q. And isn't it true also that every member of the American Medical Association is bound by these principles of ethics?

A. Yes, supposed to be.

Q. And isn't it also true that any member and every member of the American Medical Association, and the American Medical Association expects that the component or constituent societies will discipline members of the American Medical Association who violate these principles of ethics?

A. It is expected that they do so if they think it is justified.

Q. But if there is a violation of the principles of ethics, medical ethics, the American Medical Association expects its constituent or component societies to institute disciplinary proceedings for such violation, does it not?

A. It expects the component state and county societies to do what ought to be done.

Q. But isn't it true that the American Medical Association expects the local societies to enforce these principles of medical ethics?

A. It is so provided in the constitution and by-laws of the societies themselves, to a certain degree at least.

Q. And doesn't the American Medical Association expect the societies to do that?

A. The American Medical Association brings no compulsion——

Q. I am not asking you that: I am asking you whether the American Medical Association doesn't expect its societies, component and constituents, to enforce the principles of medical ethics.

A. In so far as they should be enforced I should say so, yes, in a way.

Q. I think it is true, is it not, that whenever you offered any advice in these letters which you wrote, and which Mr. Leahy went over with you this morning and yesterday, you wrote consistently with the policy of the American Medical Association.

A. I wrote consistently with what I understood to be the policy of the American Medical Association, yes.

Q. And the same thing is true as to what you did in relation to Group Health Association?

A. Yes.

Q. Now you testified yesterday that the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association had jurisdiction only to pass upon matters of law and procedure, is that true?

A. In appeals.

Q. In appeals, yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Isn't it true also that the Judicial Council also has jurisdiction over all matters of ethics?

A. The by-laws, if you will get me a copy—I have a copy if you will permit me to read it. Here it is in the by-laws. Can I read from this copy?

Q. What page are you on? Page 22, I believe, is the section that is relevant.

A. This is Chapter IX of the by-laws, Section 1.

"Duties of Standing Committee or Councils.

"Section 1. The Judicial Council. The judicial power of the Association shall be vested in the Judicial Council, whose decision shall be final. This power shall extend to and include:

"(1) All questions involving fellowship in scientific assembly or the obligations, rights and privileges of fellowship.

"(2) All controversies arising under this constitution and by-laws, and under the principles of medical ethics, to which the American Medical Association is a party; and

"(3) (a) Between two or more recognized constituent associations, (b) between a constituent association and a component society or societies of another constituent association or associations or a member or members of another constituent association or other constituent associations and——"

The Court: Doctor, the question is merely as to the jurisdiction of the Council as to medical ethics. I think he has read that.

Mr. Kelleher: Which is in the second complete paragraph on page 22.

The Witness: There is another section, I presume, that is admissible under your question which says:

"The Judicial Council shall have jurisdiction on all questions of ethics, and in the interpretation of the laws of the organization."

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Yes, so that it is true, is it not, that the question of whether any particular act as found to have been done by a local society violates the principles of medical ethics ultimately depends upon the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association?

A. I presume that is true, but I have never known in all my experience any times when any questions have been brought before the Judicial Council—probably one or two exceptions—of the nature or kind implied in your question.

Q. It is true, however, when you say that the Judicial Council passes on legal questions only, that it does pass——

A. On appeals.

Q. Yes, on appeals, that part of the legal question is the question of whether a given state of facts violates the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association?

A. Well, I offer it as my opinion that the Judicial Council may find it necessary to hear statements concerning what is involved in an appeal in order that it may determine whether or not the procedure was properly taken.

Q. I want to leave the question of procedure out of it. Suppose, taking the Ross-Loos case, suppose the American Medical Association had found that Doctors Ross and Loos had received a fair hearing by the County Society in California, and the State Society, wouldn't it have then been necessary for the Judicial Council to determine whether the conduct of those doctors, Ross and Loos, violated the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association?

A. I think that would depend altogether on the nature of the appeal, the question involved.

Q. I understand. Suppose the appeal was such that it would be possible for the Judicial Council to pass on the question as to whether or not these principles of medical ethics had been violated; wouldn't it do so?

A. If it was required in passing on the appeal to do so, I assume the Council would.

Q. And as a matter of fact in the Baird case, known as the Texas Street Railway case, the Judicial Council thought the conduct of these Texas doctors violated the principle of medical ethics of the American Medical Association and——

Mr. Leahy: I object; the opinion speaks for itself.

The Court: If the opinion is here, let's have it.

Mr. Kelleher: I am not going to read the opinion; I just want to point something out to the witness.

The Court: Is there anything, any evidence in the record concerning that case?

Mr. Kelleher: The opinion is in.

Mr. Leahy: No evidence.

Mr. Kelleher: The opinion, it is in evidence.

The Court: That is what I refer to. You might call his attention to some particular paragraph if you desire.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Isn't it true that the Judicial Council in the decision contained in Exhibit 144, held that the plan of the Texas doctors was contrary to sound public policy and therefore violated the principles of ethics of the American Medical Association?

A. I haven't seen this that I can recall in a long, long time.

Q. Mr. Leahy showed it to you yesterday.

Mr. Leahy: Is that away back in 1932?

The Witness: 1932, yes.

Q. Will you answer my question now, didn't the Judicial Council conclude that the conduct of the Texas doctors involved in this case, the opinion of which is contained in Exhibit 144: Didn't the Judicial Council conclude that the conduct was unethical, because contrary to sound public policy?

Mr. Leahy: I submit it speaks for itself.

Mr. Kelleher: I am cross-examining him on his statement yesterday that the Judicial Council passed only on questions of law and procedure.

Mr. Leahy: It still speaks for itself.

The Court: Yes, it does, but I don't intend to have it all read.

Mr. Leahy: He is asking for an opinion as to what the document holds.

The Court: The question was whether the Council in that case put their decision upon the construction of medical ethics. He can answer that; he has the decision before him.

The Witness: That decision, as I read it, contains a statement to the effect that "the Judicial Council is of the unanimous opinion that this type of contract is unethical on the basis of being contrary to sound public policy".

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. So in that case, the Judicial Council did pass upon the ethics of these particular doctors.

The Court: That is argumentative.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. All right, your Honor. Isn't it true that the Judicial Council is the final authority on the interpretation of the principles of legal medical ethics as pronounced by the House of Delegates? If there has been an appeal from findings and decision of a local society, that is true, isn't it?

A. It is so stated in the by-laws which are read to you.

Q. That is correct.

A. That is what the by-laws say.

Q. So that if, as a matter of fact, the principles of medical ethics, as interpreted by the Judicial Council prohibited, as unethical conduct, group practice on a prepayment basis, isn't it true that the Judicial Council would finally pass upon such matters?

Mr. Leahy: Objected to as argumentative.

The Court: It is quite argumentative.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. All right, your Honor, I will come to something more concrete. Yesterday, I believe you testified that there was no general policy of opposition to group practice on the part of A. M. A., is that true?

A. I did.

Q. And group practice doesn't necessarily involve prepayment, does it?

A. No.

Q. There may be a group of doctors associating themselves together to supply medical care on a fee-for-service basis?

A. That is correct, and I understand that there are plans for providing medical service that are not even prepayment plans.

Q. I am now addressing your mind to group practice on a fee-for-service basis.

A. There are a number of such plans.

Q. And so long as the doctors in those plans conform to the principles of medical ethics, of course, the A. M. A. has no policy of opposition toward such plans?

A. The A. M. A.—as I testified yesterday—adopted at Cleveland——

Q. I don't mean to interrupt you, Doctor: I now would like to find out, break down this group practice.

A. I think the matter of professional ethics would be involved, yes.

Q. But so long as the doctors were engaged in group practice on a fee-for-service basis, and so long as those doctors are otherwise ethical, the A. M. A. doesn't oppose such plans?

A. It doesn't oppose them unless they should be convinced by an investigation of the facts that the quality of services rendered is of an unworthy or unsatisfactory nature. That is covered by the rules and principles of ethics.

Q. But so long as the quality of care is adequate, and the doctors are ethical, there is no opposition to group practice on a fee-for-service basis?

A. No.

Q. Isn't it also true that within the last two years medical societies have sponsored prepayment plans which are approved by the American Medical Association?

A. Absolutely, and that is why those principles were adopted at the Cleveland session.

Q. And so long as those plans, those prepayment plans, are sponsored by societies and permit all members of the society to participate, they conform with the standards of the American Medical Association?

A. If they are established after an investigation of the needs for such plans, and if they conform to the ten principles adopted by the House of Delegates for the guidance of such societies, why they are; and there is no objection; they are understood to be experimental.

Q. And those prepayment plans sponsored by the local societies, to which the American Medical Association voices no opposition, do not involve group practice, do they?

A. That would depend on the interpretation of group practice. They do not involve group practice in the general acceptation of the term.

Q. As a matter of fact in those plans every member of the society who so desires may participate?

A. Yes.

Q. I now want to address your mind to group practice on a prepayment basis. I think it is true, is it not, that the Ross-Loos Clinic in Los Angeles is engaged in group practice on a prepayment basis?

A. It is engaged in operating a medical service plan on a prepayment basis.

Q. But doesn't it involve group practice?

A. That organization was originally engaged in group practice as other physicians have been engaged in group practice, and then they altered their procedure by adopting a plan whereby contracts for medical services were sold.

Q. But I am now trying to address your mind to the relationship of the staff: Is that not group practice?

A. It is group practice in the sense they have a number of physicians who are in the organization.

Q. And they have physicians for the various specialties and general practitioners, isn't that true?

A. I don't know how many specialties are represented; I think they do have some specialists.

Q. And within the common acceptation of the term they are engaged in group practice, are they not?

A. They are engaged in the operation of a medical service plan.

Q. Isn't it group practice?

A. It wouldn't be in the general acceptation as applied to physicians who are not selling contracts.

Q. Is it your testimony that the only thing which is group practice within the general acceptation of the term is practiced by a group on a fee-for-service basis?

A. The general acceptation of group practice is where a group of practicing physicians grouped together for the purpose of improving their own services and do not sell contracts; and those groups who engage in and operate a plan for medical services under contracts are usually called medical service plans.

Q. So that your testimony yesterday that there was no opposition by the American Medical Association to group practice had no reference to plans which involve a group of doctors who sold their services on a contract basis?

A. No, there are such plans as that.

Q. I want to know whether your testimony yesterday that the American Medical Association didn't oppose group practice was addressed to plans of this kind; those plans, involving prepayment, by a group of doctors who contract to supply the services to a group of individuals?

A. I can probably answer your question better by telling you that there are plans, medical service plans—consumer if you prefer—that are in operation today that have been approved and have never been objected to, in so far as I have knowledge, operated by societies in the counties in which they are located; and I can name some of them if you want me to.

Q. I want to know whether your testimony yesterday that the American Medical Association had no policy of opposition to group practice, whether that testimony was intended to apply to plans like the Ross-Loos Clinic, and plans like Group Health.

A. It would depend entirely on whether they came within the principles adopted by the House of Delegates and principles of ethics.

Q. Of course, that is the ultimate criterion. Now, isn't it true that the American Medical Association doesn't believe that plans like the Ross-Loos Clinic, like Group Health Association, do not fall within the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association?

A. I don't believe I can safely answer that question for the American Medical Association, in so far as the Ross-Loos is concerned.

Q. I want your testimony as general manager, then.

A. My own opinion is, as I have stated in the letters presented yesterday, that there is danger in such plans, in many of such plans.

Q. And don't you feel that such plans as the Ross-Loos Clinic are unethical because contrary to sound public policy?

A. Mr. Kelleher, I wouldn't say what my opinion about that is today, because I don't know what their procedure is now, but there was a time when I didn't hesitate to say that I thought they were unethical.

Q. About 1936?

A. I can't tell you about that.

Q. But at some time between 1930 and 1941, you did consider it unethical?

A. Yes.

Q. Even though its quality of medical care was good?

A. At that time I didn't believe the quality of medical care which was being furnished was good.

Q. Didn't you believe the quality of medical care was good in 1936, as supplied by the Ross-Loos Clinic?

A. I think; I have no faculty for remembering dates.

Q. Let me see if I can refresh you.

A. I think there was a letter in which I expressed the opinion on the basis of information then before me that the services rendered by that particular group was good service.

Q. That was in your correspondence with Dr. Freiberg?

Mr. Leahy: What exhibit is that?

Mr. Kelleher: 141, addressed to Dr. Freiberg.

"I am informed that Doctors Ross and Loos are thoroughly competent physicians and that they have associated with them young men who are well qualified. I have heard from various sources that the Ross-Loos Clinic actually delivers good medical service."

You wrote that letter?

A. Yes, and I stand squarely behind it.

Q. And that was on February 6, 1936?

A. Yes, that was the information that I had at that time.

Q. And at that time didn't you still consider it was nevertheless unethical because contrary to sound public policy?

A. I don't think I expressed any opinion as to the ethics of the thing since that time. If I knew what the Ross Loos people were doing; how they were operating at this time I could tell you——

Q. I am talking about 1936. Didn't you at that time advise Dr. Freiberg that you considered that the Ross-Loos Clinic was unethical, as being opposed to sound public policy?

Mr. Leahy: I object, if it is the letter show him the letter.

Mr. Lewin: He has the letter.

The Court: Point out the part to him.

The Witness: There isn't a word in that paragraph about the Ross-Loos Clinic, sir, that I can see.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Isn't there a reference to the Ross-Loos Clinic in the second paragraph?

A. That is not the paragraph you directed my attention to.

Q. All right, read the second paragraph then.

A. I stated in this letter that while I had frequently heard that the clinic mentioned—and somebody has written in there "Ross-Loos".

Q. Whose handwriting is that; isn't that your secretary?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Well, you were talking about the Ross-Loos Clinic, were you not?

A. I couldn't tell you that unless I had the whole correspondence.

Q. Well, here it is (handing document to the witness).

A. Here is a letter of February 6, 1936, I wrote to Dr. Freiberg. (Gov. Ex. 141.)

Q. In that letter didn't you discuss the Ross-Loos Clinic?

A. Yes, the Ross-Loos Clinic is mentioned.

Q. That was February 6, 1936, and in March, didn't you hear from Dr. Freiberg that a doctor in Cincinnati, Ohio, was considering starting a clinic like the Ross-Loos Clinic, and that the Cincinnati Academy of Medicine had decided that such a plan was unethical.

A. I had some telephone conversations with Dr. Freiberg, and then he came to my office at that time and told me of the nature of the clinic that Dr. Cook was preparing to establish in Cincinnati.

Q. It was a clinic like the Ross-Loos?

A. In part, but we had discussed it at some length.

Q. Do you refer to anything else in this letter; do you say anything about it being different from the Ross-Loos?

A. I had in mind when I wrote to him what he had told me on the telephone.

Q. And that doesn't appear in the letter?

A. There was a mention of the Ross-Loos.

Q. In Exhibit 141, dated February 6, 1936, you make the statement that the doctors in the Ross-Loos Clinic are thoroughly competent; that they have associated with them young men who are well qualified, and that the Ross-Loos Clinic delivers good medical service. You said that, did you not?

The Court: He answered that.

The Witness: That was my understanding at the time.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. And then on March 18, 1936, if you had learned from Dr. Freiberg, that the Cincinnati Academy had adopted a resolution that a plan like the Ross-Loos Clinic to be started in Cincinnati was unethical, you wrote him again on March 18, 1936. (Gov. Ex. 143.) That is the letter you just read, isn't it?

A. Let me see that. Yes, I wrote him again, and I stated —if you will permit me to read it, that I was glad to have the information submitted in his letter.

"I sincerely hope, of course, that the Cincinnati Academy will be able to head off the establishment of all sorts of group schemes of the nature referred to in your letter, because I am quite convinced that these schemes do not operate to the advantage of medicine, or the medical profession, or the public. I do believe that they are opposed to public policy."

That statement was based in part on personal statements made to me by Dr. Freiberg at the time of his visit to my office.

Q. You say in the letter "Clinics of the kind described in your letter".

A. Yes, it was described in that letter.

Q. And didn't he say: "It may be known to you that Dr. Geo. H. Cook has been and is trying to organize a group clinic in Cincinnati on the identical plan of the Ross-Loos?"

A. He said that in the letter, but he told me other things personally.

Q. So that there were other things mentioned which you did not incorporate in your letter?

A. No, nor he didn't say anything about them in his letter.

Q. He didn't mention it in his letter and you didn't in yours?

A. No.

Q. Now, isn't it true that in 1935 the American Medical Association adopted these ten principles——

A. I think it was 1934.

Q. Well, 1934,—to govern prepayment plans?

A. I didn't say to govern; they were principles believed to be useful for the guidance of those societies who wanted to start prepayment plans.

Q. Isn't it also true that the principles that were adopted were to control, govern, all types of experimentation to provide medical care for persons in the low-income group?

A. They were not to control anybody.

Q. Were they designed to govern such plans?

A. They were designed for the guidance of those who wished to start such plan. The American Medical Association has never controlled anything. The state and county societies which have started these plans, sponsored them, have controlled them.

Q. Do you recall a report of the Board of Trustees at the special session of 1935? (Gov. Ex. 606.)

A. I recall that there was a special session; I believe in 1935.

Q. In that report the following appeared, and I am referring to the last paragraph.

A. Let me see it. Yes, the word "govern" is used there, but it is not used in the sense of establishing control by the American Medical Association.

Q. But the idea of the principle as adopted is that any prepayment plan should conform with the ten principles announced as of that date?

A. It was hoped that they would, but I insist that the word "govern" there is not used in the manner of establishing control by the American Medical Association.

Q. But the Board of Trustees has said that these ten principles do govern such experiments?

A. It says that these principles did govern, but it is intended not in the sense in which you imply it.

Q. Now, at least, I think you testified it was the intention of the House of Delegates on the whole that the plans would conform with these principles laid down in 1934.

A. I think it was the intention of the House of Delegates to adopt principles that would be helpful to state and county medical societies or, for that matter, other groups, in drawing plans for providing medical service for the low-income groups.

Q. And it was hoped all plans would conform with these principles?

A. I suppose so, certainly; otherwise they wouldn't establish those principles if they didn't think they would be helpful.

Q. And isn't it also true that the sixth principle—I believe it is—requires that any form of medical service should include within its scope all legally qualified doctors in the locality to be served by the plan?

A. I can't recall that.

Q. It is the eighth; I show you on page 55 (Gov. Ex. 8), and ask you whether that is not the eighth principle?

A. It says "Any form of medical service should include within its scope all legally qualified doctors of medicine in the locality covered by its operation who wish to give service under the conditions established."

Q. Yes, isn't it true that that means that any plan that doesn't permit all doctors of the local society to participate, if they desire to do so, violates the ten principles, one of the ten principles, adopted in 1934? (Gov. Ex. 8.)

A. There was one of those principles that was changed.

Q. That was the one on payment?

A. I don't recall.

Q. But you don't recall No. 8 being changed?

A. I can't recall.

Q. It was No. 6?

A. That is my recollection.

The Court: Your question is directed to a specific principle, No. 8. Put another question.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Address your mind to No. 8, and tell us whether if a plan for providing medical service to low-income groups doesn't permit all members of the local society to participate in it, if they desire to do so, that plan doesn't violate one of the ten principles adopted in 1934?

A. I would have to read this whole business through to answer that question satisfactorily. In my opinion Section 8 of these principles expressed the opinion of the House of Delegates that in the formation of these plans by the Society they should include within their scope all legally qualified doctors of medicine in the locality covered by its operation who wish to give service under the conditions established. Now, I would have to read this carefully to——

Q. Well, you are familiar with it, are you not; you saw it yesterday?

A. Mr. Kelleher, I have lots to do; I can't read these every day; and I would have to establish in my mind whether this was intended to apply to these plans believed necessary, and which were to be operated under the auspices of the Medical Society.

Q. Isn't it a fact that the only plan that the American Medical Association would permit were those plans which conformed with the ten principles adopted at that session in 1934?

A. Mr. Kelleher, there are many plans in operation that the American Medical Association would not approve, but it is not a matter of their permission.

Q. Is it not true that you would not approve any plan which did not conform with these principles?

A. I think not; I think they would not be approved by the American Medical Association, but the American Medical Association doesn't have to approve them.

Q. But wouldn't you oppose any plan if it didn't conform with these principles?

A. I don't know that the American Medical Association would condemn it on the basis of being unethical for that reason; it might on the basis of its being an unsound plan. I can tell you this, though: I don't believe the American Medical Association would approve it if it involved control by a corporation.

Q. I am not asking you that. I would now like to know if the American Medical Association would not oppose any plan to provide medical care to people of low-income on a prepayment basis if such plan didn't permit all of the qualified physicians in the locality to be served to participate in the plan?

A. That is a question which would have to be determined on the basis of actual fact.

Q. You are familiar with the various plans which have been adopted within the past few years?

A. I am familiar with some of them.

Q. Some of those plans, like the Ross-Loos Clinic, do not permit all physicians in the locality served by the plan to participate, do they?

A. I don't think they do.

Q. And therefore, isn't it true, that they do not comply with the general principles adopted in 1934 by the Association? (Gov. Ex. 8)

A. That depends entirely on whether those ten principles are for the guidance of the county and state societies who wanted to organize, alone, or generally.

Q. But you weren't setting up standards for state and county societies which were more rigorous than the standards you applied to organizations not sponsored by such state and county societies, were you?

A. That would depend on the circumstances; I think you might reasonably expect, in some particulars, more of a medical society than of other groups.

Q. Suppose you take a plan which involves group practice: that is a group of doctors who associate themselves together; and suppose that the plan offers medical care to people of low income on a prepayment basis. Does that plan conform to the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association, assuming that it is ethical in all other respects?

A. You have a long question there. Ask it again and I will try to answer it. Of course, it presupposes that a person who offers medical service is going to render good medical service. I think I know of men who are not particularly capable but who are quite ethical.

Q. I want you to assume that this group offers the same type of service as does the Ross-Loos Clinic.

A. I would say that if that group was approved by the local county medical society and by the state medical association, the American Medical Association would not offer any opposition whatsoever.

Q. Suppose, though, that the local medical society and the state medical society neither approved or disapproved?

Mr. Leahy. What do you want to know?

Mr. Kelleher. I want the answer to my question.

Mr. Lewin. The question is perfectly clear.

The Witness. It is not very clear to me.

Mr. Leahy. I don't know what it is.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. I will ask it again. Suppose that a group of doctors offer medical care to low-income groups on a prepayment basis; suppose that the group is ethical in all other respects; suppose the doctors are qualified, and that the medical care offered is the same offered by the Ross-Loos Clinic, and suppose that the local medical society and the state medical society neither approve or disapprove of that plan. Is such a plan ethical?

Mr. Leahy. Objected to as immaterial; a hypothetical question without any hypothesis in the evidence.

The Court. You opened it up; you asked him about his opinion about the principles of ethics of the American Medical Association. Overruled.

Mr. Leahy: Exception, your Honor.

The Witness: I think no objection would be offered to it if it were not otherwise in conflict with the constitution, by-laws, ethics and traditions of the American Medical Association.

Q. And such a plan would not be unethical, would it, because it didn't permit free choice of physicians?

A. Not necesarily, because the hospitals do not offer free choice of physicians in all particulars; neither do other groups.

Q. And if in that plan the choice of the patient was limited to the doctors on the staff of the organization there would be no infraction of that section of the principles of medical ethics that require free choice of physicians?

A. Providing there was nothing else involved, and providing it was not disapproved or approved by the local society and the state society.

Q. Now, let us get to the second matter; if the local society disapproves of that plan solely because it involves prepayment by a group of doctors, the American Medical Association would oppose the plan, would it not?

A. Not, if I understand your question correctly; the answer is "No", but I am not sure I understand it.

Q. I will try to clarify it. If the medical society, local society, disapproved of the plan which I have described, and disapproved for the sole reason the plan involved group practice on a prepayment basis, the American Medical Association would also disapprove of it, would it not?

A. The American Medical Association would not take any action unless it was officially brought to its attention, and action on the part of the American Medical Association requested.

Q. Suppose it were officially brought to its attention?

A. There was more to my answer. It was officially brought to the attention and action was requested.

Q. Let us suppose it were officially brought to its attention and action requested.

A. It would be referred to the Judicial Council.

Q. Would not the American Medical Association oppose such a plan for that reason?

A. For what reason?

Q. Because the local society disapproved of the plan.

A. Not necessarily, Mr. Kelleher. The American Medical Association might take no action whatever.

Q. Even if invited in?

A. It might not make any decision in the case that would involve official action.

Q. As a matter of fact, the American Medical Association was invited in, in connection with G. H. A., was it not?

A. The American Medical Association undertook to develop the facts about G. H. A. before it was ever invited to do anything; and G. H. A., if I may say so, is not at all——

Q. Please confine yourself to my question, if you do not mind, Dr. West. The American Medical Association was asked to come into the G. H. A. matter, was it not?

A. The American Medical Association was requested by the District of Columbia Medical Society, through its representatives as a committee, to interest itself in this matter long after it had already interested itself in it.

Q. Is it not also true that Dr. Verbrycke wrote Dr. Woodward and asked the American Medical Association to become interested in the matter?

A. He asked the Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation, I believe.

Q. And as a result of that it was decided that Dr. Woodward should go to Washington, was it not?

A. I do not know, to my own knowledge. I cannot answer that definitely, but maybe so.

Q. Did you hear Dr. Woodward's testimony?

A. I have heard lots of testimony. I cannot remember it all.

Q. Do you not recall that he testified that after conferring with you it was decided that he should go to Washington?

A. If he did, that was actually so.

Q. Is it not also true that you were interested in Group Health Association before the Medical Society of the District of Columbia became interested?

A. I think that is true, but I cannot produce any documentary evidence on that.

Q. You think it is true?

A. I think it is true, and I said so, and I believe it.

Q. Whatever you were doing in connection with Group Health Association, you were doing to oppose Group Health Association, were you not?

A. I was doing it to develop the facts.

Q. Yes; but were you not developing the facts and doing everything else——

A. Mr. Kelleher——

Q. Let me finish my question—for the purpose of opposing Group Health Association?

A. It has long been the policy of the organized medical profession of the United States to oppose corporation practice, and this association happened to be a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine.

Q. And therefore, as a matter of fact, you were opposed to it?

A. Personally, I certainly was.

Q. Was not the American Medical Association opposed to it?

A. I think that it is contrary to the policy of the American Medical Association for a corporation to enter into the practice of medicine.

Q. And therefore the American Medical Association and you were opposed to Group Health Association?

A. We were opposed to any corporation engaging in the practice of medicine.

Q. Were you opposed to Group Health Association?

A. When we found out what the facts were, I was.

Q. Was not the American Medical Association opposed to it?

A. I think it was entirely contrary to the policies of the American Medical Association.

Q. And to the policies of the House of Delegates?

A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. And whatever you did in connection with G. H. A. you did to oppose the growth of Group Health Association, did you not?

A. I don't know about opposing the growth. I opposed the principle of the Group Health Association.

Q. And did you not desire to put a stop to its operation if you could?

A. I didn't do anything to stop it, but I did make my position known, and I expressed my opinion to the effect that it was a corporation practicing medicine and believed to be illegal, and I opposed it on that account.

Q. Is it not also true that you and the American Medical Association did everything you could to combat G. H. A.?

A. Yes, to combat it in the sense that we did everything we could to develop the facts and make them known. Now, Mr. Kelleher, I never had one word of conversation with anybody in G. H. A. that I know of.

Q. I am not suggesting that at all.

A. I think it is fair for me to say that if I had been going to actively oppose the actual organization of the thing I would have gone to them and opposed it.

Q. How would you have done that?

A. By doing everything I could to persuade them that they were doing the wrong thing.

Q. But there were other ways of opposing it.

A. Yes; and there were other ways to make the attitude of the American Medical Association known.

Q. And it is also true that there were ways of affecting Group Health Association's growth through the local hospitals; is not that a fact?

A. So far as I know, the American Medical Association never attempted to control the action of any hospital with respect to Group Health Association.

Q. Is not this true——

A. (Continuing) I never communicated with a Washington hospital in my life, so far as I know.

Q. In the minutes of the board of trustees of November 18 and 19, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 136), appears the following (reading):

"Dr. West reported that a committee of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia had visited the headquarters offices early in the month for the purpose of conferring with him, Dr. Woodward and Dr. Leland with respect to the Group Health Association, Inc.; that he had brought what apparently amounted to a demand to the Association to devise further means and ways of opposing the continued operation of Group Health Association, Inc., and that it was intimated that the American Medical Association had not concerned itself with anything but scientific matters, in spite of the fact that he and Dr. Woodward had conferred with the District Society in Washington on instructions from the board."

Is it true that in connection with G. H. A. you conferred with the District Society in Washington on instructions from the Board of Trustees of the American Medical Association?

A. I do not recall that I ever attended a meeting of the District Society during all the life of the Group Health Association.

Q. Did you confer with representatives of the Society on instructions from the Board of Trustees?

A. No. I think Dr. Woodward and Dr. Leland conferred on instructions from the Board of Trustees.

Q. Did you not say that you and Dr. Woodward did confer with the District Society on instructions from the Board of Trustees?

A. I don't recall the Board of Trustees giving Dr. Woodward and me any instructions to confer.

Q. Would you say this is wrong?

A. Well, I don't know. I am not going to say it is wrong, but I do say that I don't recall it myself, that specific instructions were issued to Dr. Woodward and me at any one time.

Q. You came here in July, 1937, for the very purpose of consulting the representatives of the Society concerning G. H. A., did you not?

A. I came for that purpose among others, Mr. Kelleher.

Q. If you were ordered by the——

A. As a matter of fact, if you will permit me to answer that question, my recollection is that—and I am not absolutely sure about it—that I was invited to confer with them after I got here. I can't be sure about that, but that is my recollection.

Q. If you said in November, 1937, that you had gone to Washington as a result of instructions from the Board of Trustees, don't you think that was correct?

A. I would have to see the preceding minutes of the Board of Trustees to know if I had had instructions.

Q. You saw them this morning. Do you not recall that you were shown——

A. My dear man, I saw an extract from the minutes this morning, a digest of the minutes. I didn't see all the minutes.

Q. I think you have told us that you and the American Medical Association were opposed to G. H. A., did you not?

A. I said I was opposed to the principle of the thing, and I thought it was not in keeping with the policies of the American Medical Association.

The Court: You have been all over that.

Mr. Kelleher: I was just leading up to something else, your Honor.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Is it not true that the American Medical Association was opposed to G. H. A. because, in its view, G. H. A. was unethical?

A. Mr. Kelleher, I have already stated that the American Medical Association was opposed to G. H. A. because it was a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine, and it was believed to be illegal and it had been so decided in many instances.

Q. And was it not opposed, therefore, because it was unethical for a doctor to associate himself with that association?

A. I will give you my personal opinion. I think it would be unethical for a physician to engage himself with an illegal corporation of any kind.

Q. And you felt that way in 1937?

A. I felt that way all my life.

Q. And you felt that way in 1937 concerning Group Health?

A. I feel that way today.

Q. And you felt that way in 1937?

A. All my life.

Q. Did you not know that if the local society had the same view that you had, that G. H. A. was unethical, that a doctor, a member of the Society, associating himself with G. H. A. would be subject to disciplinary proceedings by the local society?

A. If that local society wanted to institute proceedings, yes. But, Mr. Kelleher, I must insist—and I hope it is not out of the way for me to do so—that the American Medical Association has no jurisdiction over membership of local societies.

The Court: I thought we had been all over that.

The Witness: And it does not attempt to exercise it.

The Court: We have been over that. Do not pursue it any further. I would rather not get back to that.

Mr. Kelleher: All right, your Honor.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Did you not believe in 1937 that any member of the local society who became associated with Group Health Association would be subject to disciplinary proceedings by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia?

Mr. Richardson: Objected to as repetitious.

Mr. Kelleher: No, it is not.

Mr. Richardson: Word for word.

The Court: He has answered the question. Put another question. Objection sustained.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. On October 29 you wrote the local society notifying them that Doctors Lee and Scandiffio were on the staff of G. H. A., did you not?

A. I don't know whether it was October 29 or not. I wrote them and told them that I had that information.

Q. You learned that from Mr. Hayes, did you not?

A. My recollection is that either I or somebody at our office received a telegram from Mr. Hayes giving the names of those who had been announced as members of the staff of G. H. A.

Q. And on the same day you wrote a letter (Gov. Ex. 114) to the Society notifying the Society that two of its members were on the staff of G. H. A., did you not?

A. I don't know whether it was the same day or not. I do remember writing a letter in which I stated that two members of the staff were members of the District of Columbia Society, and that one, I believe, was a member and Fellow of the American Medical Association.

Q. And a few days later, at the November 6 conference, you learned that the Society had instituted disciplinary proceedings against Doctors Lee and Scandiffio?

A. I learned—I don't know whether it was a few days later or not, but some time later I learned through a newspaper statement.

Q. Did you not hear about it at this November 6 conference, through Dr. Hooe?

A. I believe it was mentioned; yes.

Q. Dr. Hooe explained that two members had been cited by the C. C. and I. M. committee; do you recall that?

A. I think I probably had information before that conference.

Q. You had heard it before that?

A. I do not know about its being a few days after I wrote that letter.

Q. Were you surprised to hear that these two doctors about whom you had written on October 29 were now cited by the C. C. and I. M. committee?

Mr. Leahy: I object as immaterial, if your Honor please, whether he was surprised or not.

The Court: Objection sustained.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Did you not expect, when you notified the Society on October 29 that two of its members were on the staff of G. H. A., that that Society would institute proceedings against those two doctors?

A. Mr. Kelleher, I didn't notify the Society. I informed the Society that that was the information I had.

Q. And when you so informed the Society did you not believe then that proceedings would be instituted by that society?

A. I didn't think about whether they would be or not. If you are trying to make the implication that I wrote that letter for the purpose of inciting action by the Society, you are altogether wrong.

Q. Why did you give the Society that information?

A. Just as a matter of interest.

Q. Purely casually?

A. If I were to get a telegram announcing that certain doctors had been appointed on any commission by the United States Government, as a matter of interest I would look to see if they were members of the American Medical Association or not.

Q. All right. As a matter of fact, Dr. Scandiffio was expelled from the Society, was he not?

A. So I am informed.

Q. Did you not also, in response to a request from the Harris County Society, advise that Society that in your opinion if any member of that Society were associated with Group Health Association that was unethical conduct?

A. I don't know whether I wrote such a thing or not. If you have a letter there I should be glad to look at it.

Mr. Lewin: It was shown the witness this morning.

The Court: I will give the jury a few minutes recess while you are finding it.

(A brief informal recess was taken, at the conclusion of which the following proceedings took place:)

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Doctor West, did not Dr. Talley write you and ask you what the view of the National Association was concerning the ethics of any member of the Association affiliating himself with G. H. A.?

A. Dr. Talley—who is he?

Q. Chairman of the Board of Censors of the Harris County Medical Society.

A. Here is a letter from him, yes, in which he says:

"We would appreciate a letter from you stating the view held by the National Association with reference to practice of this type."

Q. And he was referring to Group Health Association, was he not?

The Court: What exhibit is that?

Mr. Kelleher: No. 124, your Honor.

A. Yes. He says, "so-called Group Health Association made up of Federal employees of the H.O.L.C. located in Washington, D. C."

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Did you not reply that that organization constituted a violation of the principles of medical ethics?

A. I will have to read this letter to find out.

Q. Let me help you on it.

The Court: What letter is that?

Mr. Kelleher: No. 123, your Honor.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Read the last two sentences in the third paragraph.

A. (Reading:)

"Based on the information available to us here, it is my purely personal opinion that a physician who becomes an agent of a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine violates the principles of medical ethics. This, my personal opinion, is offered of course for whatever you may consider it to be worth."

Q. Your opinion, then, as of February, 1938, was that if any doctor affiliated with Group Health Association, he violated the principles of medical ethics?

A. I think if——

Q. Just a second, Doctor West. Please answer my question. I want to be perfectly fair to you.

Mr. Lewin: Let him answer it yes or no and then give his explanation.

Mr. Leahy: Put the question again, if you want yes or no.

The Court: You gentlemen settle it among yourselves.

Mr. Kelleher: Will you read my question, please?

(The pending question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. What is the answer to that question?

A. My answer is that I think any doctor who sells his services to a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine violates medical ethics.

Q. Then is your answer in the affirmative?

A. As particularly applied to Group Health Association?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Mr. Kelleher: I have no further questions.

Redirect examination:

Q. Doctor, with reference to the Dr. Cooke letter about which you were asked, with reference to the Cincinnati group, did you receive information from Dr. Cooke personally?

A. No, sir; not that I recall.

Q. Did you receive information from anybody with reference to the Dr. Cooke clinic?

A. I had a visit, and my recollection is that I had at least two telephone calls from Dr. Frieburg who later wrote me. I believe perhaps one of those calls was in between the two letters that he wrote me, in which he gave me some information that was not contained in the letters, which, in my opinion, indicated that the proposed plan was not——

* * * * * * *

The Witness: I did; through a visit from Dr. Frieburg and through, I think, two telephone messages, and I have an indistinct recollection that someone else wrote to me about it or talked to me about it; but that I cannot testify to definitely.

Q. From information of that character received with reference to it, was there a distinction between the Ross-Loos Clinic and the Dr. Cooke clinic as proposed?

A. My recollection is that the plan proposed to be put into operation in Cincinnati went considerably beyond most plans, and I do distinctly recall that I was informed that it would involve solicitation of patients and advertising, open advertising.

Q. Now, with reference to one question and answer—and I am not clear about it—you made the statement that you had been opposed all your life to a doctor's being connected with an illegal enterprise. Do you recall that testimony?

A. I said that I had been opposed all my life, certainly all my medical life, to a doctor selling his services to a corporation engaged in the practice of medicine. I stick to that statement.

Q. With reference to the G. H. A., somewhere in your answer you said something which appeared to be confusing, as to whether you had been opposed to G. H. A. or whether you were opposed to a doctor engaging himself in an enterprise which was thought to be illegal.

A. I was opposed to G. H. A. as a corporation just as I was opposed to any other corporation engaging in the practice of medicine.

Recross-examination:

Q. Were you not opposed to the Ross-Loos Clinic because it was a partnership?

A. No.

Q. You were not?

A. No.

Q. Let me read you this and ask you whether this is correct. It is from Exhibit 141 (reading):

"I am sorry indeed to know that anybody in Cincinnati is preparing to begin operations of a plan made more or less famous, or infamous, according to the point of view, by Doctors Ross and Loos in Los Angeles. I am quite convinced that the Ross-Loos scheme is a violation of the principles laid down by the courts of California which have repeatedly insisted that the corporate practice of medicine is illegal in that state. I am just as strongly convinced that it is relatively easy to evade the law. What is in effect a corporation may be organized under the designation of partnership."

Is that correct?

* * * * * * *

The Witness: That is correct, because at that particular time I had the understanding that it was a corporation. Now, then, the other part of your question there—if you will be good enough to re-st. te it I will try to answer it.

The Court: The question is whether, if it changed its form to partnership, you would still be opposed to it if it carried on the same way.

The Witness: My view with respect to it, based on the fact that a corporation that had been engaged in the practice of medicine in Illinois had lately been declared to be illegal and immediately got around that court decision by organizing as a partnership——

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Will you answer the court's question, please?

The Court: It was not my question.

Mr. Kelleher: Your suggestion, I mean. Will you read it, Mr. Reporter?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

The Witness: Not necessarily; no.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Were you opposed to the Ross-Loos Clinic even if it was a partnership?

A. I was at that particular time, when I was informed that it was a corporation.

Q. Does this say you were informed it was a corporation?

A. No; it does not. I cannot put into every letter I write everything I know and all the information I have.

Q. Did you not put into that letter that although the Ross-Loos Clinic was a partnership, you felt it was evading the law?

A. That is not what I said.

Q. Look at that letter and tell us whether there is anything to show that you thought that the Ross-Loos Clinic was a corporation.

A. I said, "I am just as strongly convinced that it is relatively easy to evade the law. What is in effect a corporation may be disguised under the designation of a partnership."

Q. And did you not view the Ross-Loos Clinic as a partnership, but, nevertheless, say it was illegal?

A. No; I didn't think it was illegal as a partnership, because I know of corporations that have been declared illegal and that have established themselves as partnerships and are not declared illegal.

Q. Did you not say, "I am quite convinced that the Ross-Loos Clinic is in violation of the principles laid down by the courts of California"?

A. I objected because I thought it was a corporation. I explained that three times.

Q. You have explained it three times?

A. Yes.

Q. Even though it was a partnership?

A. I don't know what you mean by "even though it was a partnership."

DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN, a defendant and witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I have resided in Chicago since 1906. I am editor of the Journal of the AMA and managing editor of all its publications. I have a degree of Doctor of Medicine from Rush College of the University of Chicago, conferred in 1912. I was born in 1889. I received the alumni fellowship in pathology from Rush Medical College and was appointed resident physician in the Durand Hospital of the McCormick institution for infectious diseases. I was assistant coroner's physician of Cook County, making post mortem examinations, 1912-1913. I was assistant in the out patient department of the Central Free Dispensary in Chicago for a year. In 1913 I became assistant to the editor of the Journal of the AMA and was appointed editor in 1924. I have been with the AMA for 27 years.

As editor of the Journal I have charge of all material furnished, including the scientific contributions, editorials, news material, abstract of scientific literature, answers to questions. I take the responsibility for it and am responsible to the Board of Trustees. The Journal is a weekly publication with a circulation of 101,300 subscribers, mostly physicians, although at least 4,000 copies go to libraries, medical schools, institutions of research, and similar places. I have written and published 18 books, some medical and some general advice books; some scientific expositions, some exposures of quackery, and several hundred articles, of which six or seven dealt wholly with scientific research and exposition. I am a member of the American Medical Association for the Advancement of Science, a fellow of the American Public Health Association, a member of the American Medical Historical Association, a fellow of the AMA, a member of the Chicago Pathological Society, of the Chicago Society of Medical History, and many other organizations, including the Committee on Medical Preparedness of the AMA; the Executive Committee of the Federation of Medical Sciences of the National Research Council, and am chairman of the Committee on Education of the National Research Council.

The Journal receives for publication each year 3000 articles that discuss every phase of scientific medicine, including surgery, diseases of the skin and of the nervous system and practically every other disease which may occur to man and sometimes, to animals. We select therefrom approximately 600 as acceptable for publication. Very frequently controversial questions are presented and published from many different points of view, as physicians might vary as to techniques, so we natuarlly present the various techniques. I understood that Dr. Cabot stated that in so far as the scientific aspects of the Journal were concerned he considered it probably the best in the world. When Dr. Cabot made the statement that some of the articles of the Journal could be torn limb from limb he was referring, I am sure, to specific articles not dealing with the scientific aspects of medical science.

I began to hear vague rumblings concerning something that later turned out to be Group Health fairly early in 1937. Of course, if I started now to go all the way back I would say that I heard the antecedents of Group Health discussed at least twelve years ago by Mr. Filene. I have no definite memory as to exactly when I heard about Group Health. Someone must have said to me early in 1937, "Some one is figuring on starting another plan in Washington." I attended the AMA convention in June 1937 at Atlantic City and I am quite sure I heard something about Group Health. I left the United States in the middle of July of that year and did not return until the first of September. I met Mr. Filene on the boat and he mentioned the matter at that time. With the exception of this I did not hear any mention of Group Health from July 12 to the first of September.

During the period from the AMA convention to July 12 I heard about Group Health at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees on June 29. I believe that about that time, at that meeting, there was some discussion of Group Health, and the suggestion was made that an article be published in the Journal giving available facts concerning the organization. Before leaving on July 12 I personally did not do anything whatsoever concerning Group Health, and didn't even discuss it with anyone. I never interviewed anyone in the Medical Society about it and I had no correspondence with anybody in the Society. I never went to any committee of the District Medical Society for discussion on any subject or anything relating to Group Health. As editor of the Journal I have no authority in the administration of any of the bureaus or councils of the AMA. I make no attempt to administer any of the bureaus. Before going to Europe I had no conversation with Dr. Cutter or Dr. Leland concerning Group Health, and with the exception of the Executive Committee meeting none with Dr. West. I have never formulated any plans whatsoever about Group Health. An article pertaining to Group Health came to my desk with a memorandum from Dr. Woodward. I indicated on the memorandum certain changes which I thought desirable and probably returned the article to Dr. Woodward, and beyond that I had nothing whatever to do with the article itself. I have met Dr. Christie, Dr. Groover, Dr. Neill, and I corresponded with Dr. Yater, but I have had no conversation nor correspondence with any of these doctors relating to Group Health. I have not met and know nothing of Dr. Hooe, Dr. Martel, Dr. Mattingly, Dr. McGovern, Dr. Reade, Dr. Sprigg, Dr. Stanton, Dr. Warfield, Dr. Prentiss Willson, or Dr. Young. On November 6 when Drs. Woodward, Leland, and West met with Drs. McGovern and Hooe in Chicago, I was in New Orleans.

Upon my return in September, 1937, and aside from the publication of the Journal article the following is all I had to do with reference to Group Health; I sat with the Board of Trustees at the September meeting previously to the publication of the article; I was present at the meeting of the State Secretaries and Editors; I was probably also present at the meeting of the Board of Trustees in November, 1937. I have a dim recollection that at the meeting of the State Secretaries and Editors there was an exposition of the development of Group Health, and the general character of the matter was discussed. I believe an attempt was made to introduce and pass a resolution, but that body has no authority to pass any resolutions that are binding in any way on anybody. That is purely a conference where men discuss affairs, and they can take no action.

I have no official position on the Board of Trustees, but as editor, and being responsible for all the publications and taking orders from the Board of Trustees as to material that is to be disseminated, I sit with the Board at its meetings.

In addition to the Journal, I edit Hygeia; the quarterly cumulative index medica, an index of some 1500 medical periodicals throughout the world; a periodical devoted to nervous and mental diseases, one for pathology; one for the nose, throat, and eye; internal medicine; surgery; and I am also chief editor of War Medicine, which is published in cooperation with the National Research Council and with the cooperation of the Army and Navy and the Public Health Service.

On February 10 at Georgetown University I made a speech, and at that time some questions were asked about Group Health in an open forum and I gave some discussion of group health in general. I think the title of my address was American Medicine. I venture to say that perhaps in one or two other addresses before public forums elsewhere in the county I may have occasionally devoted three or four sentences in my discussion to Group Health as just one type of maybe several hundred, if not thousands, of plans that are now being experimented with in this country.

I have never conferred with any member of the District Medical Society and never had a conference with anybody in the District Society on the question of Group Health. I never attended any meeting of the Medical Society in 1937 and 1938. In responses to the subpoena of the Government I instructed my secretary to locate every letter from my files which could be found which might be even remotely related to Group Health and turn them over to the Government. So far as I know I answered a letter addressed to me from a boy named Fred Hammerly, which didn't discuss Group Health. He then responded and his second letter was referred to Dr. West. That is the only correspondence of which I have any knowledge which might concern Group Health. My letter to Hammerly, dated September 30, 1931, read as follows (Gov. Ex. 283):

"I am referring your letter of September 24 to Dr. Olin West, secretary of the American Medical Association, who is a member of the Judicial Council and who can best advise you regarding the question in which you are interested."

Q. Doctor, you were here in the courtroom, were you not, when Dr. Cabot gave his testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With reference to that testimony, I want to ask you, Doctor, whether quite a different policy has been established in regard to the section on Medical Economics in the Journal than that which had existed hitherto?

A. No doubt Dr. Cabot meant to infer by that statement, I take it, that we were not as broad in our general admission of discussions relating to so-called medical economic matters as we are in relation to scientific matters. There might be a fair difference of opinion on that point. In fact, if anyone wished to show that, I could produce a list of many hundreds of articles discussing every possible aspect of the distribution of medical service.

Q. Do you edit all of the articles on economic questions and medical economics that appear in the Journal?

A. I am responsible as editor for every article and, in fact, for everything else that appears in the journal of the American Medical Association.

Q. What have you to say with reference to the statement that the articles in the Journal are a pretty incomplete statement with very important omissions therefrom?

A. That, of course, is to my mind absolutely unwarranted, for the simple reason that I have published many, many articles describing every possible technique in the distribution of medical service.

Q. On questions wherein there is any discussion whatsoever with reference to medical economics, do you omit source material so that the busy physician who cannot possibly go to original sources is not able to get a complete picture?

A. Well, if Dr. Cabot meant by that that I did not publish the 27 volumes of the Committee on the Cost of Medical Care—he may perhaps refer to that as source material—obviously we print vast amounts of source material. I might refer, for instance, to an article printed long before Group Health Association appeared on the scene, dealing with various techniques for distribution of service and on different types of payment.

Q. I want to ask you, Doctor, if the Journal of the American Medical Association has adopted any policy whereby the possibility of pointing out omissions and weaknesses in articles published has been frowned upon?

A. I think when Dr. Cabot made that statement he disregarded the fact that I have published on at least five occasions statements made by Dr. Cabot himself, discussing such matters.

Q. Has the Journal of the American Medical Association in its field of discussion of Medical Economics and such subjects and problems been open to both sides for criticism each of the other?

A. We have published on many occasions criticisms by two sides of various techniques for the distribution of medical service. In that connection it is obviously the duty of an editor always, first of all, to protect his reader, so that if an article is received with obvious misstatements of fact it would be a very poor editor who would publish it just because it came from the opposite side.

I wrote Gov. Ex. 291-A to Mr. Hartfield. I wrote Gov. Ex. 281 in reply to a letter from Dr. Erskine.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 291-A and 281 to the jury as follows:

Gov. Ex. 291-A, dated August 27, 1938, is on the official stationery of the Journal of the American Medical Association, addressed to Mr. M. K. Hartfield, Washington, D. C. (reading):

"DEAR MR. HARTFIELD:

I appreciate your letter of August 23, together with the information that it contains. This is most heartening as indicating the public reaction in Washington toward Group Health Association activities. I am referring your letter to Dr. Olin West, Secretary of the Association, and Dr. R. G. Leland.

With best wishes and with the hope of seeing you sometime soon, I am

Sincerely yours,"

Exhibit 281 is a carbon copy of a letter from Dr. Fishbein dated September 19, 1938, addressed to Dr. Arthur W. Erskine at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and it reads as follows (reading):

"I have read with great interest your letter of September 9 and also the material sent to you by A. H. Woods. I am sending your letter also to Dr. Olin West, since it is addressed jointly to him. I believe that the action taken by the House of Delegates, which is reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association for September 24, will indicate to you the progress that has been made. I will be much interested in hearing your comment as to the action taken by our House of Delegates.

Very truly yours,"

I am familiar with the Principles of Medical Ethics and lecture on the history of medical ethics in a medical school. The framework of the principles was developed in Manchester, England, and was first published in 1803 after William Heatherton and others had given their opinions. The first draft was modified and adopted by the AMA in 1848. The modified draft being written by Isaac Hayes, then editor of the Journal of the AMA. Since that time there have been modifications of the fundamental principles, primarily with the object of covering new developments, both in scientific and what might be called the general nature of the medical practice. There isn't the slightest scientific or authentic evidence in support of the statement that under the Principles of Medical Ethics, as interpreted by the AMA and its affiliated constituent and component societies, they can and do frequently condemn as unethical group practice on a risk-sharing basis, particularly because such practice is in business competition with and threatens the incomes of doctors engaged in practice on a fee-for-service basis; and particularly, the doctors so practicing who are members of the AMA and its affiliated societies.

Q. Are the AMA and its affiliated constituent and component societies interpreting the rules of ethics principally because, in so far as the risk-sharing prepayment basis of medical practice is concerned, there is competition from the money angle between fee-for-service practice as compared with group practice?

A. Again, I would say that from long tradition everything that is taught to every medical student in every qualified medical school is absolutely opposed to any such concept of medical practice.

I have never combined and conspired for the purpose of restraining trade in the District of Columbia, or for the purpose of restraining Group Health, or for the purpose of restraining the members of Group Health, or for the purpose of restraining the doctors serving on the medical staff of Group Health, or for the purpose of restraining doctors not on the staff of Group Health; or for the purpose of restraining the Washington hospitals in the business of operating such hospitals. I never did anything, wrote anything, or discussed with anybody, any matter concerning the Washington hospitals in 1937 and 1938. I have never endeavored or tried to restrain anybody from becoming a member of the staff of Group Health, and to my knowledge I don't know anybody who has been or now is on the staff of Group Health. I have done nothing for the purpose of hindering or restraining Group Health, any members of its staff, or anybody connected with Group Health. I have heard it has a clinic on I Street, but I don't even know where I Street is. I have never been there and I have never done anything to restrain them from carrying on this clinic. I published a current comment in the Journal somewhere in December, 1938, covering the hearings which had been held in Congress on the question of the appropriation, that is, Congressman Woodrum's hearing.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

I work on a salary for a fairly large corporation. When I asked Mr. Hartfield for information I was specifically inquiring as to how the excitement in Washington interested the average citizen and asked him to ask some of his employees what their reaction was. He found a rather disinterestedness among his employees which I found interesting and heartening. To me it was interesting that a movement that had so much pressure interested so few.

I take responsibility for the article published in the Journal of October 2, 1937, concerning Group Health.

DR. CHARLES S. WHITE, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am a surgeon. I graduated from George Washington Medical School in 1898, practiced my profession from that time, and have specialized in surgery from 1908 to date. I spent two years in private practice and eight years in hospital experience in Emergency, George Washington, and Columbia Hospitals in Washington, and part-time in New York. I am professor of surgery at George Washington University and head of the Department of Surgery in Gallinger and the Doctors' Hospital, and on the consulting boards of four or five others, including Emergency, Garfield, and Providence Hospitals. I have been connected with George Washington in a teaching capacity since 1899. I am on several committees at the hospital, one on administration and one on admission to hospital privileges.

I have been on the committee on admission since 1934, with Dr. Mallory and Dr. Howard Kane. Dr. Mallory covers medicine; Dr. Kane obstetrics and gynecology, and I surgery. In reporting on privileges we report to the staff of 40 or 50 men, who have practicing and teaching privileges in the hospital and medical school; George Washington University had two staffs, an appointed staff and a courtesy staff, the latter of which has no official connection with the hospital. Courtesy staff doctors are allowed to visit patients in the hospitals. The staff is appointed by the Board of Trustees of the University. The committee on applications, on investigating an application for privileges, refers it to the appointed staff. The appointed staff takes care of patients, mostly free patients, in the hospital of the University, whereas the courtesy staff is composed mostly of those doctors, practicing physicians of Washington, who are permitted to take and treat private patients in the hospital. Any doctor who wishes to avail himself of courtesy staff privileges fills out an application on a printed form stating his qualifications, age, education, the societies to which he belongs, the medical papers written by him, and his experience. The application is read before a staff meeting and is then turned over to me as chairman of the committee on privileges; I sort them, keeping those relating to surgery, and referring those relating to medicine to Dr. Mallory and those relating to obstetrics and gynecology to Dr. Kane. I then refer applications for surgical privileges to the Washington Academy of Surgery, as in 1934-1935, we decided to adopt this procedure to secure investigation from the Academy. The Academy acts in an advisory capacity to the committee. The secretary of the Washington Academy of Surgery receives the applications, investigates them, and returns the applications with reports which I receive and take back to the next regular meeting of the staff for a vote. When the vote is taken the applicant is notified of the vote. Since I have been connected with George Washington University Hospital, or any of the hospitals here in Washington, no hospital permits a man to practice without courtesy privileges unless in a grave emergency, and then sometimes that is waived until he can make out the proper application, and that is true of all hospitals. After the application is voted on by the medical staff it is then sent to the dean, or the superintendent of the hospital, who happens to be the dean, and his secretary takes up the matter from that point on.

I am a member of the Washington Academy of Surgery and am on the committee investigating the qualifications of applicants to practice surgery. I know that an application on behalf of Dr. Raymond E. Selders, whom I never met personally, was made to George Washington University Hospital sometime in 1937 and was turned over to me after it was read at a staff meeting. I referred the application to the Washington Academy of Surgery. The reference of any application for courtesy privileges in George Washington Hospital to the Washington Academy of Surgery had nothing to do with Group Health, as all applications for surgery privileges are turned over to the Academy, and that procedure is routine. As soon as the application was returned by the Washington Academy of Surgery it was read before the staff of George Washington University Hospital. The application was not delayed at all and went through the regular routine. I knew at the time that Dr. Selders was connected with Group Health because I had read of it in the newspapers, as news of the situation was all over the newspapers, including the front page. Dr. Selders' connection with Group Health had nothing whatsoever to do with the handling of his application at George Washington Hospital. The recommendation received from the Washington Academy of Surgery on Dr. Selders' application was adverse. The application was turned in to the dean, who presided at the staff meeting, with the notation that the Academy did not approve of his application. It was then put to a vote, submitted to the open staff meeting, and the staff voted not to give him the privileges. Nothing was said at the staff meeting that his application should be rejected because he was a member of Group Health, and that had no effect so far as I know on the vote; and the vote was based solely on his professional qualifications. The hospital made no independent investigation into the qualifications of Dr. Selders, and certain other doctors were rejected along with Dr. Selders, and his rejection in no way differed from them or from any other doctor seeking surgical privileges at George Washington whose application was denied.

When an applicant seeks general surgical privileges in a hospital that means the privilege of operating on anyone he might send there as a patient, and do any operation which he thinks the patient requires, without any sort of supervision. In other words, to have complete charge of the patient, and to do a major operation, open the abdomen, or anything you want. It is the highest privilege that you can give a doctor, and that is why such an application is scrutinized pretty closely, as a hospital is more or less responsible for the work being done there, and feels that man who can do any sort of an operation without supervision should be a first-class surgeon, with a large amount of experience. In some cases, a man is allowed to operate while some other older practitioner stands by in order to allow proper experience. "Without supervision" would mean that a man may go into a hospital and do as he pleases with the patient, if the patient permits it. I am a member of the District Medical Society, of the AMA, and am on the committee of the District Society dealing with compensation, claims and adjustments. I do not now hold any office in the Washington Academy of Surgery, but am a past president of it, as well as of the Medical Society.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

Dr. John Reed was a member of the medical staff that voted on the application of Dr. Selders, as well as Drs. Jacob Kotz, Daniel Borden, Dr. Mallory, Dr. Arch L. Riddick, and Dr. Warren W. Sager; I only attended one meeting during 1937 and 1938, and I am not familiar with the committees or the members of the various committees of the Medical Society or their activities. I voted as I did on Dr. Selders' application because of the report received from the Washington Academy of Surgery. I don't know upon what the other members of the staff based their votes. Dr. Selders' application disclosed that he had graduated in medicine from the University of Oklahoma in June, 1927; that he received a Bachelor of Art; and Bachelor of Science degree in chemical engineering; that he received a Bachelor of Science degree in medicine. I think the University of Oklahoma is all right now, but I don't know what it was then. The application also disclosed that he interned in 1927 and 1928 at St. Joseph's Infirmary at Houston, Texas; I know nothing adverse to that institution, but whether or not he had good interne training would depend on the institution, and I cannot say whether his training was good or bad. I also found that he was a resident in surgery at Worcester City Hospital, in Massachusetts, in 1936-1937. I know nothing of the standing of that hospital, and nothing against it. This information was not used by our committee and was sent by the staff to the Washington Academy of Surgery for its recommendation. I was not a member of the credentials committee of the Washington Academy of Surgery and did not attend its deliberations or take part in the investigations it conducted concerning Dr. Selders. I saw that he had been admitted to practice medicine in the District; he had graduate work in the school of medicine in the University of Pennsylvania, a very good institution; and would appear to have some qualifications in some kind of surgery. Dr. Selders applied for general surgery, which means general surgery of all types and would include minor surgery. We don't discriminate. He asked for general surgery and he was turned down in general surgery. He didn't ask for minor surgery. I saw that he was a member of the Harris County Medical Society and of the AMA, but didn't know whether he was a member of any of the local societies, and I presumed that he was not a member. I saw that he had had teaching experience in the University of Oklahoma and staff appointment at various hospitals, the Memorial Hospital in Houston, Texas, and St. Joseph's Infirmary, and had made some contributions to medical literature, but I don't think what a man writes indicates his ability in surgery. I see that he gave some references, a Dr. Lee, Dr. Brown, Dr. Moore, and Dr. McIvor.

I wasn't present at the meeting of the Washington Academy of Surgery that took up the application of Dr. Selders. The Washington Academy of Surgery is made up largely, if not entirely, of members of the Medical Society. I don't know what action the Medical Society took regarding the ethical question of a doctor being with Group Health. I think that if Dr. Selders had asked for privileges in minor surgery, on his record, he might have gotten it, but it is not customary to make a suggestion to that effect, as it is not up to the hospital to suggest how a doctor may obtain privileges; if he desires them he should seek them. If Dr. Selders had re-applied for minor surgery it would not come to me because that comes under medicine. The last I recall is that Dr. Selders' application came up again at a staff meeting on October 10, 1938, and it was moved and seconded that the application be referred to the Washington Academy of Surgery and follow the usual procedure. I know Dr. Glenn I. Jones but I never told him that any member of the medical profession who joined Group Health would lose membership in the Medical Society and that any member who consulted with a member of the staff of Group Health would likewise lose membership. I may have said it was my opinion that something like that would happen, but I couldn't tell him it would happen.

Redirect examination.

Dr. Selders' application took the regular course that every other application had taken prior to his, and ever since, as far as I know, and there was no exception in his case whatsoever. Since the time it was voted that the Washington Academy of Surgery should make investigations on applications for general surgery I have never personally investigated an applicant and have always felt that the Academy was in a position to do it much better than I. I have never written any reference of any applicant, and the references, as well as the application, went to the Washington Academy of Surgery. Dr. Selders' application was on the regular form. We get about 150 to 200 applications for surgical privileges alone a year. Courtesy privileges, when granted, are for one year at George Washington. Along with Dr. Selders' application, in the course of a year, I sent 20 or 30 other applications to the Washington Academy of Surgery; other applications for surgical privileges were rejected, as it is nothing unusual to reject applications for surgical privileges. The question of membership in the local society has never come up in the consideration of an application, so far as I know. The matter of Dr. Selders' membership in any organization was not discussed. There was lots of publicity about the matter and I felt that Dr. Selders ought to have a square deal; I made it plain to the staff that their decision was to be purely on his professional qualifications. I don't remember seeing a questionnaire of Dr. Warfield's, and if I ever saw it I must have thrown it in the waste paper basket, for it made no impression on me, and no such questionnaire ever came before the staff of George Washington Hospital for action that I recall; and I have no recollection of ever acting on any such questionnaire. No action was ever taken on the so-called Mundt Resolution at any meeting I attended at George Washington Hospital, and such a matter never came before the staff for discussion. No motion ever came up for consideration by the staff to the effect that only members of the District Medical Society should be members of the staff of George Washington; as a matter of fact there are plenty of members of the staff who are not members of the District Medical Society, some 20 or 30, and there have been such for more than five years. I don't think that the staff at George Washington ever took any position whatsoever with reference to Group Health. I never heard Group Health discussed in the Society. When I voted upon the application of Dr. Selders I certainly did not vote for his rejection in an effort to restrain or break up Group Health. I voted to reject him purely on the report of the Washington Academy of Surgery in which I had the utmost confidence, believing they would give him a proper examination or investigation, and voted for nothing else, as I didn't know Dr. Selders, had never seen him, and I would reject any man that the Academy would not approve, even my own son.

Recross-examination.

Surgical applications are referred to the Washington Academy of Surgery because the Academy has a committee of ten men having affiliations with all the hospitals in Washington, and I believe that such a committee of ten could investigate a man better than a committee of one, which would be me, and we refer such applications to that committee as it is already set up, acting for all the hospitals in Washington, in an effort to get a standard board of examination. When the Washington Academy reports on an applicant simply as disapproved that is sufficient for our purposes, as we have complete confidence in the Washington Academy of Surgery and, hence, the hospital voted to accept their recommendation and our committee knew nothing of Dr. Selders except that the Washington Academy of Surgery had turned him down for undisclosed reasons.

Redirect examination.

At one meeting the committee turned down two men for privileges, one Dr. Allan E. Lee, who asked for general surgery and was disapproved, and the other was a member of the District Medical Society also seeking surgical privileges, both turned down because we did not think they were qualified to do general surgery.

Dr. Henry C. Macatee, a witness for the defendants,

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I have resided in the District since 1895. I have been a member of the Medical Society of the AMA since 1902. I have been a practicing physician in the District since 1901. I graduated from George Washington University in 1900, interned at Garfield from 1900 to 1901. In 1903 and 1904

I was superintendent of George Washington University Hospital. I am a member of the Society of Incorporators, of the Board of Directors, of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors, president of the Medical Staff, and ex officio chairman of the Advisory Committee of Garfield Hospital. The Board of Directors of Garfield is the governing board and is composed of about 18 or 20 laymen besides myself, Dr. Reichelderfer, and Dr. Lindsay. I have specialized in internal medicine since 1918.

In the middle of May, 1937, my attention was first directed to Group Health when I was invited to attend a meeting at the office of Dr. William Gerry Morgan. Prior to that I knew nothing whatever of Group Health. I went to the meeting, which was attended by Drs. Morgan, Christie, Groover, Colonel Glen I. Jones, and some medical officer of the Army whom I don't remember. Colonel Glen I. Jones was the speaker, giving information concerning Group Health. The next occasion of my obtaining information concerning Group Health was at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the District Medical Society on June 1, 1937. At that time I was a member of the Executive Committee. I was then and am now a delegate of the Medical Society to the A.M.A. From 1905 to 1920 I was recording secretary of the Medical Society; in 1921 I was president of the Society and, therefore, I was a member of the Executive Committee by election and was chairman for two or three years.

At the Executive Committee meeting of the Medical Society on June 1, 1937 there was a discussion concerning Group Health. Dr. Verbrycke made a report that he had obtained a copy of a prospectus of a mimeographed pamphlet describing the purposes and plan of operation of Group Health, marked "Confidential," which I had seen a few days previously at Dr. Verbrycke's and my own office. The minutes of June 1, 1937 substantially indicate what occurred at that meeting.

Defense counsel read from the minutes of the Executive Committee meeting of June 1, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 36) to the jury as follows:

"The Chairman, in addressing the meeting, said that the reason for calling the special meeting was on account of certain serious situations that had developed. The Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Veterans Bureau, the Soil Conservation Department, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had already undertaken the development of a plan for medical care of their employees. He had learned that the Home Owners Loan Corporation was attempting to get an appropriation from Congress"—

"He thought it was the duty of every member of the Society to contact their representatives with a view to blocking this effort. The idea was to get sufficient funds to finance a medical service plan. Briefly, the plan, according to his information, was that Dr. H. R. Brown is to be the Medical Director at $8,000 a year. Mr. Brown is now in the Veterans' Bureau in charge of the Tuberculosis Division. Government employees would pay a certain amount per annum from their income. The Chairman was under the impression that it would be impossible to get an injunction out against the procedure and that the only hope would be to hold off the adoption of the plan until the Medical Society could work out a substitute plan that would be less vicious. Dr. Thompson called on Dr. J. Russell Verbrycke, Jr., who had been very much interested in this subject.

Dr. Verbrycke said that he had heard of this plan and he had in his hand a prospectus, marked 'Confidential,' in which details had been very well worked out. He added that there were certainly some parts of the plan that would seem intriguing. He had written a letter to Dr. W. C. Woodward, which he stated was semi-official, in which he outlined the situation with a view to getting the opinion of the AMA headquarters. He then proceeded to read rather extensively from the prospectus at hand. This prospectus was to be known as the Group Health Association, Inc. Mr. William F. Penniman of 1869 Wyoming Avenue, N. W., is President; Mr. H. T. Berry, 3019 Rittenhouse Street, is Secretary. The Twentieth Century Foundation was beyond a doubt interested in this so-called Filene Association, and would in all probability help finance the project to get it started. It had been estimated that there were some 119,000 Government employees and that the expected sum to be obtained from these employees would amount to $1,750,000.00 per annum. It was contemplated to hire 80 physicians; their salaries would range from $3,000.00 to $12,000.00 per annum. They would not be allowed to do outside work. Briefly, the plan was to have an employee, whose income was $1,000.00 a year, contribute $40.00 a year for health service. If a man's income was $10,000.00, he would pay $400.00 a year. It is estimated that at the present time individuals pay from 4 to 5 percent of their income for medical care. One physician would take care of about 833 people. It was contemplated to have the wife and family of the Government employee included. The children would be on a sliding scale.

Colonel Glenn I. Jones, who was present by invitation, stated that he had been invited to a meeting of the Home Owners Loan Association which was organizing a plan for taking care of the health of its families. He stated frankly that he had been offered the general management of this organization. The conference he attended lasted 2½ hours. He promised then that he would attempt to draw up an organization chart. He first suggested a small clinic with physicians and consultants. He told them frankly that if the Medical Society of the District of Columbia disapproved their efforts that there would not be any available medical assistance which could be depended upon. He stated that he had consulted Drs. C. S. White, T. A. Groover, A. C. Christie, and also William Gerry Morgan. He learned that they were opposed to the entire proposition of the prepayment plan."

My statement is not fully represented in the minutes. What I actually said was that I had attended the meeting at Dr. Morgan's office, that I heard the statement made by Dr. Jones at that time and that it was obvious that much of our information was based on rumor; that the only concrete evidence about the plan was the prospectus; that the plan had not yet been fully organized; wasn't fully completed; wasn't ready to go into action. If and when it did go into action and came into conflict with the Medical Society in any way our attitude would have to be entirely predicated on our own organizational rules and regulations. That we might have to consider the question of contract practice; that in that case it might be necessary to discipline members if they entered into contracts or contract practice contrary to our regulations; that if the relations to hospitals were undesirable from a medical point of view our action would be limited to such influence which we might exert through our members, who were members of the medical staff of the hospital, but that we could not directly control the hospital for reasons well known to ourselves. The regulation I had in mind in speaking of contract practice was the one adopted in amended form in March 1937, Article IV, Section 5, which had been in the constitution since January, 1936. The adoption of that particular article had nothing whatsoever to do with Group Health, nor did the amendment thereto, adopted in March, 1937, for to my knowledge nobody in the Executive Committee had any information about Group Health in March, 1937, and I had none. In no discussion of the amendment by the Executive Committee was GHA ever mentioned. The object of the amendment was to provide the Society with a means of regulating its members with regard to contract practice insofar as the contract might be out of accord with ethical principles, and our conception of good public policy. The amendment was occasioned by a very disagreeable problem which arose in the District of Columbia, that had nothing whatever to do with Group Health, but rather had to do with a member and an industrial medical clinic formerly employing that member but which had summarily discontinued his services, and employed another member. The clinic was not Group Health and had been in operation prior to January, 1936. The June 1, 1937 meeting of the Executive Committee was held and the only action taken there was to authorize the appointment of a subcommittee to gather facts relative to Group Health for presentation to the Executive Committee for its guidance. Dr. McGovern was chairman of that subcommittee, the other members being Dr. Hooe, Dr. Templeton, Dr. Connolly, Dr. Davis, and Dr. Gill, Jr. I had no official connection with the subcommittee. The appointment of that committee was the only action taken by the Executive Committee at the June 1 meeting.

I discussed Group Health with some colleagues at the Atlantic City convention of the AMA in June, 1937, and with Dr. Woodward on several occasions, and made a brief report to the House of Delegates of what we had learned in Washington; it was received but no action was taken on it.

On June 21, 1937 the Executive Committee meeting of the Medical Society received the preliminary report of the fact-finding committee; Dr. McGovern reported for his committee that they had been diligently seeking information regarding Group Health and had been unable to obtain official information. I made a verbal report of my attendance at the AMA convention and my efforts to communicate these facts and rumors to the House of Delegates, and Dr. Verbrycke made a report, Dr. Verbrycke stating that from what information could be obtained, the movement as it appeared was not a drop in the bucket to what this movement might grow to; Mr. Ross Garrett appeared at the meeting with a great deal of information. Mr. Garrett is the administrator of the Health Security Administration, an eleemosynary institution for bringing contact between indigent and near-indigent patients with facilities for their medical care, in hospitals and dispensaries.

Q. Under whose supervision is it administered?

The Government objected on the ground of immateriality and was sustained, with exception noted.

Defense counsel read the minutes of the Executive Committee meeting of June 21, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 36) to the jury as follows:

"It was decided that it was only right that the Executive Committee should know all the facts and, therefore, Dr. Brown and Mr. Russell should appear before the Executive Committee and give all the facts."

"Mr. Garrett has emphasized that any action taken by the Society should be a matter of all haste as he had definite information that the material and wherewithal for setting up a medical care prepayment plan was definitely at hand. It was ascertained that the Government is allowing free time for the activities destined to bring a plan of medical care to Washington. No one seemed to be able to find out whether Dr. Brown and Mr. Russell were on the Government payroll. It was mentioned in this connection that with various New Deal projects workers were not always shown to be on the payroll but their source of income from the Government appeared unmistakably. Dr. Verbrycke at this point with a detailed plan that had been organized by the subcommittee as an acceptable substitute for the cooperative medical service plan.

"Dr. Verbrycke stated that he had sent by air mail an outline of the cooperative medical service plan to Dr. W. C. Woodward, and requested that Dr. Woodward meet with him in Washington. Every effort was made by Dr. Woodward to ascertain who was financing the project. He met with little success with his inquiries.

"It was stated that Dr. H. C. Macatee at the meeting of the House of Delegates in Atlantic City, outlined the plan that was all ready for trial in Washington. It seemed as though the attitude was:

" 'We are sorry; we have no solution; you work it out.' "

The plan referred to was a report made by the committee on economics, Dr. Verbrycke, chairman, in which the salient principles of some cooperative plan might be considered by the Medical Society to offer to the public. The minutes of June 21, 1937 show the following action:

"The Secretary made a motion that a special meeting of the Executive Committee be held on the evening of Wednesday, June 23rd, and that Dr. Henry Rolfe Brown be informed that his presence would be welcomed; also the presence of any of his conferees.

This motion was seconded and in the discussion the question of executive session on that evening was brought out. It was decided that this could be worked out afterwards. This motion was adopted."

The minutes do not convey the spirit of what I said on that occasion. I said substantially what I said on a previous occasion in which I stated that the record would have to be qualified by my conviction that so far as the Medical Society itself could proceed in this or any similar circumstance, it would have to be limited by its own constitution and by-laws, and what it could do under the constitution and by-laws in disciplining its members if they should become involved adversely with any provision of the constitution and by-laws, and that so far as hospitals were concerned, we should only exert an influence through our own members so far as that might go.

Defense counsel read from the minutes of the Executive Committee meeting of June 21, 1937 (Gov. Ex.. 36) as follows:

"Dr. H. C. Macatee, in addressing the meeting, stated that the Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association had been amended at the meeting in Atlantic City so that the interpretation of the free choice of physicians would be broadened with the idea of adjusting itself to the various compensation laws. He then recited some of the details of his attempts to bring to the House of Delegates the important situation that now confronts the profession in Washington. It was not until Thursday, the last session of the Delegates, that he was able to bring the matter on the floor, and as stated scant attention was given to it. Details of Senator Lewis' presentation to the House of Delegates were given. It appeared that the Senator had come before the House of Delegates with the knowledge and approval of the Nation's Chief Executive. He let it be known that the President was sympathetic with the American Medical Association and its motives, and he, Lewis, wanted to be advised as to just what the profession wanted done. The Kopetzky set of resolutions were definitely tied in with a conference"——

Mr. Lewin: The part that you are reading now—does not that refer to something else that is not germane to this case?

Mr. Kelleher: And is not in evidence, either.

Mr. Leahy: Oh, yes; it is all in evidence (resuming reading):

"The Kopetzky set of resolutions were definitely tied in with a conference that had been held at the White House last April, at which Miss Esther Everett Lape and other socially inclined members of the profession were present. Specifically, representatives of the American Medical Association were excluded. In effect Kopetzky's series of resolutions, after going to a reference committee, were in essence similar to what was given two years ago to the plan sometimes known as the Washington Plan presented by Dr. Macatee. In effect the American Medical Association had accumulated considerable data and these data were available to the various state societies and to the workers in the United States Government. The plan from New York was predicated on the principle that care of the sick indigent was a taxpayers' problem; that the doctor should be paid for taking care of them, further that hospitals should be financed by the Government and that no longer would there be many hospitals in bad financial straits; further, the Government would subsidize scientific investigations of various hospitals.

Dr. Macatee, in summary, stated that two ways available in combatting or controlling any such scheme as recently proposed in Washington might probably be handled (1) through disciplining our own members who undertook to participate and (2) the possibility of doing something to recalcitrant hospitals through pressure on their staffs. He mentioned the various cooperative plans that were now in force, that the Ross-Loos plan of California and various county societies had through their medical societies handled the situation. There was now a bill before the legislature in the State of Wisconsin that would definitely prevent any interference with doctors who were members of societies in their activities in any scheme of socialized medicine. In other words, the societies would be prohibited by law to discipline their members."

Dr. Brown and Mr. Russell were invited to appear on June 23rd but actually appeared on June 24, 1937, i. e., Dr. Brown, Mr. Penniman and Mr. Zimmerman came on that date.

Defense counsel read from the minutes of the District fair transcript of what occurred.

I am not going to take the time, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, to read all of this; it is too much. There are some portions which I would like to bring to your attention, more particularly a statement by Dr. Conklin which was given toward the end of the meeting, as well also as a statement by Dr. Groover (reading)

"DR. CONKLIN"—

This is toward the end of the meeting——

"I think that all of us present tonight appreciate just what these gentlemen have done. They have been kind enough, good enough, to come down and meet with us. They have answered all of our questions and have not denied us at all, no matter what their own personal feelings may have been concerning some of it. We are primarily interested in the patient's welfare. That has been demonstrated time and time again in this country and throughout the United States. I am wondering if they would accept a committee of three of the Medical Society to meet with them with a view of making presentations as clearly as possible of the Medical Society's attitude primarily toward this particular proposition from the viewpoint of the patient primarily. I wonder if that would be acceptable. I have no authority to say that the Medical Society would appoint such a committee, but if that would be acceptable to the Medical Society, do you gentlemen think you would accept a proposition of that kind?

Dr. Brown: A further meeting to elucidate certain questions?

Dr. Conklin: I am sure there are certain ideas that definitely seem to be fixed. There is a possibility in further conference with three representatives of the Medical Society who would go down to the Home Owners Loan Corporation and talk these things over and see whether or not some alternative proposition will operate that would be acceptable to some eight hundred practicing physicians here in the District of Columbia. I would think it would be a wonderful thing."

Mr. Lewin: Will you read what Dr. Brown said?

Mr. Leahy: Oh, surely (reading): "Dr. Brown. Our objectives are identical with those you have expressed. We have no objections to meeting any committee of three.

The Chairman: To confer with their own committee if they would like to have such a meeting.

We have a board of trustees, said Mr. Penniman. It might not be a bad idea to have as many men as they want to discuss the thing further. There is no question that other units in the Government are going to undertake the same thing.

Dr. Conklin: If we may have a definite assurance of tentative acceptance of this plan, I think your coming down has been just the most successful thing with a view to definite harmony. I think that is what we want. We want to see these men and greet these men and have them certainly not fighting organized medicine, because I think any doctor who attempts to do that is doomed to failure. We want to have this committee of three representatives meet with you and talk these things over with a possibility of making some little rearrangement wherein we can come before our entire membership and present this thing and recommend adoption.

Dr. Brown: We are anxious for cooperative intercourse. We would be glad to have you consider those plans.

Mr. Penniman: I want to say what I should have said and would have liked to have said at the outset. Reversing the words of Shakespeare, I came down here with the idea of praising Caesar, not burying him. I have the most profound respect for the medical profession, always have had and always will have. It is the desire of this Association to work to the ultimate end that we may give our employees medical care—I speak not as an official of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, but as one of the employees—medical service of the highest type within their ability to pay and to solicit at every point of view possible the full cooperation of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia. Glad to have it. I would like to make a suggestion. Since we have a board of trustees consisting of eleven employees of the Corporation who have been elected by the employees, if you would be good enough to drop us a line so we can put it clearly to the board, your point of view, I am safe in saying that it would meet with a ready response.

Dr. Conklin: You mean, the point of view as to this committee of three?

Mr. Penniman: Yes."

And at that time Mr. Penniman and Dr. Brown and Mr. Zimmerman left the meeting. Then following a suggestion on the part of the chairman, after those three had retired:

(Reading further):

"The chairman said he would welcome a motion to the effect that a copy of these minutes be sent to the active membership so they would know what was going on. It was his opinion that 90 per cent of the membership knew nothing about this plan."

Then follow pages of discussion back and forth upon a motion, and finally, after expressions by Ruffin, Bennett, Hooe, and Schoenfeld, and I don't know how many more, there was a motion.

A proposition was adopted at that meeting finally, and a committee including part of the old committee was appointed for that purpose. I served as a member of that committee. On July 26, 1937 I went down to talk with the board of trustees of Group Health. That committee reported to a meeting of the Executive Committee on July 12, 1937. The minutes of that meeting (Gov. Ex. 37) is a fair transcript of what occurred.

Defense counsel read excerpts from the minutes of the Executive Committee meeting of July 12, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) as follows:

"Dr. F. X. McGovern, Chairman of the subcommittee that was appointed to confer with representatives from the Group Health Association, Inc., was recognized and made a motion that his report be given preference over the other agenda for this meeting and that it be heard at this time. It was duly seconded and adopted.

For the information of the new members of the Executive Committee Dr. McGovern outlined the prepayment medical care plan that has been set up by the Home Owners Loan Corporation, stating that the Executive Committee had appointed a subcommittee to meet with the committee on Medical Economics to study the prospectus and bring a report back to this committee. A report which was prepared by Dr. J. Russell Verbrycke, who was then the chairman of the committee on Medical Economics, was approved in principle by the Executive Committee at a subsequent meeting. Since that time the subcommittee has met and studied and reviewed supplementary plans by Dr. Verbrycke which Dr. McGovern offered as a report of the Executive Committee tonight.

Dr. H. C. Macatee interpolated for the information of the new members of the Executive Committee that upon the adoption in principle of the report of the subcommittee, the subcommittee was given instructions to negotiate on the basis of the report with the Medical Service Corporation, and this supplementary report is now made to gain alternative instructions.

Dr. McGovern, in answer to why the subcommittee had not met with the Group Health Association representatives up to this time, said that his committee did not feel that it was ready to meet until it had something concrete to offer. He stated that within the past week Dr. Olin West, Secretary of the American Medical Association, was in the city and met with the committee and it was felt that very important information was obtained through this meeting. He added that he had a telegram from Dr. West stated Doctors W. C. Woodward and R. G. Leland, the latter Director of the Bureau of Medical Economics of the American Medical Association, would be in Washington Wednesday morning of this week."

Then other members spoke, including Dr. Templeton and Dr. Sprigg and Dr. Hooe, and then Dr. McGovern again. Dr. Ruffin spoke, and Dr. McGovern added that his committee "did not know just what the attitude of the Executive Committee of the Society would be, whether to fight this thing with the weapons at hand or possibly set up an organization to combat it. The committee felt that some definite instructions should be given along that line."

Then follow talks by various members of the committee, and Dr. Macatee spoke and said that he had talked to a patient who was an attorney in the Corporation, and he said it could be done perfectly legally, and that if his recollection was correct the papers had gone over this attorney's desk and they could do anything not contrary to the law or the Constitution for the benefit of their employees. (Reading further):

"With respect to the duties of the subcommittee Dr. Macatee pointed out that according to the letter which was addressed to the members of Group Health Association it was clear that at least one medical man had made a contact with the Group and that they are on the verge of going into action. It had been thought by the subcommittee that we could probably go before the trustees and we could ask them what their prospectus meant when it said that they wished to enter into the fullest cooperation with the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, to ask for representation on their board in an advisory capacity and they wished to do their work in a harmonious way. We thought we might say to the board of trustees that the Medical Society had looked upon the organization with some concern."

The point was raised as to whether the subscribers would not, in the long run, have the free choice of physicians, and whether they understood that as soon as some grave medical problem arose among the employees they would follow the usual human instinct and say, "We don't want these hired men; we want the best", whether that would be disruptive of the whole plan, whether in view of those facts or other facts they might not feel that the principle of organized medicine, that the free choice of a physician is essential to the success of a[illegible]y proposition, and whether they might convey something looking to the entire medical profession of the District as a source of the medical and surgical services needed. (Reading further):

"If they could consider that we would be glad to take it up with the Medical Society and see what could be worked out. It is for this committee to decide whether it is likely that any good will come from such a meeting."

There followed discussions by the secretary, Dr. Ruffin, Dr. Hooe, and then the motion which theretofore had been offered was withdrawn. (Reading further):

"Dr. Ruffin made a motion that the subcommittee be instructed to meet with the Home Owners Loan Corporation representatives to be addressed by Dr. Macatee along the lines discussed and bring a report back as promptly as possible to the Executive Committee with a view to a meeting of the Medical Society. Seconded and carried."

There followed a good deal of other talk with reference to other matters which are not germane to the point here.

In pursuance of the motion made by Dr. Ruffin, I personally addressed the Board of Trustees of the HOLC along the lines discussed. This was on July 26, 1937.

Q. There is a matter contained in the minutes of the meeting of July 12 which I would like to have you explain, please, and that—I think I am right in my memory—is with reference to a supposed or a so-called approved list or White List. Do you know to what I refer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Am I correct in saying that this matter also came before the attention of the meeting on July 12?

A. It did.

Q. Do you recall, Doctor, at what date, if any, any authorization was made to prepare an approved list which has been called a White List?

A. That was incorporated in the constitutional amendment adopted in March, 1937, in which the Executive Committee was charged with the duty of preparing such a list.

Q. Do you recall whether anybody upon the Executive Committee had been working upon the list from the date in March when authorization therefor was made?

A. There was a subcommittee, of which Dr. McGovern was either chairman or a member, which was working on that duty.

Q. I ask you, Doctor, if the preparation of an approved list had anything whatsoever to do with Group Health Association?

A. Nothing whatsoever.

Q. I will ask you further what the approved list resulted from as an activity of the District Medical association?

A. It resulted from a hearing on a complaint by the Executive Committee against an industrial clinic which, in turn, resulted in the original adoption of Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5, which was amended in March, 1937.

Q. Do you recall, Doctor, whether or not any legal advice had been sought by the Society with reference to the amendment of this approved list?

Mr. Lewin: I object to that, may it please the court, as totally irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial.

The Court: What was the question?

Mr. Leahy: I asked the Doctor whether he recalled, with reference to this approved list, and also the amendment in March, under which the approved list was authorized, any advice of counsel had been sought and, if so, from whom?

The Court: Is that the White List?

Mr. Leahy: Yes, sir.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Leahy: May we approach the bench for just a moment, if your Honor please?

The Court: Yes.

(Counsel for both sides approached the bench and conferred with the court in a low tone of voice as follows:)

The Court: It is the same old question, isn't it?

Mr. Leahy: No, your Honor. This is on a different matter. I want to call the lawyers to corroborate the fact that the preparation of the White List had nothing to do with GHA; no question about the legality or illegality of it.

The Court: You mean, someone to corroborate what the witness is saying?

Mr. Leahy: Yes.

Mr. Lewin: He has not been permitted to say that, though.

The Court: I do not think his advice about it is of any importance. You may ask if there was an attorney present who heard what went on.

Mr. Lewin: That was on July 12?

Mr. Leahy: No; in March.

The Court: You want to corroborate this witness. His advice does not have anything to do with it.

Mr. Leahy: I will call him later on——

Mr. Lewin: Wait a moment, now. As I understand it, the facts are these, that you had a lawyer advising him back in the early part of 1937, but at the time the White List was prepared and issued, that was on July 12.

Mr. Leahy: It was authorized in March of 1937.

Mr. Lewin: The preparation of a list was authorized; that is right. That is the legal advice?

Mr. Leahy: I want to show that the preparation of the list had no connection with GHA whatsoever.

Mr. Lewin: But you cannot do that by saying that the constitution had nothing to do with it. They used the constitution on July 12, right there in that very meeting.

The Court: Whether they were advised by counsel I hold to be immaterial and irrelevant, and the objection is sustained.

Mr. Leahy: What I wanted to ask, your Honor, was this question: Were any attorneys present at that time? If there were, who were they? And that is all. I am not going to ask him for anything else, under your Honor's ruling.

The Court: What is the basis of that?

Mr. Leahy: Because I want the attorneys to show that the authorization of the White List had nothing whatsoever to do with GHA, that GHA did not enter into the picture. I want to corroborate the witness.

Mr. Lewin: The White List was issued July 12, 1937. It could not have any bearing upon why they left Group Health off the White List in July.

Mr. Leahy: It shows that the White List which was issued in July was not in reference to GHA at all.

The Court: If you can show that the questions leading up to the adoption of the White List occurred at some earlier period when GHA was not under discussion at all, that is all right; but I do not see what attorneys have got to do with it.

Mr. Leahy: I just want to identify those people who were there, so I can call the people who were there.

The Court: I am not going to have any advice of counsel in this. I do not see it, myself. It seems to me that the way to get at it is, as I suggested, to show that the origin of the thing was something else than GHA.

Mr. Leahy: That is what I was trying to get at.

The Court: I think you have a perfect right to show the history of the legislation as it developed, as showing the object and intent and purpose of it, and the background that brought it about, or to exclude the GHA as the motivating object of it, don't you see. What I am indicating is that I do not see where the advice of counsel gets into it in any way. So, whatever you do, do it with that in mind.

Mr. Leahy: I will, surely.

The Court: I can pass on individual questions a little better, but do not put questions which would be contrary to my conception of this thing. That is what I have in mind. If you do feel you want to put them, I think you had better come up here first.

Mr. Leahy: I will put a question which I have in mind, in some form to bring out this answer. I would ask the question, Were there any attorneys present in March of 1937 when this amendment and the authorization to prepare an approved list was adopted?

Mr. Lewin: And we enter an objection to that.

Mr. Leahy: Following that, Who were they?

The Court: Then what?

Mr. Leahy: That is all.

The Court: What is the purpose of it?

Mr. Leahy: The purpose is this: I think it is strongly indicative that this had nothing to do with GHA. We can show that for a year they had advice of counsel in order to meet another situation, and counsel advised them that this could be adopted under that other situation.

The Court: I do not think the advice of counsel has anything to do with it. The question is whether there were other objects which brought about the consideration of such action. It does not make any difference what advice they were given by lawyers about it or whether they consulted lawyers. The thing which I think you have a perfect right to do is to show the historical background of this resolution or constitutional amendment, whatever it was, which will eliminate GHA as the object of its enactment. (Addressing the jury): It is a little early, but I will let the jury go out now. Maybe you can get a little longer recess to make up for this morning.

I of course do not want anything to occur that will impinge upon my main ruling of the other day, because I considered that carefully, and I feel that I am right about it and I think I ought to see that it is carried out.

Frankly, as you state the matter to me, I do not see what projecting lawyers into the matter has to do with it, because certainly I will not permit anything in the nature of disclosures of either the advice or the approval of counsel about such matters. I will give you sufficient leeway to trace out the origin and history of this so-called legislative matter up to the point of its adoption in any way you can which excludes GHA as its object and intent.

Mr. Leahy: I will try to state it if I can. The purpose of asking the question as to whether attorneys were present in connection with the formulation of the amendment is in order to elicit information that the amendment had no connection with GHA; and then, when the attorneys can be called to corroborate the testimony of the witness, they would testify, not for the purpose of showing whether it was good or bad, lawful or unlawful, but merely that their advice was sought with reference to the formulation of the amendment in a manner entirely distinct from and unrelated to GHA.

That was my only purpose. So that if Mr. Flannery is put on the stand, I can ask him, "Mr. Flannery, was there anything said to you about GHA and did you give advice as to the amendment?"

The Court: Mr. Flannery was not present at the meeting, was he?

Mr. Leahy: I think he was present at the Executive Committee meeting.

Mr. Lewin: I can check for you, but I do not think so; at least it does not appear in the minutes that he was present.

Mr. Leahy: I would not know one way or the other. I might be wrong.

Mr. Lewin: My impression is that the subcommittee, back in the fall of 1936, had employed Mr. Flannery and Mr. Wheatley.

Mr. Leahy: Yes.

Mr. Richardson: Does the court intend to permit the Government to raise any question as to the motive back of this amendment to the constitution?

The Court: This is the White List. That is one of the actions they rely on to show conspiracy, I assume. It would not make any difference, as I pointed out, what the motives are. You have the question of intent, and intent, of course, would encompass the factual background that brought about the enactment of the resolution for the amendment.

Mr. Richardson: With reference to attorneys, it had to start with the inauguration of the enactment of Section 5 out of which grew the White List, because that was promulgated under Section 5. If any question whatever is to be raised in this case as to the promulgation of the constitutional provision, whatever the purpose was, then it seems to me that the proof must be pretty broad.

The Court: I think that if Mr. Flannery was present at a meeting at which it was under discussion or in which action was taken, he might, of course, for the purpose of narrating the occurrences in that meeting, be a witness the same as anyone else. But if he was merely consulted by some member or agent of the Association in connection with the matter, then he is not relating anything he knows; he is relating only what he has heard. I cannot see the relevancy of it except for the one thing of detailing the occurrences leading up to the enactment of the resolution itself, if they are material. But I do not think they are material except as they go into the factual basis for it.

Mr. Leahy: I agree with you on that.

Mr. Lewin: I was going to make this observation. The mere fact that a provision of the constitution may have been lawfully passed, or passed for some particular reason —I have no doubt that the constitution of the Medical Society was not passed to hit Group Health, but we claim that acting under that constitution they issued this list which cut Group Health off.

Mr. Richardson: Would you concede that Section 5 was enacted without any such intent?

The Court: If you contend that the resolution was an overt act passed with the intention and for the purpose of carrying out this conspiracy, then of course they have a right to go into the intent and to show that it was passed for other purposes. There is no question about that.

Mr. Lewin: Our contention is that it was the first use made of it.

The Court: If you disclaim any such intention and say it was passed for a proper purpose but it was nevertheless put to an improper purpose, that is another thing.

Mr. Lewin: But I cannot quite go that far, because I think it was passed for an illegal boycott against any outfit they did not like.

The Court: If they can show otherwise, they have a right to show it; but they cannot show it in the way Mr. Leahy suggests. That is simply hearsay and goes merely to motive rather than to intent. I am not going to permit that.

Mr. Richardson: It seems to me that you have opened the door if you charge that what was done under it was done for one purpose, and the defendants charge it was done for an entirely different purpose.

The Court: You can take a perfectly lawful act of an organization and divert its use to unlawful purposes.

Mr. Leahy: Certainly.

Mr. Richardson: It becomes a question of fact, though, whether or not it is for an unlawful purpose.

The Court: For the purposes of this question, if it can be disposed of in that way, you may consider whether or not you are willing to admit that this constitutional provision originated and was enacted for other purposes than GHA.

Mr. Lewin: If I could state what I thought those purposes were and put that into a stipulation I would be willing to go along on that. If the explanation of this comes in, I think I am entitled to go into the minutes to show that they were warned that this would be a boycott and be an illegal one against anybody who fell within the terms of it.

Mr. Richardson: It is a direct attack on the legality of Section 5, then.

Mr. Lewin: No; intent.

The Court: Certainly if they attempted to show that they were acting upon the advice that it was lawful, you have a right to show the contrary. But I am inclined to think that this matter of belief as to the lawfulness of the act is excluded. I cannot see anything so far in this case, as I pointed out in my memorandum, to justify it. There is a very, very narrow field of the criminal law that permits that sort of proof. It is very narrow. Exception noted.

Defense counsel read from the minutes of the Executive Committee meeting of July 12, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) as follows:

"Dr. McGovern stated that he requested the various county medical societies in Virginia and Maryland, within 10 miles of the District of Columbia, to send him a list of their membership. He was not very successful by letter and intended to contact the secretaries personally. He added that there were a few physicians practicing medicine in the District of Columbia who were not on the rolls of the Society. The Society's office was busy at the present time checking the list of physicians and surgeons as classified in the newest telephone directory and the Commission on Licensure has been approached to obtain a list of all licentiates in the District of Columbia.

The Chairman, Dr. Sprigg, stated that he requested a list of the licentiates and the Society's office was informed that the records of the Commission on Licensure would be available if the Society could supply clerical help to type the list.

Dr. McGovern read a proposed list of approved organizations, groups and individuals.

Dr. Macatee suggested that the words 'employed by' be substituted for the words 'connected with' in item 10. With this change the list was approved, upon motion, duly seconded and adopted, as follows:

1. All members of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

2. Medical staffs of all hospitals, institutions and clinics, each member of which has been approved by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

3. The United States Government Medical Personnel on duty in the District of Columbia, or within 10 miles thereof, i.e., the United States Army, Navy, Public Health Service, and the Veterans' Administration.

4. The Health Officer and attached medical personnel.

5. Membership of the District of Columbia Dental Society.

6. Membership of the Homeopathic Medical Society.

7. Members of the Montgomery County (Md.), Prince Georges County (Md.), Fairfax County (Va.), and Arlington County (Va.) Medical Societies, who reside within 10 miles of the District of Columbia.

8. Members of the Alexandria Medical Society.

9. The following compensation clinics: Farragut Medical Clinic, operated by Frank E. Gantz; First Aid Station, operated by Arch L. Riddick; Harry M. Lewis Clinic, operated by Harry M. Lewis; Market Compensation Accident Clinic, operated by M. J. Kossow; Northeast Insurance Clinic, operated by G. Henry Rawson; Union Market Workmen's Compensation Clinic, operated by Maxwell Hurston; Washington Industrial Accident Clinic operated by Edward Clark Morse; Washington Medical Building Workmen's Clinic, operated by Charles S. White.

10. All medical personnel employed by the Federal or Municipal Governments within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof.

11. Membership of the Medico-Chirurgical Society (colored medical society).

12. Membership of the Robert T. Freeman Dental Society (colored dental society).

Dr. Raymond T. Holden, Jr., inquired as to the personnel (medical) of the proposed Group Health Association, Inc.

Dr. Hooe pointed out that it was a separate individual corporation and would have to be approved as a single unit. As a matter of information, Dr. Hooe would inquire if he was right in the assumption that this approved list would not have to be submitted to the Society but from tonight on would be filed in the Secretary's Office for reference."

Then follows certain discussions with reference to that by Dr. Hooe, the Secretary and Dr. Ruffin.

"Dr. Macatee said he understood that the list as read by Dr. McGovern was not a complete list. Was it to be assumed that when it was added to that another registered letter would have to be mailed to 900 or more members?

Dr. Hooe said that there were a good many fine men who were not members of the Medical Society, such as Drs. Henry R. Elliott, R. J. Kemp, and others. When these individual names were obtained they would be submitted by Dr. McGovern to the Executive Committee for approval.

Dr. Hooe's motion, with amendment by the Secretary was duly adopted."

I meant, when I stated that the approved list as read by Dr. McGovern was not a complete list, that Dr. McGovern had a great deal of difficulty in formulating a complete list because of incomplete information from the surrounding counties and incomplete information from our own District. The approved list as it came before the Executive Committee on July 12, 1937, did not have anything whatsoever to do with the approval or disapprovel of Group Health because Group Health was not at a stage of development where it had asked for approval or where approval could be given; the Executive Committee at that time did not have sufficient information about Group Health to approve or disapprove it.

The approved list had been directed to be prepared in March of 1937. The approved list was mailed, as directed by the Executive Committee, to each member of the Medical Society. I do not recall that there was any direction of the Executive Committee that the list should be mailed also to the hospitals. Nothing occurred at the meeting of July 12, 1937, that is not recorded in the minutes of that date. The list was mailed on July 29, 1937.

Following the meeting of July 12 the subcommittee of the Executive Committee met with the Board of Trustees of Group Health on July 26. Drs. McGovern, Conklin, Verbrycke, Groover and Templeton and I were there. Dr. Groover is now deceased. We met in a large room at the office of the HOLC. I discussed with the Board of Trustees of Group Health the questions pertaining to it, and the attitude of the District Medical Society thereto.

Following the meeting a report was made to the Executive Committee on July 27, 1937, and then a report was made from the Executive Committee to the Medical Society on July 29, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37). The transcript of the meeting (Gov. Ex. 10) prepared by stenographers of the HOLC records what was said at the meeting on July 26 surprisingly well.

Defense counsel read part of Gov. Ex. 10 to the jury.

Following the meeting of July 26, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 10), no further or additional information about Group Health was ever voluntarily given us that I know of.

With reference to the suggestions that I brought to the attention of the Board of Trustees of Group Health, particularly the questions to be answered as to the legality of Group Health, the Medical Society received no further communications from Group Health of any kind or character.

The minutes of the Executive Committee meeting of July 27, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) is a record of that meeting.

Defense counsel read from the minutes of Executive Committee meeting of July 27, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) as follows:

"A special meeting of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, held Tuesday evening, July 27, 1937, at 8 p. m.

"Dr. F. X. McGovern, chairman of the subcommittee that had been appointed to make contact with the Home Owners Loan Corporation medical unit, was called upon to make a report. He opened his remarks by stating that pursuant to recommendations made at the last special meeting of the Executive Committee he had prepared a letter which was sent to Mr. William F. Penniman in which letter request was made for copies of (1) contract of the Home Owners Loan Corporation; (2) adopted constitution and by-laws; (3) form or forms of applications for membership, and (4) any form of contract or agreement setting forth the service to be rendered to employees and their dependents.

"Dr. McGovern stated that Mr. Penniman had not given him a written answer but had called him up and asked that he have luncheon with him at the Raleigh Hotel. On this occasion he frankly stated that he would give responses to the questions asked in the registered letter that had been received, but copy of contract asked for he said he would have to refuse to exhibit. He thought the Medical Society's asking to see this contract was quite similar to going into Garfinckel's department store and asking them to show the contract they had with some firm with which they were doing business. Dr. McGovern then proceeded to read the prepared report as follows:

"'Known facts in re the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

"'1. Corporation, Group Health Association, Inc.

"'2. In Home Owners Loan Corporation with which it had a contract.

"'3. Mr. W. F. Penniman is president, Mr. R. T. Berry is secretary-treasurer. Dr. Henry Rolf E. Brown is medical director.

"'4. Instituted presumably to give medical care, complete, to any and all members of the HOLC who may care to join it.

"'5. Non-profit voluntary prepayment insurance organization.

"'6. Must be in some way related, possibly by contract, to Home Loan Bank Board.

"'7. President, Mr. Penniman, avoided replying by letter to an official letter from the Society to him.

"'8. Mr. Penniman refused to give your committee a list of physicians employed by the corporation.

"'9. Articles of incorporation so worded that all Federal Employees except Army and Navy may belong.

"'10. President, while he states that purpose of the corporation is to provide medical service to low-income individuals, at the same time admits that the constitution and by-laws do not establish any income level.

"'11. Invites attention to many other similar organizations in existence throughout the country and claims they do the job better than would otherwise be done.

"'12. The lay members of the board of directors sincerely believe that they are performing a needed helpful and humanitarian function for their employees and apparently are firmly convinced that nothing that they are doing is in conflict with the established ethical principles of organized medicine.

"'13. Dr. Brown is a physician recently retired from the Veterans Bureau and is being paid a good, under the circumstances, salary as Medical Director. Licensed in the District May 21, 1937.

"'14. Whereas the officers of the Corporation express a desire to cooperate with the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, it is a fact that in the beginning and at all times there has been no real effort made to apprise the Medical Society of the District of Columbia of what they were undertaking. They have not considered officially the Medical Society of the District of Columbia during the formative stage of their organization. On the contrary there seems to have been a desire to keep the matter confidential.

"'15. Meeting with officials of the American Medical Association on two separate occasions convinces us that the national organization is keenly interested in the whole affair and is solicitous as to how we will consider its relation to us locally and what policy the Medical Society of the District of Columbia will adopt in regard to it.

"'16. What might be done.

"'1. Consider it unethical.

"'2. Control our own members in terms of the ethical requirements of our own constitution and by-laws.

"'3. Offer a substitute plan of our own.

"'4. Cope with the situation in the courts in terms of the local healing arts practice act.

"'17. Your committee met with the board of directors of Group Health Association, Inc. The attitude of organized medicine in regard to the medical ethics in matters of this kind was fully presented to them. Quotations were read to them from the code of ethics of the American Medical Association and other relevant facts were presented. The only reply was made by a Mr. Loomis, member of the board of directors, to the effect that he hoped that the Medical Society would see fit to withhold final judgment until Group Health Association, Inc. had been in actual operation a sufficient length of time to practically demonstrate its purpose and its relation to the community and to the medical profession of the District of Columbia.'

"Dr. H. C. Macatee elucidated the various points that had been brought up before the Home Owners Loan Corporation committee on the preceding evening at its home on the 8th floor of the old Acacia Building, First and Indiana Avenue, Northwest. He cited particularly a statement by one of the officers to the effect that if and when the project became large enough to include all of the Government workers of the city of Washington, that is, its scope raised to the nth degree, quoting him exactly, there would be room enough for all of the physicians practicing in Washington, and it was freely intimated that they all could be placed presumably on a salary basis, working for the project.

"Dr. Macatee, in continuing, read an excerpt from the latest issue of the Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association, having to do with the definition of free choice of physicians, as follows:

"'The phrase "free choice of physicians" as applied to contract practice is defined to mean that degree of freedom in choosing a physician which can be exercised under usual conditions of employment between patient and physician when no third party had a valid interest to intervene. The intervention of a third party who has a valid interest and who intervenes does not per se cause a contract to be unethical. A "valid interest" is one where, by law or necessity, a third party is legally responsible either for cost of care or for indemnity. "Intervention" is the voluntary assumption of partial or full financial responsibility for medical care. Intervention shall not proscribe endeavor by component or constituent medical societies to maintain high quality of service rendered by members serving under approved sickness service agreements between such societies and governmental boards or bureaus and approved by the respective societies.'

"The ambiguity of the situation was immediately apparent.

"Dr. Macatee said that he certainly did not read this at the time of the meeting with the H.O.L.C. unit. He did, however, read on that occasion extensively from the Principles of Medical Ethics under which the medical profession is bound, showing that the project as at present constituted could not be expected to be approved by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, the local unit of the American Medical Association.

"Dr. Macatee was rather inclined to think that there should be no hasty action taken at this time and he would recommend that the four possible solutions as prepared by the subcomittee be not read before the Medical Society. He too thought that it might be possible to bring some accord with the Group Health Association."

Then in connection with the visit of Dr. Woodward and Dr. Leland the minutes record as follows:

"The secretary explained just what had been suggested by Drs. William C. Woodward and R. G. Leland at the time of their visit. It would seem that Dr. Woodward would advise quo warranto proceedings, which proceedings would require a district attorney or United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, who at least was not hostile, that the suit would be filed in his name. He saw many difficulties in following this up. Dr. Leland had given a sketchy verbal outline of a plan whereby a pool of money should be created and this could be built up by either the people in the lower income brackets or even in the higher brackets, and from this pool the care of the sick could be financed."

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. Doctor, did you state that the report was finally made to the District Medical Society a couple of days later?

A. I did; July 29, 1937.

Q. I am going to show you on page 34 a motion and ask you if you can identify that for us and explain what it is.

However, I should conclude the paragraph which I just read with reference to Dr. Woodward and Dr. Leland and their visit (reading):

"The secretary stated that the very next morning after the meeting he wrote to Dr. Leland asking for full details of this plan. Up to date he had received no reply. The secretary opined that the American Medical Association authorities certainly did not have any definite knowledge as to how to proceed in combating the situation that was confronting the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

"The secretary said he was quite sure that he was in accord with everything that Dr. Reed wanted passed. He would make two motions if acceptable to Dr. Reed:

"1. That a special meeting of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia be called for Thursday, July 29, 1937, at 8 p. m.

"2. That a recommendation be made that the president of the Society appoint a special committee to consider the entire matter with a view to bringing accord, if possible, with Group Health Association, Inc.

"In view of the fact that many of the members thought that report should be made back to the Executive Committee Dr. Reed's motion was finally made to the effect that the Chairman of the Executive Committee appoint three of its members to act as a subcommittee, they to add two members of their selection from the Society at large for the purpose of further studying Group Health Association, Inc., with a view of bringing back to the Executive Committee a solution concerning what the Society's attitude should be toward Group Health Association, Inc. and to report to the Executive Committee at its next regular meeting. A motion was made concerning the registered letter that was to be sent out."

That was to a list of organizations, groups and individuals. It was seconded and adopted.

The minutes of the special meeting of the Medical Society of July 29, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) set forth the transactions of that meeting.

Defense counsel read from the minutes of July 29, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) as follows:

I am not going to repeat the report which I just read to you as the report of Dr. McGovern to the Executive Committee, which contains what he considered to be and stated as the known facts, some sixteen, which the committee at that time knew about G.H.A. The Executive Committee presented its report, and I am not going to reread that. Then there was discussion by Dr. Thompson, Dr. Hooe, Dr. Sprigg, and then Dr. McGovern was called upon to discuss the question. He stated (reading):

"that he was the chairman of the subcommittee of the Executive Committee that investigated this matter thus far. He brought out the fact that the purpose of this meeting tonight was to inform the membership of the situation and to familiarize them with the facts obtained to date with an idea of turning it over in the minds of the membership and arriving at some conclusion as to how the Society should act in the matter. He felt that it was apparent from the report that the Group Health Association was not willing to 'come clean.' It was specifically stated that Mr. Penniman, its president, refused to comply in writing to an official communication addressed to him from the Society. In that letter four specific requests were made: that they submit copy of any contract they may have between the Group Health Association and the Home Owners Loan Corporation with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board; copy of their constitution and by-laws; and any contract that may be in existence in relation to the members of this corporation; and any other matter that would be of importance to the Medical Society. Dr. McGovern pointed out that the communication was sent by registered mail. Mr. Penniman called him by telephone asking that he have luncheon with him where these matters could be discussed. After consulting with officials of the Society Dr. McGovern accepted the invitation to meet Mr. Penniman at luncheon at the Raleigh Hotel. Dr. McGovern made it emphatic that he was not authorized to commit the Society in any way. Mr. Penniman was willing to give some of the information desired, but when asked for the contract between the Group Health Association and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, he refused, stating that the Medical Society had no more right to ask for that than they would to go down to Garfinckel's department store and ask to see a contract that the store had with an express company, for instance. Dr. McGovern felt that it was definite that they had some kind of contract and they are not desirous that anybody should see it. In this connection he would add that the American Medical Association, through Dr. W. C. Woodward, tried diligently, spending a whole day in the building of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, going from office to office, trying to get a glance at the contract, without success. Dr. McGovern felt that the contract itself did not interest the Medical Society as much as it did interest the A.M.A. If there is a connection between the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Group Health Association, and the Board is spending money, they are spending taxpayers' money which makes it a national entity. As far as the panel of doctors is concerned, Mr. Penniman said he did not think it was appropriate for the Medical Society to have a list of the panel of physicians who have already been employed. He added that it is a well known fact that members of the Society have been approached. It also is a known fact that doctors have been asked to come in from the outside; that Dr. Brown has talked to them.

"Dr. McGovern said that property had already been leased for the housing of the clinic on I street, between 13th and 14th Streets. There was no doubt in his mind that the lay members of the board of directors of the Group Health Association are thoroughly convinced that they are doing a splendid thing for their employees. He was further convinced that they are not doing anything that might be considered unethical by them.

"Dr. McGovern called attention to an article which appeared in the Evening Star, in which it was announced that Senator Lewis had introduced a resolution in the Senate of the United States to provide medical care for the needy and the stricken with illness, etc."

I will not read the resolution which Dr. McGovern read, because it is not particularly interesting to us at this time. Dr. McGovern continued further with reference to Senator Lewis' speech at Atlantic City, New Jersey, at the convention, and Dr. Willson spoke, and then Dr. McGovern stated (reading further):

"that in the articles of incorporation they are going to give complete medical care and hospitalization. It could not be found out as to how they plan to do that. He pointed out that it is incorporated to include all Federal employees, except Army and Navy. He thought possibly they would have the free use of the local hospitals.

"At this point Dr. Charles E. Fierst, of Silver Spring, Maryland, addressed the Society."

"Dr. H. C. Macatee was recognized. He reiterated the plea of the chairman of the Executive Committee that if any members had ideas on this subject, or information about it, they should submit it to the committee for investigation. He said he would like to express his personal feeling about this matter for whatever value it may have. He was of the opinion that the Medical Society should not take its attitude based on the idea that there are certain scurrilous people who are trying to do a scurrilous thing to the Medical Society and doing it in an underhanded, scheming way. It was his impression, gained from contact with certain individuals, that they are highly intelligent people who have profoundly studied this subject, who are aware of all the social currents flowing through the country with respect to the relation to the medical profession and the people. They are aware of what has been done elsewhere and the results. 'My feeling is that this is a group of responsible, honest, rather public-spirited people, who are undertaking to do something for the benefit of their associates in office. They are convinced and have secured what they call competent legal advice that they are on secure legal ground. They have by reason of their knowledge of similar projects elsewhere become convinced that wherever such organizations spring up they almost consistently receive the antagonism and the animosty of the local medical profession.'

"Dr. Macatee added that he was of the opinion that their desire to avoid publicity in this matter was due to their knowledge of that fact. So far as Dr. Henry Rolf Brown was concerned, Dr. Macatee stated that he has had a distinguished service in the Veterans Bureau where he was highly esteemed. He was retired on account of age and feels that he is not old enough to be put on the shelf. Dr. Brown has been detached from the organized profession for a long time. He (Dr. Macatee) said he for one did not blame Dr. Brown for taking the position.

"Dr. Macatee, continuing, stated that they had evidently obtained advice from the Twentieth Century Foundation and are perfectly aware that similar organizations, such as the Endicott-Johnson Medical Service, which was fought tooth and nail by the County and New York State Medical Society; also the Ross-Loos clinic of Los Angeles, which was likewise fought tooth and nail by the California organized medicine to the point that the members of that outfit were expelled from membership and then by court order were instated, were in operation. It was because of all these facts that the Executive Committee was recommended that this matter be recommitted for further study as to what will be wise for the membership as well as the public.

"Dr. Macatee added that there is now available a list of corporations and organizations and persons employing physicians in a contractual relationship, prepared under provisions of the constitution and by-laws. He urged the members to take the list and examine it carefully, and familiarize themselves with its contents.

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. Doctor, I want to show you on page 41, the first paragraph thereon, and ask you whether, so far as any knowledge you have is concerned, that is the first information of a Doctor Selders which came to the District Society or any of its members.

A. So far as I know, that is.

Mr. Leahy: That is at the special meeting of July 29, 1937, when Dr. Charles E. Fierst, of Silver Spring, Maryland, addressed the Society (reading):

"He said that last evening he overheard a conversation that took place in one of the drug stores in Silver Spring. A man represented himself as a surgeon of this organization and showed the clerk a list of instruments and equipment procured for a clinic to be opened in the 'Evans Electrical Building.' This man told the drug store employee that any major surgery that would be done would be performed in the local hospitals of Washington. Minor surgery would be taken care of in the clinic. By inquiry of the employee of the drug store, Dr. Fierst stated he obtained the name of this man as Dr. Raymond E. Selders, 2445 15th Street, N. W., Telephone: Adams 5302; that he was formerly from Massachusetts. Dr. Selders applied for a courtesy card at the drug store."

Then there was further discussion by other members with reference to Dr. Macatee's remarks and Dr. McGovern's remarks, and at this point Dr. Sprigg re-read the recommendations of the Executive Committee as amended, as follows (reading):

"That the chairman of the Executive Committee appoint three of its members to act as a subcommittee, they to add two members of their selection from the society at large, for the purpose of further studying the Group Health Association, Inc., with a view of bringing back to the Executive Committee a solution concerning what the society's attitude should be to the above Group Health Association, Inc., and to report to the Executive Committee, subject to the call of the chairman.

"Duly seconded and adopted."

I was chairman of the committee which was appointed that evening. No other action than the appointment of the committee to study the matter was taken at the July 29, 1937, meeting. The committee functioned until September 27, 1937, when it made its final report.

While I was away on vacation a meeting of the Executive Committee was had on September 8, 1937. Defense counsel read the minutes of the Executive Committee meeting of September 8, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) to the jury as follows:

"It was stated that during Dr. Macatee's absence from the city during the month of August, owing to the clamor for action that had been set up by certain society members, it was incumbent upon the committee to hold a meeting. At a meeting which was held in the office of Dr. Thomas A. Groover, it was adopted that Drs. Macatee and McGovern be duly appointed by the Society at large as members of the subcommittee."

The following statement was made as the statement of the committee (reading:)

"1. That Group Health Association is unethical and that the participation in it by any member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia would render him or her subject to disciplinary action by the Society.

"2. Your committee at this time has no definite recommendation to make with respect to combating the activities of Group Health Association other than as embodied by implication in the preceding paragraph.

"3. It is the opinion of your committee that the Medical Society of the District of Columbia should maintain close contact through the chairman of this committee with the American Medical Association in an effort to formulate a suitable and effective policy with respect to combating the activities of Group Health Association.

"It was explained that Dr. Macatee has been duly notified of the committee's activities during his absence and also that it was the desire of the committee to hold a meeting just previous to the meeting of the Executive Committee on this evening. Dr. Macatee had stated over the telephone that this afternoon was very well taken up and it would be impossible for him to be present.

"Upon motion duly seconded the Executive Committee unanimously accepted the report of the subcommittee."

Then Dr. McGovern was called upon to speak, as well as other physicians, and then Dr. Macatee was recognized.

"He summed up briefly his stand in the matter, stating that before accepting the subcommittee appointment he definitely told Dr. Sprigg that he was going to be out of town for the whole month of August, and he thought that someone else should serve. Upon insistence he accepted. He was of the opinion that in view of the committee seeing fit to meet this evening and on other occasions during his absence, and having brought in a report without his presence, that he should resign and that his resignation from the committee should be immediately accepted.

"Dr. Ruffin and others expressed the hope that Dr. Macatee would not deprive the Executive Committee and the Society of his services which were deemed most valuable in the revamping of the report which Dr. Sprigg and others thought should be in such a form as to be suitable to be sent to each member of the Society and Members of Congress as a dignified expression of organized medicine's stand in the protection of the health of the individual.

"Upon motion duly made and finally adopted the committee was to be continued with Dr. Macatee chairman and the report to be made back to the Executive Committee with a statement involving specifically the violations of the Code of Ethics and the reasons for opposition to the group plan on the basis of the health of the individuals who would be subscribers.

"That portion of Dr. Ruffin's proposal which would refer the matter back to the American Medical Association was stricken out.

"Dr. Macatee announced his willingness to continue and do anything within his power to aid the committee."

Then several doctors talked and further instructions were given with reference to other matters which I do not think are of interest here.

Although a report was adopted at the September 8 meeting, the whole matter was recommitted to the committee, and that report was superseded by another report which the subcommittee submitted to the Executive Committee on September 27. The report adopted on September 27, 1937, was the final report of the committee and supplanted the preliminary report made on September 8. The final report read as follows (Gov. Ex. 37):

"At a special meeting of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia held July 29, 1937, the membership was advised of all the facts that the Executive Committee had been able to gather respecting the purposes, proposed methods, and progress of the Corporation composed of employees of the Home Owners Loan Corporation now in process of organization, the object of which is to provide complete medical, surgical and hospital care for its members and their dependents upon a prepayment plan of financial support through membership dues. The professional services offered by the Corporation are to be supplied by a full-time salaried staff of medical and other technical employees. The name of the organization is Group Health Association, Inc., of the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

"The Executive Committee recommended at the special meeting that the Society authorize further study of the subject by the Committee in order to enable it to report suitable recommendations to the Society looking to the formal adoption of an official attitude toward this proposed new type of medical practice.

"Such an expression of the Society's attitude is necessary for the guidance of our membership, both with respect to possible employment by the corporation and with respect to professional relationships to its medical and technical employees when and if it shall have begun to function.

"The Executive Committee finds: First, that employment by or professional relations with the Group Health Association, Incorporated, on the part of our members would be conditional upon approval of the organization by the Society as required by Chapter IX, Article III, section 2, of the Constitution; that no application has been made by any member or by the organization itself for such approval; and that consequently there has been no submission of the data required for approval to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee of the Society.

"The Committee finds: Second, that the conditions of rendering the medical and surgical service offered by Group Health Association, Incorporated, as set forth in such written promulgations of the organization the Committee has been able to see and as indicated verbally by officers of the corporation, appear to be inconsistent with the criteria for an acceptable form of contract practice as set forth in Chapter III, Article VI, Section 3 of the Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association, by which we are obliged to be guided. In particular it would appear that at least two of the criteria would necessarily be violated, viz.: '1. Where there is solicitation of patients, directly or indirectly'; and '3. When free choice of a physician is prevented.' In the first instance, it is obvious that the solicitation of employees of the H. O. L. C. to take membership in Group Health Association, Incorporated, is an effort to entice many away from medical relationships already formed to the medical personnel of the corporation. This effort would raise the question whether a further criterion of an acceptable contract is violated, viz.: '4. When there is interference with reasonable competition in a community.'

"However, the criteria above quoted must be applied in the light of experience, and we are required by the same Principles of Ethics to exercise prudence in forming opinions: 'Judgment should not be obscured by immediate, temporary or local results.' In any form or instance of contract practice 'The decision as to its ethical or unethical nature must be based on the ultimate effect for good or ill on the people as a whole.'

"The Executive Committee, therefore, recommends the adoption of the following:

"Resolved, That a final expression of the attitude of the Medical Society toward the acceptability of any cooperative medical service organization as an approved agency for the employment of members is manifestly impossible without the submission of all related data as a basis for approval, and manifestly undesirable when information is lacking as to whether any such group will ever become operative; and

"RESOLVED, That the membership be reminded of the requirements of Chapter IX, Article III, Section 2 of the Constitution for their guidance with respect to Group Health Association, Incorporated, of the H. O. L. C.; and

"RESOLVED, That the Medical Society recognizes a growing desire in Washington for some feasible plan of cooperative group medical service on a prepayment basis; that it recognizes the value of such an arrangement for many people of limited incomes; and that, having already provided a means in the Health Security Administration, for the people without ready money to secure medical service on a postpayment plan, it is willing to collaborate with appropriate, responsible groups to devise methods for group prepaid medical service mutually acceptable to the two essential parties to such an agreement, viz.: the group needing and proposing to pay for the service and the group capable of furnishing it; and

"RESOLVED, That if hereafter it shall appear necessary or desirable, the Board of Medical Supervisors of the District of Columbia be requested to determine, by judicial decision if necessary, whether the operation of Group Health Association, Incorporated, or any similar organization, is or will be in conformity with the Healing Arts Practice Act for the District of Columbia."

"Dr. Macatee, upon concluding reading, stated that the Journal of the American Medical Association would publish in its issue of October 2, 1937, a detailed analysis of the Group Health Association, Inc., pointing out weak points from a legal viewpoint. It began with the statement that Title 5, Chapter 5 of the District Code was taken advantage of, which had to do with the mutual welfare of individuals in organizations. It was clear that the Government was definitely embarking in the insurance business and that the check-off from the Government payroll would have all of the evil points that were included in check-off in the factories for union dues. The American Medical Association's statement would cover 4 or 5 pages in the Journal. It was emphasized that this material was not for release until September 29. Dr. Macatee stated that it was his view that despite this article appearing in the A. M. A. Journal, that there should be no hesitancy in adopting the report of the Subcommittee."

The report was unanimously adopted.

Health Security Administration is an eleemosynary organization which investigates applicants for medical charity and arranges for their hospitalization in clinics, and also provides a means by which they may pay their own way or budget out the expenses of their hospitalization after the services have been rendered. No information, over and above that had previously, was had on September 27, 1937, by the Society, as no communications had been received in any shape or form from any member of Group Health or from any of the members of its Board of Trustees.

The report of September 27, was incorporated in a report of the committee to the Society on its meeting on October 6, 1937. Between the special meeting of the Medical Society of July 29 and the meeting of October 6 nothing was done by the Society with relation to Group Health.

Defense counsel read from the minutes of the meeting of the Medical Society of October 6, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) as follows:

"Dr. Sprigg, continuing, stated that for the information of the membership he would report that the Executive Committee met four times during the summer for the purpose of studying questions of the organization which has been featured by the Home Owners Loan Corporation. He pointed out that officials of the American Medical Association lent their aid: Dr. W. C. Woodward, Director of the Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation, and Dr. R. G. Leland, Director of the Bureau of Medical Economics, discussed the matter before the subcommittee; and Dr. Olin West, Secretary, discussed the matter with certain members of the Society. All discussing this question were thoroughly opposed to the plan as presented in toto."

And the following resolutions are the results of these deliberations concerning Group Health Association, Inc. And then follows this same resolution which I have read to you. I am not going to take time to read it. Then, upon motion duly seconded, and adopted, the recommendations of the Executive Committee were considered seriatum.

"Dr. Thomas A. Groover was recognized. He stated that if there was no objection he would like to introduce a substitute for the foregoing resolutions. No objections were made. He presented the following:

"WHEREAS, The Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation of the American Medical Association has prepared and published a comprehensive report on the activities of Group Health Association, Incorporated; and

"WHEREAS, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia is in full accord with the content of said report, both as to the established facts set forth therein and the implications drawn therefrom; therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, That the Medical Society of the District of Columbia cause a copy of said report to be sent to each of its members as an indication of its future policies with respect to combating the activities of said Group Health Association and also with respect to the ethical responsibilities of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and of its individual members.

"Dr. Groover moved the adoption of these substitute resolutions. Seconded by Dr. F. X. McGovern.

"In discussion of the subject, Dr. Groover stated he wished to briefly state some of his reasons for proposing these substitute resolutions. He said:

" 'I wish briefly to state some of my reasons for proposing these substitute resolutions.

" 'I have grave doubts if this Medical Society alone can do a great deal toward combating Group Health Association, Incorporated, and believe that the most effective assistance and support it can invoke is that of the American Medical Association.

" 'The A. M. A. has manifested a keen interest in this problem and in the October 2nd issue of the Journal has caused to be published a comprehensive survey of it which I trust many of you read carefully.

" 'If you have, you must have noted that there are three dominant notes that run through it—the first being that Group Health Association is illegal; the second, that Group Health Association is unethical; and third, that the operation of Group Health Association would be inimical to the best interests of the medical profession and the public.

" 'As to the illegality of Group Health Association I am not personally qualified to speak, but I happen to know that the A. M. A. has made a careful study of this aspect of the question and it is their opinion that it is illegal. It would seem out of place at this time for this Society to commit itself to any plan of procedure such as that recommended by the Executive Committee in the event that legal action against Group Health Association is undertaken later. Obviously any plan of procedure should be contingent upon the advice of counsel.

"'As to the ethical responsibilities of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and its members the conclusion to be drawn from the A. M. A. report is inescapable. It says: "Physicians who sell their services to an organization like Group Health Association for resale to patients are certain to lose professional status." In contrast to this clear-cut statement the statements in the Executive Committee report are equivocal and quibbling for which I can find no justifiable excuse. The members of this Society I believe have a right to expect a definite unevasive expression from the Society as to their ethical responsibilities which is lacking in the Executive Committee report.

"'Finally it is the collective opinion of organized medicine that prepayment plans for medical care except under very special conditions are inimical to the best interests of the medical profession and the public. The quasi endorsement of any prepayment plan for a community like Washington as contained in the Executive Committee report might well alienate the support of the A. M. A. and prove disastrous to its influence and leadership. For these and other reasons which I will not go into I believe that any such commitment by this Society might very well prove to be exceedingly embarrassing."

Dr. Groover's substitute motion was adopted. The subcommittee of which I was chairman ceased to exist as its duties had been completed. Up to October 6, 1937, the Medical Society had taken no action other than is indicated in the minutes.

Q. Up to the meeting of October 6, 1937, what expression of an attitude of the Society had ever been adopted?

A. On June 1st the Executive Committee authorized the appointment of a subcommittee to find out facts; on June 24th a meeting with the officers of Group Health Association was had at the Medical Society Building to elicit facts; on July 26th a further meeting was had with the Board of Trustees of Group Health Association for further conference in the hope of reaching some accord with them. On July 29th all the facts obtained were submitted to the Medical Society at a special meeting, and the only action taken was the appointment of another committee to formulate a policy for the Society to adopt officially; on October 6th, the Medical Society did adopt a policy as contained in the resolution presented by Dr. Groover. Those were the only actions taken by the Medical Society between those dates.

Mr. Leahy: I should like to draw the attention of the jury to one statement which is made on page 4 of the minutes of the meeting of October 6th, wherein after Dr. R. Arthur Hooe had been recognized he said:

"He referred to the constitution of the Society, as mentioned in Dr. Macatee's resolution, stating that there is a provision therein which makes it utterly impossible for a member of this society to engage with any corporation, group or individual without first submitting its verbal or written contract to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee. He said when this fact was disclosed to the Group Health Association officials, their verbal reply was 'if that makes it impossible, if it is in violation of the ethics of the American Medical Association and your ethics, then why don't you and the American Medical Association change your ethics.' Dr. Hooe said the reply naturally was: 'Because you haven't sufficiently convinced us that we should change them with any good reason.'"

Mr. Leahy: And then there was a long speech by Dr. Horback, with which Dr. Hooe said he was in accord.

By Mr. Leahy:

Q. Now, Doctor, do you recall whether following the meeting of October 6th, and the adoption of this particular report of Dr. Groover, anything further was done in reference to Group Health Association during that month of October, 1937?

A. I know of nothing, sir.

Defense counsel read from the minutes of the Executive Committee meeting October 11, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) as follows:

"The recommendation was finally adopted that the American Medical Association authorities be communicated with and they also be asked to send to the Insurance Commissioners, the Commission on Licensure, the District of Columbia Commissioners, the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia, and the Corporation Counsel, substances of the article that appeared in the October 2, 1937, issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association (organization section; p. 39B), and that if the American Medical Association refused or would not comply, then the Secretary send a reprint of said article to each of these officials."

Defense counsel read from the minutes of the meeting of the Medical Society of October 15, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) as follows:

At this particular meeting, according to the minutes which I am not going to read—because they deal with so many other matters, and so many doctors spoke—Dr. Wall, Dr. Sprigg, Dr. Jansen, Dr. Conklin, Dr. Hooe, Dr. Jacobs, Dr. Kirby, Dr. Holden, Dr. Hagner, Dr. Riddick, Dr. Davis, Dr. Sager, Dr. Chase, Dr. Christie, Dr. McLean, Dr. Parker, Dr. Alfaro, Dr. Templeton, Dr. Hooe, Dr. Groover,—until we come down to the seventh page of the minutes.

"Dr. W. M. Sprigg asked consent to read a letter addressed to the Boards of Directors of the various hospitals in the city. Consent was granted."

That letter is dated October 15th. He read the letter. He called attention to Chapter IX, Article 4, Section 1. The result of the action as to sending the letter was that the matter was held over, as I recall.

Mr. Lewin: Mr. Leahy, didn't he also refer to Section 5?

Mr. Leahy: Did he?

Mr. Lewin: Didn't he start out with Section 5 and quote it?

Mr. Leahy: "The Medical Society of the District of Columbia desires to call your attention to Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5, of the Constitution as follows", quoting it; and that matter was held over for further discussion. This was at the meeting of October 15, 1937.

Defense counsel read from the minutes of the Medical Society meeting of November 3, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37) as follows:

This is November 3rd. There are many things in here which have no relation whatsoever to the matter at hand. On the bottom of page 2, however, Dr. Sprigg, Chairman of the Executive Committee, was recognized. He presented the following recommendation from the Executive Committee, which is the one I just drew your attention to, to the effect that the American Medical Association authorities be communicated with and asked to send to the various public officials of the District of Columbia substances of the article which appeared in the October 2nd, 1937, issue of the Journal. Dr. Sprigg made the motion that the recommendation as read be adopted. No. 1 I have just brought to your attention. Second, Dr. William J. Stanton was then recognized and he offered a substitute for the recommendation of the Executive Committee. Now, that is a long resolution and insomuch as it was not adopted I will not take your time to read it.

Motion was made that the foregoing resolution be adopted, and it was seconded. Then there follows a long discussion between Dr. Stanton, Dr. Sprigg, Dr. Smith——

"Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia is hereby authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary, first, through the American Medical Association and if that fails, second, through its own initiative to inaugurate a program of information through the state medical associations and other sources of the dangers of lowering the standards of medical care to be given government employees in the Home Owners Loan Corporation organization and other government agencies as found in the rules of the Group Health Association, Inc., and many other reasons why it is contrary to sound public policy."

Then follows another discussion between Dr. Sprigg, Dr. Stanton, Dr. Prentiss Willson, Dr. Hooe, Dr. Caulfield, Dr. McLeod, Dr. Wilkinson, Dr. Sager, Dr. Christie, Dr. Ruffin, Dr. Stanton again, and Dr. Willson's motion was finally adopted. That motion was that a committee should be appointed to retire to draw up a resolution. The committee appointed was Dr. Stanton, Dr. Ruffin, and Dr. McGovern.

"Later in the evening Dr. Stanton made the following report of the committee's deliberations, presenting the resolutions:

"That the President of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia appoint a committee of two members to go to Chicago as promptly as practicable and lay before the proper officials of the American Medical Association the views of this Society with regard to the activities of Group Health Association, Incorporated, including:

"1. That inasmuch as the movement threatens to be nation-wide in its scope, and affect every component organization of the American Medical Association, it is the duty of the American Medical Association to oppose immediately with all its might this entering and possibly illegal wedge to the socialization of medicine.

"2. That in view of the tremendous import of the Group Health Association movement to the membership of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and also to the profession at large and to the public, it is the opinion of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia that it is the duty of the American Medical Association to combat vigorously Group Health Association, Incorporated.

"3. That the Medical Society of the District of Columbia waives any question of regional interference by the American Medical Association.

"4. That the American Medical Association give a definite and immediate expression of its intended action in this matter.

"Upon motion, duly seconded, the foregoing resolutions submitted by the special committee were adopted."

I do not know of any other action taken at the November 3rd meeting other than to authorize Doctors McGovern and Hooe to go to Chicago and see the AMA.

Defense counsel then read from the minutes of the Medical Society meeting of November 3, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37), as follows:

Now, at that same meeting of November 3rd, 1937, there was another resolution adopted which I wish to draw the attention of the jury to. Oh, there were many offered; much talk—until we come down to the twelfth page.

"Dr. Prentiss Willson would inquire if the foregoing was in lieu of the recommendation concerning the sending of a letter to the Board of Directors and medical staffs of the local hospitals, as published through the membership on the agenda."

That is the Dr. Sprigg letter I called attention to at the earlier meeting.

"He said he intended to move a substitute motion for the letter which appeared on the agenda. If the Society approved the motion proposed by Dr. Sprigg it would be inexpedient to send the letter out at the present time. He was of the opinion that the Hospital Committee, composed of members of the Society serving on hospital staffs in Washington would be a more suitable committee to handle the matter. He offered the following substitute:

"Whereas, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia has an apparent means of hindering the successful operation of Group Health Association, Inc., if it can prevent patients of physicians in its employ being received in the local private hospitals; and

"Whereas, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia has no direct control over the policies of such hospitals as determined by their lay boards of directors, except through its control of its own members serving on their medical staffs; and

"Whereas, Conflicts between the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and any local hospitals arising from an attempt to enforce the provisions of Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5, of its Constitution should be assiduously avoided, if possible, because of the unfavorable publicity that would accrue to its own members; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Hospital Committee be, and is hereby, directed to give careful study and consideration to all phases of this subject and report back to the Society, at the earliest practicable date, its recommendations as to the best way of bringing this question to the attention of the medical boards and boards of directors of the various local hospitals in such a manner as to insure the maximum amount of practical accomplishment with the minimum amount of friction and conflict."

Mr. Leahy: This was afterwards adopted; the minutes show it was adopted, and the matter referred to the Hospital Committee.

The Sprigg letter, which this resolution was presented in order to supplant, was not sent as the Willson resolution stopped it. I have been connected with the Washington hospitals for forty-one years.

Q. Have you any knowledge now of any acts done by the District Medical Society in any attempt to control the policies of any hospital in the District of Columbia, other than what is disclosed in the minutes of the meetings of the District Society, as read?

The Witness: Nothing was done by the Medical Society other than as disclosed by the minutes.

The Medical Society never on any occasion undertook to do anything to interfere with the reception by the local hospitals of patients arising from Group Health.

I have been connected with Garfield Hospital since 1900, and ever since I have been connected with its staff it has had a rule that only those who have been given privileges can exercise and practice their profession within the hospital, and the same is true of the other Washington hospitals. The general considerations that apply to the granting of hospital privileges I will outline as follows:

There is required a formal application by any physician who desires courtesy privileges, stating his name, scope of his education, training, and special aptitude, giving references to those who personally know his attainments as endorsers. This material is referred to that section of the medical staff involved in the type of practices as to which the applying physician desires courtesy privileges, and upon their opinion is based the answer of whether or not the application will be endorsed, and it is a rule that all members of the attending staff must endorse the application. The application then comes to the advisory committee, of which I am chairman, whereupon these facts are considered, and that committee recommends to the board of directors the appointment to the courtesy staff of the applicant or not. The board of directors then takes its own independent action on the matter, and the ultimate appointment depends upon the board of directors.

In Garfield Hospital from January, 1937, to December 20, 1938, there has been no change in the policy of the hospital with respect to an applicant being a member in his local medical society, but the fact of membership stands as a substantial bit of evidence concerning his acceptability, but his nonmembership is not a bar to courtesy privileges in Garfield Hospital, and there were other than local Society members on the Garfield staff at that time.

While I was at Garfield Hospital Dr. Raymond E. Selders made an application for privileges shortly after Group Health came into operation, or about November or December of 1937. The application took the same route of any other application. Dr. Selders was given temporary privileges under the rule that an applicant would be given such privileges pending action on his application, and his application finally was denied by the Board of Directors. In granting Dr. Selders privileges during the period his application was pending we followed the general rule applicable to all applicants.

On January 25 of 1938, on a report from the surgical staff, Dr. Selders' temporary privileges were withdrawn.

Gov. Ex. 485 has come to my attention since its date, December 3, 1937, but I know nothing of its origin. I do not recall the contents of Gov. Ex. 487. Action was taken by the Board of Directors at a meeting at which I was present on March 28, 1938. The letter correctly sets forth the action which was taken.

Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 487 to the jury as follows:

The letter is U. S. Exhibit No. 487 dated December 28, 1937, from Dr. Eisenman, Superintendent, to Mr. Aspinwall, and it says (reading):

"That pending the settlement of the question as to the ethical status of Group Health Association, Inc., and pending further study of the professional qualifications of Dr. Raymond E. Selders that he be not accorded courtesy privileges at Garfield Memorial Hospital except, of course, in a real emergency."

That is the meeting of the board of directors of March 22, 1938. (Reading):

"The president, in reviewing the proceedings, stated:

"Our final connection with Group Health Association was the application of Dr. Selders for surgical privileges. The temporary privilege awaiting action on the application and the withdrawal of these privileges on recommendation of the Medical Staff as noted in the resolution of the Executive Committee meeting on December 28, 1937, awaiting legality of Group Health Association. The actual disqualification of Dr. Selders' application was by the board of directors at meeting on January 25, 1938, in which the minutes of the Executive Committee meeting of December 28, 1937, were read.

"In approving these minutes the board desires to state that in denying privileges to the courtesy staff of the hospital to Dr. Raymond E. Selders on the recommendation of the Medical Staff of the Hospital the action was pending the legality of the organization who employed Dr. Selders."

The witness was removed from the stand for the identification of an exhibit (Def. Ex. 42).

WILLIAM RICHARDS CASTLE, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination:

I have resided in Washington since 1918. I was employed first in the Red Cross for a year, and then in the State Department from the beginning of 1919 until 1933. I was in the European Division of the State Department for a while, and then I was Assistant Secretary and finally Undersecretary of State, and I recognize the letter marked Def. Ex. 42 as on my stationery and bearing my signature; I personally forwarded this letter to the addressee, Dr. Eisenman, but I do not have any other correspondence in relation to this letter. I thought it was of no importance at the moment and threw it away.

DR. HENRY C. MACATEE, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination—resumed:

A letter marked Def. Ex. 42 came to my attention as a member of the Board of Directors of Garfield Hospital. Dr. Selders was never afforded privileges at Garfield Hospital except temporary privileges until his application was denied officially. The Castle letter (Def. Ex. 42) had a definitely adverse effect upon the Board of Directors' determination with reference to whether or not Dr. Selders was qualified for privileges at Garfield Hospital. Mr. Castle was a member of the Board of Directors of Garfield Hospital.

Def. Ex. 42 received and read to jury as follows:

This is on the stationery of W. R. Castle. It is dated March 30, 1938, and addressed to Dr. Francis J. Eisenman, Garfield Hospital (reading):

"My dear Dr. Eisenman:

I wrote as I told you I would to Mr. Aldus Higgins in Worcester. He is the president of the Norton Company, is connected with various hospitals, and is, I believe, head of the Worcester Museum. Mr. Higgins is a very careful individual who would not write anything which he had not checked on pretty carefully. This is what he said:

'Dr. Selders was a surgical resident at Worcester City Hospital for one year, two years ago, at a salary of $900 and keep. We understood that he had graduated from a medical school in Oklahoma, had been in practice about seven years, and part of the time in Houston, Texas, where he had a hospital staff appointment. He then came to Pennsylvania State Medical School to take their P. G. course which requires one year at the school and one year of practical experience as a resident. His year at the hospital was a part of this procedure. His work at the City Hospital did not meet with the approval of the Superintendent as to the way he handled himself with internes, nor the approval of the surgical staff as to his accomplishments as a surgeon. The appointment accordingly was not continued after the first year.

'Our superintendent has a letter from one who claims to be his sister living in the South with the statement that she made sacrifices to educate Dr. Selders and that recently when she had turned to him for aid in her financial circumstances he had informed her that he did not care to hear from her again.'

Mr. Higgins adds that it is quite possible he may be able to get some more detailed information by consulting the doctors who knew him. He says, however, that it seems as though the above for the accuracy of which he vouches, would be bad enough to dispose of him both as a surgeon and a man.

If you would like me, however, to write Mr. Higgins and ask him to make further inquiries, I shall of course be glad to do so. We ought to realize, however, that if that is done and Mr. Higgins consults various people, the inquiries are likely to be known.

Very sincerely, William R. Castle."

I remember the case of Miss Tew, as it came up for report and discussion in the advisory committee at Garfield Hospital, of which I am chairman. I prepared a document on the case on March 25, 1938, which I identify as Def. Ex. 43.

Def. Ex. 43 received and read to jury as follows:

"Regulation governing admission of patients to Garfield Memorial Hospital upon the application of physicians and surgeons not members of the courtesy staff.

The word 'emergency' is defined for the purpose of the use of the facilities of the hospital by physicians and surgeons not admitted to the courtesy staff of the hospital as some condition in which the life or safety of the patient is in danger except for some immediate intervention by the physician involved in the way of first aid, as in the case of hemorrhage, asphyxiation, or the like. In cases in which there is time for the formal posting of an operation the hospital holds that there is also time to secure the services of a surgeon who had been granted surgical privileges at the hospital, and that course of action will hereafter be required upon application for the admission of any patient by a physician or surgeon not of the courtesy staff.

Under the conditions stipulated members of Group Health Association will be admitted to the hospital just as any other person is admitted, subject to available space and the suitability of the patient in other respects.

Unanimously adopted by the Executive Staff at a special meeting held March 25, 1938.

H. C. Macatee, M. D., President, Medical Staff."

The original of this paper was sent to Mr. Aspinwall, President of the Board of Directors, on March 25, 1938.

The occasion of defining the word "emergency" was the admission of the Group Health patient Miss Tew into the hospital on the statement of Dr. Selders that it was an emergency case, when the staff took the position that it was not an emergency case. The purpose of the definition was to make the position of the hospital officially known to all concerned in such cases, so that no such question would arise thereafter. Under the rule of Garfield Hospital one who did not enjoy courtesy privileges could treat an emergency case, and the purpose of the definition was to define and make clear what such an emergency case was.

After Justice Bailey's decision Garfield Hospital received two applications from members of the staff of Group Health some time in December of 1938. In passing on these applications there was no delay in the hospital beyond the necessary for the orderly process by which such applications were received and acted upon, with the result that the two applicants were admitted to courtesy privileges some time in December of 1938.

When Garfield Hospital receives requests for general surgical privileges on the courtesy staff, it avails itself of the facilities of the Washington Academy of Surgery, and it has been doing this for about ten years. In Dr. Selders' case his qualifications for surgical privileges were referred to the Washington Academy of Surgery, and that procedure was entirely in accord with the usual practice.

Gov. Ex. 450, dated January 31, 1938, which was a report from the Washington Academy of Surgery to the superintendent of Garfield Hospital, was then read to the jury, reporting that the Committee on Hospital Privileges recommended the disapproval of the applications of six doctors, including Dr. Selders, to do surgery, and then recommended the approval of about 45 others in various fields of surgery. Four of the doctors who were disapproved for surgical privileges were members of the District Medical Society. The principal minority report or report No. 1 of the Committee on Costs of Medical Care was approved by the American Medical Association. I made the motion for its adoption by the AMA, I think, in the year 1936.

The principal minority report of the Committee on Medical Care (Def. Ex. 45) was then read to the jury, as follows:

"I. The minority recommends that government competition in the practice of medicine be discontinued and that its activities be restricted (a) to the care of the indigent and those patients with diseases which can be cared for only in governmental institutions; (b) to the promotion of public health; (c) to the support of the medical departments of the Army and Navy, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and other government services which cannot because of their nature or location be served by the general medical profession; and (d) to the care of veterans suffering from bona fide service—connected disabilities and diseases, except in the case of tuberculosis and nervous and mental diseases.

"II. The minority recommends that government care of the indigent be expanded with the ultimate object of relieving the medical profession of this burden.

"III. The minority joins with the Committee in recommending that the study, evaluation, and coordination of medical service be considered important functions for every state and local community, that agencies be formed to exercise these functions, and that the coordination of rural with urban services receive special attention.

"IV. The minority recommends that united attempts be made to restore the general practitioner to the central place in medical practice.

"V. The minority recommends that the corporate practice of medicine, financed through intermediary agencies, be vigorously and persistently opposed as being economically wasteful, inimical to a continued and sustained high quality of medical care, or unfair exploitation of the medical profession.

"VI. The minority recommends that methods be given careful trial which can rightly be fitted into our present institutions and agencies without interfering with the fundamentals of medical practice.

"VII. The minority recommends the development by state or county medical societies of plans for medical care."

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

I was president of the staff of Garfield Hospital in the fall of 1937. The system of chiefs of staff does not prevail at Garfield, so a letter addressed to the chief of staff ordinarily would most likely come to me as president of the staff. Dr. Selders' application made on November 10, 1937, was referred to my committee. Dr. Selders' application disclosed his degrees in medicine and science, that he was a graduate of the University of Oklahoma Medical School in 1927; he was 40 years old, a member of the AMA and of the Harris County Medical Society; that he had had some teaching experience at the University of Oklahoma and at various hospitals in Texas and at the Worcester City Hospital; that he had had courtesy staff privileges at various hospitals, including St. Joseph's Infirmary, the Methodist Hospital, and the Memorial Hospital in Houston, Texas; that he had contributed to medical literature and gives as references the names of three persons: United States Senator Lee of Oklahoma, Dr. Walter E. Lee, a surgeon of Philadelphia, and Dr. John T. Moore, of Houston, Texas.

I did not communicate with any of Dr. Selders' references and I do not know whether any members of my committee did or not.

Q. Now, Dr. Macatee, isn't it true that following receipt of that application you received a letter from Dr. Conklin, the secretary of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, addressed to the chief of staff of Garfield Memorial Hospital, dated December 2, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 498)?

A. I have no independent knowledge of that letter.

Q. Such a letter as that is in evidence, Dr. Macatee, and it is addressed to the chief of staff. Would you ordinarily receive it?

A. Yes.

Q. And didn't it include a resolution adopted by the District Medical Society on December 1, 1937?

A. It did.

Q. And didn't that tell you this: that the District Medical Society has resolved, as a matter of educational policy, it strongly recommended that all hospitals, including yours, engaged in the teaching and training of residents, interns, and nurses, where possible, follow the recommendation of the American Medical Association regarding the constitution of their entire staffs, both the regular staff and the courtesy staff; that each member of that staff be a member of the American Medical Association and of the local societies here either in Washington or in near-by states?

Do you want to refresh your recollection? (Handing Gov. Ex. 498 to the witness.) Is that correct?

A. I didn't understand it was addressed as a question. That is the purport of the resolution.

Q. Yes. And wasn't that resolution taken up at the advisory committee of the medical staff of Garfield Memorial Hospital on December 6, 1937?

A. It was.

Q. And were you present at that time?

A. I don't know. There's nothing in that to——

Q. If you were, you would be the presiding officer, would you not?

A. I would, yes.

Q. And you would ordinarily be present at such meetings, would you not?

A. I would.

Q. Well, isn't it a fact that the secretary was directed by the advisory committee to reply to the communication that I just showed you from the District Medical Society?

A. That is what the minutes show.

Q. Yes. And wasn't the secretary a defendant in this case, Dr. F. X. McGovern?

A. He was.

Q. Yes. And as a matter of fact didn't he reply to Dr. Conklin by his letter dated January 3, 1938 (handing Gov. Ex. 484 to the witness)?

A. That exhibit indicates that he did, yes.

Q. And didn't he say that in reply to that letter, and enclosing the resolution, that he had been requested to advise Dr. Conklin and the Medical Society that the present policy in force at Garfield Hospital is in conformity with the provisions of that resolution?

A. That's what the letter states.

Q. That's what the letter states. And as far as you know, there is no question but that it states the correct fact; isn't that so?

A. Not with the emphasis on "present," as you put it.

A. Oh, really? Well, now, I thought I understood you to testify that you hadn't made any change with regard to that policy at Garfield Memorial Hospital throughout the two years 1937 and 1938.

A. That's my recollection of the fact.

Q. Is the defendant Warfield a member of your medical staff?

A. He is.

Q. Yes. Well, let me show you what purports to be his answers to a questionnaire given him by a committee of which he was chairman, a hospital committee of the District Medical Society, and see if this refreshes your recollection (Gov. Ex. 302):

"Question 8. Does your hospital require membership in the Medical Society of the District of Columbia as a qualification for appointments to its medical staff?"

And his answer, "Yes, or have applied."

A. That is the answer given there.

Q. Yes. And is that correct?

A. It is not.

Q. Question 9 is, "What percentage of the entire medical staff of your hospital are members of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia?"

And his answer is, "Over 75 per cent. All recent appointments."

That is the answer, isn't it?

A. That's the answer given there.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection that on or about that time, although only 75 per cent were then members of the District Medical Society, all recent appointments were required to be members?

A. That does not refresh my recollection.

Q. Would you deny that that was the fact?

A. I do.

Q. Would you deny that about this time, after the receipt of the resolution of the District Medical Society, you changed your policy to require all new, recent appointments to apply for membership in the District Medical Society?

A. Not within my recollection.

Q. It's simply a question of your recollection, is it?

A. Yes.

Q. Isn't it true also that Dr. Warfield, in answer to the question, "Is your hospital in sympathy with the policies of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia?" replied "Yes"?

A. That is his answer.

Q. And wasn't he speaking with regard to Group Health Association when that answer was made?

Mr. Leahy: I object. It calls for a conclusion of the witness.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. And the policies of Group Health Association as appearing in the first question?

Mr. Leahy: I object.

The Court: Well, I don't know what the paper states, Mr. Lewin.

Mr. Lewin: Would you like to see it?

The Court: Unless this gentleman had something to do with the making of that paper or authorized the making of it, or something like that, I do not see how he is bound by that.

Mr. Lewin: No, I didn't mean to bind him. I was wondering if I might refresh his recollection as to these facts.

The Witness: I have no recollection of the paper.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Well, have you any recollection of the fact that your hospital was then in sympathy with the policies of the District Medical Society with regard to Group Health Association?

A. I couldn't make that statement then or now.

Q. Now, isn't it true that the superintendent of the Garfield Memorial Hospital referred Dr. Selders' application which I have just shown you to the Committee on Surgical Privileges (Gov. Ex. 485)?

A. Yes.

Q. And I believe you said that committee included Dr. Carr and Dr. McGovern and Dr. Charles Stanley White and Dr. Strine; am I correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, didn't he say, when he submitted this to them for their opinion, that "This," speaking of Selders' application, "is not a 'Run of Mine' case, and your action may be far-reaching. Information shows him"—that is Selders—"to have sufficient training for personal recognition, when compared with many now approved for courtesy privileges at Garfield Memorial Hospital. He is a member in good standing in A. M. A., County and State Medical Societies in Texas, and was returning from Massachusetts to Texas when offered the position with H. O. L. C."?

Doesn't he also say that "Should your recommendation be adverse, for other than personal qualifications, request they be stated, in order that the Board of Directors might have the benefit of your advice and counsel"? Am I correct?

A. That is what the letter states.

Q. Yes. Now, didn't you know that that had been done?

A. I did not.

Q. Was the surgical service, as far as you know, authorized to pass on this applicant for anything other than his personal qualifications?

A. My answer is that there is no regulation which directs the surgical service how it shall reach its conclusions with regard to applications.

Q. So if such a report were referred to you, you would think that you had the right to take into consideration anything whatever in addition to the man's personal standing or his professional capacity and qualifications?

A. I would think from that letter that I was put on notice to be especially careful to look into his qualifications fully.

Q. And you would think you were put on notice to do that because of his connection with Group Health Association, wouldn't you?

A. At that particular time I would think so, because of the very strong and very bitter publicity directed at the hospitals in the public press of this city.

Q. Now let me ask you whether Dr. McGovern, the secretary to your advisory committee, wasn't authorized and did not reply to Mr. Aspinwall with regard to this application of Dr. Selders.

A. He did.

Q. Now, was he speaking for the advisory committee of the medical staff when he so wrote?

A. He was.

Q. Therefore he was speaking for you, wasn't he, among others?

A. I am presiding officer of the advisory committee, without vote.

Q. And would you say he was speaking for you or he was not?

A. He was speaking for me because I was in sympathy with the action of the advisory committee.

Q. He was?

A. I think it was taken on good grounds.

Q. Yes. And were you in sympathy with the reasons which Dr. McGovern said prompted that resolution?

A. I was.

Q. All right. And wasn't this the resolution: "That pending the settlement of the question raised as to the ethical status of Group Health Association, Inc., and pending further study of the professional qualifications of Dr. Raymond E. Selders, that he be not granted courtesy privileges at Garfield Memorial Hospital, except of course in a real emergency"?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, there you were delaying action pending the ethical status not of Dr. Selders but of the organization to which he belonged; am I correct?

A. That is one statement.

Q. Yes. And isn't this the reason that was given for it: "The reason prompting this recommendation is the fact that Group Health Association, Inc., a lay corporation, is considered unethical by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, and its legality is being questioned"? Is that right?

A. That is the statement of the letter.

Q. Yes. And isn't it a fact within your knowledge that it was then considered unethical by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia?

A. That is true.

Q. Does not the reason continue that "Dr. Selders has been hired by Group Health Association as its surgeon. It is the opinion of the Advisory Committee that if the Garfield Hospital allows Dr. Selders courtesy privileges that it would be placed in the light of aiding and abetting Group Health Association, Inc."?

A. That is what the letter states.

Q. And that was your reason, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was your reason, although you had not yet communicated with Dr. Selders' references or heard any report on his professional qualifications?

Mr. Leahy: Now, wait a minute. That is a double-barreled question.

Mr. Lewin: All right, let us take it step by step.

Mr. Leahy: What do you mean by one? and then we'll get it.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. At that time you hadn't communicated with his references, had you?

A. Indirectly we had.

Q. You mean you referred it to the Washington Academy of Surgery?

A. I do.

Q. When did you do that?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, did you do it before or after this letter?

A. The rule was to require them—the applications as they came in.

Q. Did you refer it to the Washington Academy of Surgery on December 6, 1937 (exhibiting a photostat to the witness)?

A. We did.

Q. And had you heard from the Washington Academy of Surgery?

Mr. Leahy: Now, pardon me. Would you just give me the date of the letter you are referring to, Mr. Lewin?

Mr. Lewin: Yes, I will give you both references. The reference was December 6, and the letter I have examined him about was December 17.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Had you had any response from the Washington Academy of Surgery at that time?

A. The response from the Washington Academy of Surgery would come to the surgical group of the staff and not to the advisory committee.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't the response from the Washington Academy of Surgery—Would you give it to me, please (addressing Mr. Leahy)?

Wasn't it as a matter of fact dated January 31, 1938? (Gov. Ex. 450-A).

A. That is the date given.

Q. So the reason which you advised the president of the hospital that to approve Selders would be aiding and abetting Group Health Association antedated this letter by over a month; am I correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did the Washington Academy of Surgery give you any grounds for recommending against Dr. Selders' application? Will you gaze at that letter again and see whether it discloses any reasons at all?

A. That letter gives no grounds.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, before you received any word from the Washington Academy of Surgery your board of directors on January 25 had already withdrawn Dr.

Selders' temporary privileges and denied him courtesy privileges; isn't that correct?

A. On two grounds recommended to them.

Q. Yes. On two grounds. And that was six days before you got any report about his qualifications; am I right?

A. Yes, because there were other sufficient grounds.

Q. Yes. And weren't those grounds the grounds recommended by the medical staff?

A. They were the grounds recommended by the medical staff.

Q. Yes. And wasn't the action of the District of the directors predicated upon the recommendation of the Medical Staff?

A. It was.

Q. And didn't Dr. Eisenman so tell Dr. Selders (handing Gov. Ex. 348 to the witness)?

A. He did.

Q. And isn't it true also that before you received any reply from the Washington Academy of Surgery your president had received a letter from the president of Emergency Hospital asking for an explanation for the admission of Miss Sara Abbott to the Garfield Memorial Hospital (handing Gov. Ex. 475 to the witness)?

A. That letter is not within my knowledge until you exhibit it here.

Q. You never had any knowledge of that?

A. I never had any knowledge of it.

Q. Did you have any knowledge of President Aspinwall's reply giving the explanation?

A. None.

Q. Did you know that copies of both those letters were sent to the District Medical Society at the time they were written?

A. I did not.

Q. Now, the Castle Letter (Def. Ex. 42) which was offered this morning was dated March 30, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And at that time the Board of Directors had turned down Dr. Selders on January 25?

A. It had.

Q. And it denied him even temporary privileges; is that correct?

A. It had.

Q. And at that time also your medical staff had met in March and had confirmed that action, had it not?

A. The medical staff does not confirm the action of the Board of Directors.

Q. Well, didn't you go along with that action in March of 1938?

A. The Board of Directors having acted, the medical staff had nothing further to do with it.

Q. Didn't the medical staff consider it again in March of 1938?

A. I have no recollection of it.

Q. On February 2, 1938, did not the Medical Staff meet (handing the witness a paper)?

A. What is this document?

Q. These are my notes. Do they refresh your recollection?

A. Only to the extent that that would be about the time when the Medical Staff would normally meet.

Q. Did you not attend that meeting?

A. I could not tell you at this late date.

Q. Did you not present information there with regard to Dr. Selders' application?

A. My recollection would have to be refreshed.

Q. All right. Here is a photostatic copy of the minutes themselves. Will you look at them and see whether or not they refresh your recollection?

A. All right.

Q. Is it not true that when Miss Tew was admitted to Garfield Memorial Hospital for a short time in February of 1938 Dr. Selders then had privileges to bring a person there in an emergency?

A. He had, and he might still have.

Q. Is it not true that at that time you had no formal definition of an emergency?

A. That is true.

Q. Is it not true that at that time you relied upon the judgment of the surgeon bringing the patient as to whether or not it was an emergency?

A. I could not unqualifiedly answer Yes to that, sir.

Q. Would not the judgment of the attending surgeon ordinarily be the criterion of admission of an emergency case?

A. If he had courtesy privileges.

Q. Suppose he did not have.

A. That would not be the criterion.

Q. Suppose he had privileges to bring a patient there in an emergency?

A. He would in an emergency.

Q. I ask you again, did you have any rules or regulations governing the definition of an emergency at that time?

A. None governing the definition of "emergency," but plenty governing the admission of surgeons not on the courtesy staff.

Q. As a matter of fact, following the Tew incident you drew up this definition of "emergency"?

A. I did.

Q. And that is the first time you ever had such a definition?

A. I do not know as to that.

Q. In that definition you said specifically that it was to apply to Group Health Association, did you not?

A. I said that the definition would apply to Group Health Association so that there would be no question involved.

Q. You did not pick out anybody else or any other clinic to whom it might apply in specific terms?

A. No.

Q. Is it not a fact that you made a copy of the definition of "emergency" available to the other hospitals in the District of Columbia?

A. I did not.

Q. Is it not a fact that the other hospitals in the District of Columbia applied to your hospital for that definition so that they might keep it?

A. I have been told so.

Q. The action of the Surgical Service in recommending against Dr. Selders was based upon the ethical status of Group Health Association and the fact that the legality of Group Health was being questioned?

A. There was another reason advanced by the Surgical Service.

Q. But pending the study of Dr. Selders——

A. There was another reason advanced by the Surgical Service.

Q. What was that?

A. It was that being the sole surgeon of a large group of people they would not be able to grant him surgical privileges.

Q. Will you find the statement of any action which the Surgical Service took in December of 1937? Have you any notes here with you?

A. No.

Q. The folder that you have in your lap—does that contain hospital documents at all?

A. It does not.

Q. Suppose you look at these, then (handing papers to the witness). I show you Dr. McGovern's report to the president. Does that indicate that the reason you just mentioned was presented?

The Court: Maybe you can get at it in this way. Was it a matter of record or not?

The Witness: I did not catch that.

The Court: Was this additional reason a matter of record?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. I show you the minutes of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors and ask you if there is anything in that that could be interpreted as being the reason you suggested.

Mr. Leahy: What is the date?

Mr. Lewin: December 28, 1937.

The Court: If I may suggest: Maybe he can indicate what paper it would be.

Mr. Lewin: I wish he would.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Can you so indicate?

A. My information is it was a letter addressed by Dr. Hooe of the Surgical Service to me as Chairman of the Advisory Committee.

Q. Was it not addressed to you in the fall of 1938?

A. I don't remember the date of it.

Mr. Leahy: I have a copy of it right here.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Am I correct that it was November 21, 1938?

A. It was; evidently referring to a second application after legality had been determined.

Q. So that the reasons given in the fall of 1937 and the reasons given for the denial of privileges in January, 1938, did not include this reason which you have now mentioned as the additional one?

A. It is not so stated in the record.

Q. Did you not just tell his Honor that it was stated in the record, if it was stated at all?

A. It was not so stated in the record.

Mr. Leahy: His Honor asked him if it was made a matter of record, and he said Yes.

The Court: I thought he referred to a letter.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Now, Dr. Macatee, after you received notice of Mr. Justice Bailey's decision upholding the legality of Group Health Association, was Selders admitted to your staff?

A. He was not.

Q. Was he admitted at any time during 1938 after his temporary privileges were withdrawn?

A. So far as I know, he was not.

Q. And down to the date of the indictment he was not admitted, was he?

A. He was not.

Q. Although in the fall of 1938 he made an additional application?

A. Yes.

Q. And you simply let it take the same course, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And referred it to those various committees?

A. I don't know whether all the references were made or not.

Q. Were references communicated with in the fall of 1938?

A. I don't know.

Q. So far as you know, there was nothing more that happened except to send the applications through the mill again?

A. Yes. In the operation of the mill I had nothing to do normally, in my official capacity, with following up those references or making any communications having to do with them.

Q. What were the names of the two Group Health Association doctors who were admitted in 1938?

A. One, I think, was Dr. Price, and the other, my recollection is, was a Dr. Halstead. I am not sure.

Q. Dr. Halstead testified to the contrary when he was on the stand. Could it have been Dr. Bowe?

Mr. Leahy: Testified to the contrary of what?

Mr. Lewin: He testified that he was not admitted to the staff of Garfield Hospital in 1938. There cannot be any doubt about that.

Mr. Leahy: I don't know. It is too far back for me.

The Witness: The name Bowe sounds familiar.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. It may have been Dr. Bowe and Dr. Price?

A. Yes.

Q. As a matter of fact, were not those gentlemen admitted for the first time on December 19, 1938?

A. Yes.

Q. And, as a matter of fact, did not you and your colleagues at the hospital know that a grand jury of the United States had been convened in the late summer of 1938 and was investigating this very matter at the time they were admitted?

A. I don't think that entered into the consideration of the matter.

Q. I did not ask you that. I asked you whether you did not know that that was so.

A. No; I don't know that it is so, but I do know that that would not influence me.

Q. As a matter of fact, don't you know that those gentlemen were admitted for the first time two days before the indictment in this case came down?

A. I don't know that.

Q. What would your testimony be now with regard to Dr. Halstead? Does that refresh your recollection that he was not admitted at all?

A. No; I don't remember.

Q. On your direct examination, Doctor Macatee, I find on referring to the record, that you gave this testimony. Mr. Leahy asked you with regard to the so-called White List—

"Q. Do you recall, Doctor, at what date, if any, any authorization was made to prepare an approved list which has been called a White List?"

And you answered:

"That was incorporated in the constitutional amendment adopted in March, 1937, in which the Executive Committee was charged with the duty of preparing such a list."

Do you remember that testimony?

A. I do.

Q. When you said it was incorporated in the constitutional amendment, you did not mean that the list itself was incorporated in that amendment, did you?

A. I did not; the authorization.

Q. Then you were asked:

"Q. I ask you, Doctor, if the preparation of an approved list had anything whatsoever to do with Group Health Association."

And you answered:

"Nothing whatsoever."

Do you remember that?

A. I do.

Q. Do you still stand on that testimony?

A. I do.

Q. Did you mean to confine your answer to the preparation of an approved list back in March, or the preparation of the approved list in July of 1937?

A. I meant to limit it to the preparation of an approved list in July, 1937.

Q. You did?

A. Yes.

Q. So that your testimony is that the preparation of the approved list in July of 1937 had nothing whatsoever to do with Group Health Association?

A. Yes.

Q. You also testified as follows:

"Q. Did that approved list, as it came before the Executive Committee on July 12, 1937, have anything whatsoever to do with the approval or disapproval of Group Health Association, Incorporated?"

And your answer was:

"It did not."

Do you remember that testimony?

A. I do.

Q. Do you stand on that testimony?

A. I stand on it.

Q. By that did you mean to limit your answer to the approved list as it came before the Executive Committee, or did it include also as it left the Executive Committee on July 12, 1937? In other words, is there any point in this definition as it came before the Executive Committee——

Mr. Leahy: I made no point of that.

A. There is no point in that. My answer is the same both as it came before and as it left.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. And your testimony is that it had nothing to do with Group Health Association and was not directed at Group Health Association?

A. That is true.

Q. Did you mean to testify also that when it was first authorized to be issued to the hospitals as well as the members on June 21, 1937, it was not aimed at Group Health and had nothing to do with it?

A. It was not. It was unfinished business left over from March 25.

Q. Is it also your testimony that when it was sent out on July 29 both to the members of the District of Columbia Medical Society and to all the private hospitals, that then it was not directed toward Group Health Association?

A. It was not.

Q. Is it not true that the committee which was appointed in March, 1937, to prepare this White List consisted of the defendant McGovern as Chairman, and of the defendant Hooe and of another doctor named Dr. Daniel Borden?

A. I don't recollect the composition of the committee.

Q. To refresh your recollection I show you the minutes of March 19, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 36).

A. Yes; that would be the committee.

Q. And the committee then consisted of three, two of whom are defendants in this case; is that correct?

A. Are defendants; yes.

Q. Is it not true that the first approved list which was sent out under Section 5 was approved by the Executive Committee on July 12, 1937?

A. I think that is the correct date.

Q. No list under Section 5 had been approved by the Executive Committee or the Society prior to that date?

A. That is true.

Q. Is it not true that on July 12, 1937, the Executive Committee had had the subject of Group Health before it on a number of occasions?

A. On two occasions.

Q. Had it not discussed the Group Health Association situation on June 1?

A. It had.

Q. At an executive hearing to which Colonel Jones came?

A. Yes.

Q. And at which a committee was appointed to make further study?

A. Yes.

Q. And was not that committee required to cooperate with Dr. Verbrycke's committee on Medical Economics?

A. Yes.

Q. And was not Dr. Yater a member of Dr. Verbrycke's committee?

A. I don't know.

Q. Dr. Yater is a defendant in this case, is he not?

A. Yes.

Q. If the records show he was a member of that committee you would have no doubt of that, would you?

A. I would not.

Q. Did not the committee include Dr. McGovern as Chairman of the committee, and Dr. Hooe?

A. Include them?

Q. Yes, those two.

A. Yes.

Q. And they were the same McGovern and Hooe who were on the committee to prepare the approved list; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that Group Health Association had been discussed by the Executive Committee on June 21?

A. That is true.

Q. And at that meeting Dr. Verbrycke had made his first report for both his committees?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that meeting you had decided to have a conference with Dr. Brown of Group Health on June 21?

A. That is true.

Q. And had not Group Health Association been pretty fully discussed at that meeting with Dr. Brown and Mr. Penniman and some of those other gentlemen on June 24?

A. That is true.

Q. Is it not also true that you and a number of defendants in this case had discussed Group Health Association on May 16 in Dr. William Gerry Morgan's office?

A. That is true.

Q. Is it not true also that you and a number of the defendants in this case discussed this subject with Dr. Olin West of the American Medical Association in the early part of June?

A. I don't think I had.

Q. Did you not know that a committee had met with Dr. West?

A. Pardon me. I had discussed it with Dr. West in Atlantic City.

Q. And had you not also discussed it with him at the Metropolitan Club?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you not know that some of them had done so?

A. I heard so.

Q. But you say you discussed it with him at Atlantic City?

A. Yes.

Q. That was June 9th or 10th, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. So, would you say it had been discussed by you and others prior to July 12, 1937, on some seven occasions?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that correct?

A. I don't know how it adds up, but it may have been that many times.

The Court: Let us call it seven.

Mr. Lewin: It is six or seven.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Let me hand you the minutes of this meeting of July 12. (Gov. Ex. 37) Will you refer to the minutes of July 12, 1937, which are the minutes of the meeting at which the list was approved, and see if the committee of which Dr. McGovern was chairman did not report?

A. It did.

Q. And did he not adopt as his report the report prepared by Dr. Verbrycke?

A. Yes.

Q. And was not that adopted by Dr. McGovern's committee of which you were a member, as the report of the committee?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that in the report the following appears with regard to Group Health:

"Active opposition is possible at present. Whether it is advisable is another matter, unless some substitute plan can be suggested"——

Mr. Leahy: Just a moment. That report was not adopted.

Mr. Lewin: The witness has just testified to the contrary.

Mr. Leahy: I object, if your Honor please, because I know distinctly what counsel is directing the attention of the witness to. There were two reports. One report was adopted and the other was tabled. He is now directing the attention of the witness to the one that was tabled.

Mr. Lewin: Your Honor, I did not ask him for the action of the Executive Committee on this report. I asked him whether this is not the report of the committee headed by Dr. McGovern and of which he was a member.

Mr. Leahy: No; you did not.

Mr. Lewin: I beg your pardon; I did.

Mr. Leahy: I will stand on the record.

The Court: Is that what you want to ask him?

Mr. Lewin: I pointed it out in the minutes.

The Court: It will be understood.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Is not this (indicating) what you and Dr. McGovern and Dr. Hooe and those others reported:

"Failure to place a cooperative on the approved list of the Medical Society would automatically forbid any consultations by members of our Society. Any full-time employees of the Corporation could probably easily fail to be put on the courtesy list of the hospitals for one reason or another without the fact of his connection with the co-operative being even mentioned. In fact, any combative methods would necessar-y have to be camouflaged to the nth degree."

Am I right?

A. Are you right in what?

Q. That that was part of your report, or the report of the committee headed by the defendant McGovern.

A. Is this document that you are reading a letter addressed to Dr. McGovern by Dr. Verbrycke after he had relinquished his post as chairman of the Executive Committee?

Q. Is not this correct? Let us have no doubt about it. At the first part of that meeting did not this transpire——

Mr. Leahy: Why don't you ask the witness?

Mr. Lewin: I am going to have him answer it from the minutes.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Referring to the report which was prepared by Dr. J. Russell Verbrycke, who was then chairman of the committee on Medical Economics, it says:

"Since that time the committee has met and studied and reviewed supplementary plans that Dr. Verbrycke and Dr. McGovern offered as a report to the Executive Committee tonight."

Is that correct? Does that appear there?

A. That appears there; yes.

Q. Does not the language that I have read you appear in that very report which Dr. McGovern offered as a report of his committee?

A. It appears in the letter from Dr. Verbrycke which was adopted only in principle.

Q. Was it not adopted as your report?

A. In principle only.

Q. Did you not testify that these minutes correctly reflected what transpired at that meeting?

A. If I did, then I qualify that answer.

Q. You now qualify it to say this is not your report?

A. That is a report adopted in principle. It is not my report.

Q. Do you see any place in the minutes where it says that it was adopted only in principle?

A. Did you not just read so?

Q. I don't remember it. (Reading):

"which Dr. McGovern offered as a report to the Executive Committee."

Is there anything in there about offering it only in principle?

A. Yes. (Reading): "was approved in principle by the Executive Committee at a subsequent meeting."

Q. That was the original report, was it not, that was rendered on June 21, and does it not clearly show that?

A. (Reading:) "The secretary made a motion that this letter be accepted as a report of the subcommittee and be approved in principle."

Q. That is the action of the Executive Committee, is it not?

A. That is the action of the Executive Committee.

Q. Now I ask you whether the action of your subcommittee was not to adopt that as your report.

A. I cannot say that it was, because the report of the subcommittee was made extemporaneously and at the time there had not been any formal meeting of the committee and no formal action taken.

Q. Do not the minutes here show that that was offered as the report of your committee and accepted as the report of your committee?

Mr. Leahy: Point it out, please.

Mr. Lewin: I have pointed it out a number of times.

Mr. Leahy: Oh, no; you have not.

A. To get the picture, you have got——

Q. What is your answer to my question now?

A. What is the question?

Q. I want to know whether the report from which I read was the report of your committee which was offered as the report of your committee and taken by the Executive Committee as the report of your committee?

A. It was a report offered by the chairman at that time without objection by other members of the subcommittee and adopted by the Executive Committee in principle only.

Q. Is not this true, that it contained the language that I have read?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that when you said that failure to put a cooperative on the approved list of the Medical Society would automatically forbid consultations, were you not referring to this approved list, approved that very day or night, July 12, under Section 5?

A. That is probably the list referred to there.

Q. And when you referred to failure to put a cooperative on the approved list were you not referring to Group Health Association?

A. I was not; the letter was.

Q. Is not that what the report was referring to?

A. It was.

Q. Is it not true also that there was an amendment and only one amendment to the approved list that night which was offered for approval of the Executive Committee?

A. I have no recollection of any amendment.

Q. As a matter of fact, did you not object to Group Health Association on the ground that you thought it was an instrumentality of the Federal Government?

A. On the occasion of the consideration of the approved list?

Q. Yes.

A. Group Health Association was not considered in the preparation of the approved list.

Q. In those meetings prior to July 12, and on July 12, as disclosed by this report, was not one of your objections to Group Health Association that you regarded as the Government coming into the practice of medicine?

A. That was one consideration.

Q. Then at this time you regarded Group Health Association as connected in some way with the Federal Government, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And would you regard some of its doctors on the staff of Group Health as being connected with the Federal Government? Is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that when this report was first brought to the attention—that is, the report on the approved list, that item read, as one of the groups to be approved, "Medical personnel connected with the Federal and Municipal Governments within the District of Columbia or within ten miles thereof"? Is that right?

A. That is true.

Q. If that list had been approved in that manner it would have carried——

A. Just a moment.

Q. Wait a minute.

The Court: He has a right to explain his answer.

Mr. Lewin: He is trying to answer something else.

The Witness: No; I am not. I am trying to answer that particular question, because that particular No. 10 had to do with services by medical officers and set up with statutory rights behind them.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. If Item 10 had been approved as drawn, that you were approving of "medical personnel connected with the Federal Government," it might have included Group Health Association and its members, might it not?

A. It might not.

Q. You say it would have, do you?

A. Oh. I see the drift of your question now.

Q. Just answer the question. Would it not?

A. Your question cannot be answered as put.

Q. If you had permitted this report to go through with that item 10 reading that you approved the medical personnel connected with the Federal Government, that might have carried with it the approval of Group Health Association and its members, might it not?

A. It might have. I have no knowledge of its having been amended with that object in view.

Q. But it was amended, was it not, and was not the amendment suggested by you? Am I right?

A. Yes. I said, "employed by" rather than "connected with."

Q. Is this correct——

A. (Continuing): And the purpose of making the amendment was——

Q. I did not ask you that. (Reading):

"Dr. McGovern read the proposed list of approved organizations, groups, and individuals. Dr. Macatee suggested that the words 'employed by' be substituted for the words 'connected with' in item 10. With this change the list was approved upon motion duly seconded and adopted." Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. So that after such amendment went through the list could not be construed as approval of Group Health Association or its members, whereas before it might have been?

A. The amendment had nothing to do with anything other than the grammatical construction of the document.

Q. Nevertheless the amendment had the effect that I have just indicated, did it not?

Mr. Leahy: I object. That is argumentative.

The Court: Yes; that is argumentative.

A. It is not my conclusion.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Is it not true that when that list was amended and was ready to be issued the following transpired in the minutes, directly connected with the list itself and without intervening colloquy whatever (reading):

"Dr. Raymond T. Holden, Jr., inquired as to the personnel maintained in the proposed Group Health Association, Inc. Dr. Hooe pointed out that it was a separate individual corporation and would have to be approved as a single unit. As a matter of information Dr. Hooe would inquire if he was right in the assumption that this approved list would not have to be submitted to the Society, but from tonight would be filed in the secretary's office."

Does not that appear?

A. It appears.

Q. Just in the way I have stated it, does it not?

A. Yes.

Q So that Group Health Association was specifically considered at the very time that the White List was approved, and in connection with it?

A. Group Health Association was specifically considered and excluded.

Q. That is what I thought.

A. Excluded from consideration in connection with the White List.

Q. Do you find anything that excludes it here (indicating)?

A. (Reading): "Dr. Holden inquired as to the personnel maintained in the proposed Group Health Association. Dr.

Hooe pointed out it was a separate individual corporation and would have to be approved as a single unit when it came up for consideration for approval."

Q. Does it say "when it came up for consideration"?

A. No; but that is the meaning of it.

Q. I think you testified that the reason it could not be approved then was because it had not made application for approval; is that right?

A. That among other things.

Q. Did you not know that at that time it had been in existence as a corporation some five months?

Q. I did not. I don't know how long it had had corporate existence. I had known of it only since about the middle of May.

Q. Did you not know that in June and July it was an organization seeking medical personnel?

A. I did not know whether it was then seeking medical personnel.

Q. Had not Dr. Brown told you that in his meeting with you on June 24?

A. He said that eventually it would seek medical personnel.

Q. Did he not say they were seeking medical personnel then?

A. I don't recollect that.

Q. Did you not know they had already approached Dr. Neill and asked him to come with the staff?

A. I had no knowledge of that.

Q. Did you not say when you went down to see the representatives of Group Health that you understood approaches had been made to your members, on July 26?

A. Yes.

Q. So you knew on July 26 that they were seeking medical personnel?

A. Obviously I did.

Q. Do you think you gained that information between July 12 and July 26?

A. I don't know how I gained the information.

Q. Doctor Macatee, did you not know on July 12 that they were seeking medical personnel and had been approaching some of your members?

A. I couldn't testify to that to save my life.

Q. You would not deny it?

A. I cannot deny it; no.

Q. Was not the purpose of having an approved list to guide your members as to whether or not they could join up with or participate in certain organizations?

A. In certain organizations, but not Group Health Association.

Q. That is what you said. But I ask you whether or not the whole purpose of the approved list was not to guide your members as to whether they could join or not?

Mr. Leahy: Join what?

Mr. Lewin: Organizations.

A. The whole purpose of the approved list was in Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5, which had to do with something else entirely, unrelated to Group Health Association.

Mr. Lewin: I move that that be stricken as not responsive.

The Court: You asked him what the purpose was.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. I asked you whether it was to indicate to your members whether they could participate with certain organizations.

A. My answer would have to be something of a recital, and that is that the amendment to the constitution began in January, 1936, and it was amended in January, 1937.

Mr. Lewin: I do not think that is responsive, your Honor. I move that it be stricken as totally unresponsive.

The Witness: And that it is——

Mr. Lewin: I have a motion pending.

The Court: Just a moment, Doctor. It is not always possible to answer a question yes or no. It may not give a correct impression. I think it is well, if he can answer yes or no, to do so, and then make any qualifications or explanations that are necessary. After all, it does not make much difference how you approach the answer. He was giving you his understanding of the purpose. You asked for the purpose. He was explaining to you the purpose as he understood it.

Mr. Lewin: I most respectfuly submit that the witness was giving me a history.

The Court: I think the Doctor was getting away from the purpose.

The Witness: My next sentence would complete the history.

Mr. Lewin: I do not want the history. I move that all that history go out.

The Court: He told you the purpose, and that is what you were after. Suppose you put another question.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. I will ask you this, whether it would not have been a more suitable time to put the organization on or off that list when they were in the formative stage and going around trying to get medical personnel, if you wanted to guide your own members?

A. It may have been a suitable time, but we did not have sufficient information about it to know at that time.

Q. Now, Doctor, you said that one of the reasons it could not go on the approved list was because it had not applied for approval.

A. Did I say that?

Q. That is what I recollect. Did you not say that? What is your answer?

A. I would rather say that in my report I said so in September.

Q. Did you not testify here on Friday that that was the reason you could not put it on the approved list?

A. My memory fails me there, sir.

The Court: Suppose you ask him now and save time.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. What is your answer now? Was that the reason you could not put it on the approved list, or one of them? Will you answer that question?

A. The answer is that it is bound up in the fact that at that meeting the special committee was charged to go down and have another talk with Group Health Association to see if we could not reach some accord.

Mr. Lewin: I object, and ask that the answer be stricken as unresponsive.

The Court: Have you got the record there?

Mr. Lewin: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Did you not testify as follows (reading):

"Q. Did that approved list, as it came before the Executive Committee on July 12, 1937, have anything whatsoever to do with the approval or disapproval of Group Health Association, Inc.?"

And you answered:

"A. It did not.

"Q. Why not?

"A. Because Group Health Association had not been at a stage of development where it had asked for approval or where approval could be given, for lack of information."

Was that your testimony?

A. That sounds like it.

Q. Can you tell me what other organizations that were approved and put on the approved list asked for approval at that time?

A. None. I say, none, Mr. Lewin. I am not sure about that.

Q. That is your best recollection, is it not?

A. I was not a member of the committee that received applications for approval, so I just don't know.

Q. Application for approval was not a condition precedent to getting on that approved list, was it?

A. Not this one; no.

Q. As a matter of fact, Dr. McGovern was going out into other states to round up the list himself, was he not?

A. I don't know how to answer that, because it is not within my own knowledge.

Q. Don't the minutes on that occasion show this, Dr. Macatee?

Mr. Leahy: What meeting?

Mr. Lewin. July 12, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37). "Dr. McGovern stated that he requested the various county medical societies in Virginia and Maryland, within ten miles of the District of Columbia, to send him a list of their membership. He was not very successful by letter and intended to contact the secretary personally. He added there were a few physicians practicing medicine in the District of Columbia who were on the rolls of the Society. The Society's office was busy at the present time checking the list of physicians and surgeons as classified in the newest telephone directory and the Commission on Life Insurance has been approached to obtain a list of all associates in the District of Columbia."

Doesn't that appear?

A. It does.

Q. And didn't that transpire on that occasion?

A. It did.

Q. So, would you say now, that the failure of Group Health Association to apply formally was any reason for not including it on the approved list?

A. That was still a good reason, though not the controlling reason.

Q. What was good about it?

A. It was true.

Q. You still say it was true, that one of the reasons for leaving Group Health off that list was because it didn't apply?

A. I said that was true. The controlling reason was we hadn't come to the point where we could approve or disapprove of it finally.

Q. Let me see if I can make this more clear. As a matter of fact, hadn't Dr. Brown said he was anxious to go along with the District Medical Society, prior to July 12, 1937?

A. That may have been one of his statements at the meeting.

Q. And hadn't Mr. Penniman said in substance that same thing; that he was anxious to go along with the Medical Society and have your approval?

A. He may have said it.

Q. Now, when you acted as spokesman on July 26, 1937, in the meeting with the Group Health Association trustees, I think you said that the meeting's minutes herein correctly reported that meeting, did you not; that was the meeting of July 26th?

A. That statement was extemporaneous and, as transcribed, ran along with my general thought that I wished to express therein.

Q. Didn't you say this to the Group Health trustees at that time:

"The principal difficulty that we are facing at the present time also is the knowledge of certain members of the District Medical Society have been approached with a view to serving certain organizations in a medical capacity and professional capacity"; and then, skipping a little:

"There is another provision which prohibits members of the Medical Society from lending their assistance to any corporation, group or individual under a contract until the practices and purposes of the organization have been approved by the Medical Society" et cetera.

You said that?

A. Yes.

Q. Wasn't this the other provision, this section 5, under which this approved list went out on July 29th?

A. I don't know whether it was section 5 or section 2.

Q. Isn't section 5 the one that prohibits members of the Medical Society from lending their services to any corporation, group or individual unless the practice and purposes have been approved?

A. Yes, that is the provision of section 5.

Q. Then you were calling section 5 to the attention of the Group Health Association as early as July 26, 1937?

A. Yes.

Q. You were calling their attention to it in connection with the information you had that Group Health Association was seeking a staff and had approached members of the Medical Society?

A. Obviously.

Q. Is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, on July 27th, isn't it correct, that the resolution to send the so-called white list to the members of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia was amended so that it would be sent to all the hospitals as well?

A. If the record shows so.

Q. Aren't you familiar with that record?

A. No, not that familiar.

The Court: There isn't any question about that, is there?

Mr. Leahy: No, whatever it was; I know there was such a provision.

The Witness: Yes, that states so in the minutes.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. That amendment was adopted on July 27th?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, on July 29th, the so-called white list was issued for the first time?

A. I have heard evidence here to that effect.

Q. Wasn't it sent out with two letters dated July 29th, signed by the Secretary of the District Medical Society?

A. There appears to be such a letter.

Q. And didn't the first of these letters read as follows: (Gov. Ex. 45).

"Dear Doctor:

"It may have come to your attention that there is an organization or organizations that are interested in gaining medical personnel. Your attention is called to Chapter IX, Article 4, Section 5 of the Constitution", quoting it in full.

Isn't that what it says?

A. Yes.

Mr. Leahy: It says more than that.

Mr. Lewin: Yes, it does:

"You are particularly urged to submit to the C. C. & I. M. Committee, pursuant to the Constitution, any and all contracts, written or verbal, under which you may contemplate giving your services"?

A. It says that.

Q. That letter which carried the white list with it refers to an organization or organizations that are interested in gaining medical personnel, does it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you say that one of those organizations was Group Health Association?

A. Presumably.

Q. So that whether it was directed to Group Health Association on July 12th, or not, it was plainly directed to Group Health on July 29, 1937, the first time it went out?

A. That among others.

Q. Now, at this very meeting on July 29th, didn't you make that fact abundantly clear? Didn't you say this with regard to Group Health Association,—(handing witness Gov. Ex. 37 and indicating)?

"It was his impression, gained from contact with certain individuals, that they are highly intelligent people who have profoundly studied this subject, who are aware of all the social currents flowing through the country with respect to the relation of the medical profession and the people. They are aware of what has been done elsewhere and the results." Did you say that or words to that effect?

A. My answer is that those minutes, taken down in longhand, had been shown not to express my thoughts so often that I hesitate to say they are, or that I did say that; but that was my opinion.

Q. That was your opinion, and you have no reason to doubt you said it?

A. Correct.

Q. When you were talking about "these people," weren't you talking about the sponsors of Group Health Association?

A. Yes.

Q. And didn't you say:

"My feeling is that this is a group of responsible, honest, rather public-spirited people, who are undertaking to do something for the benefit of their associates in office. They are convinced and have secured what they call competent legal advice that they are on secure legal ground. They have by reason of their knowledge of similar projects elsewhere become convinced that wherever such organizations spring up they almost consistently receive the antagonism and the animosity of the local medical profession."

Didn't you say that?

A. Probably.

Q. And when you were speaking of these "projects" weren't you referring to the Ross-Loos Clinic and other prepayment plans such as that?

A. Presumably.

Q. Didn't you say also:

"Dr Macatee added that he was of the opinion that their desire to avoid publicity in this matter was due to their knowledge of that fact"?

A. Probably.

Q. And by that didn't you mean the reluctance on the part of the Group Health people to open their doors to give you the contract with H.O.L.C. was due to the fact that they knew by reason of their knowledge of "similar projects elsewhere * * * that wherever such organizations spring up they almost consistently receive the antagonism and animosity of the local medical profession"? Isn't that what you meant?

A. I think that is why they proceeded with their organization without our cooperation and advice before they asked for it.

Q. And you seemed to feel that they were somewhat reasonable, knowing of the antagonism of the local medical society, in being a little cautious in putting all their information in your hands?

A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you say this, following your discussion of Group Health Association, and as part and parcel of it:

"Dr. Macatee added that there is now available a list of corporations and organizations and persons employing physicians in a contractual relationship, prepared under provisions of the constitution and by-laws. He urged the members to take the list and examine it carefully and familiarize themselves with the contents".

Did you say that?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you urged this examination of the list, and urged the members to familiarize themselves with the content, weren't you referring to this approved list issued July 29th?

A. Yes.

Q. Weren't you calling attention to its contents in connection with their attitude toward Group Health Association?

A. Yes, because the adoption of the white list had been on account of our experience in another matter, and we finished up that business in order to save us further headaches of the same sort.

Q. Is this also the fact too: that after you talked that way, Dr. Sprigg reread a recommendation of the Executive Committee which was adopted?

Mr. Leahy: What date is that?

Mr. Lewin: July 29, 1937.

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. And didn't that resolution have to do with Group Health Association?

A. It did.

Q. And then didn't the Secretary say, without any other subject matter intervening between Group Health and what he said, this:

"The Secretary stated that it was the duty of the Society's office to fulfill instructions from the Executive Committee to supply each member of the Society with a copy of the approved list that had been prepared, pursuant to Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5 of the constitution. He pointed out that they were being mailed by registered mail. He announced that any member wishing to secure this list tonight could do so by applying at the Secretary's office and signing for same, which would aid in the distribution"?

A. And the two statements had no connection with each other.

Q. Although one follows the other?

A. The minutes are never subdivided to show divisions of subjects.

Q. Was there any subject matter that intervened between the matter concerning Group Health Association and this matter?

A. Nothing appears in the minutes, but it might very well be and appear that taking up another item the Secretary said thus and so.

Q. But you don't know about that?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Leahy went over with you, I believe, the letter which the defendant Sprigg prepared in the fall of 1937, addressed to each one of the hospitals; am I right?

A. I can't give direct testimony about that, because I wasn't present at the meeting when this thing was discussed.

Q. Didn't that letter start off by calling attention to this section 5?

Mr. Leahy: The witness said he had no knowledge of it.

Mr. Lewin: I know he said that, but the Court has indicated that we may read portions of the minutes.

The Court: Yes, you may read them, but if the witness says he has no knowledge on the subject he can't testify to it.

The Witness: If you put the letter before me I can say "I suppose that might be the letter," but I wasn't present when it was presented and considered.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. You were present on November 3rd, 1937?

A. I think I was not.

Q. Didn't you testify this morning with regard to the resolution of the defendant Willson, seconded by the defendant Christie?

A. I couldn't have testified as a direct witness, because I wasn't present on that occasion.

Q. I ask you whether that resolution, which was certainly introduced again through your testimony, whether that resolution didn't say that the District Medical Society had an apparent means of hindering the successful operation of Group Health Association if it could prevent the doctors from being received in the local private hospitals, and then didn't the resolution refer directly to section 5, the same section adopted in March, and under which the white list went out in July?

A. I have no direct knowledge of that document; I would have to appeal to the record.

Q. Let me come back to that meeting which you had with the Group Health trustees on July 26th. You remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. Isn't it true that at that meeting you quoted somewhat from the principles of ethics?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you follow that up by pointing out that they might have difficulty in having and getting consultations?

A. Yes.

Q. And didn't you point out that they might have difficulty in getting hospital accommodations, because of the principles of ethics, medical ethics?

A. I am not clear about that.

Q. Wasn't one of the principles of medical ethics, to which you directed their attention, certain criteria for making contract practice ethical?

A. Yes.

Q. And didn't one of them include this "free choice of physicians"?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, isn't it true that in June, 1937, the American Medical Association had amended its principles of ethics so as to include what it thought was a definition of "free choice of physicians"?

A. Yes.

Q. And isn't it true that you failed to bring that definition to the attention of the Group Health representatives when you met with them?

A. I did fail to bring it to their attention.

Q. Didn't you consciously fail to do so?

A. I did.

Q. And because you wanted to withhold from them this more liberal definition of "free choice"?

A. No, the record will show that it was withheld because it was ambiguous, had just been adopted; we didn't know the purport of it.

Q. And isn't it true that because it was ambiguous, you refrained from giving them that information?

A. I did.

Q. But tried to leave them with the impression that this prohibition against free choice was a clear and unambiguous thing?

A. You are asking me now to recall motive?

Q. I am asking you whether that was not your intent to withhold from them this recent amendment to the principle of free choice, and to leave them with the impression that contract practice was condemned because of a clear meaning of free choice?

A. If you want the best of my recollection I will say that I did not have any such intent, and to the best of my recollection I discovered this newly adopted item after the thing.

Q. Dr. Macatee, weren't you present at the House of Delegates in Atlantic City in the early part of June, when this very amendment pertaining to free choice of physicians was enacted?

A. I was present at the meeting but I might not have been present at the session; more likely I was otherwise engaged at the time.

Q. Is it your thought that you forgot this on July 26th?

A. Reading back on the record, I think I forgot all about it.

Q. But you didn't forget it on July 27th, the very next day?

A. Naturally, I would think over what I had said, trying to summarize what I had said extemporaneously and, looking over it, see what I had omitted, came across this thing and brought it to the attention of the Executive Committee.

Q. Didn't you bring this to the attention of the Executive Committee one day after this meeting with the representatives of Group Health Association?

"Dr. Macatee, in continuing, read an excerpt from the latest issue of the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association, having to do with the definition of free choice of physicians, as follows:

"'The phrase "free choice of physicians," as applied to contract practice, is defined to mean that degree of freedom in choosing a physician which can be exercised under usual conditions of employment between patient and physician when no third person has a valid interest or intervenes. The interjection of a third party who has a valid interest or who intervenes does not per se cause the contract to be unethical."

That would apply, would it not, to Group Health Association?

A. No.

Q. Wouldn't that have some reference to Group Health?

A. No, because the reference is to constituent or component units, local associations or societies.

Q. Doesn't it say that the "interjection of a third person who has a valid interest between patient and physician does not per se cause the contract to be unethical"?

A. It does say so there.

Q. And doesn't it define a "valid interest" as one where, by law or necessity, a third party is legally responsible either for cost of care or for indemnity, and doesn't it supply the definition of "intervention" as the voluntary assumption of partial or full financial responsibility for medical care?

A. It does.

Q. And wouldn't that definition cover Group Health Association as one who intervenes?

A. Under the law of necessity?

Q. No, not under the law of necessity. It says "voluntary assumption: voluntary assumption of partial or full financial responsibility for medical care." Wouldn't that fit Group Health Association exactly?

A. You will have to apply the definition.

Q. And then doesn't it continue: "Intervention shall not prescribe"—I guess that means forbid; "endeavor by component or constituent medical society"—I guess that means members of the A. M. A., doesn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. "To maintain high quality of service rendered by members serving under approved sickness service agreement between such societies and government boards or bureaus and approved by the respective society."

A. That is the controlling phrase there.

Q. In other words, when the local society does it and approves it that throws out this "free choice of physicians"?

A. Yes.

Q. You get free choice of physicians when the local society approves it, but you may not have such free choice when something like Group Health does it, is that it?

A. I will have to leave it to you to interpret.

Q. Doesn't this follow immediately afterward:

"The ambiguity of the situation was immediately apparent.

"Dr. Macatee said that he certainly did not read this at the time of the meeting with the H. O. L. C. unit. He did, however, read on that occasion extensively from the principles of medical ethics under which the medical profession is bound, showing that the project as at present constituted could not be expected to be approved by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, the local unit of the American Medical Association."

Is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. So at that time you had enough information to be very definite that Group Health could not go on your approved list, didn't you?

A. That was my opinion.

Q. And that was July 27, 1937?

A. Yes. I told them so on the 26th.

Q. About two weeks after the white list was approved and two days before it issued?

A. That is the way the dates fall.

Redirect examination:

I received a letter dated November 21, 1938, from Dr. Kerr, marked Def. Ex. 46.

Def. Ex. 46 was received in evidence and read to the jury, as follows:

This letter is November 21st, 1938, on the stationery of Dr. Harry Hyland Kerr, 1744 M Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

"DEAR DR. MACATEE:

The Senior Surgical Staff of the Garfield Memorial Hospital unanimously recommend to the Advisory Committee and to the Board that courtesy surgical privileges be denied to Dr. R. E. Selders.

The Surgical staff believes that, though Dr. Selders has a competent post-graduate degree in Surgery, his experience has been limited to one year as resident in a non-teaching hospital in a small Massachusetts city, and is not sufficient to qualify him to take care of the surgery that may arise among 2000 or 3000 people.

Sincerely yours, Signed H. H. Kerr for the Staff."

The first time I ever heard of the questionnaire from Dr. Warfield concerning Garfield Hospital was at this trial, and that questionnaire was never received by the staff of Garfield Hospital to my knowledge, nor were answers ever made coming from the committee, to the best of my knowledge, to any questionnaire.

The language "aiding and abetting Group Health Association," as used in Gov. Ex. 499, means that the board decided that they would not admit Dr. Selders to courtesy privileges because of the alleged illegality of Group Health; and that to have done so the hospital would be put in a position of aiding and abetting an illegally operated corporation.

When I drew the definition of "emergency" at Garfield I had in mind nothing except that nobody would be excluded from the hospital if they came there in a real emergency, and I had no idea that the definition would go beyond Garfield Hospital.

Q. Do you recall whether—and I want to see if I can straighten this out in just a minute—in the minutes of July 12th, 1937. Do you recall whether Dr. Verbrycke had submitted a report while on the Economics Committee of the District Medical Society or the chairman thereof?

A. Yes, I have seen that report somewhere. It was a number of pages, and I remember seeing it; I don't remember the contents.

Q. June 21st was the date that was submitted, was it not?

A. I don't know.

Q. All right, now, was Dr. Verbrycke, on July 12th, in office in any committee at all in the District Medical Society?

A. He was not.

Q. Your attention is directed now to Dr. Verbrycke's letter which was made part of these minutes. Doesn't it show and read: "I have no longer any official status, but I am deeply interested in the entire subject, and since I was the author of the original report which has been approved by the Executive Committee, I ask your leave to submit some further thoughts with the hope that they may be of some slight help." Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall having looked at the opening sentence of that Verbrycke letter wherein he said he had no longer any official office and his reference to the report which he says has been approved in principle by the Executive Committee?

A. Yes.

Q. Why?

A. I thought you only asked if I remembered looking at the opening remarks in the letter.

Q. Yes. Now, having done that, do you recall what it was that was approved by the Executive Committee?

A. He refers in his letter to his report of June 21st.

Q. Will you look to see if anywhere in the minutes you find anything indicating what action the Executive Committee took with reference to this particular letter? Kindly look at the top of page 5, and see if it refers to Dr. Verbrycke's letter.

A. I think it does.

Q. What happened to it?

Mr. Lewin: Is he going to read from the minutes?

The Witness: I made a motion to the effect that the supplementary report of the sub-committee be received and be held on the table for future consideration, after the report of the sub-committee. That was seconded and adopted.

Q. Do you recall now whether at any other time the report was ever taken off the table for action?

A. I don't recall; that is my independent memory.

I identify Def. Ex. 47 as the minutes of the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Medical Society of May 12, 1937. To my knowledge no member of the District Medical Society had heard of Group Health on May 12, 1937.

The list referred to in the meeting of May 12, 1937, is the White List that came out on July 12, 1937.

Defense counsel read Def. Ex. 47 to the jury as follows:

"Dr. F. X. McGovern, Chairman of the Subcommittee to prepare an approved list in accordance with the provisions of Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5 of the constitution was recognized.

"The various items were considered seriatum as follows:

"1. All members of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

"2. Medical staffs of all hospitals, institutions and clinics, each member of which has been approved by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, and/or the American College of Surgeons, the American Medical Association, the American Hospital Association, in the District of Columbia or within ten miles thereof.

"It was agreed to amend recommendation No. 2 as follows:

"'Medical Staffs of all hospitals, institutions and clinics, each member of which has been approved by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.'

"3. The United States Government, medical personnel on duty in the District of Columbia or within ten miles thereof, namely, i. e., the United States Army, Navy, Public Health Service, and the Veterans Administration.

"4. The Health Officer and attached medical personnel.

"5. Membership of the District Medical Society.

"6. Membership of the Homeopathic Medical Society.

"7. Members of the Montgomery County (Maryland), Prince Georges County (Maryland), Fairfax County (Virginia), and Arlington County (Virginia), medical societies, who reside within ten miles of the District of Columbia.

"8. Members of the Alexandria Medical Society.

"9. The following compensation clinics.

"1. Washington Industrial Accident Clinic.

"2. Washington Medical Building Workmen's Clinic.

"3. Northeast Insurance Clinic.

"4. Union Market Workmen's Compensation Clinic.

"5. Market Compensation Accident Clinic.

"6. Washington Compensation Accident Clinic.

"7. Washington Insurance Clinic.

"8. Harry M. Lewis Clinic.

"9. First Aid Station.

"Discussion on the recommendation No. 9 was participated in after the reading of the other reports.

"10. All medical personnel connected with the Federal or Municipal Government within the District of Columbia or within ten miles thereof.

"Dr. Daniel Borden was of the opinion that this should not be included.

"Others could see no objection to this subdivision.

"11. Membership of the Medico-Chirurgical (Colored Medical Society).

"12. Membership of the Robert T. Freeman Dental Society (Colored Dental Society). In the consideration of item 9. Dr. W. M. Sprigg stated he thought the clinic should be listed temporarily."

The clinics appearing on the list set out in the May 12 minutes appear on the approved list of July 12 and these clinics had been in existence in the District since the passage of the Industrial Compensation law. These clinics had been before the District Medical Society on their purpose, maintenance and operation and had been approved.

It was stated on July 12, 1937, that that list was incomplete and as a matter of fact the Washington Sanitarium was not on the list. It did not purport to be a complete list. There were many doctors in Washington who were not on that list. Group Health never made a formal application for approval to the District Medical Society.

Q. There is one other thing. Under cross-examination you had your attention directed to the minutes of July 29. You made some answer in substance in effect to the end that the minutes had no subdivisions as to topics. Do you recall that?

A. I do.

Q. And your attention was directed to the reading of one entry which follows another entry in those minutes?

A. I recollect that.

Q. And your attention was directed to the minute with the statement that there was no information intervening between these minutes. I will ask you if the minutes show a line between those paragraphs, showing that there was something transpired in there?

A. There is a line indicating a division; a typed line.

Mr. Lewin: Wait a minute. What is that?

Mr. Leahy: A typed line.

Mr. Lewin: Is there any subject matter or discussion that appears between the resolution with regard to Group Health and this statement to the secretary?

The Court: Let the jury see it.

Mr. Leahy: Yes. Let it be passed to the jury so they may see it.

(Thereupon the minutes were passed among the jurors for inspection.)

The Court: Is that all?

Mr. Leahy: Yes. And I ask the same permission with respect to these minutes. If the jury will also look at the other pages to see where the breakdown comes.

Mr. Lewin: There is another page in the minutes I would like the jury to look at also.

The Court: Yes, you may do that.

Mr. Lewin: I would like the jury to consider these three paragraphs on this page, particularly the third one.

Mr. Leahy: You mean read them over?

Mr. Lewin: I would like to have them look over this statement of Dr. Macatee, and the subject matter of this here (indicating).

Dr. Walter Estell Lee, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am a doctor. I reside in Philadelphia. I am professor of surgery at the Graduate School of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania and have been connected with that school since its beginning in 1920. I graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1902; after graduation I trained at the Pennsylvania Hospital for six years. I signed Def. Ex. 44, being a letter to Dr. Frederick Sanderson, and forwarded it to him.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

In 1937 and 1938 Dr. George H. Meeker was dean of the Graduate School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania. I also signed a letter marked Gov. Ex. 661, and I suppose my stenographer sent it, as I gave instructions to have it sent. I also signed Gov. Ex. 659 and sent it out in the same manner as Gov. Ex. 661. The signature "Walter Estell Lee" on Gov. Ex. 660 is not mine, and I can't imagine who signed it, and I can't recognize the letter as my own.

J. Francis Moore, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Burke:

I have been a witness in this case previously and brought some documents of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board which were subpoenaed. I identify Def. Ex. 48, 49, and 50 and 50a as the original records of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

These records are records found in our files, and this particular record was in the minutes file and is part of the minutes of the Home Owners' Loan Bank.

Excerpts from Gov. Ex. 1, a stipulation, being Articles I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, and X, with amendments to December 20, 1938, of the by-laws of Group Health Association Inc., were read to the jury, as follows:

By-Laws of Group Health Association, Incorporated:

"Article I.

"Section 1. The name of this corporation shall be Group Health Association, Incorporated."

That is the name and location as adopted March 22nd, 1937.

"Article I.

Section 3. Other offices for the transaction of business shall be located at such places as the Board of Trustees may from time to time determine."

That also is the article and section as adopted March 22nd, 1937. The first article, Section 2 provides that its principal place of business shall be located in Washington.

"Article II. Membership.

Section 1. The corporation shall have no capital stock but shall be an association controlled by its members. The membership of this corporation shall be composed solely of employees of any branch of the United States government service, including such other classes or groups of persons, other than officers and enlisted men of the United States Army and Navy, as shall, within the provisions of the charter and the law governing the corporation, be designated by the Board of Trustees, provided, however that in case persons other than employees of Federal Home Loan Bank Board, its subsidiaries and affiliates, shall be designated by the Board of Trustees, provided, however that in case persons other than employees of Federal Home Loan Bank Board, its subsidiaries and affiliates, shall be designated as eligible for membership, such action shall first have approval of the members as herinafter provided."

That was the article as adopted March 22nd, 1937, and on May 25th, 1937, Section 1 of Article II was amended, and it then read:

"Section 1. The corporation shall have no capital stock but shall be an association controlled by its members. The membership of this corporation shall be composed solely of employees of any branch of the United States Government service, including such other classes or groups of persons, other than officers and enlisted men of the United States Army and Navy; as are provided for in the charter and the laws governing the Corporation, provided, however, that in case persons other than employees of Federal Home Loan Bank Board and agencies under its direction shall be designated as eligible for membership, such action shall first have approval of a majority of the Board of Trustees and a majority of the members of the corporation present in person or by proxy at a regular or special meeting."

Then, on October 4, 1937, the section and article were further amended:

"Article II, Section 1. The corporation shall have no capital stock but shall be an association controlled by its members. The membership of this corporation shall be composed solely of civil employees of the executive branch of the United States Government service; provided, however, that in case persons other than employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and agencies under its direction shall be designated as eligible for membership, such action shall first have approval of a majority of the Board of Trustees. Employees of the legislative branch or judicial branch of the United States Government service are not eligible for membership."

Then, on October 25th, 1937, it was again amended to read:

"Article II, Section 1. The corporation shall have no capital stock but shall be an association controlled by its members. The membership of this corporation shall be composed solely of civil employees of the executive branch of the United States Government service; provided, however, that in case persons other than employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and agencies under its direction shall be designated as eligible for membership, such action shall first have approval of a majority of the Board of Trustees."

Then, on September 19th, 1938, the article was further amended to read:

"Section 1. The corporation shall have no capital stock but shall be an association controlled by its members. The membership of this corporation shall be composed solely of civil employees of the executive branch of the United States Government service."

Then:

"Section 2. All members shall have equal rights of membership and the right to vote for the Board of Trustees, and the right to share in the distribution of the assets of the corporation if liquidation takes place as in the charter is provided."

That was adopted March 22nd, 1937. On May 25th, 1937, the section was amended to read:

"Section 2. All members shall have equal rights of membership including the right to vote for the Board of Trustees, and the right to share in the distribution of the assets of the corporation if liquidation takes place as in the charter is provided."

"Section 3. Applicants for membership who have just entered the service of one of the aforesaid Federal branches or agencies in which the corporation is permitted to operate shall be eligible to all the benefits of this corporation from the date of first payment of dues, provided they are duly elected at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees, and, provided, further, that, as to new employees, they apply for membership within one calendar month after entering the service of such Federal branch or agency."

That was the section as adopted March 22nd, 1937, and on May 25th, 1937, that was amended to read as follows:

"Section 3. Applicants for membership who have just entered the service of one of the aforesaid Federal branches or agencies in which the corporation is permitted to operate shall be eligible to all the benefits of this corporation from the date of first payment of dues, provided they are duly elected at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees, and provided further, that they apply for membership within one calendar month after entering the service of such Federal agency or br ch."

Section 3 of Article II was amended, again, on October 4, 1937, to read as follows:

"Article II, Section 3. Applicants for membership who have just entered the government service aforesaid shall be eligible to all the benefits of this corporation from the date of first payment of dues, provided they are duly elected at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees, and provided, further, that they apply for membership within one calendar month from the date of entrance on duty in the government service aforesaid."

Then the section was again amended on April 5th, 1937, to read:

"Article II, Section 3. Applicants for membership who have just entered the government service aforesaid shall be eligible to all the benefits of this corporation from the date of first payment of dues, provided they are duly elected at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees, and provided, further, that they apply for membership within one calendar month from the date of entrance on duty in the government service aforesaid."

And then on September 19, 1938, the section was again amended to read:

"Section 3. The Board of Trustees shall reject an application for membership if the applicant is not an employee of the character herein designated, and may reject any application for membership. The board of trustees, for just and reasonable cause, may expel from membership, after not less than fifteen (15) days notice and opportunity for hearing before the Board of Trustees, any person who, in the opinion of said Board of Trustees, shall have abused the privilege of his membership or is otherwise guilty of wrongful conduct detrimental to the Association or its membership. The Board of Trustees, after hearing as hereinbefore provided, shall be the sole judge of whether the conduct in question warrants expulsion from membership. Membership dues shall end upon expulsion."

Section 4:

"Dependents of members hereafter becoming members of this corporation will not be eligible to benefits from the corporation until the member has been in good standing for a period of three calendar months beginning with the date of his or her application.

All employees who do not hereafter apply for membership in the corporation within one calendar month from the date of entrance on duty as an employee of one of the Federal branches or agencies in which the corporation is permitted to operate, shall not be eligible to benefits from the corporation until three calendar months after the date of their application, but during said three calendar months no dues shall be chargeable against such member."

That was adopted March 22, 1937. On May 25, 1937, the section and article were amended to read as follows:

"Section 4. Dependents of members hereafter becoming members of this corporation will not be eligible to benefits from the corporation until the member has been in good standing for a period of three calendar months beginning with the date of his or her application, provided, however, this section shall not apply to dependents of members in good standing as of the date of beginning business.

Employees who do not apply for membership in the corporation within one calendar month from the date of entrance on duty in one of the Federal branches or agencies in which the corporation is permitted to operate, shall not be eligible to benefits from the corporation until three calendar months after the date of their application, but during said three calendar months no dues shall be chargeable against such member."

Again, on October 4, 1937, the section 4 of Article II was again amended to read:

"Article II, Section 4. Dependents of members hereafter becoming members of this corporation will not be eligible to benefits from the corporation until the member has been in good standing for a period of three calendar months beginning with the date of his or her application, provided, however, this section shall not apply to dependents of members in good standing as of the date of beginning business.

Employees who do not apply for membership in the corporation within one calendar month from the date of entrance on duty in the government service aforesaid shall not be eligible to benefits from the corporation until three calendar months after the date of their application, but during said three calendar months no dues shall be chargeable against such member."

Again, on October 25, 1937, this section was amended to read:

"Article II, Section 4. Dependents of members hereafter becoming members of this corporation will not be eligible to benefits from the corporation until the member has been in good standing for a period of three calendar months beginning with the date of his or her application, provided, however, that this section shall not apply to dependents of members in good standing as of the date of beginning business.

"Employees who do not apply for membership in the corporation within one calendar month from the date of entrance on duty in the government service aforesaid shall not be eligible to benefits from the corporation until three calendar months after the date of their application, but during said three calendar months no dues shall be chargeable against such member."

Again on May 2nd, 1938, it was amended to read:

"Section 4. Dependents of those hereafter becoming members of this corporation will not be eligible to the benefits of this corporation until the member has been in good standing for a period of three calendar months, beginning with the date of his or her application, provided, however, that this section shall not apply to dependents of members in good standing as of the date of beginning operations.

Employees who do not apply for membership within one calendar month from the date of entrance on duty in the government service aforesaid shall not be eligible to the benefits of this corporation until three calendar months after the date of their application, during which three months, however, no dues shall be paid by or be chargeable to such applicants."

The section was again amended on September 19, 1938, to read:

"Section 4. If any dues of a member are not paid within sixty (60) days after their due date, such members automatically at the end of the last day of such period cease to be members and can only be reinstated to membership by action of the Board of Trustees. If any dues of a member are not paid within ten (10) days after their due date, such member shall be refused all services except in case of serious emergency until such dues are paid: Provided, that the Board of Trustees may waive this provision for a period of not in excess of sixty (60) days with respect to any person who has been furloughed from Government service."

Then:

"Section 5. The Board of Trustees shall have authority to reject an application for membership without cause if the applicant is not an employee of the character hereinabove designated, and shall have the right, for just and reasonable cause, to reject the application for membership of any such employee, and shall have the privilege of dropping or expelling members from this organization after not less than fifteen (15) days' notice and a hearing before the Board of Trustees when, in the opinion of said Board of Trustees, the member shall have abused the privileges of the corporation in any way by imposing on the corporation by having medical aid furnished to someone not entitled to the same; or otherwise acting in such manner as to injure the corporation through his wrongful conduct. The Board of Trustees, after hearing as hereinbefore provided, shall be the sole judge of whether the conduct in question warrants expulsion from membership but membership dues shall end upon expulsion."

That was the section as adopted March 22nd, 1937. On May 25th, 1937, that section was amended to read:

"Section 5. The Board of Trustees shall reject an application for membership without cause if the applicant is not an employee of the character hereinabove designated. It shall have the right, for just and reasonable cause, to reject the application for membership of any employee, and it may drop or expel members from this corporation after not less than fifteen (15) days' notice and hearing before the Board of Trustees when, in the opinion of said Board of Trustees, the members shall have abused the privileges of the corporation in any way by imposing on the corporation by having medical aid furnished to someone not entitled to the same; or otherwise acting in such manner as to injure the corporation through his wrongful conduct. The Board of Trustees, after hearing as hereinbefore provided, shall be the sole judge of whether the conduct in question warrants expulsion from membership and membership dues shall end upon such expulsion."

Then, on May 2nd, 1938, the section was again amended to read:

"Section 5. The Board of Trustees shall reject an application for membership without cause if the applicant is not an employee of the character hereinabove designated. It shall have the right, for just and reasonable cause, to reject any application for membership, and may drop or expel from membership, after not less than fifteen (15) days' notice and hearing before the Board of Trustees, any person who, in the opinion of said Board of Trustees, shall have abused the privileges of his membership or is otherwise guilty of wrongful conduct detrimental to the corporation or its membership. The Board of Trustees, after hearing as hereinbefore provided, shall be the sole judge of whether the conduct in question warrants expulsion from membership. Membership dues shall end upon expulsion."

Then on September 19, 1938, it was again amended to read:

"Section 5. No member may have services procured for a dependent at a time when he himself is not eligible to have services procured for himself.

Section 6. Members whose connection with the Federal branches or agencies aforesaid is severed shall have the privilege of remaining members of the corporation by payment of their monthly dues and assessments direct to the Secretary in advance. If the dues of members coming within this provision are not paid by the 10th day of the month for which such dues are payable, such members automatically lose all rights to service from the corporation and can only be reinstated to membership by action of the Board of Trustees."

This section was amended on May 25th, 1937, to read—as I read it it had been adopted March 22, 1937. Under the amendment of May 25th, it reads:

"Members whose connection with the Federal branches or agencies aforesaid is severed shall have the privilege of remaining members of the corporation by payment of their monthly dues and assessments direct to the Treasurer in advance. If the dues of members are not paid within thirty (30) days after their due date, such members automatically lose all rights to service from the corporation and can only be reinstated to membership by action of the Board of Trustees, provided, however, that notice by registered mail shall be given of this rule to any member whose connection with the Federal branches or agencies aforesaid is severed."

Then, October 4th, 1937, the section was amended to read:

"Article II, Section 6. If the dues of members are not paid within thirty (30) days after their due date, such members automatically cease to be members and can only be reinstated to membership by action of the Board of Trustees."

Then, on October 25, 1937, the section was amended again to read:

"Article II, Section 6. If the dues of members are not paid within sixty (60) days after their due date, such members automatically cease to be members and can only be reinstated to membership by action of the Board of Trustees."

And then on September 19th, 1938, the section was deleted in the by-laws by an amendment of that day.

"Section 7. No new dependents added to dependent list of any member of the corporation shall be eligible for service for a period of three calendar months, with the exception of wives or newly born children who shall be eligible to service from the date of marriage in the case of a wife and from the date of birth in the case of children."

That is the section as adopted March 22nd, 1937. On May 2nd, 1938, the section was amended to read:

"Section 7. No dependent of a member not listed on the dependent list of such member at the time he becomes a member shall be eligible for benefits hereunder until the expiration of three calendar months after such dependent is placed on the dependent list of such member, with the exception of newly married wives or husbands, or newly born children, who shall be eligible for such benefits from the date of listing provided such listing is made not later than the one calendar month after such marriage or birth. No dependent in any case shall be eligible for benefits at a time when the member himself is not so eligible."

That was the section as amended May 2nd, 1938, and by an amendment of September 19th, 1938, that section was deleted from the by-laws.

Section 8 of this article reads:

"All certificates of membership shall be signed by the president or secretary, and shall be sealed with the corporate seal."

That is as the section was March 22nd, 1937. On May 25th, 1937, the section was amended to read:

"All certificates of membership shall be signed by the President or Secretary, or Assistant Secretary, and shall be sealed with the corporate seal."

And then Section 8 was amended on September 19th, 1938, to read:

"All certificates of membership and membership cards shall be signed by the President or Secretary, or Assistant Secretary, and shall be sealed with the corporate seal."

And then in view of the deletion of Sections 6 and 7, which I have just read and called to your attention, this article became Section 6 of Article II on the 19th day of September, 1938:

Section 9, as it stood and was numbered on March 22nd, 1937, reads:

"In case of liquidation or sale of its assets, the corporation shall have a first lien upon such dividends as may be declared due any members thereof for any indebtedness of the respective holders thereof to the corporation."

On September 19, 1938, the section was amended to read:

"In case of liquidation or sale of its assets, the corporation shall have a first lien upon such dividends as may be declared due any member hereof for any indebtedness of said member to the corporation."

Then, by reason of the deletion of Sections 6 and 7 on September 19th, 1938, this section remained but took the number Section 7, of Article II.

"Section 10. In case of loss or destruction of a certificate of membership, new certificate shall be issued in lieu thereof and shall be plainly marked 'Duplicate' upon its face."

That is as adopted March 22nd, 1937. On May 25th, 1937, the section was amended to read:

"In case of loss or destruction of a certificate of membership, new certificate shall be issued in lieu thereof and shall be plainly marked 'Duplicate' upon its face."

The section was further amended on September 19, 1938, to read:

"In case of loss or destruction of a certificate of membership or a membership card, a new certificate or membership card shall be issued in lieu thereof and shall be plainly marked 'Duplicate' upon its face."

This section took the new number 8 under the amendment of September, 1938, and for the reason already stated—because of the deletion of Sections 6 and 7.

"Article III.

"Membership Meetings.

"Section 1. An annual meeting of the members shall be held at 7:30 o'clock P. M., on the 3rd Monday in January in each year, beginning with the year 1938, at the principal office of the corporation, provided, however, that whenever such day shall fall upon a legal holiday, the meeting shall be held on the next succeeding business day. At such meeting the members shall elect Trustees to serve until their successors shall be elected and qualified."

This section was thereafter amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 1. An annual meeting of the members shall be held at 7:30 o'clock P. M. on the 3rd Monday in January in each year, beginning with the year 1938, at a place in Washington, D. C., to be designated by the Board of Trustees, provided, however, that whenever such day shall fall upon a legal holiday, the meeting shall be held on the next succeeding business day. If the annual meeting of the membership be not held as herein prescribed, the election of Trustees may be held at any meeting thereafter called pursuant to these by-laws. At such meeting the members shall elect Trustees to serve until their successors shall be elected and qualified."

"Section 2. A special meeting of the members may be called at any time by the President or Secretary, and, in their absence, by the Vice President; or by the Trustees. It shall be the duty of the Trustees, President or Vice President to call such a meeting whenever so requested by 5% of the members."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 2. A special meeting of the members may be called at any time by the President or Secretary, and, in their absence, by the Vice President; or by the Trustees. It shall be the duty of the Trustees, or President or Vice President to call such a meeting whenever so requested by written petition of five per centum (5%) of the members of the corporation."

"Section 3. Notice of the time and place of all annual and special meetings shall be mailed by the Secretary to each member at the latter's last known address five (5) days before the date thereof."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Notice of time, place and purpose of all annual and special meetings shall be mailed or delivered by the Secretary or Assistant Secretary to each member at the latter's office or the last known address five (5) days before the date thereof.

"Section 4. The President, or, in his absence, the Vice President, shall preside at all such meetings."

"Section 5. At every such meeting each member shall be entitled to cast one vote, which vote may be cast by him either in person, or by proxy. All proxies shall be in writing, and shall be filed with the Secretary and by him entered of record in the minutes of the meeting.

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 5. At every such meeting each member shall be entitled to cast one vote, which vote may be cast by him either in person, or by proxy. All proxies shall be in writing, and shall be filed with the Secretary or Assistant Secretary and by him entered of record in the minutes of the meeting. At all meetings of members, the voting may be by viva voce, with exception of the election of Trustees. A complete list of the members entitled to vote at the ensuing election of the Board of Trustees arranged in alphabetical order shall be prepared by the Secretary or Assistant Secretary who shall have charge of the membership list; and such list shall be filed in the office of the corporation at least ten (10) days before every election, and shall, during the usual hours for business and during the whole time of the said election, be open to the examination of any member.

"Section 6. Every member shall have the right to vote, in person or by proxy, for as many persons as there are Trustees to be elected.

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 6. Every member shall have the right to vote, in person or by proxy in any election or at any meeting of the Association."

And it was amended on May 2, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 6. Every member shall have the right to vote, in person or by proxy, in any election or at any meeting of the corporation."

"Section 7. A quorum for the transaction of business at any such meeting shall consist of at least 20% of the total number of members of the corporation personally present, who are in good standing, but the members present at any meeting, though less than a quorum, may adjourn the meeting to a future time."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 7. A quorum for the transaction of business at any regularly called meeting shall consist of those present at any regular or special meeting."

"Article IV.

"Trustees.

"Section 1. The business and property of the corporation shall be managed and controlled by a Board of Trustees who shall be elected annually by the members on the 3rd Monday of January of each year beginning with the 3rd Monday in January, 1938. Each Trustee shall be a member of the corporation and shall receive no compensation for his services as a Trustee. Severance of such relationship by resignation or otherwise shall operate as a resignation of all office held by such Trustee.

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows.

"Section 1. The business and property of the corporation shall be managed and controlled by a Board of eleven (11) Trustees; two of whom shall be selected by and at the pleasure of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board from the members, and the others to be elected annually by the members on the 3rd Monday of January of each year beginning with the 3rd Monday in January, 1938, provided, however, that whenever such day shall fall upon a legal holiday, the election shall be held on the next succeeding business day. Each Trustee shall be a member of the corporation and shall receive no compensation for his services as a Trustee, and severance of such relationship by resignation or otherwise shall operate as a resignation of all offices held by such Trustee."

"Section 2. The Trustees shall be elected by ballot, cast by the members of this corporation and each member shall be furnished with one ballot and an envelope in which to enclose the same, and these ballots shall be deposited at a place or places designated by this Board before each annual election on the date thereof. The election shall be by a plurality vote and those members of the corporation receiving the largest number of votes from members hereof eligible to cast ballots for them, as hereinafter designated, shall be declared elected."

"The Board of Trustees shall appoint election tellers chosen from the membership who shall meet and canvass the vote on the day or the day following the election but no ballot shall be received which has not been cast on the election day."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 2. The nine (9) elective Trustees shall be elected by ballot, cast by the members of this corporation in person or by proxy and each member shall be furnished with one ballot and an envelope in which to enclose the same, and these ballots shall be deposited at the place designated by the Board for the annual meeting on the date thereof. The election shall be by a plurality vote and those members of the corporation receiving the largest number of votes from members hereof eligible to cast ballots for them, as hereinafter designated, shall be declared elected. Four (4) inspectors of election, none of whom shall be a Trustee, officer or employee of the corporation, shall be appointed by the Board of Trustees before or at each meeting of the members of the corporation at which an election of Trustees or amendment to the by-laws shall take place; if no such appointment shall have been made, or if the inspectors of election appointed by the Board refuse to act or fail to attend, then the appointment shall be made by the presiding officer at the meeting. The inspectors of election shall receive and take in charge all proxies and ballots and shall decide all questions of election touching upon the qualification of voters, the validity of proxies and the acceptance and rejection of votes. In case of a tie vote by the inspectors on any question, the presiding officer shall decide."

"Section 3. The Trustees elected at the next annual election shall be classified with respect to the time for which they shall severally hold office by dividing them into three classes and if the number of Trustees be later increased to eleven members, the first class to consist of four (4) members, the second class of a like number, and the third class of three (3) members of the Board of Trustees. The Trustees of the first class shall be elected for a term of one year; the Trustees of the second class for a term of two years; and the Trustees of the third class for a term of three years; and at each succeeding annual election the successors to the class of Trustees whose terms shall expire in that year shall be elected to hold office for the term of three years so that the term of office of one class of Trustees shall expire each year."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"The nine (9) Trustees elected at the first annual election shall be classified with respect to the time for which they shall severally hold office by dividing them into three classes of three members each. The Trustees of the first class shall be elected for a term of one year; the Trustees of the second class for a term of two years; and the Trustees of the third class for a term of three years; and at each succeeding annual election the successors to the class of Trustees whose terms shall expire in that year shall be elected to hold office for the term of three years so that the term of office of one class of Trustees shall expire each year. The appointees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board shall serve at the pleasure of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board."

"Section 4. The regular meetings of the Trustees shall be held in the principal office of the corporation immediately after the adjournment of each annual membership meeting; and also on the 1st Monday of each month at the hour of 8:00 o'clock P. M., provided, however, that whenever such day shall fall upon a legal holiday, the meeting shall be held on the next succeeding business day."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 4. The regular meetings of the Trustees shall be held at a place to be designated by standard rule of the Board of Trustees immediately after the adjournment of each annual membership meeting; and also on the 1st Monday of each month at the hour of 8:00 o'clock P. M., provided, however, that whenever such day shall fall upon a legal holiday, the meeting shall be held on the next succeeding business day."

"Section 5. Special meetings of the Board of Trustees, to be held in the principal office of the corporation, may be called by the President or Secretary; and in their absence by the Vice President or by any three (3) members of the Board. By unanimous consent of the Trustees, special meetings of the Board may be held without notice, at any time and place."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 5. Special meetings of the Board of Trustees, to be held in the principal office of the corporation, may be called by the President or Secretary; and in their absence by the Vice President or by any three (3) members of the Board."

And it was amended on November 21, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 5. Special meetings of the Board of Trustees, may be called by the President or Secretary; and in their absence by the Vice President or by any three (3) members of the Board."

"Section 6. Notice of all regular and special meetings, except those specified in Section 4 of this article, shall be mailed to each Trustee, by the Secretary, at least five (5) days previous to the time fixed for the meeting. All notices of special meetings shall state the purpose thereof."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 6. Notice of time, place and purpose of all special meetings shall be mailed to each Trustee, by the Secretary or Assistant Secretary, at least five (5) days previous to the time fixed for the meeting. By unanimous consent of the Trustees special meetings of the Board may be held without notice at any time and place. When a meeting is adjourned it shall not be necessary to give any notice of the adjourned meeting or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting other than by announcement at the meeting at which such adjournment is taken."

"Section 7. A quorum for the transaction of business at any regular or special meeting of the Trustees shall consist of a majority of the members of the Board, personally present, but a majority of those present at any regular or special meeting shall have power to adjourn the meeting to a future time."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 7. A majority of the Trustees in office shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and the acts of a majority of the Trustees present at a meeting, at which a quorum is present, shall be the acts of the Board of Trustees."

"Section 8. The trustees shall elect the officers of the corporation, and fix their salaries; such election to be held at the Trustees' meeting following each annual membership meeting; provided, however, that the first election of officers may be held at the convenience or pleasure of the Board. Any officer may be removed at any time by a two-thirds vote of the full Board of Trustees."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 8. The Trustees shall elect the officers of the corporation; such election to be held at the Trustees' meeting following each annual membership meeting. Any officer may be removed at any time by a two-thirds vote of the full Board of Trustees."

"Section 9. The Trustees may, by resolution, appoint five (5) members of the board as an Executive Committee, to manage the business of the corporation during the interim between meetings of the Board, two of whom shall consist of members selected by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 9. The Trustees may, by resolution, appoint five (5) members of the Board as an Executive Committee, to manage the business of the corporation during the interim between meetings of the Board, two of whom shall consist of members selected by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The President shall be ex officio a member of the Executive Committee."

"Section 10. Any vacancy in the Board of Trustees caused by death, resignation, or otherwise, shall be elected by the Board from the Association membership to fill the vacancy at any regular or special Trustees' meeting, to serve until the next annual election, at which time the members shall elect a Trustee for the remainder of the term for which the vacating member was elected."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 10. Any vacancy in the Board of Trustees caused by death, resignation, or otherwise, shall be filled by the Board from the Association membership at any regular or special Trustees' meeting, to serve until the next annual election, at which time the members shall elect a Trustee for the remainder of the term for which the vacating member was elected, provided, however, that the Federal Home Loan Bank Board shall fill the positions vacated by its appointees."

"Section 11. At each annual membership meeting the Trustees shall submit a statement of the business done during the preceding year, together with a report of the financial condition of the corporation, and of the condition of its tangible property."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 11. At each annual membership meeting the Trustees shall submit a statement of the business done during the preceding year, together with a report of the financial condition of the corporation, and of the condition of its tangible property. They shall provide a full and complete operating statement and balance sheet."

"Article V.

"Officers.

"Section 1. The officers of this corporation shall be President, a Vice President, a Secretary, and Assistant, and a Treasurer and Assistant, who shall be elected until the next annual membership meeting and thereafter for the term of one year, and shall hold office until their successors are duly elected and qualified. No one shall be eligible to the office of President or Vice President who is not a Trustee of the corporation; and any such officer who ceases to be a Trustee shall cease to hold office as President or Vice President as soon as his successor is elected and qualified. The offices of Secretary and Treasurer or the offices of Assistant Secretary and Assistant Treasurer may be held by one person."

The heading of Article V was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Article V.

"Officers and Personnel."

Section 1 was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 1. The officers of the corporation shall be President, a Vice President, a Secretary and Assistant Secretary, and a Treasurer and Assistant Treasurer, who shall be elected until the first annual membership meeting and thereafter for the term of one year, and shall hold office until their successors are duly elected and qualified. No one shall be eligible to the office of President or Vice President who is not a Trustee of the corporation; and any such officer who ceases to be a Trustee shall cease to hold office as President or Vice President as soon as his successor is elected and qualified. The offices of the Secretary and Treasurer or the offices of Assistant Secretary and Assistant Treasurer may be held by one person."

"Section 2. The President shall preside at all Trustees' and Membership meetings; shall have general supervision over the affairs of the corporation and over the other offices; if required, shall sign certificates of membership and written contracts of the corporation, and countersign all checks; and shall perform all such other duties as are incident to his office. In case of the absence or disability of the President, his duties shall be performed by the Vice President."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 2. The President shall preside at all Trustees' and Membership meetings; shall have general supervision over the affairs of the corporation and over the other officers; if required, shall sign certificates of membership and shall sign written contracts of the corporation, and countersign all checks; and shall perform all such other duties as are incident to his office. In case of the absence or disability of the President, his duties shall be performed by the Vice President."

"Section 3. The Secretary, or Assistant Secretary, shall issue notices of all Trustees and Membership meetings and shall attend and keep the minutes of the same; shall be custodian of the corporate records and papers and of the seal of the corporation; shall attest with his signature and impress with the corporate seal all certificates of membership and written contracts of the corporation as directed by the President or Board of Trustees; and shall perform all such other duties as are incident to his office."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 3. The Secretary, or, in his absence, or if the Board of Trustees directs, the Assistant Secretary, shall issue notices of all Trustees' and Membership meetings and shall attend and keep the minutes of same; shall be custodian of the corporate records and papers and of the seal of the corporation; shall attest with his signature and impress with the corporate seal all certificates of membership and written contracts of the corporation as directed by the President or Board of Trustees; and shall perform all such other duties as are incident to his office."

"Section 4. The Treasurer shall be the financial and administrative officer of the corporation, having custody of all monies, funds, securities, evidence of indebtedness, and other valuable documents of the corporation. He shall receive and give receipts for money paid in on account of the corporation, and shall pay out of the funds on hand all just debts of whatever nature. He shall keep regular books of account and detailed record of the members and their standing. He shall render a full financial statement of the affairs of the corporation monthly, or when called upon by the President or Board of Trustees. He shall sign all checks, notes, drafts, or orders for the payment of money and he shall perform all such other duties as may be incident to the office of the Treasurer, or as may be imposed on him by the Board of Trustees. He shall give the corporation a bond in such amount and with such surety as the Board shall prescribe, conditioned upon the faithful performance of the duties of his office. In the absence or incapacity of the Treasurer, the Assistant Treasurer shall act in his place or stead. Such safety deposit boxes as may be necessary shall be provided for the use of the Treasurer, to which the President may at all times have access."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 4. The Treasurer shall be the financial officer of the corporation, having custody of all monies, funds, securities, evidence of indebtedness, and other valuable documents of the corporation. He shall receive and give receipts for money paid in on account of the corporation, and shall pay out of the funds on hand all just debts of whatever nature. He shall keep regular books of account and detailed record of the members and their standing. He shall render a full financial statement of the affairs of the corporation monthly, or when called upon by the President or Board of Trustees. He shall sign all checks, notes, drafts, or orders for the payment of money and he shall perform all such other duties as may be incident to the office of the Treasurer, or as may be imposed on him by the Board of Trustees. He shall give the corporation a bond in such amount and with such surety as the board shall prescribe, conditioned upon the faithful performance of the duties of his office. In the absence or incapacity of the Treasurer, the Assistant Treasurer shall act in his place or stead. Such safety deposit boxes as may be necessary shall be provided for the use of the Treasurer, to which the President or a majority of the Trustees may at all times have access."

Article V was amended on May 25, 1937, to include the following:

"Section 5. The Board of Trustees shall employ a competent, qualified Doctor of Medicine as the Medical Director, and such assistants, orderlies, nurses or other help necessary to the proper functioning of the corporation."

Section 5 of Article V was amended on May 2, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 5. The Board of Trustees shall contract for and in behalf of the members of this corporation, with physicians duly licensed to practice their profession in the District of Columbia, who shall render such service to the members as may be provided in said contract. One of said physicians shall be designated as the Medical Director, who, with the approval of the Trustees, may engage the services of such assistants, orderlies, nurses, or other help, in order to properly render the services contracted for."

Article V was amended on May 25, 1937, to include the following:

"Section 6. The Medical Director shall render such reports as the Board of Trustees shall require."

Section 6 of Article V was amended, on May 2, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 6. The Board of Trustees shall in no way regulate or supervise the practice of medicine by any physician with whom it contracts for the care of members nor shall it in any way supervise, regulate or interfere with the usual professional relationship between such physician and his patient member, and every such contract entered into by and between a physician and the corporation shall contain a positive covenant to that effect."

"Article VI.

"Finance.

"Section 1. The funds of the corporation shall be deposited in such bank or trust company as the Trustees shall designate, and shall be withdrawn only upon the check or order of the Treasurer or Assistant Treasurer, countersigned by the President or Vice President. The Board shall cause audit of the books and accounts of the corporation to be made annually or oftener as it may consider proper or necessary, either by an Audit Committee appointed by the Board from the membership or by the employment of a private Certified Public Accountant."

That section was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 1. The funds of the corporation shall be deposited in such bank or trust company as the Trustees shall designate, and shall be withdrawn only upon the check or order of the Treasurer or Assistant Treasurer, countersigned by the President or Vice President. The Board of Trustees shall cause an audit of the books and accounts of the corporation to be made annually or oftener as it may consider proper or necessary, either by an Audit Committee appointed by the Board from the membership or by the employment of a Certified Public Accountant."

"Article VII.

"Dues.

"Section 1. The dues for membership in this corporation shall be Three Dollars and Thirty Cents ($3.30) per month for married persons or single persons having dependents, and Two Dollars and Twenty Cents ($2.20) per month for single persons having no dependents, and shall be paid in advance semi-monthly. Where permitted, the corporation shall be given the right to require deduction for its use and benefit from the employee's wages due him from any of the federal branches or agencies by which he or she is employed the amount of his current dues together with any payment for back dues owed to the corporation.

That section was amended on April 6, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 1. There shall be two classes of membership, i. e., (1) family membership; and (2) individual membership. Family membership shall include married or single members with dependents as hereinafter defined and the dues for membership of such class shall be $3.30 per month. Individual membership shall include married or single members having no declared dependents, and the dues for membership of such class shall be $2.20 per month."

Section 1 of Article VII was amended on September 19, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 1. A member may have services procured for himself alone or for himself and any or all of his eligible dependents. A dependent is a member's spouse or a person related by blood, marriage or adoption to the member and who is supported by and lives with that member. A child dependent is a dependent who has not attained the age of 21.

"(a) Whenever a person ceases to qualify as a dependent of a member no further services shall be procured with respect to such person after the expiration of the month following the month in which he becomes disqualified.

"(b) Services shall be procured for and dues paid with respect to a child born to such member (unless previous notice to the contrary has been given the Association in writing by the member). For purposes of determining dues a child or other dependent shall remain a dependent so long as he remains eligible, until written notice to the contrary is received from the member. Any increase in dues shall be effective the first day of the month following the month in which such child is born, attains age 18 or attains age 21, as the case may be. In the event of death of a dependent or notice that such dependent is no longer to have service, the reduction in a member's dues shall be effective on the first day of the succeeding month. In the case of the death of a member or upon his written notice to the Association of his resignation, all dues shall cease on the first day of the month succeeding such death or the effective date of such notice of resignation, and after the first of such month no further services shall be procured for the member's dependents.

"(c) In case notice of withdrawal of a person from membership or withdrawal of a dependent is received in the office of the Association later than the tenth day of the month, the membership dues and the services shall cease or be decreased on the first day of the second month succeeding that in which such notice is received. It shall be the duty of every member to give written notice to the Association of any fact that would change the rate of dues or other monies payable by him.

"(d) Whenever a member desires to have services procured for any dependent (except a new born baby) who was not on"—

There seems to be a hiatus in my copy here.

"(had not previous to) September 1, 1938 (been) listed by him as a dependent in connection with his membership, he shall make application, tender $1.00 for application fee and, unless such dependent is rejected because of physical condition, such member shall thereupon be entitled to have services procured for such dependent. Such services shall be procured on and after, and the dues shall be increased on, the first day of the month succeeding the date of physical examination.

"(e) Whenever any dependent desires and is eligible to become a member, such person may apply for membership, and such application shall be given preferred consideration. Medical examination in such cases and in other cases where circumstances are unusual, may be waived for such person and/or his dependents at the option of the Board of Trustees."

Section 1(d) of Article VII was amended, on October 3, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 1(d). Whenever a member desires to have services procured for any dependent (except a new born baby) who was not on September 1, 1938 listed by him as a dependent in connection with his membership, he shall make application, tender $1.00 for application fee and, unless such dependent is rejected because of physical condition, such member shall thereupon be entitled to have services procured for such dependent. Such services shall be procured on and after, and the dues shall be increased on, the first day of the month succeeding the date of physical examination."

Section 1(b) of Article VII was amended on November 21, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 1(b). Services shall be procured for and dues paid with respect to a child born to such member (unless previous notice to the contrary has been given the Association in writing by the member.) For purposes of determining dues a child or other dependent shall remain a dependent so long as he remains eligible, until written notice to the contrary is received from the member. Any increase in dues shall be effective the first day of the month following the month in which such child is born, attains age 18 or attains age 21, as the case may be. In the event of death of a dependent or notice, received prior to the 10th of the month, that such dependent is no longer to have service, the reduction in a member's dues shall be effective on the first day of the succeeding month. In the case of the death of a member or upon his written notice to the Association of his resignation, received prior to the 10th day of the month, all dues shall cease on the first day of the month succeeding such death or the receipt of such notice of resignation, and after the first of such month no further services shall be procured for the member's dependents."

"Section 2. Members who join the corporation hereafter shall, for the first month, be charged dues for a full month if their application for membership is dated between the 1st and 15th of the month, and shall be charged dues for one-half month if their application is dated between the 16th and last day of the month."

Section 2 of Article VII was amended on September 19, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 2.

"(a) All members shall be required to pay a membership fee of $10 which shall be paid for at the rate of not less than $1.00 per month. The first installment shall be paid not later than the due date of the member's first monthly dues following the adoption of this amendment.

"(b) Upon full payment of the membership fee a suitable certificate shall be issued to the member.

"(c) Such certificate may be transferred, upon the payment of a transfer fee in such amount as is fixed by Board regulations, to any person who is accepted as a member, provided that the person whose certificate is transferred is a person not indebted to the Association and is a member in good standing who (1) has been a member two years, or (2) who has become disqualified from membership because of severance from Government service or (3) who removes from the territory served by the Association. The transferee of a membership certificate shall by virtue of such transfer be entitled to a credit of $10 toward his membership fee. On death of a member his certificate shall be non-transferable and shall be null and void. Whenever a member is no longer employed by the executive branch of the Federal Government, or moves from the area served by the Group Health Association, at the sole discretion of the Trustees, such person may be repaid his $10 membership fee or any portion he has paid the Corporation.

"(d) Proceeds of membership fees shall, in so far as possible, be used only for purchase and maintenance of equipment and other property."

Article VII was amended on September 19, 1938, to include the following:

"Section 3.

"(a) After August 1, 1938, any person desiring to become a member shall make payment of an application fee of $5.00, plus $1.00 for each dependent with respect to whom he desires to have services secured and shall fill out an application on a prescribed blank or blanks. If, after review of application and medical examination of all the persons on whose behalf services are requested, the application is not accepted, this fee shall be returned, unless the person applying is otherwise eligible for membership and desires to become a member under conditions stated in the next subsection.

"(b) In the case of applications not otherwise generally acceptable by reason of the physical condition of the member or a dependent, the Association, upon the recommendation of the Medical Director, may make special membership arrangements with such applicant with respect to the services to be procured for him by the Association."

Article VII was amended, on September 19, 1938, to include the following:

"Section 4. After August 1, 1938, every member who desires to procure services for a dependent not listed as such shall make application on a prescribed form and pay a $1.00 application fee, which shall in no case be returned. If, after review of the application and medical examination of such dependent, the dependent is not generally acceptable by reason of physical condition, the Association upon the recommendation of the Medical Director may make special membership arrangements."

Article VII was amended, on September 19, 1938, to include the following:

"Section 5. Membership dues shall for September 1938 and thereafter be payable the first of each month and shall be as follows:

Single member or head of family	$2.20
Husband or wife	1.80
Child dependents under 18 (one or more)	1.00
Child dependents, 18 to 21 (each)	1.00
Adult dependents over 21 (each)	2.00

New memberships shall become effective and dues payable on the first day of the month following acceptance of the person for membership or upon the 16th day of the same month if the Board so directs."

Article VII was amended, on September 19, 1938, to include the following:

"Section 6. Any indebtedness of a member to the Association shall be added to and considered a part of the dues for the month succeeding that in which the indebtedness was incurred provided, however, that the Board of Trustees in its discretion may permit the payment of any indebtedness to be made in installments or forgive a portion or all of said indebtedness when the Trustees find that in equity and good conscience such action shall be taken. In the case of indebtedness other than for the monthly dues, the member shall be promptly notified of the amount of the indebtedness."

Article VII was amended, on September 19, 1938, to include the following:

"Section 7. Except by amendment of these By-laws, no fees, dues or assessments of any kind not herein provided, shall be required of any member of the Association.

"Article VIII

Resignations

Section 1. Any member of this corporation may withdraw therefrom by resignation and shall owe in such case dues for only thirty (30) days from the date of his or her resignation, he or she to have the privileges of membership during said thirty (30) day period. (As adopted March 22, 1937.)"

Section 1 of Article VIII was amended on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 1. Any member of this corporation may withdraw therefrom by resignation and shall owe in such case dues for only thirty (30) days from the date of his or her resignation, he or she to have the privileges of membership during said thirty (30) day period, provided, however, that the member may withdraw his resignation in writing within the said period."

Article VIII was repealed on September 19, 1938.

"Article IX

Amendments

Section 1. Amendments to these by-laws may be made, by affirmative vote of a two-thirds majority of the Trustees of the corporation present and voting at any regular meeting or at any special meeting when the proposed amendment has been set out in the notice of such meeting. (As adopted March 22, 1937)"

Section 1 of Article IX was amended, on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 1. Amendments to these by-laws may be made, by affirmative vote of a two-thirds majority of the Trustees of the corporation at any regular meeting or at any special meeting when the proposed amendment has been set out in the notice of such meeting."

Section 1 of Article IX was amended, on September 19, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 1. Amendments to these by-laws shall be made, by affirmative vote of a two-thirds majority of the Trustees of the Association at any regular meeting of the Trustees or at any special meeting of the Trustees when the proposed amendment has been set out in the notice of such meeting; except, that any amendment to this article, or any amendment required by section 9 of article VII shall become effective only after written notice to members and the affirmative vote for such amendment by a majority of those voting."

Section 1 of Article IX was amended, on October 3, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 1. Amendments to these by-laws shall be made, by affirmative vote of a two-thirds majority of the Trustees of the Association at any regular meeting of the Trustees or at any special meeting of the Trustees when the proposed amendment has been set out in the notice of such meeting; except, that any amendment to this article, or any amendment required by section 7 of article VII shall become effective only after written notice to members and the affirmative vote for such amendment by a majority of those voting.

Article X

Benefits.

Section 1. To be able to avail themselves of medical and surgical service, the members must be located in, or its closely and adjacent territory, or must come to, the City of Washington, D. C. (As adopted March 22, 1937)"

Section 1 of Article X was amended, on April 6, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 1. The medical service to be rendered to members and dependents by the corporation shall be as follows:

Medical and surgical examinations and treatments, including examinations in special departments, such as refractions of eyes; laboratory tests, X-ray examinations, surgical operations, confinement cases and professional consultations, nursing and ambulance facilities, house calls, and hospitalization in a semi-private room (2 bed room) limited to a period not to exceed 21 days for any one illness. However, members desiring to occupy a private room may do so in which case the corporation will contribute the sum of $4.00 per day toward the expense of such room for such period. In all hospital cases, the corporation will pay for semi-private room (2 bed room) service only, except in the case of infectious or contagious diseases, in which case a maximum of $4.00 per day will be paid for said period.

The extent that medical service relating to the foregoing items will be furnished to members shall be determined and prescribed by the Medical Director or his representatives in each individual case."

Section 1 of Article X was amended, on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 1. The medical service to be rendered to members and dependents by the corporation shall be as follows:

Medical and surgical examinations and treatments, including examinations in special departments, such as refractions of eyes; laboratory test, X-ray examinations, surgical operations, confinement cases and professional consultations, nursing and ambulance facilities, house calls, and hospitalization in a semi-private room (2 bed room) limited to a period not to exceed 21 days for any one illness. However, members desiring to occupy a private room may do so, in which case the corporation will contribute the sum of $4.00 per day toward the expense of such room for such period. In all hospital cases, the corporation will pay for semi-private room (2 bed room) service only, except in the case of infectious or contagious diseases, in which case a maximum of $4.00 per day will be paid for such period, not exceeding 21 days.

The extent that medical service relating to the foregoing items will be furnished to members shall be determined and prescribed by the Medical Director or his representatives in each individual case."

Section 1 of Article X was amended, on October 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Article X, Section 1. The medical service to be rendered to members and dependents by the corporation shall be as follows:

Medical and surgical examinations and treatments, including examinations in special departments, such as refractions of eyes, laboratory tests, X-ray examinations, surgical operations, confinement cases and professional consultations, nursing and ambulance facilities, house calls, and hospitalization in a semi-private room (two-bed room) or a private room, limited in either case to a period not to exceed 21 days for any one illness; provided, however, that each member desiring to occupy a private room shall reimburse the corporation for so much of the cost of such room as shall exceed the sum of $4.00 per day; provided, further, that such member shall make such payments to assure such reimbursement as the corporation shall require, and provided, that the benefits provided outside of the territory of the association shall be limited to the provision of a hospital room for the time and as is herein provided.

The extent that medical service relating to the foregoing items will be furnished to members shall be determined and prescribed by the Medical Director or his representatives in each individual case."

Section 1 of Article X was amended, on May 2, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 1. The contract or contracts to be made by this corporation on behalf of the members thereof with physicians, as provided in Section 5 of Article V, or with others, shall provide for the following services to members:

Medical and surgical examinations and treatments, including examinations in special departments, such as refractions of eyes, laboratory tests, X-ray examinations, surgical operations, confinement cases, and professional consultations, nursing and ambulance facilities, house calls, and hospitalization in a semi-private room (two-bed room) or a private room, limited in either case to a period not to exceed 21 days for any one illness; provided, however, that each member desiring to occupy a private room or a semi-private room of his own choice shall pay so much of the cost of such room as shall exceed the sum of $4.00 per day; provided, further, that such member shall make such advance payments to assure the aforesaid reimbursement as the Trustees shall require; and provided, further, that the benefits provided outside of the territory of the association shall be limited to the provision of a hospital room for the time and as is herein provided.

Members or dependents in order to avail themselves of medical and surgical service shall come to the doctor's office if such is possible from the nature of their illness. Doctors will answer necessary house calls within a radius of ten miles from the District of Columbia line, except that the Medical Director may provide for house calls not exceeding twenty miles. Members will furnish such doctor with any information he may request relative to their condition and membership and should, at all times, have available their membership card for identification.

The extent that medical service relating to the foregoing items will be furnished to members shall be determined and prescribed by the Medical Director or his representatives in each individual case."

Section 1 of Article X was amended, on September 19, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 1. The contract or contracts to be made by this corporation on behalf of the members thereof with physicians, as provided in these by-laws, or with others, shall provide for the following services:

Medical and surgical examinations and treatments, including examinations in special departments, such as refractions of eyes, laboratory tests, X-ray examinations, surgical operations, confinement cases, and professional consultations, nursing and ambulance facilities, house calls and hospitalization in a semi-private (two-bed room) or a private room, limited in either case to a period not to exceed 21 days for any one illness or accident and not to exceed a total of 42 days for any member or dependent during any one calendar year; provided, however, that when a member desires a private room or a semi-private room of his own choice for himself or his dependent he shall pay so much of the cost of such room as shall exceed the sum of $4.00 per day; provided, further, that each member shall make such advance payments or other arrangements to assure the said payment as the Trustees shall require; and provided, further that the services procured outside of the territory of the Association shall be limited to the provision of hospital facilities for the time and as is herein provided.

No hospitalization, and no service except that given under such contract or contracts shall be procured for any member or dependent, save upon prior written authorization by the Medical Director; Provided, that in cases of emergency, subsequent ratification by the Medical Director shall have the same effect as prior authorization; provided, however, that the Medical Director may not ratify any services save hospitalization procured outside of the service area.

Any hospitalization procured shall be limited in time to the date of the patient's discharge or such shorter time as the Medical Director may deem proper.

Hospitalization shall be construed to mean: (a) bed and board in a hospital, (b) general nursing care, (c) use of the operating room or delivery room when necessary, (d) services of an anesthetist, (e) ordinary surgical dressing, (f) ordinary medications, and (g) routine laboratory examinations; except, that where hospitalization is procured outside the service area or without prior authorization by the Medical Director, no more than $15 may be allowed for the use of the operating or delivery room and no more than $10 may be allowed for the services of an anesthetist.

Members or dependents, in order to avail themselves of medical and surgical service, shall report to the clinic if such is possible from the nature of their illness. Doctors will answer necessary house calls within ten miles from the District of Columbia line, as provided in this article, and the Medical Director may provide for house calls not exceeding twenty miles. Members will furnish such doctor with any information he may request relative to their condition and membership and should, at all times, have available their membership cards for identification.

The extent that medical service relating to the foregoing items will be furnished shall be determined and prescribed by the Medical Director or his representative in each individual case.

Section 2. Any person referred to herein as a dependent, to be eligible to the benefits of the corporation, must be totally dependent upon the member of the corporation for a livelihood at the time of such person's disability and before need of medical service. However, under this provision persons who are working and receiving compensation for their services are not dependent, with the exception of wife or husband, or school children who work during the summer months only, may be considered dependent. Any member who accepts medical attention from a corporation doctor, or who has medical services performed for any person who he claims is dependent upon him and who is found not to be entitled to such medical service, shall reimburse the corporation for any payment the corporation may have made on his account, and, further, shall pay the corporation for the services of the doctor who attended the case, or the corporation may cause the same to be deducted from the wages due such employee as provided in Section 1 of Article VI of these by-laws. (As adopted March 22, 1937)"

Section 2 of Article X was amended, on April 6, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 2. The following medical service will not be furnished by the corporation:

(1) Treatment of industrial accident cases;

(2) Surgery of the brain or nervous system;

(3) Mental cases, tuberculosis, drug or alcohol addiction; these cases will be treated only up to the time that the Medical Director recommends confinement in an institution."

Section 2 of Article X was amended, on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 2. The following medical service will not be furnished by the corporation:

(1) Treatment of industrial accident cases;

(2) Surgery of the brain or nervous system;

(3) After the time that the medical director recommends confinement in an institution in mental, tubercular, drug or alcohol addiction cases."

Section 2 of Article X was amended, on May 2, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 2. The contract or contracts to be made by this corporation on behalf of the members, with physicians, as provided in Section 5 of Article V of these by-laws, or with others, shall not provide for the following services to members:

(1) Treatment of industrial accident cases;

(2) Surgery of the brain or nervous system;

(3) Any treatment after the time that the Medical Director recommends commitment to an institution in mental, tubercular, drug or alcohol addiction cases."

Section 2 of Article X was amended, on September 19, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 2. The contract or contracts to be made by this Association on behalf of the members, with physicians, as provided in these By-laws, or with others, shall not provide for the following services:

(1) Treatment of industrial accident cases where treatment is provided under Federal or State Employees Compensation Laws to the extent of such provision;

(2) Surgery of the brain or nervous system;

(3) Any treatment after the time that the Medical Director recommends commitment to or hospitalization in an institution in mental, tubercular, drug, or alcohol addiction cases.

Section 3. In all hospital cases, the corporation will pay for semi-private room, except in the case of infectious or contagious disease. in which case a maximum of Five ($5.00) Dollars per day will be paid. (As adopted March 22, 1937)"

Section 3 of Article X was amended, on April 6, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 3. The members shall pay for the following items:

(1) Medicines, drugs, surgical appliances such as orthopedic devices and crutches; eye glasses, artificial limbs or eyes and hearing devices;

(2) Radium and deep X-ray treatments;

(3) Dental work;

(4) Oxygen tanks or tents and materials;

(5) Blood transfusions;

(6) Special nursing service if not ordered by the Medical Director;

(7) Treatment, services, supplies and other items prescribed or ordered by an 'outside doctor' including his fees.

(8) Treatment of venereal diseases at the rate of Fifty Cents ($0.50) per treatment.

(9) Hospitalization is excess of that mentioned above.

The corporation shall make an effort to secure at reduced rates all the medical services and items for which the member is required to pay."

Section 3 of Article X was amended, on May 2, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 3. Any contract entered into by the corporation on behalf of its members will require the members to pay for the following:

(1) Medicines, drugs, surgical appliances, such as orthopedic devices and crutches; eye glasses; artificial limbs or eyes; and hearing devices;

(2) Radium and deep X-ray treatments;

(3) Dental work;

(4) Oxygen tanks or tents and materials;

(5) Blood transfusions;

(6) Special nursing service if not ordered by the Medical Director;

(7) Treatment, services, supplies and other items prescribed or ordered by a physician not in a contractural relationship with the corporation and its member, but employed by an individual member, including fees of such physician.

(8) Treatment of venereal diseases at the rate of Fifty Cents (50¢) per treatment.

(9) Hospitalization in excess of that mentioned in Section 1 of this article.

The corporation shall make an effort to secure at reduced rates all the medical services and items for which the member is required to pay."

Section 3 of Article X was amended, on September 19, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 3. Any contract entered into by the Association in behalf of its members will require the members to pay for the following:

(1) Medicine, drugs, surgical appliances, such as orthopedic devices and crutches; eye glasses; artificial limbs or eyes; and hearing devices;

(2) Radium and deep X-ray treatments;

(3) Dental work and dental X-rays;

(4) Oxygen tanks or tents and materials;

(5) Blood transfusions;

(6) Special nursing service if not ordered by the Medical Director;

(7) Treatment, services, supplies and other items prescribed or ordered by a physician not in a contractual relationship with the Association and its members, but employed by an individual member, including fees of such physicians.

(8) Hospitalization in excess of that mentioned in Section 1 of this article, provided, however, that in confinement cases the member shall in every case bear the first $25 of hospitalization expense.

(9) For each house call the member shall reimburse the association for travel expense of the physician in an amount not exceeding $1.00; provided that no charge shall be made for travel expense for additional house calls after the first, made at the instance of the attending physician.

Section 4. No member of this corporation or any of his or her dependents shall request the corporation doctor to call at his or her residence if such person is able to call at the doctor's office. Doctors will answer necessary house calls within a radius of ten miles from the District line. Members will, upon request of the corporation doctor, furnish such doctor with any information he may request relative to their eligibility to benefits from the corporation and should, at all times, have available their card for identification. (As adopted March 22, 1937)"

Section 4 of Article X was amended, on April 6, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 4. The corporation will not assume responsibility for furnishing unlimited medical service to members but will do so only to the extent of its resources and to the extent which, in each case, is considered desirable and necessary by the Medical Director."

Section 4 of Article X was amended, on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 4. The corporation will not assume responsibility for furnishing unlimited medical service to members but will do so only to the extent of its resources."

Section 4 of Article X was amended, on October 4, 1937, to read as follows:

"Article X, Section 4. The corporation does not provide insurance for its members but only undertakes to provide medical and hospitalization service for them as herein stated, and in any event will furnish such service only to the extent of its resources."

Section 4 of Article X was amended, on October 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Article X, Section 4. The corporation does not provide insurance for its members but only undertakes to provide medical and hospitalization service for them as herein stated, and in any event will furnish such service only to the extent of its resources."

Section 4 of Article X was amended, on May 2, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 4 (a). The corporation does not guarantee that it will provide any or all of the services above specified and for which it will attempt to contract on behalf of its members and it shall not be liable to any member or his dependent in any manner whatever if it should for any reason, including lack of funds, be unable to procure any or all of said services when called upon to do so.

(b). The corporation does not guarantee that any physician or physicians with whom it may enter into a contract to render services to its members will perform such contract and its only obligation in the event of the breach of such contract by any physician shall be to use its best effort to procure the needed services from another source.

(c) The corporation shall not be liable to its members or their dependents for any act of omission or commission on the part of physicians or other persons with whom it may contract for the rendition of services to its members and their dependents."

Section 4 of Article X was amended, on September 19, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 4 (a). The Association does not guarantee that it will provide any or all of the services above specified and for which it will attempt to contract on behalf of its members and it shall not be liable to any member or his dependent in any manner whatever if it should for any reason, including lack of funds, be unable to procure any or all of said services when called upon to do so.

(b) The Association does not guarantee that any physician or physicians with whom it may enter into a contract to render services will perform or properly perform such contract, and its only obligation in the event of the breach of such contract by any physician shall be to use its best effort to procure the needed services from another source.

(c) The Association shall not be liable to its members or their dependents for any act of omission or commission on the part of physicians or other persons with whom it may contract for the rendition of services to its members and their dependents.

Section 5. Any member of the corporation who incurs hospital expense on account of himself or a dependent previously listed with the corporation, as a result of sickness or accident while absent from the territory served by the corporation, shall be reimbursed, upon certification of the physician in attendance, all or any part of such expense, but no amount will be paid in any case in excess of what would have been paid had the service occurred in the territory served by the corporation. Whenever any sickness or injury shall be caused to the member, or his dependent, by the tort of a third person and that person should pay for the medical or other expenses growing out of said injury, this corporation shall be subrogated to and be entitled to reimbursement for the medical or other services furnished and for which said member has collected from said third person. (As adopted March 22, 1937)"

Section 5 of Article X was amended, on April 6, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 5. The Trustees shall have the right to determine and modify the extent of the service to be furnished to members at any time they may decide to do so upon written notice to the members to that effect given fifteen (15) days prior to any such change."

Section 5 of Article X was amended, on September 19, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 5. The Trustees shall have the right to determine and modify the extent of the service to be furnished to members at any time they may decide to do so upon written notice to the members to that effect given fifteen (15) days prior to any such change."

Article X, on April 6, 1937, was amended to include the following:

"Section 6. To be able to avail themselves of medical and surgical service, the members or dependents must be located in, or within ten miles of the District of Columbia line, or must come to, the City of Washington, D. C."

Section 6 of Article X was amended, on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 6. To be able to avail themselves of medical and surgical service, the members or dependents must be located in, or within ten miles of the District of Columbia line, or must come to, the City of Washington, D. C., except that the Medical Director may provide for house calls not exceeding twenty miles."

By amendment on October 25, 1937, Section 6 of Article X was deleted.

Article X, on April 6, 1937, was amended to include the following:

"Section 7. Any person referred to herein as a dependent, to be eligible to the benefits of the corporation, must be totally dependent upon the member of the corporation for a livelihood at the time of such person's disability and before need of medical service. However, under this provision persons who are regularly working and receiving compensation for their services are not dependent, with the exception of wife or husband, or school children who work during the summer months only, may be considered dependent. Any member who accepts medical attention from the corporation doctor, or who has medical services performed for any person who he claims is dependent upon him and who is found not to be entitled to such medical service, shall reimburse the corporation for any payment the corporation may have made on his account; and, further, shall pay the corporation for the services of the doctor who attended the case, or the corporation may cause the same to be deducted from the wages due such employee as provided in Section 1 of Article VI of these by-laws."

Section 7 of Article X was amended, on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 7. Any person referred to herein as a dependent, to be eligible to the benefits of the corporation, must be totally dependent upon the member of the corporation for a livelihood at the time of such person's disability and before need of medical service. However, under this provision persons who are regularly working and receiving compensation for their services are not dependent, with the exception of wife or husband, or school children who work during the summer months only, may be considered dependent. Any member who accepts medical attention from the corporation doctor, to which he is not entitled, or who has medical services performed for any person not entitled thereto shall reimburse the corporation for any payment the corporation may have made on his account, and, further, shall pay the corporation for the services of the doctor who attended the case, or the corporation may cause the same to be deducted from the wages due such employee."

Section 7 of Article X was amended, on October 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Article X, Section 7. Any person referred to herein as a dependent, to be eligible to the benefits of the corporation, must be totally dependent upon the member of the corporation for a livelihood at the time of such person's disability and before need of medical service. However, under this provision persons who are regularly working and receiving compensation for their services are not dependent, with the exception that wife or husband, or school children who work during the summer months only, may be considered dependent. Any member who accepts medical attention from the corporation doctor, to which he is not entitled, or who has medical services performed for any person not entitled thereto, shall reimburse the corporation for the cost, or, at the option of the corporation, the reasonable value, of any services rendered by the corporation on his account, and, further, shall pay the corporation for the services of the doctor who attended the case, or the corporation may cause the same to be deducted from the wages due such employee.

(This section becomes Section 6 by amendment of October 25, 1937.)"

Section 6 of Article X was amended, on May 2, 1938, to read as follows:

"Section 6. Any person referred to herein as a dependent, to be eligible to the benefits of the corporation, must be totally dependent upon a member of the corporation for a livelihood prior to and at the time of such person's disability and prior to and at the time of need of medical service. Under this provision persons who are regularly working and receiving compensation for their services are not dependent, with the exception that wife or husband, or school children who work during the summer months only, may be considered dependent. Any member who accepts benefits hereunder to which he is not entitled, or who secures such benefits for any person not entitled thereto, shall pay a penalty commensurate with the value of the services so received as may be determined by the Board of Trustees."

Article X, on April 6, 1937, was amended to include the following:

"Section 8. No member of this corporation or any of his or her dependents shall request the corporation doctor to call at his or her residence if such person is able to call at the doctor's office. Doctors will answer necessary house calls within a radius of ten miles from the District of Columbia line. Members will, upon request of the corporation doctor, furnish such doctor with any information he may request relative to their condition and eligibility to benefits from the corporation and should, at all times, have available their associate or membership card for identification."

Section 8 of Article X was amended, on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 8. Members or dependents in order to avail themselves of medical and surgical service shall come to the doctor's office if such is possible from the nature of their illness. Doctors will answer necessary house calls within a radius of ten miles from the District of Columbia line, except that the Medical Director may provide for house calls not exceeding twenty miles. Members will, upon request of the corporation doctor, furnish such doctor with any information he may request relative to their condition and eligibility to benefits from the corporation and should, at all times, have available their associate or membership card for identification."

Section 8 of Article X was amended, on October 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Article X, Section 8. Members or dependents in order to avail themselves of medical and surgical service shall come to the doctor's office if such is possible from the nature of their illness. Doctors will answer necessary house calls within a radius of ten miles from the District of Columbia line, except that the Medical Director may provide for house calls not exceeding twenty miles. Members will, upon request of the corporation doctor, furnish such doctor with any information he may request relative to their condition and eligibility to benefits from the corporation and should, at all times, have available their associate or membership card for identification.

(This section becomes Section 7 by amendment of October 25, 1937.)"

Section 7 of Article X was repealed on May 2, 1938.

Article X, on April 6, 1937, was amended to include the following:

"Section 9. Any member of the corporation who incurs hospital expense on account of himself or a dependent previously listed with the corporation, as a result of illness falling within the by-laws and rules of the corporation, or accident while absent from the territory served by the corporation, shall be reimbursed, upon satisfactory certification or evidence thereof by the attending physician approved by the Medical Director of this corporation, all or any part of such expense, but no amount will be paid in any excess of what would have been paid had the illness or accident occurred in the territory served by the corporation. Whenever any illness or injury shall be caused to the member or his dependent by the tort of a third person and that person should pay for the medical or other expense growing out of said injury, this corporation shall be subrogated to and be entitled to reimbursement for the medical or other services furnished by it and for which said member has collected from said third person."

Section 9 of Article X was amended, on May 25, 1937, to read as follows:

"Section 9. Any member of the corporation while temporarily absent from the territory served by the corporation, who incurs hospital expense on account of himself or a dependent previously listed with the corporation, as a result of illness or accident falling within the by-laws and rules of the corporation, shall be reimbursed, upon satisfactory certification or evidence thereof by the attending physician approved by the Medical Director of this corporation, all or any part of such expense, but no amount will be paid in any case in excess of what would have been paid had the illness or accident occurred in the territory served by the corporation. Whenever any illness or injury shall be caused to the member or his dependent by the tort of a third person and that person should pay for the medical or other expense growing out of said injury, this corporation shall be subrogated to and be entitled to reimbursement for the medical or other services furnished by it for which said member has collected from said third person."

Section 9 of Article X was deleted by amendment of October 25, 1937.

Thereupon the defendants read to the jury from the minutes of the executive meeting of October 25, 1937, of the Medical Society (Gov. Ex. 37) as follows:

(Excerpt)

"Dr. Thomas E. Neill presented a complete discussion of present problems and modes for correction as written by Dr. John H. Trinder. The secretary was instructed to read this in detail."

The defendants then proposed to read said statement of Dr. John H. Trinder. The statement of Dr. Trinder referred to and contained in said minutes was then objected to by the Government as a self-serving, argumentative discourse in favor of the defendants' theories, coming from a third party, and that the defendants did not request this portion of the minutes to be read by the Government. The defendants contended that the statement was presented to the Society by the defendant Dr. Neill, was read as a full discussion of the problems discussed at the meeting, and pointed out that portions of the minutes of this particular meeting had already been read in evidence by the Government as relevant to the conspiracy charged, and that the entire minutes of the meeting were admissible to show the entire proceedings of that evening.

The defendants offered to prove the contents of the John Trinder statement appearing as a part of the minutes of October 25, 1937, reading as follows:

"Statement Prepared by Dr. John H. Trinder

"The medical profession of the District of Columbia is now confronted by an impending inroad upon its status as a very necessary part of the social economy, which will not only be disastrous to its members individually and collectively, but will affect the medical profession of the country as a whole. It will also react unfavorably upon the public, in that it advents a type of medical service which will eventuate into a commercialization of an art and science which has within the last 30 years alone, extended the space of life 20 years.

"Medical service, and by this general term, I mean also surgery, cannot be weighed out in ounces and pounds, or be measured in inches or yards and wrapped up in a neat package and be taken home or delivered. It has no such tangible property, but is based upon the personal service of a highly trained individual, whose medical degree is backed by a long academic preparatory study and post-graduate clinical application. And as a further evidence of his qualification to practice his art each doctor must pass a licensure board, local or national, which determines his skill, knowledge and fitness to serve the public.

It is not my intention to review the past accomplishments of medicine and its unselfish endeavors in combatting disease and pestilence. But I mention in passing the names of Jenner, through whose efforts and sacrifices, vaccination against smallpox was instituted. In the Middle Ages this disease was the scourge of Europe, and decimated the population. Of Pasteur, whose researches gave us the prevention and cure of dread hydrophobia. Of Walter Reed, whose discovery of the transmission of yellow fever, stripped this pestilence of its epidemic character, and eventually made possible the building of the Panama Canal. The results of his discovery spurred the research into other host-borne diseases, as malaria; typhus fever, the protozoan infections, tularemia, hook-worm disease and many others. Now the tropics and the semi-tropical countries, have been made healthful places in which to live. Of Russel, Craig and Nichols, through whose efforts anti-typhoid serum was perfected, and the greatest scourge of armies and other expeditions in the field has been eradicated. Others, too numerous to mention have devoted their lives unselfishly to study and research in order to relieve human suffering, and the annals of medicine are filled with the names of many who have actually laid down their lives through infections incurred in their researches.

Were these men inspired by any ulterior commercial motives? Were they units of organizations or bureaus, which have sold their labors to the public in exchange for a mere pittance? Any one with common sense and human intelligence knows that they were inspired by a love of their profession and an unselfish desire to help their fellowmen. There are many such researchers in the field of medicine and surgery today, still struggling to follow their noble example.

The average conscientious doctor is made in the same mold, and while he must make a decent living to maintain his place in the social order, he is at all times ready to give his best for his patients. To give them his individual thought and effort, irrespective of time, weather conditions or personal problems in his own life. Can such a man be regimented in a commercial group, selling his services for an annual competence, knowing that his efforts are resold much as groceries or other commodities, and still retain his personal touch and interest in patients who are likewise regimented, and given a numbered card, for which they pay a mere monthly pittance? If he punches a time clock, will he retain his individuality, and interest, and pride in his profession?

Let us discuss the medical service the beneficiary will get for his monthly prepayment.

1. His selection of a doctor for the attention he needs will be limited to the staff of doctors of the corporation. In the appointment of this staff he will have had no voice.

Thus he will forego what is his inalienable right—the choice of his own physician. In some cases this will at first be of no apparent importance, and if given a thought at all the conclusion will be that one will do as well as another for the particular ailment. This may hold good in the less serious illnesses. But along comes a grave illness, in which the question of invalidism or even the final call may be imminent. Then the physician of their own choice, one who can play the role of friend and counselor, as well as healer, is needed. Will the overworked regimented corporation doctor, who keeps hours from 8 A. M. to 4 P. M., whose clientele is made up of cases, card indexed for filing, who is on a salary, which does not increase as his work piles up, respond in the small hours of the morning when the crisis comes or an emergency arises? If called for such exigency, will he not be inclined to say, "Come to the office at 9 o'clock in the morning"? Will he have the personal interest the family doctor has in his patients? Say that his remuneration be based upon the number of patients he attends. In such a case the fee per person will necessarily be the minimum for which he is willing to sell himself to the corporation, and again, his clients are numbers, stripped of personal interest, and he becomes like the craftsman doing piecework. Do you wish the most valuable thing you have, your health, to be bartered for in such a cold blooded commercial manner?

2. Detailed facts of the most intimate character, past and present, are necessarily acquired by the physician in his role of administering to the ills, mental and physical, of his patients. Such information is adjudged by law to be privileged communications, and to be held as inviolate as those of the confessional of the Catholic Church. The physician is even more closely bound in secrecy than the priest. The information he obtains is as a rule stripped of the emotionalism of the confessional; and much of it obtained by deduction and analogy, of which fact the patient is usually fully aware. This most confidential status of the followers of the healing art was recognized by Hippocrates, one of the founders of medicine, dating back to the early Grecian period. This wise physician and teacher had the foresight to bind his pupils by an oath, one of the provisions of which oath relates to this sacred niche in which the physician is placed by reason of his knowledge of the most intimate details of his patients. And to this day before he is awarded his diploma, the physician must swear that he will never reveal any of the secrets given him to lock up.

Now will the histories of beneficiaries of a prepaid health bureau, histories often containing details which are for only the physician to see, be treated in the same inviolable manner? Will they not be classed as public or semipublic records, open to many whose only interest is one of morbid curiosity?

This is the greatest argument for the insistence of every individual to exercise his right in choosing his own physician. When he subscribes to any prepayment plan offered by a corporation illegally practicing medicine, he forfeits that sacred privilege. Does the cleverly worded prospectus and propagandum put out to ensnare its victims give these and other facts relative to the kind of service such corporate setup can only give? No. It is not even hinted between the lines. Read carefully what the prospects offer. Has not the proposed health insurance clinic of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, a Bureau of the Government, a semiofficial status? If so, will its records not also be open to others than its hired doctors? In passing, does the above corporation practice the same sort of philanthropy toward those who are legally entitled to assistance in building new homes for themselves, or renovating old ones? If you look into the matter you will find that its policies are laid down according to the strictest interpretation of real estate law and procedure. Its subscribers are bound by just as legally tight mortgages as any accomplished by lay financial and realty companies. The daily papers cited instances in which these mortgages are foreclosed, when the holders encounter further financial difficulties.

Will not the same policy be followed in the cases of its health beneficiaries, who default in their prepayments? Of course, as it is a cold business proposition, lacking in its very conception the attributes upon which the practice of medicine is founded.

3. Let us say that the contract doctor makes an error in diagnosis, or judgment, gives an overdose of a potent drug, or makes a mistake in operating, and the patient is invalided for life, or some more serious consequence ensues. To whom can the patient or relatives look for redress? Certainly not the doctor, for the unfortunate patient did not employ him. He had no choice but what was furnished by the corporation, and the injured party must look to the said corporate body for redress. Experience has shown that the chances of obtaining justice or consideration from such a setup are very slim. Taken to court the said corporation has the money to employ competent lawyers, funds which you and your associates have contributed.

4. In epidemics, which are likely to come at any time, can the overworked members of the contract staff adequately meet the demands made upon them? You reply that you may then turn to the other doctors in the community. You, you can now, but let this vicious system of panelized medicine, get its strangle hold upon its victims, and there will be no longer the incentive for good men to dedicate their lives to the healing art, and those few who are rash enough to study medicine will be so demoralized at the prospects of making a decent living, that they will either seek a contract with the monster corporation or turn to other fields. Such a system can only result in a lowering of the standards of medicine as we know it today. In fact, the family doctor, and the well-trained specialist of today, will fade out of the picture.

Now a word to the effect of this system of socialized, commercialized, communistic brand of medicine upon the other professions and business in general. After the medical profession has been properly panelized and throttled, will not the octopus look around for other victims? There are the dentists and lawyers to be subsidized. The retailers of the necessities of life, as food, clothing, housing, even entertainment and recreational enterprises can likewise be sovietized. The automobile industry can be brought within the confines of the system, and also the railroads. In fact, most every human enterprise can be made to bow to the will of the corporate monster. Why not go the whole way and set up another soviet? But take counsel and see where you will be, a mere stockholder, paying your pittance to maintain a small minority, the directors of the corporation in opulence and security, their tables overflowing with milk and honey, and you eating of the crumbs.

What have the doctors themselves done to meet the effects of the depression on those in the lower bracket incomes? This can best be discussed by citing what the local profession, as represented by the District of Columbia Medical Society, has initiated.

1. In conjunction with a number of public-minded laymen, the Group Hospitalization idea was crystallized into concrete working form, and is now successfully functioning in furnishing 21 days' hospitalization a year to its beneficiaries for the nominal prepayments of 75 cents a month. This move was inaugurated about 3 years ago, and is now functioning as an integral part of the Social Welfare of the community. It operates under a competent manager with an adequate office force, under the supervision of a Board of Governors consisting of public-minded laymen and members of the local medical profession. The Board serves without remuneration.

2. The Medical-Dental Service Bureau is an organization to which persons in the lower bracket incomes can apply when in need of medical services. It has a staff of economic experts, who look into the budgets of the applicants and after ascertaining in a general way their medical needs, refer them to practicing physicians with a brief statement of their status, with a recommendation that the fees for services be graded in such manner that no burden will be imposed upon the budget of the applicant. The doctors are heartily cooperating with the Bureau. This organization was initiated by and primarily financed by the Medical Society of the District.

3. The Central Admitting Bureau is likewise an organization started and initially financed by the Medical Society. Its function is to go into the financial condition of the indigent and semi-indigent, who are mostly referred by the hospital dispensaries and the doctors themselves. It has a tie in with the Community Chest, in that after it has determined that the individual applicant is worthy of and entitled to the assistance of the Chest Fund, he is referred to a hospital with a written statement citing his ability to make part payment or in many cases nothing at all, and his account is underwritten by the Bureau, to be paid out of the Chest Fund.

Both of the latter two Bureaus are managed by competent executives, and economic experts, under the supervision of Boards made up of physicians appointed by the Medical Society. The latter bodies serve without remuneration.

Now for the services which physicians themselves have rendered individually, and are now constantly giving to the indigent without stint or hope of reward. Every hospital in the District and for that matter, throughout the country, is staffed by a corps of doctors, carefully selected according to ability and ethical standing, who give of their time in the dispensaries, laboratories and the operating rooms without pay. These services are given unselfishly and willingly as their contribution to the community welfare. To give a better idea of such a contribution, it has been estimated that in the D. C., alone it amounts in dollars and cents to around $3,000,000.00 per annum, greater than the gifts of the general public to the Community Chest. What other class, professional or commercial, makes such a free-will offering to suffering humanity.

Many physicians have patients in their private practices, persons who have been at one time in the higher bracket incomes, who have through no fault of their own, become without means to meet their obligations, who are given the best the doctors have, the latter knowing that hope of remuneration is very doubtful. It is true that in many cases, when such patients have recovered in whole or in part, their former financial positions, they often show their appreciation by recognizing their obligation by payment in part or in whole for the services rendered in their time of need.

Do the retailers of the neecssities of life, as food, clothing, housing, etc., thus give of their merchandise, their services and their rentals in proportion to their customers ability to pay, or without cost to the indigent? The doctor's stock-in-trade is his knowledge, skill and time.

Thus is presented the results, to the public, of the establishment of socialized medicine, from the standpoint of the physician. It is not a defense to the threat of undermining his income, and can in no way be attacked on that premise. The medical profession is an integral part of the social economy, and anything which jeopardizes its position, will react unfavorably on the public welfare.

One of the greatest tributes of the medical profession to public health has been the development of preventive medicine in its study of the propagation of disease; and means of prevention. Volumes could be written upon this phase of its activities and it has been briefly stated elsewhere in this article.

Is it not just as much its duty to warn against this threat to the public welfare? Will not the gradual encroachment, ending in the final establishment of such panelized socialistic system of dealing out medical service, by means of a commercialized yardstick, be more destructive in its finality than the epidemics of the past, which have decimated the human race?

As stated before, is it not the entering wedge of a system which will engulf all human endeavors, stripping them entirely of the personal element so precious in the relationship of man to man, and regimenting the masses for the benefit of a political minority? I say political because politics is bound to play the major role."

The Government's objection was sustained, defendant's offer refused, and an exception was allowed.

DR. PRENTISS WILLSON, a Witness for the Defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. John E. Laskey:

I am a physician. I am 59. I graduated in 1905. After graduation I engaged in the general practice of medicine in the District of Columbia. I graduated from Georgetown University. I was in the service in the Army during the last war, and in 1919 when I left the service I specialized in obstetrics and gynecology and have done nothing but that since. I am attending surgeon or obstetrician in the Columbia Hospital for Women, which position I have held for ten or eleven years.

I am a member of the District Medical Society and the AMA. I joined the District Society in 1908 and became much interested in its affairs shortly after that time. I served in many different capacities in various offices in the Society: as corresponding secretary, as chairman of the Committee of Censors, several terms on the Executive Committee, some of them ex officio because of other committee chairmanships which I held at the time, some of them through election for a term of three years each; I was chairman of the Executive Committee several times, chairman for a term of the Committee on Medical Economics, and in 1933 I was elected president of the Society for the fiscal year 1933-1934. The fiscal year of the Society runs from the first of July to the following June 30th. I was also a member of the board of the Health Security Administration and the Medical-Dental Service Bureau, which were eleemosynary institutions which the Medical Society had part in forming.

The Society meets regularly every Wednesday night. The first Wednesday night in each month is a business meeting, and of these meetings four, that is, the meetings in November, January, March, and May—are so-called stated meetings, at which certain formal business of the Society is transacted and at which, according to the constitution, amendments to the constitution must be brought in. Only at those stated meetings can amendments be proposed.

In the matter of changes to the constitution and by-laws, if a member wishes to attempt to have a constitutional change made or propose an amendment to the constitution, he must propose it at a certain stated meeting, and then that proposed amendment is referred to the Executive Committee, which is obliged to make a report concerning it to the next ensuing stated meeting of the Society, either recommending its adoption or recommending adversely to its adoption.

I think I can give you very accurately the history of the amendment to the constitution denominated Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5. The purpose of the amendment was to afford the Society better facilities for controlling the practice of its members in relation to the Workmen's Compensation law, and it was first proposed before the Medical Society at the stated meeting in November, which would be the first meeting in November, 1935. At that time the provision in the constitution read:

(Mr. Laskey read to the jury as follows:)

"No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group, or individual engaged in the practice of medicine unless the Society has received proof that the profits from the practice inure to the benefit of members of the Medical Society."

The amendment now reads as follows:

(Mr. Laskey read to the jury as follows:)

"No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group, or individual, by whatever name called or however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within ten miles thereof, which has not been approved by the Society. The Executive Committee is authorized and directed to prepare an approved list of organizations, groups, and individuals, by whatever name called and however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within ten miles thereof, and the same shall be kept in the office of the secretary-treasurer. Before any such organization, group, or individual can be placed on the approved list of the Society, such organization, group, or individual, or the member of the Society proposing professional relations therewith shall submit to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee such evidence as the Committee or the Society may require concerning the character, activities, financial condition and ethical standards of said organization, group, or individual, and after considering the same said committee shall make a report of the investigation and findings to the Executive Committee for such action as it may deem necessary."

In its original form the amendment was proposed on the first Wednesday in November, 1935. It was then referred to the Executive Committee for report at the next stated meeting, in January. At that time I was a member of the Executive Committee to which this proposed amendment was referred. The amendment was given consideration in the Executive Committee and was vigorously opposed, so far as its adoption in the constitution was concerned, by a group of that committee, of which I was one, and the Executive Committee reported it to the Society at the stated meeting on the first Wednesday in January, 1936, adversely.

Despite the adverse recommendation of the Executive Committee the Society adopted it, so that it became a part of the constitution in January, 1936, for the first time. Its proponents then realized that there was not proper machinery in the constitution to effect the purposes of the amendment, and at the stated meeting of the Society in March, 1936, two months later, another amendment was proposed for the purpose of putting into the amendment machinery to make effective the provisions of the amendment already adopted. At the stated meeting in March an ex-president of the Society, Dr. A. B. Bennett, proposed a further amendment to the constitution, to strike out Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5, and these two proposed amendments to the constitution were referred to the Executive Committee.

The Executive Committee met, and I still being a member of it, and the two amendments were referred to a subcommittee of three to prepare a report for the consideration of the Executive Committee to submit to the Society. That committee was composed of Dr. Bennett, Dr. Don Johnson, and myself. The subcommittee met and gave careful consideration to the two amendments, the one striking out and the enabling amendment to provide machinery to make the existing amendment operative, and prepared a formal statement of its reasons for the position it recommended to the Executive Committee, that the amendment to strike out Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5, be adopted, and that the proposed amendment to provide machinery to make the present amendment operative be not adopted.

The report of the subcommittee was adopted by the Executive Committee, with a further amendment which was offered in the full committee, to the effect that the whole matter be referred to a special committee of the Society for study during the coming summer. That special committee was to consist of the president, the chairman of the Executive Committee, the chairman of the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee, the counsellor of the Society, Colonel Frederick A. Fenning, and two attorneys who were practicing at the local bar.

Following the usual constitutional procedure, this recommendation of the Executive Committee was brought into a full meeting of the Society in the latter part of May, 1936, as the stated meeting was postponed because the Society was having an annual scientific session. The Society overruled the recommendation of the Executive Committee and refused to strike out Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5, and adopted the new proposed amendment which was to provide machinery for its operation, and then adopted the suggestion of the Executive Committee that the whole matter be referred to a committee for study during the summer, for a report to the Society in the fall.

After the July, 1936, change of office the committee was organized, consisting of Dr. William Sprigg, ex officio, as president of the Society, Dr. J. Lawn Thompson, ex officio, as chairman of the Executive Committee, Dr. R. Arthur Hooe, ex officio, as chairman of the C. C. and I. M. Committee, Colonel Frederick A. Fenning as counsellor of the Society, and, under the provision of the action of the Society, Winship Wheatley and John Spaulding Flannery of the local bar. This was in 1936.

The subject of study for the committee was the relations of the Society to its members engaged in contract practice under the Workmen's Compensation law, and the best method of controlling that practice to make it conform to the ethics of the local organization and the AMA. The committee studied the matter during the summer.

Because of a serious difference of opinion in the Society and in the Executive Committee surrounding this matter, I resigned from the Executive Committee and from every other position and office I held with the Society at the meeting of April 22, 1936, although my resignation did not take effect until the first of the following May. I attended one meeting of the Executive Committee after that resignation. Therefore, I had nothing to do with the deliberations of this committee or with its activities or with the activities of the Executive Committee.

The Committee gave the matter consideration during the summer, and at a meeting of the Society in October, 1936, merely made a progress report and asked for more time to give the matter further consideration. The request was granted by the Society, and in November 1936 the committee made its final report to the Society, in which it suggested certain minor modifications in Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5, which then had been in the constitution since the preceding January. The report of the committee was received and given the status of the first reading of a proposed amendment, because it did make certain minor changes in wording. At a stated meeting in January 1937 the matter then came up, with some further modifications in the wording of the amendment, and the action of the Society was to return it to the committee, with instructions to consult legal counsel further. The matter finally came up before the Medical Society at the first stated meeting in March, 1937, and it was then adopted.

Except for the changes made in March, 1937, the provision had been in the constitution for 14 months, and the amendment, so far as I know, has never been touched since then. I was opposed to the original amendment. I fought it in the Executive Committee. I signed every adverse report concerning it, and I was in favor of its being stricken out of the constitution. On three different occasions I proposed amendments to strike it out of the constitution, and I voted for approval of them, and I continued to oppose the amendment until its final adoption in 1937.

I first heard of Group Health on the occasion of the meeting in Dr. William Gerry Morgan's office, May 16, 1937. The introduction of the amendment and the final passage of it in its present form, of Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5, obviously did not have anything to do with Group Health because it was in the constitution 14 months before March, 1937, and I never heard of Group Health until May, 1937, so it was in the constitution 18 months before I ever heard of Group Health.

I recall the letter introduced by Dr. Sprigg to be sent to the hospitals in the fall of 1937 very well. Dr. Sprigg proposed sending that letter at a meeting of the Society in October, 1937, but Dr. Groover pointed out that it was too important a matter for the Society to take action on prior to all the members of the Society having been notified that the matter was coming up, and this placed the letter which Dr. Sprigg proposed sending to the various local hospitals as a matter on the agenda and definitely postponed it for consideration until the stated meeting on the first Wednesday in November following. I attended that meeting, which occurred on November 3, 1937.

The letter that Dr. Sprigg proposed sending the hospitals was read as follows:

"The Medical Society of the District of Columbia desires to call attention to Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5 of the constitution, as follows"—

Then follows in the letter the same Section 5 which Mr. Laskey just read to the jury. Then follows this (reading further):

"Whereas the Medical Society is using its earnest efforts to give to the people of the District of Columbia the most advanced and best possible medical care, we therefore ask your cooperation by aiding us to carry out this principle. In view of the above section of the constitution of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia we hope your board will see the advisability of making such reservations in your hospital so that it may be in accord with and support our efforts.

"Members shall not accept appointment to or continue to serve upon the medical staff of any hospital or dispensary which is not approved by the Society. A list of approved hospitals and dispensaries shall be available in the Society's office."

The Sprigg letter was on the agenda for action at the November 3 meeting; on the afternoon of November 3 I noticed the letter on the agenda, proposing to call to the attention of the boards of directors of the hospitals the provisions of Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5, which I was opposed to. I then tried to think of a possible way to prevent the sending of the letter, and on a piece of scratch paper with a pencil, without consulting with anybody in the world, and on the spur of the moment, I scratched down the resolution which I proposed that night, and which shows on its face how very crudely and carelessly it was drawn. I may have shown the draft to Dr. Hough, but I honestly don't remember doing that. I then had my secretary type the resolution. I then walked over to Dr. Christie's office, as I knew he was opposed to the sending of the Sprigg letter, and on seeing him in his office he said he was opposed to it. I then called his attention to the resolution I had drafted and asked him if he was willing to second it and if he thought that the resolution as drawn might prevent the sending of the Sprigg letter. He said he thought it might and he would be willing to second it. At the meeting of the Medical Society that night (November 3) there was a further recommendation, among much other business, brought in from the Executive Committee, which seemed to me to be proposing action along the same line as the Sprigg letter, and I asked if such proposal was in lieu of the Sprigg letter, but the question was not answered, so I immediately proposed my resolution. Prior to proposing my resolution, however, a resolution was introduced by Dr. Stanton, but it had nothing to do with this particular matter. The resolution I proposed read as follows:

"Whereas, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia has an apparent means of hindering the successful operation of Group Health Association, Inc., if it can prevent patients and physicians in its employ from being received in the local private hospitals;

Whereas, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia has no direct control over the policies of such hospitals as are determined by their lay boards of directors, except through control of its own members serving on their medical staffs; and

Whereas, conflicts between the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and any local hospital arising from an attempt to enforce the provisions of Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5 of the constitution should be assiduously avoided if possible because of the unfavorable publicity which would accrue to its own members;

Therefore, be it resolved, that the Hospital Committee be, and is hereby, directed to give careful study and consideration to all phases of this subject and report back to the society at the earliest practicable date its recommendations as to the best way of bringing this question to the attention of the medical boards of directors of the various local hospitals in such manner as to obtain the maximum amount of practical accomplishment with the minimum amount of friction and conflict."

I had one purpose solely in introducing that resolution, and that was to prevent, if possible, the sending of Dr. Sprigg's letter to the boards of directors of the hospitals. There was considerable discussion of the resolution, and I had deliberately chosen the wording spontaneously, on the spur of the moment, because of the wide divergence of view within the Society as to this whole situation. My own personal feeling was that this method of approach to the hospitals in connection with Group Health was inexpedient and calculated to engender friction rather than be of any real assistance in the problem, and the wording of the resolution was deliberately employed, as far as its "Whereas's" were concerned, for the sole purpose of getting enough votes to send it through the Society. The necessity for some such parliamentary tactics is shown by the fact that the vote was quite close, 68 to 53 in favor of the resolution. The sole provision of the resolution which I wished to get over was merely to get the thing into a committee, with the thought in my mind that was the way possibly to choke the thing off and prevent it from being sent to the hospitals. It had that effect to this extent, that the Hospital Committee took the resolution under advisement in conformity with the action of the Society, and at a meeting on November 11 reported to the Society. Whereupon there was considerable discussion and it was re-referred to the committee, with instructions to consider it further. At the next business meeting of the Society, on December 1, the committee finally reported to the effect that the medical boards of the hospitals should call to the attention of the boards of directors the Mundt Resolution, and the report of the Hospital Committee on December 1 was adopted, which read as follows:

"That as a matter of educational policy the Medical Society of the District of Columbia strongly recommends that all hospitals engaged in the teaching and training of residents, interns, and nurses, where possible, follow the recommendation of the American Medical Association regarding the constitution of their entire medical staffs, namely, that each appointee be a member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia or a local Medical Society in this immediate neighborhood and a member of the American Medical Association."

There was no further action concerning my resolution that I recall, and the only other action with which I had any personal connection was the final action of the Hospital Committee insofar as it concerned my connection with Columbia Hospital.

I recall a local physician named Scandiffio, and that his name came before the Executive Committee concerning certain charges that had been made, but I had nothing to do with those charges as I had resigned from the Executive Committee and just retained my membership. I knew that he had been tried by the Executive Committee and it had been recommended that he be expelled, and that the matter came up at a Society meeting. Dr. Scandiffio was charged with having violated Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5, and also two or three other violations of the provisions of the constitution, which charged in substance a violation of the Medical Ethics of the AMA, and that he had contracted to give his services under circumstances wherein he could not render good medical service; further there was a requirement that a physician file his contract with the Society, and Dr. Scandiffio had failed to do this, as required by the constitution. I voted for his expulsion reluctantly, because I felt it was incumbent on the Society to protect itself, and as its members had voluntarily agreed and obligated themselves to obey the provisions of the constitution —while I didn't like certain provisions—he had violated several provisions of that constitution, as far as I could determine from the report of the committee. While I didn't know Dr. Scandiffio very well he was a pupil of mine at Georgetown and had been, as far as my knowledge went, well trained and was personally associated with a very intimate friend of mine, a leading pediatrician, and at the time this whole business was boiling in the Medical Society I had from the very beginning many patients in private practice who were members of Group Health. On several occasions during that period patients of mine stated that they would like to have Dr. Scandiffio see their babies, and I told them as far as I was concerned he was competent and I had no objection to him seeing their babies if he wished and, as a matter of fact, he did see the babies of several patients of mine. That was the close of my contact with the Scandiffio incident. In 1937 and 1938 I was one of eight attending surgeons of Columbia Hospital, four of whom had a surgical service and four of whom were attending obstetricians; I was one of the latter and a member of the medical board of the hospital. Columbia Hospital also had a courtesy staff classified into three categories. Class I concerns operative procedure in gynecology and includes everything connected with surgery on the organs peculiar to women; Class II concerns major obstetrics, involving such things as craniotomy, for instance, or the destruction of an unborn baby, the removal of a uterus; in other words, anything pertaining to the care of a woman in labor. Class III concerns the handling of women in labor as long as it is progressing normally and satisfactorily, but if complications arise a person holding privileges in this class was required to have consultation with a member of the staff of the hospital, free of charge to the patient if the patient was unable to pay for it.

I recall that Dr. Selders applied for courtesy staff privileges at Columbia Hospital, seeking privileges in general surgery, major gynecology, major obstetrics, and normal obstetrics; in other words, he applied for privileges in Classes I, II, and III, and, in addition, tacked on his application the request to do general surgery in the hospital, which meant that he could take out a brain tumor or do a thyroid, or operate for an empyema in the chest, do any surgery. Columbia Hospital doesn't have on its staff any physician corresponding to that sort, and issues no privileges in general surgery. While there are general surgeons who can practice at Columbia, they are on the consulting staff. In other words, we have a consulting staff of general surgeons, and in the event the patient for whom the hospital is responsible in a ward develops, for instance, empyema from pneumonia following childbirth, we would call in a consultant, because we wouldn't know about such a condition, it not being in our line. Dr. Selders applied for the whole works, I, II, and III, everything, and as far as I know there is no such person existing in the United States. The board, however, gave consideration to the application. As an obstetrician and gynecologist I wouldn't set myself up as competent to determine the ability of a man to do general surgery, as I don't know enough to even gauge his ability from the credentials he might present, and if he referred to a clinic, with the exception of the Mayo Clinic, I probably wouldn't even know enough about the standing of the clinic to which he referred to intelligently pass on the matter, so the application as regards general surgery, despite the fact that we didn't have any such individual on our staff, was referred to the Washington Academy of Surgery for guidance as to what his qualifications were. The question of his ability to do major gynecology, that, modestly, I think I have some ability to gauge. However, that phase of the application was referred to the Washington Gynecological Society for an advisory report, in the same way as we had referred the other application to the Washington Academy of Surgery, as it was our custom to do that even though we felt competent to examine the credentials ourselves. The Washington Academy of Surgery advised adversely as to Dr. Selders' qualifications in general surgery; the Washington Gynecological Society advised adversely as to his qualifications to do major obstetrics and gynecology, which was in accordance with the opinion of the medical board, and since he had applied for all three groups, the medical board, which acts only in an advisory capacity to the Board of Directors, advised the Board of Directors against granting the privileges applied for, and that, I recall, was the action of the board.

Later an application was received from Group Health, rather than Dr. Selders, renewing in a way Dr. Selders' application. This was on September 2, 1938. My impression was that the correspondence on the renewal was handled by some official of Group Health, and the gist of it was that Group Health desired his application should be treated separately for each group of privileges sought. A motion was made before the medical board that Dr. Selders' application for privileges I and III, involving major gynecology and minor obstetrics—that is, normal obstetrics, leaving out major obstetrics—be considered. The motion was considered and the medical board recommended adversely; thereupon I moved that the Board of Directors be advised that the medical staff didn't think it advisable to act on the application at that time, and, by a divided vote, that recommendation prevailed and was sent to the directors. The Board of Directors acceded to it and the result was that Dr. Selders was permitted privileges pending final disposition of it, pending which period he was permitted to handle normal obstetrics in the hospital. My position in the matter was this: I said to the medical board that there wasn't any question in my mind that the man is not competent to do general surgery, but that matter is out, and I am equally convinced that he has not shown any evidence that he should be granted the privilege of doing major gynecology or handling desperate cases of childbirth, but were he a member of the Medical Society you would grant him privileges or at least recommend him for privileges in Class III, normal obstetrics, and, in my judgment, this situation should be handled in the same way. Men on Group Health should not be permitted to practice in any hospital if they cannot show that they possess the necessary qualifications, the same as other men in or out of the Society are required to demonstrate. At the very time Dr. Selders' application was before the hospital we turned down a much more competently trained man who was a member of the District Society, and the Board of Directors sent the application back to us under pressure from Members of Congress and various high officials. The medical board stuck to its guns and refused to alter its position, and that concerned a member in good standing in the Medical Society here. My opinion was that if a doctor was qualified, the fact that he was on the staff of Group Health should make no difference, and the board should take a position comparable to the one that Dr. Macatee took at Garfield; that is, such doctor should either be permitted to practice pending the outcome of the question of the legality of Group Health or should be kept out of the hospital altogether. The claim of the members of Group Health concerning illnesses treated in hospitals by a Group Health physician is an outstanding example of the way Group Health—and I am referring to the crowd that had the thing in control, was going to ride roughshod over the situation in Washington in connection with the hospitals —because there isn't a member of this jury, who if taken ill tonight, could call up a hospital and get in there and be treated by a physician of his choice unless that physician is admitted to courtesy staff privileges in that hospital, but the GHA organization took the position that because an individual was a member of GHA they were different and were entitled to have a privilege for themselves denied to every other citizen in the District of Columbia. The privilege they sought was the right of calling a hospital and saying: "Dr. Blank is my physician and I want to get in there, and he is going to take a tumor out tomorrow," and the hospital should have nothing to say as to whether the doctor was competent to do it or whether the patient was committing hara-kiri. Dr. Selders did attend normal obstetrical cases in the hospital after September of 1938.

I didn't engage in any combination or conspiracy with any person, organization, or society to restrain trade in the District of Columbia in violation of the Sherman Act, as I never contacted anybody in the AMA in this matter in the period covered by the indictment, on that subject or any other, and I have only discussed the matter casually with one or two of my co-defendants, but did nothing more, and I was out of office in the Society, off all responsible committees and any conversation which I had with any of my co-defendants was by way of disagreement. I don't know whether I can name all of the co-defendants in the case, but I would recognize them, as I know them all. I never conspired with anyone for the purpose of restraining Group Health; the members of Group Health, the doctors serving on the medical staff of Group Health, doctors not on the staff of Group Health, or for the purpose of restraining the business of the Washington hospitals.

On receipt of a communication from the secretary of the District Medical Society calling attention to the Mundt Resolution, Dr. Crowley, a member of our staff, moved that the medical board recommend to the Board of Directors that it adopt the policy of the Mundt Resolution. The Board of Directors received the recommendation, returned it to the medical board with the request that the board rescind the recommendation, and the board, on my motion, rescinded its action.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

The final thing I remember on the Mundt Resolution is that I moved that the action of the medical board in recommending its adoption to the Board of Directors be rescinded, as I was not for it, and stated that the effect of it would be to take in people who could pay their medical society dues and keep out those who could not. So far as I know the application of Dr. Selders followed the usual form and gave information as to his birth, education, experience, teaching experience, hospital experience, and his references. In investigating an applicant one of the sources we turn to is his references.

Government counsel read Gov. Ex. 538.

On November 25, 1937, I was a member of the Medical Board at Columbia Hospital, and I have no recollection of giving any instructions to Colonel Ashburn to write that sort of letter (Gov. Ex. 538). As Government counsel read Gov. Ex. 538, I heard nothing that wouldn't be true, and it is under Colonel Ashburn's signature. I have no recollection of having seen Gov. Ex. 539 before.

Q. I want to know whether the letter (Gov. Ex. 539) refreshes your recollection that these facts were before the Medical Board some time before you voted against Dr. Selders.

A. I couldn't say. It doesn't refresh my recollection as to whether this specific letter or these specific facts were before the Board the result of this letter, but I know that such facts were before the Medical Board. Whether they came from this particular source or not, I could not say.

Q. Were these facts before the Board: that Dr. Selders had served a residency in the Worcester City Hospital in surgery between the dates July 1st, 1936, and July 1st, 1937, coming to that institution from the Pennsylvania Postgraduate School, where he had taken a course in surgery the previous year?

That as to the number of operations he performed, the only accurate figures would have to be gained from a survey of a large number of records, but scanning the operating schedules for the year he was listed at the Worcester Hospital to operate on 273 cases, of which a hundred and ninety might be classed as major and 83 as minor. That these figures did not necessarily mean that he had performed these operations himself.

"He may have elected to assist someone else in the operation, or does it mean that this is all the operating that he participated in. He may have assisted or otherwise participated in considerably more than are shown here."

Doesn't it also give you these facts:

"Dr. Selders was a resident on the surgical service here and, therefore, did not figure to any particular extent in obstetrical work. Gynecology is here absorbed in general surgery and one may assume that he had considerable contact therefore with gynecological surgery."

Those facts, you say, were before the Board as to his experience in the Worcester City Hospital at the time they denied his application?

A. I assume that similar facts were before the Board, but I have no recollection of these specific facts. I could comment on them if you want me to, but it would not be a question of recollection.

The application for surgical privileges was referred to the Washington Academy of Surgery, which turned his application down wihout disclosing the ground (Gov. Ex. 447-A). The application was referred to the Washington Gynecological Society as to obstetrics and Gynecology, as that was the usual routine. I don't remember when the custom started of referring applications for gynecological privileges to the Washington Gynecological Society. When the Gynecological Society recommended adversely to Dr. Selders I have no recollection of their having stated any grounds for the recommendation. I didn't interview Dr. Selders myself and had no occasion to observe his technique. In voting against Dr. Selders' application I had before me the adverse recommendations, without grounds, of the Washington Gynecological Society and the Washington Academy of Surgery, and as Dr. Selders had applied in the four categories—general surgery, major obstetrics, gynecology, and normal obstetrics—so far as I was concerned, I didn't require the reference to the Gynecological Society concerning his qualifications in obstetrics and major gynecology, as I could gauge that myself. I could gauge it on the letter you (Government counsel) showed me and his qualifications in gynecology were worse, as it showed training in a hospital where gynecology was absorbed in general surgery, and there is no worse training than that for gynecology. His qualifications merely showed him to be in a general surgical service, and that his gynecological experience would certainly not be considerable from the point of view of putting a man in a position of turning him loose in a hospital in gynecology. His experience wouldn't show him competent to do that at all.

Q. You remember it did give you this information: this is for the superintendent of the hospital,

"One may assume that he had considerable contact, therefore, with gynecological surgery?"

A. I testified that wouldn't mean a thing to me, because, as stated in the letter, that was all absorbed in general surgery.

I think we made a very good investigation of the applicant and it was entirely sufficient for the purpose of passing on the candidate under the circumstances disclosed in his application and this letter. Columbia is a special hospital having a wonderful record throughout the country in obstetrics and gynecology. It is taking no chances of putting a man of uncertain ability on its staff. The hospital did give him privileges in normal obstetrics, thereby indirectly giving him courtesy privileges and he did bring patients in the hospital, as while he was formally placed on the courtesy staff he did have the privilege of bringing normal cases in the hospital. I remember that his request for privileges at some time was broken down into different classes which finally resulted in his being given privileges of attending cases in Class III.

The Washington Gynecological Society is made up of the leading specialists in gynecology in Washington; it has a requirement for membership that a member must be a member of the District Medical Society. Dr. Crowley, president of the medical board of Columbia, was active in the Washington Gynecological Society.

I have a hazy recollection of some young man from Group Health late in 1938 applying for privileges, but I have no recollection as to who it was.

Q. Let me go back to the minutes of the medical board of April 14, 1938. Does not that refresh your recollection that the application of Dr. A. S. Hulburt for privileges in Class III was tabled?

A. No; I have no recollection of it at all. The minutes may show whether I was present at that meeting. There were a whole lot of meetings that year particularly that I never attended, and I may not have been there; so I have no recollection of it at all.

Q. Did you know that he resigned from Group Health Association on April 25?

A. I may have known it at the time, but I have no recollection of it.

Q. Did you know that he was given Class III privileges at your institution in early June, 1938?

A. I have no recollection of that, Mr. Lewin. You see, this whole thing was minor, as far as I am concerned.

Q. Perhaps it was, but I am trying to get the facts.

A. That is all right. I am merely trying to excuse myself for not remembering well.

Q. Will you look at my notes on the minutes of the meeting of the Medical Board on June 9, 1938? Dr. A. S. Hulburt's application was approved for Class III on that date, was it not?

A. What are you asking me?

Q. Whether that refreshes your recollection that after April 25, to wit, in June of 1938, he was approved for Class III in your institution.

A. I am terribly sorry. All it does is to bring back a hazy recollection to me of having heard that name before the Medical Board.

Q. Is not your hazy recollection this, that Dr. Hulburt applied when he was a member of Group Health Association and was not given privileges, and his application was tabled until after he resigned from Group Health Association, and then a little over a month afterwards he was given privileges there? Is not that your recollection?

A. It is awfully hard for me to separate in my mind what I remember and what I know now; but it begins to clear up in my mind a little; yes.

Q. Would you say that my question is correct?

A. I have no doubt it is correct. In fact, if you ask me if it is so, I would say yes, undoubtedly, because the record seems to show it.

Q. Would you testify that his connection with Group Health Association had something to do with postponing it until after he had resigned?

A. I have no recollection of that.

Q. Dr. Halstead, another Group Health Association doctor, testified that he applied at your hospital. Do you recall that?

A. I do not even have any recollection of there ever having been a Dr. Halstead connected with the GHA or having applied.

Q. Were you not present at the meeting of the Medical Board on December 9, 1938? My notes show that you were.

A. Maybe I was, but I have no recollection of it.

Q. December 9, 1938. Do not these notes refresh your recollection to this extent, that on that day the application of Dr. Clark D. Halstead for Class III privileges was postponed pending further information?

A. I have no recollection whatsoever.

Q. You have none?

A. None at all.

Q. Would you say that you attended that meeting?

A. If the minutes say so. I have no recollection of it at all. I do not know any more about where I was on December 9 than you do, I guess.

Q. I suppose you would not question that that was the treatment that was given his application?

A. No.

Q. Would you say that his connection with Group Health Association had something to do with deferring action from August, when he applied, to December, 1938, and then deferring it further at that meeting?

A. What was he applying for?

Q. Class III privileges, normal obstetrics—isn't it?

A. That is normal obstetrics. And you are asking me what?

Q. Whether, in your opinion, his connection with Group Health Association accounted for the fact that although he applied in August his application was deferred until December 9, 1938.

A. I cannot answer that positively. There were other factors coming in at that time. Everybody who was applying there at the same time was postponed because the hospital staff was so full that we could not take care of patients. Whether that action was in connection with this or not

I don't know. I have no recollection of any discussion about the GHA in connection with Dr. Halstead, or anything about it. I don't even recollect that there was such a man.

Dr. Sylvester, who is on the staff at Columbia, is a member of the Gynecological and Medical Societies. Drs. Pagan, Kotz and Stan n were not members of our attending staff but were members of the courtesy staff. Dr. McNitt, a member of our attending staff, was secretary of the Gynecological Society. At the meeting of the medical board of November, 1938, Dr. Sprigg's motion to reconsider Dr. Selders' application for privileges in Classes I and III and that he be not endorsed was not passed, but my substitute resolution that it be considered inadvisable to act at the time of his application was carried with the net result that Dr. Selders, instead of being denied privileges in Class III, practically got privileges in Class III during the pendency of his application.

Q. Thank you, Doctor. I have just a few more questions about other phases of your testimony. I understood you to say on your direct examination that when you first learned of Group Health Association on May 16, 1937, it was at Dr. Morgan's office; and with reference to section 5—and I am going to call it Section 5 for brevity, and not go through the rest of it. That is the only Section 5 involved, is it not?

A. Yes. Thank you very much.

Q. Section 5 of the constitution had been in force for 14 months?

A. It had been in force a year before the preceding January. That was in 1937, was it not?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you not mean by that testimony that it had been in force as Section 5, but in a radically different form and substance?

A. No; I did not. I testified that it had been modified.

Q. You testified it had been modified only in some minor particulars.

A. It seemed to me to be minor.

Q. Is not this the way it read when it was adopted January 8, 1936 (reading):

"No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group, or individual engaged in the practice of medicine unless the Society has received proof that the profits from such practice inure to the benefit of the medical profession only."

A. I assume it was. I know it was a different form.

Q. Did it not remain in exactly that form until March 3, 1937, for a period of fourteen months?

A. That is my recollection, precisely.

Q. When you learned about Group Health and when you discussed it, did you not understand it to be a non-profit organization??

A. I think so; definitely; yes.

Q. Is it not true that when you amended it, it read as follows—

The Court: When was the amendment

Mr. Lewin: March 3, 1937, some 14 months later.

Mr. Burke: There was an amendment on January 6, 1937, also.

The Court: We are speaking about this one.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. As a matter of fact, it was not amended on January 6, 1937, was it?

A. My impression is the same as yours, that it came up for action, and then I think it was referred back because they wanted to put some more words in it, and it went back to the Executive Committee again. That is my recollection.

Q. On March 3, 1937, it was amended to read as follows, was it not:

"No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group, or individual by whatever name called or however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within ten miles thereof, which has not been approved by the Society."

I will not read the rest, because that is with reference to the machinery. But is not that the way it read when you amended it?

A. I assume it did. I never carried it in my mind.

Q. Dr. Willson, I have only a few more questions.

I was questioning you when we adjourned with regard to the amended Section 5. Now, isn't it true that on March 3, 1937, that section became substantially changed from what it had been before?

A. Well, Mr. Lewin, that was never my understanding of the matter. The section was introduced originally, and was so understood in the Medical Society always, as a method for controlling the practice of members and the relations of the Society to members who were engaged in contact practice under the Workmens Compensation Law.

Q. But by its terms it was not limited to Workmens Compensation clinics, was it?

A. Oh, no, but I mean that was what lay back of it ever having been introduced.

Now, to continue to answer your question, I personally never had the feeling—I don't recall the wording of the thing in either form in my mind—but I never had the feeling that it was substantially changed.

Q. Before March 3, 1937, it applied only to organizations where profit accrued to laymen, whereas after that date it applied to all persons practicing medicine and to all organizations practicing medicine whom the Society did not approve of for any reason it chose; is that right?

A. May I compare them? Will you show me where the two are?

Q. Yes, sir. I now show you a copy of the section as adopted January 8, 1936.

A. This is Section 5?

Q. Section 5, yes.

A. Now, let us take the other one.

Q. This is the way it was changed on March 3, 1937.

A. I would say that the wording of the provision adopted in lieu of the original in March, 1937, was somewhat more inclusive than the original.

Q. So that we will be clear about it, isn't this true: that before the change it simply limited your members from having participation in clinics where profit from those clinics went to laymen, whereas after the change it forbade members from having any participation whatsoever with any persons practicing medicine if those persons were not approved by the Society for any reason?

Mr. Richardson. We object to the question on the ground that it calls for a conclusion of the witness and is purely argumentative; further, the documents speak for themselves.

Mr. Lewin. I am simply asking for the understanding of the witness.

The Court. I think that is strictly true, Mr. Richardson; however, the doctor has stated his understanding to be that there was no substantial change, and it may be that this cross-examination is reasonable.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Will you answer the question?

A. Then, you will have to repeat it.

Q. Isn't it true that before the change it forbade your members from having anything to do merely with clinics that had a profit, where some of that profit went to laymen, whereas after the change it forbade your members from having anything to do with any persons practicing medicine unless they were approved by the Medical Society, for any reasons the Medical Society saw fit?

A. Well, I testified, and I think as I read this now, that this latter provision seems to me to be more inclusive, from the point of view of its wording; but from the point of view of my understanding of the practical application of the thing, I never had any opinion that there was any difference.

Q. But I want to be clear about this, and I should like to have a direct answer, if you can make it, to my question.

A. I think I stated that: that I thought that more inclusive. The language here was more inclusive.

Q. Didn't you understand that its application would apply to the Group Health Association?

A. No, never in the world, because I had had no knowledge of Group Health Association for two months later or more.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't you invoke this other section with regard to Group Health Association?

A. I never did.

Q. Didn't you? Well, let's see. You testified that you presented this resolution, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. At the November 3 meeting of the Society?

A. That is right.

Q. That was directed to Group Health Association, wasn't it?

A. No, sir.

Q. What?

A. No, sir.

Q. It was not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it directed to Group Health Association doctors?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did you mean by this language:

"Whereas, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia has an apparent means of hindering the successful operation of Group Health Association, Inc., if it can prevent patients of physicians in its employ being received in the local private hospitals"?

A. I meant just what it says: that it has an apparent means.

Q. Wasn't your resolution addressed to the Group Health situation?

A. Never had, really—Except indirectly, it had no connection with the Group Health situation whatsoever.

Q. What was the purpose of reciting at the very start that you had "an apparent means of hindering" its operation?

A. As I explained in my direct testimony, the reason for bringing in that resolution, except the "Resolved" down here (indicating), was that the thing be referred to a committee, which would present a resolution at the Medical Society, which would prevent the sending of that letter to the boards of directors of the hospitals, and to obtain enough votes, as an old medical organization man, familiar with what had to be done to get things in the Society—to get enough votes to get it passed and get that letter—proposed letter—stopped. There was the whole thing with reference to that resolution, and nothing else but that.

Q. All right. Now, do I understand that you knew you could not get enough votes for your resolution unless you made it appear that it was directed against Group Health Association?

A. I didn't know anything of the sort. How could I know how many votes I would get? All I knew was that there was a great deal of difference of opinion and a great deal of turmoil in the Society, and any number of different views on the subject.

What I wanted to do was to present a resolution which would attract enough votes to stop the sending of that letter and bury the whole thing in the committee.

Q. Wasn't this turmoil in the Society, turmoil with regard to the Society's attitude toward Group Health?

A. It was the clashing views of many different individuals and convictions as to the threat involved in GHA. Some thought it was no threat at all; some thought it was a great threat. Some wanted to attack the problem one way, and some another.

I felt it was making a mistake, as far as the Society was concerned, and my resolution was certainly not to protect GHA, neither was it to attack it. It was to protect the Society against a course of action which, in my judgment, could not be sustained and would only, if it were put through, make the Society ridiculous.

Q. You mean a course of action with regard to Group Health Association?

A. I mean a course of action with regard to calling the attention of the lay boards of hospitals to the provision of the constitution, which, as I have testified, I was always opposed to. I was opposed to this thing ever getting into the constitution. I tried to get it out, and for months and months after any of the GHA situation developed, I was persistently and consistently opposed to the application of that provision of the constitution to the GHA.

Q. You knew that the Sprigg letter, which you opposed, was directed to Group Health Association, did you not?

A. It was directed to the lay boards of the hospitals, but I know what you mean: it was motivated by the GHA situation.

Q. Yes, the purpose was to take care of the GHA situation?

A. I don't know what the purpose was in the mind of the proponents, but it was certainly, in my judgment, connected with the GHA situation; it couldn't be anything else.

Q. It couldn't be anything else?

A. I don't think so.

Q. You could not think of any other purpose for it?

Mr. Laskey. For what?

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. For the Sprigg letter?

A. At that particular time—Of course, it could have been applied to many other situations with respect to the hospitals, but at that particular time the natural assumption was that it applied to the GHA.

Q. As a matter of fact, you don't know of any other situation to which it was applied?

A. Not at that particular time, no.

Q. You were offering this resolution as a substitute for the Sprigg letter, weren't you?

A. That is right.

Q. So, your resolution, too, then, was directed to taking care of the Group Health Association?

A. I have testified, Mr. Lewin, and you can't make me say that, because it isn't true. I testified that my sole purpose in this resolution was to stop the sending of that letter. The fact it was concerned with the GHA situation was purely coincidental.

Q. You believed what you stated here, didn't you, in recital No. 1?

A. Yes, I did—that it had the apparent means. Just underscore that word "apparent."

Q. You believed that on November 3, 1936, didn't you?

A. That they had the apparent means?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. On November 3, when you had that belief, it preceded by five days or eight days Dr. Selders' application to your hospital; isn't that so?

A. I have no more idea of that relationship in time. I have no recollection of any such relationship.

Q. When you got Dr. Selders' application, you still thought, didn't you, that your Society had the apparent means of hindering Group Health Association, if you could prevent Dr. Selders from being in the hospitals?

A. Oh, I don't know, because this language you refer to in this first paragraph occurred to me about 20 minutes past 5, for the first time, on the afternoon I introduced it.

Q. But after you put it into the resolution, you still had that possibility in mind, didn't you, when you considered Dr. Selders' application?

A. Well, I am afraid—I am sorry I have lost——

Q. When you considered Dr. Selders' application, which I believe was sent to your hospital on November 11——

A. (Interposing) Yes.

Q. (Continuing) You had in mind this belief, didn't you, that the Medical Society had an apparent means of hindering Group Health Association if it could prevent any of the Group Health doctors from being received into the local hospitals?

A. I certainly did not, because I had advocated an entirely different—as far as my opinion was concerned, the matter of GHA physicians in hospitals should have been handled in an entirely different manner. I can tell you what I thought about it, if you want me to.

Q. I think you have told us a lot about it.

Didn't you also say that the Medical Society has some control over the policies of the hospitals? Didn't you say in substance that it had some control over the policies of hospitals by its control over the members serving on the staffs?

A. I said it has no direct control over the policies of hospitals as determined by their boards of directors except through its control of its own members serving on the medical staffs.

Q. So, you did believe it had that much control?

A. That is exactly what I did not believe, and that is the reason the resolution was introduced, to keep the Society from getting into a ridiculous position with the hospitals.

What would have been the result of sending this letter? Suppose the boards of directors said to the Medical Society, "You go and attend to your own business; we will attend to ours."

The situation had come up—exactly the same situation—before, when I was on the executive committee, and the Medical Society, as my recollection goes now, on the advice of the American Medical Association and the American College of Surgeons, had to back down.

Q. What do you mean by this:

"except through its control of its own members serving on their medical staffs"?

A. Mr. Lewin, I meant what it says. The only method of control—direct control—over the policies of hospitals which the Medical Society could possibly exert would be through the control of its members serving on those staffs.

Q. But you meant it did have that much control?

A. I just testified I didn't feel it had that much control, because I had seen the thing come up before, and the Medical Society had to back down, because it proved it didn't have it, for the reason that it was my opinion throughout this whole controversy that if it ever came to a showdown between the Society and the members of the Society who were hospital staff physicians, they would stick with the hospital rather than with the Society.

Q. Then, why didn't you say it didn't have any control at all about anything, about any of the staffs?

A. Because it never would have gone through the Society in that form. In other words, the letter would have gone out, and the motion would have been lost.

Q. In other words, you mean to say you were not really sincere?

A. I was subtle; let us put it that way.

Q. Do I understand that it is your testimony that although you put those two recitals there in the resolution, you did not mean them? Is that what it comes down to?

A. Well, I wouldn't go that far, Mr. Lewin.

Q. Did you mean them, or didn't you mean them?

A. I said in the first one—the gist of the words—

"Whereas, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia has an apparent means of hindering the successful operation of Group Health Association, Inc,—"

Q. (Interposing) Did you mean that?

A. I meant just that, if you underscore the word "apparent." It appeared on the surface that it had.

Q. It is not underscored, but let us assume it is underscored. Did you mean it as if is written if you underscore the word "apparent"?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the second one. Did you mean that?

A. "Whereas, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia has no direct control over the policies of such hospitals as determined by their lay boards of directors, except through its control of its own members serving on their medical staffs; * * *"

That is a statement of fact. That is the only possible way they could control the hospital.

Q. Did you mean that?

A. I meant that—just as it reads.

Q. Now, then, did you mean this statement in the third recital:

"Whereas, Conflicts between the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and any local hospitals arising from an attempt to enforce the provisions of Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5, of its Constitution should be assiduously avoided, if possible, because of the unfavorable publicity that would accrue to its own members"?

A. Yes, I certainly did.

Q. Did you mean that that was the reason why you were offering the resolution: to avoid unfavorable publicity?

A. No; there were many other reasons, as I have testified; this was one of them.

Q. Did you give any other recitals in that recital?

A. I gave them in my testimony; I didn't give them in there.

But please remember this thing was done in 15 or 20 minutes on my desk late in the afternoon, and I am not proud of it as a literary effort.

Q. I am not questioning its literary merits. I am trying to see what was meant by it.

The reason you gave there, and the only reason, was that conflicts would bring unfavorable publicity?

A. Conflict should be avoided for any reason, because it would bring unfavorable publicity.

Q. That Section 5 was the same Section 5 amended March 3, 1937?

A. This is November, 1937, and therefore this refers to the final adoption in March; that is correct.

Q. So, here you have a resolution to take care of the Group Health situation, and the thing you refer to is Section 5; isn't that so?

A. It is not to take care of Group Health Association at all; it is to take care of an intramural situation within the Medical Society which had to do with Group Health. Beyond that I will not go, because it is not true.

Q. The resolving part of the resolution was referred to the Hospital Committee in the first instance?

A. That is right.

Q. Why did you refer it to the Hospital Committee?

A. That is the first one that came into my mind. There was no ulterior motive in that. It was a group of physicians each one of whom was on the staff of a hospital, and who were therefore familiar with the situations that develop between staffs and hospitals, and so forth, and it seemed to me that they were the very group of men in the Society who would probably succeed in smothering this effort to send out this letter of which I disapproved so heartily.

Q. You did not refer it to the Hospital Committee to smother the letter, did you? You moved this resolution in lieu of the letter, and that killed the letter?

A. I moved it in lieu of the letter, because I didn't want the letter—If this motion prevailed, the letter does not go out.

Q. Precisely.

A. The letter I left in the hands of the Hospital Committee.

Q. No, the letter has gone.

A. Well, I mean the letter matter is left—Toward whatever the letter was aimed is left in the hands of the Hospital Committee; and not being an officer or member of a committee of the Society, my responsibility was completed there, as far as I was personally concerned. If they had never reported it out, it would have suited me ideally.

Q. You don't mean that you would refer it to the Hospital Committee for the Hospital Committee to deal with the letter, do you?

A. "* * * to all phases of this subject," and naturally the purport of the letter and all phases of this subject could not refer to anything but the letter, and that was the matter of approaching the lay boards of the hospitals.

Q. You knew that the Hospital Committee had one representative of the attending staff of each one of the hospitals, didn't you?

A. Oh, yes. Yes, I was thoroughly familiar with it.

Q. So, if you were going to bring pressure, as you say, or any control over your members serving on the staffs, that would be the logical committee, and that was why you picked it out?

A. That is not true.

Q. Do you mean to say you just picked out the Hospital Committee because it happened to be the first committee which came to mind?

A. I already explained that.

Q. Now, you wanted that Hospital Committee to make recommendations as to the best way of bringing this question to the attention of the Medical Boards. What did you mean by "this question"?

A. This question that was proposed in the letter. That was the reference to—What do you call it?

Q. Group Health Association?

A. No, the section. Section 5?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Doesn't "this question" mean the Group Health Association question?

A. No, to Section 5, I suppose. Let me read it:

"Resolved, That the Hospital Committee be, and is hereby, directed to give careful study and consideration to all phases of this subject"——.

Now, this resolution was in lieu of the letter, and the subject was proper on the boards of various hospitals—"and report back to the Society, at the earli st practicable date, its recommendations as to the best way of bringing this question to the attention of the medical boards and boards of directors of the various local hospitals in such a manner as to insure the maximum amount of practical accomplishment with the minimum amount of friction and conflict."

I can't say exactly as to what I had in mind. I can only say that if the Hospital Committee had brought in a report that the matter should be handled along the lines, for instance, I testified this morning that it had been at Garfield, about their letting them in upon determination——

Q. Letting whom in?

A. The staff physicians.

Q. Of whom?

A. GHA.

Q. Oh.

A. (Continuing) Either give them privileges in the hospital if qualified—now, please note that: if qualified—or keep them out.

Q. Do you say anything about it?

A. No, I don't say anything about it. You asked me what I had in mind. I am trying to tell you.

I say if the Hospital Committee had brought in a report and said, "We recommend that these men all be excluded pending determination of the legality of their practice; or if they be found qualified, they be admitted pending determination of the legality of their practice," that would have satisfied me a hundred per cent, because I thought it was the way the situation should be handled.

Q. When you say, "That the Hospital Committee be, and is hereby, directed to give careful study and consideration to all phases of this subject," do you mean by this subject the Group Health Association controversy?

A. No, I meant the proposed approach to the hospitals.

Q. Wasn't the only proposed approach to the hospitals in connection with Group Health?

A. I have already stated that.

Q. The resolution reads:

"Resolved, That the Hospital Committee be, and is hereby, directed to give careful study and consideration to all phases of this subject and report back to the Society, at the earliest practicable date, its recommendations as to the best way of bringing this question to the attention of the medical boards and boards of directors of the various local hospitals," and there, by "this question," wasn't the question this approach to the hospitals in connection with Group Health?

A. In connection, first, with the Section 5 as it applied to Group Health, if you will say that.

Q. I am agreeable to that. As applied to Group Health Association?

A. I think so.

Q. As I have just stated, it was within a month that you got this Selders application?

A. I don't know when it was. I have no recollection of when it came at all.

Q. Didn't Dr. Smith speak there in favor of your resolution in this way: Didn't he say he felt that this information could be conveyed to them orally, when they would have nothing to fight back with? Do you remember that?

A. No, I have no recollection of it, but it is apparently in the minutes. I suppose he said something like that. I have no control over what he said.

Q. Do you remember Dr. Hooe, a defendant in this case, saying this:

"• • • he was of the opinion that Dr. Willson's substitute offered some sound points, one in particular that which suggests that this committee be composed of members of the hospital staffs. He thought it was inconceivable that the hospitals would not acquiesce to reasonable principles. Another objection he had to Dr. Willson's resolution was that the committee is delegated to take its time and report back to the Society."

Do you remember that discussion?

A. Only because I have read this over, and it has been recently refreshed in my mind. I have no control over what Dr. Hooe said.

Q. Didn't you yourself say this with regard to the Sprigg letter, when you were urging adoption of your substitute:

"• • • he felt that the letter carried a veiled threat to the effect that if the hospitals did not comply the Society would unstaff them."

A. I think if it is there I certainly said it.

Q. Did you continue and say that you hoped the Society could control its own members?

A. What did I say after that?

Q. Sometimes you had a little doubt.

A. I had a great deal of doubt. That is the reason I introduced the resolution.

Q. But you hoped for it?

A. I hoped the Society was important enough to its members so that they would stick with it rather than with anything else, but I doubted it and still do.

Q. Right after that didn't you hear Dr. John A. Reed say that he was informed that every hospital in the city was cooperating with the medical profession against the Group Health Association, with one exception?

A. Well, I may have heard it. I have read it recently, but I have no independent recollection.

Q. You remember a discussion of that character occurring?

A. I remember a discussion; that is all.

Q. Then, you say, you were present on November 11, I believe, when the Hospital Committee reported?

A. That is my recollection, yes.

Q. The chairman of that Hospital Committee was the defendant Warfield; is that so?

A. I believe so.

Q. Wasn't he reporting pursuant to the requirements of your resolution, which had been passed?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Do you remember that his report was rejected because it was not strong enough?

A. I remember it was rejected on a motion of somebody.
Q. Wasn't it rejected because it simply said——
A. (Interposing): What was the language?
Q. Well, let us find it.

"Dr. J. Ogle Warfield, Jr., chairman of the Hospital Committee, was recognized. He submitted the following report, pursuant to resolution which was adopted by the Society on the evening of November 3."

That was your resolution?

A. That is my recollection.
Q. (Reading):

"In view of the resolution adopted by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia on the evening of November 3, 1937, the Hospital Committee held a meeting, at my office, on the evening of November 9, 1937, and recommends that the Medical Society of the District of Columbia send the following resolution to the Boards of Directors of those hospitals"——

A. Interposing): No, to the Medical Boards.
Q. (Continuing reading):

"'to the Medical Boards of the various local hospitals for interpretation to the Boards of Directors of those hospitals.'"

A. That was a change right there, you see, from the original proposal, which was a direct approach to the boards of directors.

Q. You mean this was a direct approach?

A. No, the letter for which mine was a substitute was a direct approach to the boards of directors.

Q. Your substitute contemplated approaching the boards of directors through the medical staffs?

A. Not at all. The original letter contemplated that. My motion tried to stop its being done.

Q. Doesn't this do the same thing?

A. No: "* * * send the following resolution to the Medical Boards" of the different hospitals.

Q. Isn't that what you advocated?

A. No, I didn't advocate any action; I simply made the resolution.

Q. I don't know what your point was with regard to the letter. The letter was to go directly to the directors?

A. That is what I am trying to say. The Sprigg letter was to go directly to the directors.

Q. You didn't like that?

A. I didn't like its going out at all. I didn't like its referring to Section 5, which, as I have testified, was not in my favor.

Then, here, the original proposal was to approach the boards of directors. My resolution stopped that and referred the matter to the committee, and then the committee came in on November 11 and urged sending the following resolution to the medical boards of the hospitals, which is a different proposition.

Q. Your resolution had pointed out that the way to approach the problem was through the medical boards?

A. No, that is not my recollection.

Q. Except for the control exercised over the medical staffs?

A. Over its own members—controlled over its own members of the Society who happened to be serving on hospital staffs. That would include, of course, more than the medical board; it would include the courtesy staff as well.

Q. And courtesy staffs have no influence as to who is to be elected to the staffs of hospitals?

A. No. My statement referring to the control of the Society over its members on hospital staffs included the attending staffs and the courtesy staffs.

Q. This was what Dr. Warfield sugggested:

"That the hospitals accept patients from Group Health Association, Inc., provided that Group Health Association, Inc., is responsible for their financial obligations."

A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing):

"That these patients only be treated by the attending, associate, assistant and courtesy staff physicians of the respective local hospitals."

A. Yes. Now, what is it?

Q. That would mean, would it not, that the Group Health Association patients could be treated by people like Dr. Scandiffio, who was on the courtesy staff of Sibley, for instance?

A. Yes, or—Yes.

Q. Then, is it not true that one doctor in the discussion, Dr. Daniels, said that he was of the opinion that members of the local medical staffs of hospitals were required to be members of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, and that he would inquire if any of the members of the staff of Group Health Association were now members of the Society? Do you remember that?

A. It is so recorded in the minutes. I have refreshed my memory of it recently; I have no independent recollection of it.

Q. Don't you understand his point to be that under that resolution suggested by Dr. Warfield, or that communication suggested by Dr. Warfield, a man like Dr. Scandiffio, who was still a member of the District Medical Society, might be a member of the courtesy staffs of some of the hospitals and, therefore, could treat Group Health Association patients?

A. Yes. He apparently was trying to get information as to whether any of the staff of Group Health Association were still members of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

Q. Do you recall what Dr. Neill said in answer to that question?

A. No.

Q. Could you refresh your recollection by looking at the minutes?

A. It would call up no recollection independent of the fact that I would assume the minutes was correct if it were read to me. I would have no recollection of it, I am sure.

Q. Do you know what happened to that resolution of Warfield's?

A. It was re-referred. I know that it was re-referred to the committee.

Q. Do you know the grounds on which it was referred?

A. It was re-referred to the committee. I know there was some discussion about it, and my recollection is again refreshed from having read these things over in the last few weeks. There was a question as to whether the provision of the original report would cover GHA physicians practicing at the hospitals—I mean some way to prevent their practicing, or would not prevent it; something of that sort. That is my recollection of it. It was along that line.

Q. Then, wasn't a motion made by Dr. Yater to recommit it because there was no assurance given that Group Health Association doctors were not on the staffs?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. Did you vote for it?

A. I have no recollection, Mr. Lewin. Let me see it.

No, I have no recollection one way or the other. My best belief would be that I didn't, because it wasn't—because I wasn't in sympathy with that method of approach at all.

Q. The resolution was seconded and finally adopted, according to the minutes. Do you know who seconded it?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Isn't it true, then, that on December 1, when you were also present, Dr. Warfield's committee made a further report pursuant to that resolution recommitting it?

A. Yes. Well, Mr. Lewin, I remember distinctly having been present at the meeting of November 11. I have no independent recollection of having been at that meeting of December 1. I may have; I simply don't recall whether I was there or not.

Q. But you do know, do you not, that pursuant to that report of December 1 the resolution was adopted?

A. Oh, yes. At least, I know that from the minutes, yes.

Q. You do know that the effect of that was——

A. (Interposing): To call the attention—To request the medical boards of the hospitals to call the attention of the boards of directors to what I have now learned was the Mundt Resolution.

Q. Did you follow out the rest of the procedure followed by the Hospital Committee under that resolution?

A. I don't believe I understand your question, quite, Mr. Lewin. What procedure?

Q. Did you know that later, in February of 1938, a resolution was passed by the Society, asking for a report on what the status of Group Health doctors was in the various hospitals?

A. I believe that that matter has again been refreshed in my memory from various minutes recently. I have no recollection of it. You misunderstand. The resolution I had made was just to prevent action by the Medical Society which I disapproved of. My interest has waned from there on. I have done my best to accomplish what I wanted, and I wasn't materially interested in the matter one way or the other.

Q. Did you object to the later proceedings taken by the Hospital Committee and the Society after your resolution with regard to admitting Group Health doctors into hospitals?

A. Well, the proposal—As I have testified, I don't even remember being present at that meeting when it came up; and when it got to the hospital boards, as I testified this morning, it was apparently in my absence, and the first chance I had anything to do with it was when the medical board came back with the recommendation that we move to rescind it, and I moved to rescind it.

Q. But you knew that there was such a recommendation at the time you were passing upon Group Health doctors' applications?

A. No, I have no recollection of that at all. I don't even remember when I was passing on Group Health applications.

Q. Didn't you know that if that recommendation was followed, Group Health doctors could not be in the hospitals, regardless of their personal qualifications?

A. It didn't make any difference what I knew about it. I was the one who moved that it be rescinded, so I couldn't have been very much in favor of it, since I moved to rescind it.

Q. Well, did you ever move to rescind the action of the Hospital Committee?

A. What action?

Q. The action of the Hospital Committee in sending out questionnaires and getting facts as to the status of Group Health doctors in the hospitals?

A. I don't even know. I was present at those meetings and had no interest.

Q. I think you testified that you did not raise any objection to Dr. Scandiffio's treating babies whom you had delivered?

A. That is correct.

Q As a matter of fact, isn't it the ordinary practice of an obstetrician to carry the case through until after the birth of the baby and then to give the case, as far as the health of the baby is concerned, up?

A. It varies greatly in different jurisdictions and according to the practice of different individuals. I know one very prominent obstetrician in town who refuses to let a pediatrician get into the hospital over his dead body to look at a baby he has delivered. As far as I am concerned, as I told you this morning, the sooner I get rid of them, the better. But if there is no pediatrician in attendance—I mean if the patient—the father or the mother of the child—does not request a pediatrician, I naturally, to the limited extent of my ability with babies, keep track of them as long as they are in the hospital, to see that they are doing all right until they go home, and then I have them call a pediatrician.

Q. But you do not call Dr. Scandiffio yourself?

A. No, the patient calls him; I wouldn't call him in. I follow the usual procedure of telling the nurse to call him up. I never contact pediatricians.

Q. You do not contact Dr. Scandiffio yourself?

A. No, I have no recollection of having asked him.

Redirect examination:

My action in voting as I did with respect to Dr. Scandiffio was not influenced or controlled at all by the fact that he was a Group Health doctor; it was controlled by the fact that he had violated three or four different provisions of the constitution. My action in voting as I did with respect to Dr. Selders at Columbia Hospital was not controlled or influenced at all by the fact that he was a Group Health doctor, as there was no question in my mind whatsoever that he was not qualified to do the work he requested permission to do in his original application. Dr. H. J. Russell McNitt was a member of the staff, and was one of the attending surgeons in gynecology at Columbia, and is now on duty with the United States Army at Denver. He is a member of the Gynecological and Medical Society, whom I have known 15 years; I know his work on the staff; I also know he is a diplomat of the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology, which is the highest evidence of professional ability in that specialty that any man can provide in the United States; that means that he has passed an examination, written, oral, and practical, and is certified as a specialist in obstetrics and gynecology by the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology, a national organization, and is certified as a specialist and expert in obstetrics and gynecology, limiting his work to that specialty.

Def. Ex. 51 was received in evidence and read to the jury as follows:

"December 30, 1937.

"Col. P. M. Ashburn, Supt. Columbia Hospital, Washington, D. C.

DEAR COL. ASHBURN:

I am directed to report on the following physicians whose names were submitted to the Society for advice, concerning qualifications for courtesy privileges on your staff: Drs. Oliver C. Cox, Richard Castell, Raymond Selders.

We do not consider them qualified to do operative obstetrics.

Sincerely yours, H. J. Russell McNitt, M. D., Secretary."

By Mr. Leahy:

I reside in Washington; I have been a doctor, a practicing physician in Washington, since 1911. I graduated from George Washington University Medical Department in 1910. I had one year and three months at Columbia Hospital for Women, and in the fall of 1919 I received an appointment as resident gynecologist at one of the hospitals in New York, where I spent a year; then I returned to Washington and began to practice my profession, limiting my work to obstetrics and gynecology; from 1912 to 1919 I was assistant deputy coroner and then deputy coroner for the District of Columbia. I am a member of the Medical Society and a Fellow of the Washington Gynecological Society, and of the Galen Hippocrates Society. The Gynecological Society was formed by a group of obstetricians and gynecologists. I was its president during 1937-1938. In 1937 I was chairman of a committee engaged in assisting hospitals in determining the qualifications of applicants for privileges of practicing on hospital staffs. The committee was appointed by the gynecological society as it was felt that the committee was necessary, as the hospitals had a very definite responsibility to the public in the men that they admitted to practice, especially in special branches. I was a member of that committee in the fall of 1936 but in that year the committee had little to do, as we were forming. In the first part of 1937 we sent a form letter out and had a few meetings and a few applications. In 1937 that committee was dismissed and I was appointed chairman of a new committee composed of Dr. Kane, Dr. Kotz, Dr. Martel, and Dr. Sylvester, and we were fairly active from October on, in 1937.

I have had some connection with the staff of Columbia Hospital since 1911, and I am now one of the attending gynecologists, and chairman of the medical board, and, at present, I am a member of the Board of Directors of the hospital. In 1937 Dr. Raymond E. Selders made application to the Columbia Hospital for privileges. The hospital sent that application to my committee in the Washington Gynecological Society for determination of the qualifications of Dr. Selders and furnished us with a copy of the application, together with his references and also certain statements of the amount of surgery he had done, both in Worcester, Massachusetts and Houston, Texas. We sent communications to the references given and received replies, one from Dr. Robert A. Johnston, a prominent obstetrician and gynecologist in Houston; the other from a Dr. Berry, one of the surgeons of the staff of Worcester Hospital, and it came to me through Dr. Bullard of the surgical staff of the Women's Hospital. I don't have the original letter from Dr. Johnston, as he requested that I destroy it, which I did, his statement being that the contents of the letter were so unfavorable and he had made a frank statement of the thing, but he felt he would rather have it destroyed. The letter was quite unfavorable in content to Dr. Selders.

I received Def. Ex. 52, a letter dated December 16, 1937, from Dr. Berry to Dr. Bullard from Dr. Bullard.

Def. Ex. 52 was received in evidence and read to the jury as follows:

"December 16, 1937.

Dr. Edward A. Bullard, 580 Park Avenue, New York City, New York.

DEAR CINDY:

Your letter comes inquiring about Dr. Raymond Selders. I have discussed him with the Superintendent, Dr. MacIver and with one of the chief surgeons, of the Worcester City Hospital. He was Resident there from July 1st, 1936 to July 1st, 1937. The story goes that he was a graduate of the University of Oklahoma and then practiced in Dallas, Texas, for ten years. Apparently he took a surgical internship in there somewhere. Then he went to the University of Pennsylvania where he had, they think, two years of a basic post graduate course in surgery. He came from there here for the completing year in practical surgery.

While here, he is listed as having taken active part in 273 operations, 190 of which would be classed as major and 83 as minor. Dr. MacIver does not know whether he did any more or whether he did all of these and they could not discover this point without going through all the records. This gives an approximate idea. One gets the impression that he is taking a good deal of time in preparation for his life's work. He is about forty-six years of age and now contemplates further preparation. They think he has been married twice.

The story while here in Worcester is somewhat as follows: when he first came, he seemed to feel the need of expressing his importance. He tried to convey the idea that the surgical internes should look to him for instruction and material. The discrepancy between his age and that of the interns exaggerated their objection to his policy and thus early in his Residency there was engendered lack of harmony. This lack continued on through his year of service. He himself was somewhat of an emotional and breezy type which found everything going well some days, while at other times he acted out of sympathy with the world.

This slightly unstable disposition was evidenced at times in his operative work. Sometimes he showed proper skill while at other times a seeming conceit led to careless and hasty surgery. The visiting men, either through this trait or through the animosity engendered among the house officers, hesitated to trust him with as much work as they would have liked to have done.

In retrospect, these two men whom I talked with felt that much of his trouble was due to his failure to fit into the picture when he first came. If he had been a bit more thoughtful and patient, he would have gotten off on the right foot and then the resulting harmony would have carried him along in a happy way. Finding himself out of harmony, there was a tendency to get worse rather than better. They feel that perhaps they made a mistake in taking a man so much older than the internes.

Dr. MacIver felt that he showed perhaps an average skill in his surgical work but that there was certainly nothing startling either about this skill or about his constructive research efforts. He did not go to Dr. MacIver from time to time in a complaining spirit but stuck it out as best he could.

I judge this picture fits somewhat with the opinion you have already formed about him. Placed under certain conditions I would gather that he could do good and faithful work, but put into a group that is somewhat self sufficient, where he is a stranger feeling it necessary to establish his own importance in the scheme of things, he might repeat the difficulty he had here and find his experience lacking in harmony and efficiency.

I hope this report will help you. Both the men I talked with were anxious not to injure his chances for the appointment he is seeking. But I told them that you deserved as honest a statement as could be secured and I think I have correctly interpreted their feeling.

Dr. MacIver felt that some of the staff liked him better than others and I judge that the member of the staff whom I picked was one of those who liked him the least. He would wish you to give the man all the credit you could. You will have to conclude as to whether this particular type of worker is fitted for the task he is seeking.

Cordially yours, Gordon Berry, M. D."

On the basis of the information received from Worcester and from Houston my committee came to the conclusion that Dr. Selders was unqualified for the privileges sought and so advised Columbia Hospital.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

The letter from Dr. Berry to Dr. Bullard influenced us to some extent, but we gave greater weight to the letter from Dr. Johnston from Houston. I happened to write to Dr. Johnston as he was a very prominent man in gynecology at Houston; I had met him and he was on the staff of several hospitals. Dr. Selders didn't give his name as a reference but stated on his application blank that he had been in general practice for seven years in Houston, and during that time has performed something like 430 operations, but he didn't classify them as to whether they were major or minor. Dr. Selders on his application, a copy of which we have, didn't give Dr. MacIver or Dr. Byrne as references. Our committee only considered his application insofar as it pertained to obstetrics and gynecology, as we had no request to consider any application of Dr. Selders for major surgery.

I am chairman of the committee on the attending staff at Columbia and a member of the District Medical Society, on the attending staff at Garfield, have a faculty position at George Washington Medical School, which makes me chief of gynecology there. Dr. Kane, who is on the committee, is a member of the Medical Society. Dr. Martel, who is on the committee, is on the staff of Georgetown and a member of the Medical Society. Dr. Sylvester is one of the attending obstetricians at Columbia, and Dr. Kotz had courtesy staff privileges at Columbia, but no staff appointment. Dr. McNitt at that time was secretary of the Gynecological Society.

The only time I ever saw Dr. Selders was on a case at Columbia. He didn't make a request to come before our committee and we didn't invite him to. The Gynecological Society took the position that it was not up to it, a society of specialists, to advise the hospital concerning the practice of general practitioners, so we didn't consider Class III privileges, normal obstetrics. At the time we passed on Dr. Selders' application we had some other information from local men which concerned some work he had done at Garfield Hospital concerning abdominal surgery, involving a diagnosis as gynecological but it turned out to be something else. And one case involved a very definitely mistaken diagnosis, according to what we heard, and it was attributed to Dr. Selders, and that influenced us in our judgment.

Since Dr. Warfield succeeded me as chairman of the hospital committee of the Society I have only been to the Society three times. I have some knowledge of the controversy concerning Group Health, but I didn't obtain it from attending meetings in the District Medical Society.

Redirect examination:

An obstetrical case involving Dr. Selders came to our attention at the time we were passing upon his qualifications in 1937. The case involved an abnormal delivery and Dr.

Selders was watching the delivery and remarked that he hadn't done one of those for a long time, or hadn't seen one for a long time.

I recognize Def. Ex. 53 as a copy of a letter which I received from Dr. Robert A. Johnston, dated November 22, 1937.

Def. Ex. 53 was received in evidence and read to the jury as follows:

"November 22nd, 1937.

Dr. E. W. Titus, 900 17th Street; N. W., Washington, D. C.

DEAR LIGE:

Your letter received concerning Dr. Selders, and after inquiry, I found the following facts. He was in Houston during the time stated but he was not anything to brag about. He was quite interested in music, and I found out from some of his associates that he acquired a huge office and tried to attract attention that way. Apparently he has had opportunities to acquire knowledge, but he seems to get in most anyone's hair by his pushing tactics. From the reports I have obtained, I do not think that one could give him a most favorable recommendation. I feel sure that you will keep this confidential."

Then the following paragraph:

"I feel that my obstetrics will keep me here and away from the Toronto meeting. It may be possible for me to leave at the last moment.

With best wishes, I am

Your friend, Robert A. Johnston, M. D."

I attach a great deal of importance to Dr. Johnston's letter, as I happen to know him over a great many years; he is a very prominent man, belongs to a small organization called the Gynecological and Obstetrical Travel Club, and I see him each December, with very few exceptions. At the time we reported on Dr. Selders we also reported unfavorably on quite a well-known surgeon here in Washington who applied for privileges of major obstetrics in Columbia. We reported unfavorably on two members of our own Gynecological Society. As a member of the medical board of Columbia Hospital I have seen no questionnaires coming from the Medical Society to Columbia Hospital Board.

Recross-examination:

I don't have a copy of the letter I sent to Dr. Johnston eliciting his reply, but I remember I told him that we had a man who had made application to Columbia Hospital, giving certain references, one of them in Houston, Texas, and would Dr. Johnston at his earliest convenience send me a report of what he knew or could find out about him, and, as far as our questionnaire went, he gave Houston, Texas, only as a reference, without giving any doctor's name in Houston. Later, in December of 1939, I believe I informed Dr. Johnston about Dr. Selders' connection with Group Health.

Dr. James F. Mitchell, a witness for the defendants.

By Mr. Leahy:

I reside in Washington. I have been a practicing physician and surgeon in Washington since 1903. I took my preliminary training for the practice of medicine at Johns Hopkins in 1893. I graduated in 1897 and stayed on there until 1903, when I returned to Washington. I am chief surgeon at Emergency Hospital and have been since 1919, when I came back from France. I served in France four to five months as chief surgeon in Evacuation Hospital No. 32 near Toul, and in Sebastapol Hospital near Lemar. I am on the Board of Directors of Emergency Hospital and on the Executive Committee in surgical staff.

The Executive Staff deals mostly with finances and business affairs of the hospital. The Board of Directors is the board of last appeal that regulates everything. We have an attending and courtesy staff at Emergency Hospital. The rule governing applicants for privileges to the courtesy staff at Emergency was passed in April, 1936. We have been having a great deal of trouble with people who were not competent coming into the hospital to treat patients, and we considered the matter quite awhile as to having some sort of regulation to restrain this sort of thing. In April, 1936, a resolution was passed by the Board of Directors that any applicant for courtesy privileges would have to present his application and, in addition, show that he was licensed in the District of Columbia, had a medical degree, and was a member of the Medical Society, and must present evidence of his ability to practice in the particular field in which he applied for privileges. There were 50 members on the Board of Directors when that resolution was passed, with Mr. Blair as president; other members that I recall were Dr. Willis, Mrs. Huidekoper, Ben Miner, the head of the FBI, Dr. Neill, Dr. Ruffin, Dr. Leadbetter, Dr. Kraiselman, and other medical men and laymen.

In determining the qualifications of an applicant the application is turned over to what we call a courtesy committee of three men, who investigate the applicant to the best of their ability; they then report to the staff, and his name would be brought up before the full staff at a meeting and the application discussed; every man seeking privileges is gone over in that way. If the man is known the procedure is very simple; if the man is not known, however, to any of the members of the staff and we are not satisfied as to his professional ability, then we would appeal to the Washington Academy of Surgery, from whom we would obtain a report on him, and the matter would then be further considered. The regulation requiring membership in the local Medical Society means that when a man applies for membership in the Medical Society his record is investigated, and the fact that he is a member of the Medical Society shows that he is reputable, which obviates the necessity of a good deal of investigation on our part.

Sometime in 1937 the hospital availed itself of the facilities of the Washington Academy of Surgery. Late in 1937 or in the beginning of 1938 Dr. Selders applied to the hospital for general surgical privileges and his application was referred to the Washington Academy of Surgery for investigation. We did this to save us investigation work. Following the adoption of the rule requiring membership in the local Medical Society there were members on our courtesy staff who were not members of the local Medical Society, because originally there was no courtesy staff, and we just allowed them to come in, and there were probably some excellent men who had been coming in who were not members of the District Medical Society or were members of other medical societies. Following the adoption of the rule the policy of the hospital was that new applicants had to be members of the Medical Society and present proper references as to their ability. Dr. Selders applied for privileges in general surgery and gynecology; in fact, all branches of surgery. Such privileges are pretty broad, and they would cover any branch of surgery. We don't grant privileges at the hospital for a man to do general surgery and general gynecology, as a man is either a surgeon, a gynecologist, or an eye, ear, nose, and throat man. It is against our policy to let a man have more than one set of privileges. Before granting privileges in general surgery we must have word from someone who knows the applicant that he has done good surgery and is capable of doing good surgery. In his application Dr. Selders gave us several degrees but no men who were to vouch for these things and show that he was capable of doing his work. We then referred it to the Washington Academy to find out about these things and we got back a report from them; the reference to the Washington Academy of Surgery was verbal and the report back was verbal. Dr. Selders' application showed that he was not a member of the local Medical Society, and that matter was discussed in connection with his application, but the fact that he was a member of the staff of Group Health didn't enter into the discussion against him, and didn't make the least difference to us if he fulfilled our requirements.

When Mr. Blair informed Mr. Penniman that "Dr. Selders or other representatives of Group Health Association must first be placed on our courtesy list before they can treat patients in the hospital" (Gov. Ex. 370), he was applying our general rule, as any applicant who wishes to treat a patient in Emergency Hospital must first become a member of the courtesy staff. I am familiar with the other hospitals in the District, and I have been in a great many of them.

Q. Do you know of any hospital where it is not necessary to join or be admitted to the courtesy staff before being permitted to treat patients in those hospitals?

Objected to as opening up a collateral inquiry. Objection sustained and exception noted.

The matters and facts stated in Gov. Ex. 373 are true. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 373 to the jury.) The resolution of April 17, 1936, was passed at Emergency Hospital simply because we wanted to be sure men who had the privileges could render their patients the proper service.

As a result of Gov. Ex. 391 a conference with Mr. Kirkpatrick was held at which I was present. (Defense counsel read Gov. Ex. 391 to the jury.) Mr. Russell, Mr. Kirkpatrick, Mr. Blair, and I attended the conference. They were urging the appointment of Dr. Selders to the courtesy staff. Mr. Blair was very sympathetic but told them again, just as he had told them before in his letters, that before a man could do work at Emergency he must be a member of the courtesy staff and had to fulfill certain requirements which Dr. Selders did not do. I don't recall any applicant being admitted to courtesy privileges since the resolution in 1936 who were not members of the local Medical Society. Nothing was accomplished in the conference as Mr. Russell kept insisting that we should take Dr. Selders on the courtesy staff and Mr. Blair simply stated that he could not take anybody on that did not fulfill the requirements. I don't remember that anything was said about the refusal having anything to do with Dr. Selders' Group Health affiliation.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Kelleher:

The verbal communication to the Washington Academy of Surgery was made through our secretary, Dr. Lyons, who was a member of the Academy himself. The verbal communication occurred when we were considering Dr. Selders' application. The communication received from the Academy simply showed us he was not qualified. The grounds for denying Dr. Selders privileges were his qualifications and one of those was that he was not a member of the Medical Society, and the other was that he was not surgically qualified. I identify Gov. Ex. 663 as the minutes of a meeting of the executive staff of Emergency Hospital of December 21, 1937. Gov. Ex. 663, the last paragraph thereof, was received in evidence and read to the jury by the Government as follows:

"Two letters from Mr. Wm. Penniman, President, Group Health Association, Inc., were read. These letters requested, first, that patients of the Group Health Association be admitted to Emergency Hospital upon the request of Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, Director, and, second, that Dr. Raymond E. Selders, Surgeon, be permitted to attend these patients while hospitalized. The Staff recommended that Mr. Penniman be informed that patients of the Group Health Association would be admitted to Emergency Hospital upon the request of Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, Director, and that he be further informed of the regulation adopted by the Board of Directors on April 17th, 1936, requiring that all physicians placed on the Courtesy List must be members of the District Medical Society, and that since Dr. Selders is not a member of the District Medical Society, he could not be placed on the Courtesy List of the hospital."

Q. Was there any discussion at this meeting of December 21 other than the facts as shown in the minutes?

A. I shouldn't think so; I didn't read them carefully.

Q. And there isn't anything in the minutes to show that the recommendation of the Washington Academy of Surgery was considered?

A. Nothing there that I see. That was certainly not the only decision on Dr. Selders.

Q. Doesn't that show that the executive staff decided that he couldn't be placed on the courtesy staff?

A. That he hadn't been placed on the courtesy staff.

Q. Isn't that the decision of the executive staff?

A. I imagine so, yes.

Q. That decision was based on the fact that he did not have membership in the local medical society?

A. It was not by us, as I remember. That may have been sent to the society, but we always, in considering any man, consider his qualifications.

Q. But, as a matter of fact, when Mr. Penniman was notified by Major Blair on December 30, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 373), the ground stated was that he was not a member of the local Society?

A. Does Blair say that in his letter?

Q. Will you look at exhibit 373?

The Court: That was read just a short while ago. That is what the letter stated. It does not do any good to ask the doctor about it. The letter itself shows what it says.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. As a matter of fact, then, Dr. Selders was denied privileges because he was not a member of the local medical society?

A. One reason, yes, sir.

Q. And the only reason given in the minutes and in the letter to him.

A. That may be.

Q. You knew, did you not, that Dr. Selders was a member of the Harris County Medical Society and of the American Medical Association?

A. I saw that in his application, yes.

Q. You saw that in his application?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you identify this as the minutes of the meeting of October 14, 1937, of the executive staff? It is a photostatic copy. Can you identify this as the minutes of that meeting?

A. Yes.

Gov. Ex. 664 was received in evidence (last paragraph only) and read to the jury as follows:

Gov. Ex. 664 is a photostatic copy of the minutes of the regular meeting of the executive staff of Emergency Hospital, held on October 14, 1937. From these minutes I read the following:

"Attention of the staff was called to the matter that occasionally an applicant for courtesy privileges will be a member of his local medical society, but not of the District Medical Society. It was ruled that ordinarily this would meet the requirement of the hospital that a man be a member of the District Medical Society."

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Dr. Mitchell, as a matter of fact, with respect to Dr. Selders' application, this interpretation adopted on October 14, 1937 was not applied, was it?

A. I beg your pardon; of the local medical society?

Q. The interpretation put on that regulation of Emergency at the meeting of October 14, 1937, that membership in another local medical society of the AMA would ordinarily be sufficient.

A. Isn't it in his own local medical society, or is it another one?

Q. "It was ruled that ordinarily this would meet the requirement of the hospital that a man be a member of the District Medical Society."

A. That is local.

Q. Wasn't Dr. Selders a member of the Harris County Medical Society?

A. No, he was practicing in Washington.

Q. Wasn't that his local medical society?

A. It had been; it wasn't then.

Q. As a matter of fact, then—

A. (Interposing) We understood he had been expelled from his local society.

Q. When did you understand that?

A. At the time of his application.

Q. In December, 1937?

A. Well, now, the date I cannot tell you, sir.

Q. What led you to believe that as of that time he was expelled from the Harris County Medical Society?

A. I cannot tell you the date, but I know when we were considering him he was expelled from his local society.

Q. If, as a matter of fact, he had not been expelled from his local society, he would have been eligible?

A. His local society when he was practicing in the District was the District Medical Society.

Q. As a matter of fact, Emergency Hospital did not require that all applicants be members of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia?

A. Yes, of the local society of the district in which he was practicing at the time. We have men in Virginia, for instance, who are members there.

Q. [illegible]at, Doctor—

Mr. Leahy: Let him finish.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. I did not mean to interrupt you. Have you finished, Doctor?

A. I was not through.

Q. Finish your answer.

A. We have men in Virginia—neighboring Virginia—and neighboring Maryland who do not belong to the District Society but do belong to the local societies in the districts in which they are practicing.

Q. Do you permit them to practice in Emergency Hospital?

A. We let them come to Emergency Hospital.

Q. Isn't it also true that as late as June of 1938 there were members of the staff of Emergency Hospital who were not members of the local medical society?

A. Not on the staff; they may have been courtesy; but I don't know, as I explained before.

Q. I show you Gov. Ex. 472 and ask you to see whether it refreshes your recollection of whether or not as of that date there were members of the courtesy staff who were not members of the local society.

A. Yes.

Q. Does not help you refresh your recollection?

A. I see that, yes.

Q. It is true, then, that as late as June of 1938 there were on the staff of Emergency Hospital—on the courtesy staff—

A. (Interposing) On the courtesy list.

Q. (Continuing)—doctors who were not members of the local society?

A. Quite probably, yes, but were members of their local societies in the neighborhood.

DR. A. MAGRUDER MACDONALD, a witness for the Defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy.

I reside in Washington. I have been a practicing physician in the District since 1915, when I graduated from Georgetown University Medical School; I interned at Emergency Hospital and was resident physician there for a period of two years; subsequently I was superintendent of Casualty Hospital for a year, then I went into the service and was abroad, first with the British Army and then with the American Army; on returning to the United States I remained in service at Camp Lee and on my discharge entered into the practice of medicine in Washington. I have been Coroner of the District of Columbia since 1934, and deputy coroner prior thereto since 1920; earlier I had been doing autopsies and post mortems in the District Coroner's office; I am on the council at Sibley Hospital, on the staff at Casualty, and I have courtesy provileges of treating patients in other hospitals in the city. My appointment at Silbey occurred in March, 1937. I am associate in surgery at Casualty. In 1937 at Casualty I was on the interne committee and in 1938 I was on the credentials committee. The functions of the credentials committee were to review the credentials of any individual applying for admission with the privileges of treating patients in the institution.

While I was on the credentials committee at Casualty an application of Dr. Selders came before my committee for investigation and report. This happened in June, 1938. Certain letters and statements concerning Dr. Selders were presented to me for my consideration. I passed on this material and made a recommendation as to what those qualifications indicated, and recommended against granting privileges to Dr. Selders at Casualty. I saw letters from the Worcester City Hospital at Worcester, Massachusetts, and from Dr. J. C. Alexander, of Houston, Texas, and a third from the University of Pennsylvania.

Defense counsel read to the jury as follows:

Letter dated April 25, 1938, from the Worcester City Hospital, over the signature of George A. MacIver, addressed to Miss E. M. Rogers, Superintendent of Casualty Hospital (Gov. Ex. 666):

"DEAR MISS ROGERS:

Dr. Raymond E. Selders served as surgical resident in this hospital for one year ending June 30, 1937, coming to us highly recommended from the Post-Graduate School of the University of Pennsylvania.

He participated in the surgical work of the hospital considerably and had an opportunity to gain considerable competence. Our operating schedules show that 203 cases were assigned to him for operation. This does not mean, however, that he actually performed these operations. He may have elected to assist in some of them. There is record that he actually performed and dictated 133 operations, 105 of which were classified as major. From the above I think you can conclude that his surgical training is such as to give him competence.

Yours very truly, George A. MacIver, Superintendent."

This is the letter of April 28, 1938, from Dr. J. C. Alexander, in the Shell Building, at Houston, Texas (Gov. Ex. 668):

"DEAR MR. ROGERS:

In reply to your letter regarding the qualifications of Dr. Raymond E. Selders, I beg to advise that his professional qualifications in surgery are well above the average and ethically and morally he has always been above reproach. During his several years of practice here he made many valuable lay and professional friends.

He is now a member of the Harris County Medical Society here.

Yours truly, J. C. Alexander."

Letter is a copy of an original on the letterhead of the University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Medicine. It is addressed to the superintendent of Casualty Hospital and dated April 27, 1938 (Gov. Ex. 667):

"Dear Mr. Rogers:

Dr. Raymond E. Selders was a student in the surgical group of the Graduate School of the University of Pennsylvania during 1935-1936, and he completed this basic year satisfactorily. He then went to Worcester, Mass., and spent a year in clinical training, and I understand that his work there was satisfactory to his preceptor.

Personally, I know nothing about his ability as a surgeon beyond this basic training which he had in Philadelphia, and I am sure you have a full account of his training before he came here. This training, according to his records, was broad, and he is a man of mature age and general experience.

Very truly yours, Walter Estell Lee."

During the discussion pertaining to Dr. Selders' qualifications, Dr. Caylor, who was on that committee and who was connected with Providence Hospital, stated that the matter had been referred to the Washington Academy of Surgery and that they had obtained an adverse report on Dr. Selders. From my observation of the letters received concerning Dr. Selders it is my opinion that Dr. Selders should have had more actual contact with patients and responsibilities before he went out into general surgery, and that he should serve an apprenticeship with some other surgeon for a period of time.

As a member of the council at Sibley Hospital I was assigned to three committees: the committee on surgery, the committee on X-ray, and the committee on laboratories, and as a member of the council I assisted in the investigation there into the qualifications of Dr. Selders. In Sibley Hospital when an individual applies for courtesy privileges a form is sent to us which has a notice on it that a certain person has applied for courtesy privileges in certain fields, and that certain information is in the office. I received such a notation in November, 1937, concerning Dr. Selders, and my notation was this: "Not approved—need more information," because there was nothing except the application of the individual in the file, and I knew nobody of whom I could inquire who had seen this man perform any operations. It was not my particular duty to seek out information, and in referring the matter back to the hospital for more information it was the hospital's duty to supply me and each individual member of the committee with more information, and to my recollection this case was never referred back to me after I put in my original paper. At the time of passing upon the qualifications of Dr. Selders I stated that in view of certain controversies that had existed over a period of months concerning Group Health that those things should be discarded from our minds and that we should consider this application from the information at hand and the discussion of the credentials committee concerned his qualifications and experience.

The recommendation of the committee I was on went to the staff, and then from the staff to the board of directors. On the notice I received it was noted that the individual was an employee of Group Health, but having no information concerning Group Health that didn't enter into my mind at the particular time, because I wanted information so I could pass on him in justice to the man and to myself.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

When Dr. Selders' application was again submitted at Sibley I wasn't a member of the Executive Committee and the matter was not referred to me. All I can say concerning Dr. Selders is this: that in the folder concerning him was the application and no other correspondence. Report dated November 27, 1937, by Sibley Hospital on Dr. Selders, was marked Gov. Ex. 665 and offered by Government and received in evidence and read to the jury as follows:

"Applicant's credentials on file in the office of the President.

"Attention of the committee is called to the fact that above applicant is one of the salaried physicians of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Group Health Association and that information as to his qualifications and correspondence in connection with his application will be found on file in the president's office available to members of the various committees concerned for their information."

When I considered Dr. Seiders' application at Casualty in June, 1938 I did not go back to see what his references were at Sibley. I never saw the responses from his references at Sibley.

Dr. James A. Cahill, a witness for the Defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy.

I reside in Washington. I am a practicing physician here, graduated from Georgetown University Medical School in 1915; then I was in St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Youngstown, Ohio; Providence Hospital, Washington, D. C.; Georgetown University Hospital, in Washington; and I was in the Army for two years. I am a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons and a member of the Washington Academy of Surgery and the District Medical Society. I am chief surgeon at Georgetown University Hospital, chief surgeon at Providence Hospital, consulting surgeon at Gallinger Hospital, consulting surgeon at Columbia Hospital, and professor of surgery at Georgetown University School of Medicine. I held all these positions on the hospitals during the years 1937 and 1938 and still hold them.

In 1937 there came a time when I wished to establish a residency in surgery at both Georgetown and Providence Hospitals, and I wrote a letter to Dr. William Cutter in Chicago, head of the Committee on Medical Education of the American Medical Association, requesting an inspector. I asked Dr. Cutter (Def. Ex. 16) to inspect both Georgetown University Hospital and Providence Hospital with reference to approving a residency in surgery at both institutions.

At the time I made this request I had never heard of Group Health, as the request went along in January of 1937. Dr. Peterson was sent by Dr. Cutter and investigated and made an inspection of both Providence and Georgetown Hospitals. I discussed the matter with Dr. Peterson. My discussions had nothing whatsoever to do with Group Health. I don't know of the Mundt Resolution as such, but I have heard there was such a resolution.

There came a time when Dr. Peterson made a report of what he found on the inspection of the two hospitals. In the letter transmitting the report there was a suggestion made that members of the staff at Providence and Georgetown should become or were asked to become members of the local Medical Society. I am on the surgical staffs of both Providence and Georgetown Hospitals. The reports from Dr. Peterson came under the consideration of the surgical staffs and the general staffs of both hospitals.

There was absolutely no threat, no coercion, and no duress with reference to the suggestion that members of the staffs become members of the local Medical Society. I was present at the staff meetings when this suggestion concerning membership was discussed. The staffs considered that they were willing to cooperate in helping to make the hospitals better and did not consider the suggestion a threat.

Georgetown Hospital was approved first for residency in surgery. Providence Hospital was asked to make certain changes for the betterment of the institution, and then it was approved for residency in surgery. At Georgetown a rule was adopted asking members of the staffs to become members of the District Medical Society, and a similar rule was adopted at Providence, but all the members of the courtesy staff at Providence Hospital are not members of the local society. There are members on the staff now and there were members on the staff then, at the time of the inspection, that are not and were not then members of the local Medical Society or the AMA. That is also true with reference to Georgetown.

At Providence I never saw a questionnaire from the hospital committee of the local society, nor did I see such a questionnaire at Georgetown. The so-called Mundt Resolution has never been used either at Georgetown or at Providence against anybody on the staff. The Mundt Resolution as adopted by Georgetown and Providence had nothing whatsoever to do with Group Health or members of the staff of Group Health. In adopting the principle of the Mundt Resolution the staffs at the hospitals believed that members of the local society should be members in the practice of medicine who were interested in advancing the betterment of the hospital, so that patients could be treated better and so that advancements in science could be recognized when they were brought in.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

Sometime after the receipt of Dr. Cutter's letters Georgetown Hospital and Providence Hospital for the first time required membership in the District Medical Society for its courtesy staff. Dr. Caylor sent the provisions of the resolution to the members of the staff, not as a requirement but as a suggestion. At Georgetown the same suggestion was adopted in the late fall of 1937, and the same type of letter was sent to the staff.

DR. CLAUDE C. CAYLOR, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I sent a letter to the members of the staff at Providence under the direction of the medical staff simply to notify the men of the recommendation of the AMA that all members of our staff should belong to the AMA or one of its constituent bodies (Gov. Ex. 501). On receiving the instructions from the staff no instructions were given as to the form of the letter or the words to be used, and that was left to my discretion. After sending out the letter I never did anything further toward checking up. As I recall, I sent the letter to six doctors, and each of them spoke to me personally; and, while I don't know as a matter of fact, my impression was that they all joined the Medical Society. We have members on the staff at Providence who are not members of the local Medical Society. I never thought of the recommendation of the AMA as a threat or a form of coercion against Providence Hospital.

Cross-examination:

I am secretary of the executive staff. I signed the minutes of the meeting of the executive staff at Providence on February 17, 1938, and those minutes show that after my letter was sent out I was able to note general compliance with the recommendation of the AMA on the part of the doctors on the Providence staff.

SISTER ROSA, a witness for the defendants (of Providence Hospital).

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am superintendent of Providence Hospital and have been for four years. Before coming to Providence I was protectress at the Mother House at Emmittsburg, Maryland. On coming to Providence I supervised the entire hospital in all departments.

I recall that there came a time when I wanted a residency in surgery approved at Providence Hospital. I think Dr. Caylor took the matter up. I recall that there came a time when an inspection was made of the hospital by representatives of the AMA. I remember that a Dr. Peterson was there at the hospital. Providence has had inspections made of it quite frequently. We had an inspection to give us permission to train residents, we had inspections of our school of nursing twice a year from New York State and the District, and we have inspections by the College of Surgeons and the AMA. The purpose of the inspections which are made by the AMA is to raise our standards. I requested them to come, so that I could know wherein we were making mistakes in regard to training internes, as we were then trying to raise our standards for the training of residents, including residents in surgery. We finally got the privilege or approval in 1939, I think.

After the inspection was made of the hospital a report came to me of what the inspector found (Def. Ex. 23). I read it over several times, and then I wrote a letter dated August 27, 1937, when I was acting superintendent of the hospital (Gov. Ex. 240).

I do not remember the letter of Dr. Peterson or Cutter which accompanied the report of inspection made at Providence Hospital (Gov. Ex. 239). I recognize the letter dated October 12, 1937, to Dr. Cutter, of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals (Gov. Ex. 241), as a letter Dr. Caylor or some of the doctors wrote, and, if I am not mistaken, asked me to sign, and I signed it. I read it and they asked me to sign it to verify what the hospital thought in regard to this matter; that I represented the hospital, and that if I put my name here (indicating) it would verify the statements made in it. I did so sign and verify it after reading the letter.

I invited these men, at the time I have reference to, to come because I was most anxious to train residents, and these men were anxious for it, and I was backing them up, and I wrote it for them to give us constructive criticism, and that is what I considered it. I did not consider it coercion or threat or anything of that kind, any more than when the District Nursing Board examines us and makes recommendations.

We always try to carry recommendations out 100 per cent, but I do not consider them a threat, because some of them we can't carry out very well. We try to do the best we can.

Nothing that I did in connection with meeting the requirements or recommendations of any report or any suggestion which was made by Dr. Peterson or the American Medical Association had anything whatsoever to do with Group Health.

I remember that a Dr. Selders made an application for privileges at Providence Hospital. It was sent by us to the Washington Academy of Surgery, and a recommendation was received back from the Academy. Dr. Valentine Hess was our medical director at that time. The letter to Dr. Hess, dated January 31, 1938, Gov. Ex. 448, states that the Committee on Hospital Privileges of the Washington Academy of Surgery recommends disapproval of the applications of three physicians, one of them being Dr. Raymond E. Selders, to do major surgery at Providence Hospital.

After the witness left the stand the Government read two excerpts from the letter dated August 21, 1937, from Dr. Cutter to Sister Margaret (Gov. Ex. 239) as follows:

It is dated August 21, 1937, from Dr. Cutter to Sister Margaret, Superintendent of Providence Hospital. I will simply read this sentence from it (reading):

"As matters stand now we believe quite likely that when this statement is submitted to the Council at its regular meeting early in November interneship approval will be withdrawn. Similarly the application for approval of a residency in surgery is held in abeyance pending the adjustment of the present situation."

Then:

"We also append for your information a resolution of our House of Delegates of the American Medical Association."

Then follows the Mundt Resolution, and then:

"According to our analysis there are six members of your staff who are not affiliated with any of the constituent societies of the A.M.A."

The Court: Call your next witness.
Mr. Leahy: May I call attention to a paragraph there?
The Court: Yes.
Mr. Leahy (reading):

"You will recognize that there are several factors that are not in conformity with the Council's regulations governing internship approval. It is a matter of great interest to this office, therefore, to learn whether the recommendations enumerated at the end of the report are acceptable or not.

Then follows the sentence beginning "As matters stand now," which was just read by Mr. Lewin.

DR. DANIEL L. BORDEN, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I reside in the city of Washington. I am a practicing physician here in the city. I graduated from George Washington University, doctor of medicine, in 1912. I was in Columbia University for a period of three years, then at George Washington University Hospital. I received training under the immediate supervision of my father, who was a surgeon before me. After that I went into the Service in 1917; I was in the Service for over two years. I am chairman and senior operating surgeon of the Board of Police and Fire Physicians of the District. I am a member of the District Medical Society and the Washington Academy of Surgeons and was one of the Academy's founders. The Academy of Surgery was founded by a group of surgeons in Washington, with the thought of maintaining and increasing the general prestige and standards of the practice of surgery in the District of Columbia. During 1937 and 1938 I was a member of the credentials committee of the Academy.

As far back as 1935 the Academy discussed the question of some type of standards committee to examine applicants for surgery in the various Washington hospitals, and in 1936 this was started as a committee, and I was appointed to that committee and remained on that committee until I became president of the Academy in 1938.

The credentials committee is composed of five men elected originally by the Academy, and in recent years they are elected or appointed by the president. The functions of this committee are to review all applicants for surgical privileges in the various Washington hospitals; that is, such hospitals that are to submit applicants' applications for the Academy for an opinion. This opinion is an advisory one only. All applicants are required to fill out an application blank giving all of their qualifications. Then in addition they must have on that blank the names of at least three sponsors, men who will go on record in writing as stating that the applicant is capable of doing general surgery.

An application of Dr. Raymond E. Selders came before the credentials committee of the Academy for investigation. The first time I heard of it was at a meeting at Dr. John Lyons' office. He was then chairman of the credentials committee, and the name of Selders was presented to the committee. At that time we had nothing except his application blank, which was read and referred to Dr. Fred Sanderson for an investigation. The following month, January, 1938, Dr. Fred Sanderson reported to the committee his findings.

It is the habit or custom for the chairman of the credentials committee to investigate most of the applicants, but John Lyons and I on the particular occasion were planning to go down to a meeting of the Southern Surgical Association, so Dr. Sanderson was asked by Dr. Lyons at the meeting to investigate the qualifications of Dr. Selders.

After about a month's time a report was made back by Dr. Sanderson to the credentials committee. The committee was composed of Dr. Lyons, Dr. Sanderson, Dr. Paul Putzki, Dr. Arch Riddick, and myself.

The six men named in Gov. Ex. 445-A came to the attention of the credentials committee on December 8, 1937. In January, Def. Ex. 44 came before us for consideration. The three names given by Dr. Selders on his application as sponsors were: Dr. Walter E. Lee, a Dr. Moore in Texas, and some Senator's name that I don't remember.

I identify a carbon copy of a letter dated January 12, 1938, to Dr. John D. Moore, Hugo, Oklahoma, from Fred R. Sanderson, M. D., Def. Ex. 54, and a letter dated December 16, 1937, to Dr. Frederick Sanderson from Dr. Walter Estell Lee, Def. Ex. 44, as being before our committee on credentials.

Def. Ex. 44 was received in evidence and read to the jury, as follows:

"In reply to your inquiry about Dr. Raymond E. Selders, he is a mature man and has had a very varied experience. He is an accomplished musician, a graduate in civil engineering and several other professions, and he studied medicine quite late in life. While in the southwest he practiced medicine and surgery and then finally entered the Graduate School of the University of Pennsylvania two years ago, spending one year in the basic science course in Philadelphia, and one year in clinical work at Worcester, Massachusetts. At Worcester they apparently gave him unusual opportunities, far beyond what we considered his training warranted. However, he seemed to get away with it, and the last I heard of him was the fact that he had made application for this position of surgeon to the Home Owners Loan Medical Service.

"I do not know just what he is aspiring to in Washington and I hope this outline that I have given will answer your purpose.

"Very truly yours, Walter Estell Lee."

Def. Ex. 54 was received in evidence and read to the jury, as follows:

"January 12, 1938.

Dr. John D. Moore,
Hugo, Oklahoma.

DEAR DR. MOORE:

On December 6, 1937, last I wrote you requesting some information concerning the surgical training and ability of Dr. Raymond Selders, Houston, Texas, who has applied for hospital privileges in several Washington hospitals. As yet I have had no reply from you and would appreciate it very much if you would kindly forward me the information I ask.

Very truly yours, Fred R. Sanderson, M. D."

Fred is the first name of Dr. Fishback of the Washington Academy of Surgery, and I think that his signature is on Gov. Ex. 446-A and "Dear John" refers to Dr. John Lyons, the chairman.

The last paragraph of Gov. Ex. 446-A was read to the jury by Mr. Leahy, as follows:

"I am anxious to talk to you before you reach any decision on Dr. Selders, especially if there is feeling that he will be disapproved purely because of his connection here in Washington. As a matter of policy and tact, and I believe for the good of general public attitude toward the profession, the question of his relationship to the Group Health Association, Inc., should not be permitted to enter the discussion."

In passing upon the qualifications of Dr. Selders for hospital privileges the credentials committee of the Academy depended entirely upon the qualifications of the man to do general surgery, in making its final judgment. In disapproving the qualifications of Dr. Selders the Group Health situation was purposely kept out of the whole question, and I was willing to divorce any such thought out of my mind in passing on a man's qualifications to do general surgery.

The contents of Dr. Lee's letter were considered by the credentials committee. We doctors at that committee meeting talked very plainly, as we sensed our responsibility rather keenly, and we felt, to put it in common language that a letter submitted to us as the only written evidence that we had to go on other than that submitted by Dr. Selders himself really damned him with faint praise. That is my interpretation of the Dr. Lee letter. The committee's action was unanimous against giving Dr. Selders general surgical privileges.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

I was appointed in 1936 to the Executive Committee of the Medical Society and remained through 1938. I attended a great many meetings of the Executive Committee, in fact most of them, and I was familiar with most of the actions of the Executive Committee. On September 27 both the Medical Society and I took the position that Group Health was unethical and was violating the principles of medical ethics of the AMA. Drs. Lyons, Sanderson, Putzki, and Riddick were members of the Medical Society.

In passing on the application of Dr. Selders we did not follow the motion of Dr. Sager passed at the December 10, 1937, meeting of the Council of the Washington Academy of Surgery (Gov. Ex. 444-A), which states that in passing on requests for hospital privileges the committee should consider the ethics of the applicant as well as his strictly surgical training and experience. That particular resolution was brought to my attention this way: At the scientific meetings of the Academy, which are held four times a year, after scientific meeting we have a business session and take up various matters of interest in a business way. It is my recollection that Dr. Fishback brought up the question of Group Health at that time, and then Dr. Sager, in accordance with the statement in those minutes, passed or offered a resolution that the credentials committee of the Academy in passing upon the qualifications of surgeons should consider their ethical standing in any organization as well as their professional ability to do general surgery.

Now, that occurred in the early part of December. The meeting of our committee in which we passed upon this Dr. Selders occurred in January, but, in accordance with my former statement, we divorced everything in passing judgment on this man, and at the same time passed the same judgment on five other men not associated with Group Health, adversely. So far as I know, Dr. Sager's resolution was passed during a discussion of Group Health.

We have always regarded the ethics of the American Medical Association as our background and by-laws, but in passing upon men to do general surgery we had to go a step further, and that was to ascertain whether they were safe to operate on the public. My recollection is definitely and honestly that I—and I am sure the committee did—passed entirely on this man's qualifications as a surgeon. At the last meeting I attended, because then I became president and automatically left the committee on credentials, my memory is that we had one application blank on which appeared the three names I gave, and that's the only one I know of. I don't remember the hospital, but my feeling is it was Garfield, but I'm not sure. It has been our custom since the committee was formed simply to take the evidence submitted by the applicant. Dr. Sanderson investigated these names, and we had before us just one letter from Walter Lee and Dr. Sanderson's second letter to Dr. Moore, together with the application blank. As the committee is composed of five surgeons, fairly busy men, who get no compensation, we don't go beyond our immediate meeting and did not go to the Worcester City Hospital or Houston or any of the places mentioned in Dr. Selder's application to investigate it. We members of the committee expected to be supplied with the material, and then we will investigate it, but we have never, as a matter of custom, ever gone outside of our own committee.

The committee represents a group of hospitals. It doesn't represent one hospital. And I think that does away with the possibility of possible bias, for we are trying to make it as standard as possible, as a matter of fairness and protection to the public and ourselves. We doctors circulate in every operating room in this city, and for that reason we rather feel that we honestly have an opportunity to know as much as possible; but here we were dealing with a stranger, a man who was not a Washington man at all, so our problem was much more difficult. We didn't get any response from Dr. Moore after two attempts.

Q. Well, now, let me see that letter that you read in evidence a moment ago, will you? The one to Dr. Moore. Let me show you Dr. Lyon's letter to the Secretary. Doesn't Def. Ex. 54 show that he wrote to Dr. John D. Moore at Hugo, Oklahoma?

A. Well, that is what that letter says.

Q. Well, now, if he wrote to Dr. John D. Moore at Hugo, Oklahoma, and doesn't it also appear upon Def. Ex. 54, which was just read to the jury, "Dr. John D. Moore," of Hugo, Oklahoma?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, if that is where the letter went, don't you think that might account for the fact that you didn't get an answer from Dr. Moore?

A. I think that might.

Mr. Leahy: Are you sure you are showing him the right application? See if there is not another application with "John D. Moore" of Hugo, Oklahoma on it.

Mr. Richardson: In your files. See if you have not got one there.

Mr. Lewin: I have got the Garfield one which he says was before him.

Mr. Richardson: But you have an application there which says "John D. Moore."

Mr. Kelleher: Will you tell us which one it is?

Mr. Lewin: Will you tell us which one it is?

Mr. Richardson: One of the hospitals.

Mr. Kelleher: We don't know.

Mr. Richardson: All of the applications.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. This Garfield application shows "John T. Moore" of Houston, Texas, doesn't it, past president of the Medical Association of Texas?

A. John——

Q. —T. Moore.

A. Is that "T"? Yes. "John T. Moore, past president."

Q. "Houston, Texas"?

A. Yes.

Q. This application of George Washington shows "Dr. John T. Moore, past president, Texas State Medical Association, of Houston, Texas," doesn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. What?

A. That is right.

Q. It also shows "Dr. George MacIver of the Worcester City Hospital." Did that come to your attention?

A. No, sir.

Q. At any time?

A. I never heard of that.

Q. Weren't you on the staff of George Washington yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never saw this application?

A. No, sir.

Q. Of Dr. Selders?

A. I am not on the executive staff.

Q. Didn't his Garfield application show that he had been a resident in surgery at the Worcester City Hospital?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But did you write to the Worcester City Hospital or to the superintendent of it?

A. I didn't write to anyone. I thought I made that quite clear.

Q. Did Sanderson?

A. Dr. Sanderson——

Q. Did Sanderson?

A. Well, I am sure I don't know, but I am sure my memory is that the only written documentary evidence that he produced that we passed judgment on were the written statements that I have stated before.

Q. All right. Now, here is Dr. Selders' application to Georgetown University Hospital, and I believe your committee passed on that application, didn't it?

A. Well, the only one that I personally have any recollection of was the one that gave those three names. Now, they may have all been similar, so far as I know.

Q. Well, yes. I wonder if this does not refresh your recollection that here Dr. John T. Moore, past president of Texas State Medical Association, Houston, Texas, is given; the same Dr. Walter E. Lee of Philadelphia; Dr. MacIver, the superintendent of the Worcester City Hospital; Dr. C. J. Burn, the senior surgeon at Worcester City Hospital?

A. I never heard of those last two doctors.

Q. And you don't remember that Dr. Sanderson could give any report on what they said about Dr. Selders?

A. I am sure that Dr. Sanderson, as far as my memory goes, and it's pretty good—I think that those are the only written documents at that time that we had before us.

Mr. Lewin: Now, gentlemen, have you found the one of Dr. Moore of Hugo?

Mr. Burke: The one that has Senator Josh Lee's name on.

Mr. Lewin: Let us give it to the jury. There is a "Josh." That is the Garfield.

Redirect examination:

At the time we passed on Dr. Selders' qualifications, as a matter of fact, we passed on the qualifications of at least 60 or 70 doctors, but we refused privileges or recommended the refusal of privileges of five besides Dr. Selders, making a total of six at that particular meeting. At least four of the disapproved doctors were members of the Medical Society. The fact that the members of our committee were members of the District Society was not even thought of by the committee in passing upon applications.

I now have a letter of transmittal requesting a report on the qualifications of Dr. Selders, enclosing a copy of his application to Columbia Hospital for Women. The letter is dated November 26, 1937, marked Def. Ex. 55. The copy of the application of Dr. Selders to Columbia Hospital for Women is dated November 10, 1937, marked Def. Ex. 56.

Def. Ex. 55 was received in evidence and read to the jury, as follows:

"Washington Academy of Surgery, Care of Dr. H. H. Kerr, 1744 N. St., N. W.

GENTLEMEN:

I am directed by the Medical Board of this hospital to request your cooperation and advice, as proffered some time ago, in the matter of an application for courtesy privileges in major gynecological surgery and operative obstetrics.

Dr. Raymond E. Selders, an employee of the medical cooperative or insurance organization recently formed by employees of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, is applying for such privileges and, as you can see by the enclosed copy of his application, he has not presented evidence of the high degree of training and large experience in gynecology and obstetrics which this hospital has usually demanded of those seeking privileges in Classes 1 and 2, although he may have had both.

Because of the peculiar circumstances of this case and the Medical Board's desire to act in a fair and judicial manner, your advice will be greatly appreciated.

Very truly yours, P. M. Ashburn, M. D., Secretary of the Medical Board."

Def. Ex. 56 was received in evidence and read from to the jury as follows:

"Give name of Medical Board or Courtesy Staff physician for reference.

"Walter E. Lee, M. D., Surgeon—Philadelphia. John D. Moore, Past President, Medical Association of Texas."

I got the address of John D. Moore as being Hugo, Oklahoma, from Dr. Sanderson.

Recross-examination:

Q. Doctor, when you were on the stand before, you testified that you and your committee of the Washington Academy had before you the application of Dr. Selders to Garfield Hospital.

A. I testified to the best of my memory that; I was not sure.

Q. What is your testimony now that you have the application to Garfield Hospital before you?

A. The day I testified?

Q. No. When you were passing on the qualifications of Dr. Selders.

A. I think the record will bear me out that I stated that I did not know what——

Mr. Lewin: I move that that be stricken.

Q. I want an answer to my question, Dr. Borden. Did you have the application of Dr. Selders to Garfield before you when your committee passed upon his qualifications?

A. My recollection now is certain about it since I have this. This is the one we had (indicating Def. Ex. 56).

Q. Did you have the application to Garfield before you at any time while you were passing on Dr. Selders' application?

A. Not at the last meeting I did not have.

Q. Did you have it in any of the meetings that you attended?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Would you deny that you had the application that Dr. Selders sent to Garfield and to Georgetown, Providence, and George Washington at any time while you were deliberating upon his qualifications?

A. I would not deny or affirm anything, because it did not come to mind. But it is my impression that we passed on the application that I brought in this morning (Def. Ex. 56), and that any future correspondence with other hospitals involved was the result of the action we took on this.

Q. So your best recollection would be that this was the first one that you had, and then as the later ones came in you gave them the answer which had resulted from your investigation of this one. Is that it?

A. I am in no position to say, because I was not chairman of the board. I can only say that we took action on that application, and that all future applications went through the chairman of the board.

Q. Is it not true, however, that after you considered this application you later got applications from Garfield, Georgetown, Providence and George Washington University hospitals?

Mr. Leahy: Do you mean him, personally?

Mr. Lewin: I mean, his committee.

A. I explained to you the last meeting I attended, because I became president in January, and I saw no other application after that date.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Did you participate in the decision upon which Dr. Fishback's letter of January 31 was based, to Garfield?

A. The only letter that I remember from Dr. Fishback was the one we discussed the last time.

Q. It is in evidence that Dr. Fishback wrote Garfield Hospital on January 31 giving the Washington Academy's conclusion as to Dr. Selders' qualifications to that hospital. Did you participate in the deliberations of the committee that led up to the sending of that letter?

A. Dr. Fishback was the secretary of the Academy.

Q. Dr. Borden, I would like to have an answer to my question. Did you participate in the deliberations of the committee that led up to the letter which Dr. Fishback sent to Garfield Hospital?

A. To my knowledge, I had no thought about the matter at all.

Q. You do not remember; is that your answer?

A. Well, I have got a pretty good memory, but I do not think, beyond passing on the applications we had, so far as I was concerned with them in every committee meeting as long as I was on the committee——

The Court: We do not want to go into another cross-examination of this witness except on the testimony of this morning.

Mr. Lewin: I am confining it to that, I think, your Honor.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Is not Def. Ex. 56 a copy of a document prepared at Columbia Hospital?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is not a document prepared by Dr. Selders, is it?

A. No, sir.

Q. It is only a copy, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where the original is?

A. I suppose it is at Columbia Hospital.

Q. Do you know who prepared it?

A. Who prepared the copy?

Q. Yes.

A. Whoever wrote that letter. It came with the accompanying letter.

Q. It is true that Hugo, Oklahoma, does not appear on here, is it not?

A. There is no address on there at all; just the doctor's name.

Q. But it does appear on there that he, Moore, was Past President of the Association of Texas, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the letters which Dr. Sanderson sent to this Dr. Moore were sent to Hugo, Oklahoma; is not that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you did not receive any reply?

A. Dr. Sanderson did not; no.

Q. And the committee did not?

A. No.

HENRY B. BLAIR, a Witness for the Defendants.

Direction examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I reside in Washington. I am a member of the bar of this Court, of the Court of Appeals, and of the Supreme Court of the United States. I have been a member of the bar of this Court since 1892. I was one of the incorporators of the Episcopal Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital in 1897 and have been connected with that institution since. I was its first vice-president, which is the active member of the hospital from the executive side; the Bishop of the Diocese being, ex officio, the president, and I was also chairman of its executive committee. In 1937 and 1938 I was on the executive committee and one of the directors at Columbia Hospital.

In the Episcopal Hospital the governing body is the board of governors, which meets three times a year. The active body is the executive committee, which is appointed by the board of governors.

In Columbia Hospital the setup is somewhat the same, except that the board is called directors and meet four times a year, and the executive committee meets monthly.

The Episcopal Hospital is a special hospital, as its name implies, and Columbia is a special hospital for lying-in and diseases of women. Episcopal has an attending staff and a courtesy staff. The medical staff makes recommendations annually to the board of governors, and the board of governors approves those recommendations unless there is some question raised in regard to them. In other words, it is a requisite at the Episcopal Hospital that one must belong either to the attending or courtesy staff before he can practice his profession there, and that rule has existed during the existence of the hospital. During the years 1937 and 1938 I did not understand that there was any by-law in Episcopal Hospital requiring membership in the local Medical Society as a prerequisite to practicing in the hospital.

I know Dr. Dabney. In 1937 and 1938 he was continuously one of the chief surgeons during that time, which means that he was a chief of staff, one of 12. I have no knowledge of any rule or regulation of Episcopal against Group Health patients coming into the hospital. There was no rule at the hospital that made it necessary for Dr. Dabney to bring Group Health patients through the back door of the hospital.

In 1937 and 1938 I am sure that Columbia Hospital did not put into effect any rule requiring membership in the local Medical Society as a prerequisite to the enjoyment of hospital privileges. I do not recall that any rule or regulation was put into effect at Columbia Hospital against Group Health. I do not know whether there were any members on the staffs at Episcopal and Columbia Hospitals in 1937 and 1938 who were not members of the District Society. I think not, but I do not know.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

I have none of the by-laws with me, as we furnished everything we had to the Government. The medical staff at Episcopal has its own by-laws.

I was chairman of the executive committee of Episcopal Hospital in September, 1938. The statement in the minutes of the executive committee of September 20, 1937, that "The chairman informed the committee that he had received during the summer several communications regarding Group Health Association and that we would go along on the present basis until the matter had been finally adjusted between the doctors and Group Health Association," is substantially my statment, but in the language of the secretary pro tem. the word "doctors" in that phrase, "adjusted between the doctors and Group Health Association," means our own doctors at Episcopal.

My information is that the by-law of the Medical Staff relating to confining the courtesy list to members of the local Society was not a requirement in 1937 and 1938, and I can't furnish you with the by-laws because I have furnished you with everything that we have. The subpoena did not call for these by-laws.

Charles D. Drayton, a Witness for the Defendants.

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am a member of the bar of this Court and have been a member for about 35 years, as well as a member of the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court of the United States. I am a member of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia. I have been a director of Children's Hospital for ten years and president of the board of that hospital for six years.

The board of directors holds monthly meetings and examines questions of general policy and are the final administrative board of the hospital. There are six on the board. Children's Hospital is incorporated under an Act of Congress 70 years ago for the purpose of caring for indigent children under the age of 12 years. It now does 85 percent charity or part-charity work and was originally incorporated entirely as a charitable institution. The hospital now has 27 private rooms, from which they derive some revenue, and of course our support is largely dependent upon our appeal to the public. That is, if we do a good job the public supports us for these charity patients.

The Community Chest now buys services from the private hospitals, including Children's through the Health Security Administration, and they pay for it at less than our cost, and they don't always pay for all the services they contract for.

Children's Hospital has a medical staff composed of some of the leading doctors in Washington, the chief of whom is Dr. Joseph F. Wall, a leading pediatrician or child specialist. From the first of February, 1937, we had a so-called courtesy staff or list, which assumes no obligation to attend the little patients in the hospital whose parents cannot pay for them. They merely bring their own patients into the private rooms.

For a great many years we had a prerequisite for admission to the general staff of the hospital that members must be members of the local Medical Society or ethical society, as it is referred to, and that same rule naturally applied when the courtesy staff came into being in February, 1937. About 139 are on the courtesy staff, and 154 on the consulting medical staff, including house doctors and internes. All during 1937 and 1938 it was a prerequisite to membership on the courtesy staff that the applicant be a member of the local Medical Society. While the rule was in being and in effect, it was not written up until October, 1937.

The matter of the application of Dr. Selders was brought up by the Medical Staff at a board meeting. In the correspondence between the hospital and Mr. Penniman, of Group Health, Mr. Penniman was advised on November 15, 1937, that Children's Hospital will accept for treatment or hospitalization any patient in need of care, under its rules and regulations, and that all doctors treating those patients while in the hospital must have staff appointments and be members of the local Medical Society. There was no discussion in the board of directors at the time indicative at all of opposition to Group Health.

Correspondence concerning Dr. Selders' application was resumed in the summer of 1938 when I was in Maine, and there was some delay in responding to the letters because of that fact and also because of the fact that our board doesn't meet in August and September. I do not have copies of these letters, as the Government has stripped our files and has not returned them.

Q. I will show you some letters which have been introduced in evidence, Mr. Drayton. First, I will show you what has hitherto been introduced for the prosecution as Government's exhibit 378—it is Mr. Kirkpatrick to Charles Drayton, dated August 6, 1938. Another, No. 379, from Mr. Kirkpatrick to you, dated September 16, 1938; your letter dated September 19, 1938, to Mr. Kirkpatrick, which has been identified and offered in evidence as Government exhibit 380; and also Government exhibit 381, which is a letter dated November 2, 1938, from you to Mr. Kirkpatrick.

Could you, Mr. Drayton, just quickly glance over, beginning with 378, and see if you can refresh your recollection to advise us whether you personally conducted that correspondence, and what it is about?

A. Well, this is one of August 6, 1938, from Mr. Kirkpatrick to me, thanking me for a letter I wrote him on August 4, in which he says something about taking up with the board of trustees at its next meeting the question of Dr. Selders' admission to the courtesy staff.

The next letter, of September 16, that was simply a tracer from Mr. Kirkpatrick.

Then I told him on September 19, I had overlooked the fact that we had no September meeting of the board, but that just as soon as the matter could be given consideration I would further advise him; and then the last one here seems to be my letter to him of November 2nd, in which I stated that in view of the proceedings now under way involving Group Health Association it didn't seem possible for us to give any final answer on any aspect of the controversy. Further, that he had theretofore been furnished with a copy of the memorandum of April 1, 1938, embodying the rule promulgated by our medical staff and adopted by our board governing admission to the hospital where an emergency exists, and also the attendance upon such children of members of your staff; and I enclosed another copy of that memorandum.

Q. Do you recall whether the memorandum of April 1st, to which you referred, permitted physicians to treat children in Children's Hospital in emergency cases?

A. It did, and that always has been our rule.

Q. Do you recall whether there was any further correspondence after November 2, 1938, Mr. Drayton?

A. I don't think there was any more, but I am not certain about that; my memory isn't so good.

Q. At least you haven't been able to locate any copies of other correspondence?

A. My attention has not been called to any later letter.

Q. Was it your practice to attend regularly the meetings of the board?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall whether at any time there was any action taken by the board with reference to any of this correspondence, which was directed to G.H.A., to restrain it in any way?

A. No, we didn't care anything about G.H.A. We were trying to do the best we could for the hospital.

Cross-examination by Mr. Lewin.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Mr. Drayton, you just read from a copy of a letter dated November 15, 1937. Now, as a matter of fact, that letter was never sent, was it?

A. So far as I know it was; I have no other information.

Q. There is in evidence this letter, Government's Exhibit 359, dated November 16, 1937, from the superintendent, Miss Gibson, to Mr. Penniman, and the testimony here is that this is the letter which was received.

A. Well, I don't know; that may be so.

Q. It differs from the letter you read in this: the letter you read contained this statement:

"All doctors treating these patients while in the hospital must have staff appointments and be members of local medical societies," whereas that statement is omitted in the letter Miss Gibson sent to Mr. Penniman. Now, isn't it true that was omitted at your direction?

A. Not at all; I had no knowledge of it until this moment, that it had been omitted.

Q. But it seems perfectly clear that another letter was substituted for the one of November 15th?

A. It so appears.

Q. Do you know why?

A. Not at all.

Q. You attended, did you not, the meeting of the members and incorporators of Children's Hospital held on December 6, 1937?

A. I guess so.

Q. That was just about three weeks after the letter I showed you was sent by Miss Gibson, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Don't you find there that on December 6, this occurred:

"Only physicians, surgeons, and dentists who are licentiates of the District of Columbia and also members of the District Medical Society or ethical body in their locality shall be eligible for appointment to the Medical Staff.

"Physicians, surgeons, and dentists not officially connected with the hospital, but members of their ethical medical societies, may be accorded the privilege of using the facilities of the hospital as a matter of courtesy for a term that shall continue during the pleasure of the board of directors, those accepting such privileges to be known as the courtesy staff;"

and some more which I don't believe is particularly pertinent?

A. That seems to be what this shows.

Q. So, some three weeks after this letter was written, you amended your by-laws for the first time requiring membership in the District Medical Society as a condition to the appointment to your courtesy staff?

A. That appears to be so, but that has been the practice for many years.

Q. You had only had a courtesy staff for less than a year, had you not?

A. I correctly stated that in my direct, but said that it applied to the medical staff for many years and, thereafter, applied to the courtesy staff when it was formed in 1937.

Q. You say it applied to the medical staff for many years, but you say it was the custom to apply it to the courtesy staff from February, 1937, on?

A. Yes.

Q. But you had no such regulation during all those years.

A. The courtesy staff was not in existence until early in 1937.

Q. You had no such regulation until December 6, 1937.

A. Not any written regulation.

Q. Is it not true that the reason you made this change on December 6, 1937, was that you had just received, five days previously, a letter from Dr. Conklin of the District Medical Society, enclosing a resolution of December 1st, of that Medical Society, stating that as a matter of educational policy the hospitals should adopt a rule confining their entire staffs to members of the District Medical Society, or other local societies of the A. M. A.?

A. That had been the custom so long that we were simply following it in putting it in writing.

Q. Didn't you put it in writing on December 6, 1937, as a result of the receipt of this communication from the Medical Society of the District of Columbia?

A. I say "No," not as a result of it. It may have called our attention to the fact that the practice that we had been carrying out for many years had not been in writing, and resulted in that being done.

Q. Will you look at this list of members of the outpatient department of Children's which was obtained, I believe, from your hospital, and tell me—this is September, 1938—whether all those doctors are members of the District Medical Society?

A. I couldn't tell you; I don't know.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, do you know whether Dr. Sigmund Newman, of Virginia, was a member of the District Medical Society or not?

A. He may be a member of the Virginia society, which would be recognized as of the same ethical standard.

Q. Do you know whether he is a member of that society?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether Dr. Stephen Verges is?

A. I don't know. There is no use going through all those and asking me about them, because I don't know.

Q. As far as you know, there may be a number of them who are not?

A. As far as I know there may be anything about it that I don't know.

Q. Did the minutes of your meeting of the medical staff of Children's Hospital for April 4th (Gov. Ex. 523) come to your attention?

A. Let me have a look at it. No, I will say this generally. We don't see the minutes of the medical staff.

Q. This didn't come to your attention?

A. No.

Q. And you weren't aware of this action that I am pointing out to you there?

A. No, I have no knowledge of this, but I did write the letter to Senator Capper.

Q. Now, when was Group Health Association or Dr. Selders notified that his application had been rejected at the Children's Hospital?

A. I don't know, Mr. Lewin.

Q. As a matter of fact, do you know whether he was ever notified?

A. I don't know whether he was definitely notified or not.

Q. Apparently we have no letter of such notification. I wondered if you ever saw one.

A. No, I have never seen one. I don't believe there was any such letter, after mine of November 2, 1938.

Q. I am speaking now the fall of 1937, or the early part of 1938.

A. I doubt he was definitely notified, but I am not familiar with anything to the contrary.

Q. Did you understand that his application was definitely rejected in the fall of 1937, or the early part of 1938?

A. Well, if you want me—I think it was rejected by the committee of the medical staff, which passes on those applications, but I am not certain.

Q. Don't the board of directors pass finally on those applications?

A. Well, yes, it is submitted by the staff, but as your Dr. Cabot stated we rely and must rely on the medical staff.

Q. Do you remember them making a recommendation to you in the latter part of 1937, or early part of 1938, that Dr. Selders' application should be rejected?

A. I really don't; my memory is bad, and there has been a lot of things since that time; it may have been done.

Q. You don't remember receiving a letter from Mr. Kirkpatrick, calling your attention to Judge Bailey's decision with reference to Group Health (Gov. Ex. 376); that was written July 28, 1938?

A. Yes, I guess so; it brings it back to me now.

Q. Isn't it true that was forwarded to you at your summer home in Massachusetts?

A. Yes.

Q. And you remember that you replied to Mr. Kirkpatrick August 4. I wonder if this would refresh your recollection as to whether he had been rejected before that time. Don't you say:

"As soon as our board meets in September I shall take up the question as to what position we should now take respecting Group Health Association, Inc. and advise you on behalf of Children's Hospital. Since the matter is one of great importance and since our position heretofore has resulted from formal action taken by our board, you will understand that I am not able now to announce any change."

A. That action by the board may have been of a general nature. I am not sure it was directed to Dr. Selders' application, because the general rule that had always been in effect may have been what I referred to.

Q. Your impression is that the action of the board requiring membership in the local society was taken with respect to G. H. A.?

A. I didn't say with respect to G. H. A.; I meant in applying the rule that our staff should be recruited from the Medical Society generally.

Q. When you say, "our position heretofore has resulted from formal action taken by our board," weren't you talking with respect to the action taken by the board in regard to Group Health, which you mentioned in the sentence just before that?

A. It may have been that; it may have been the general rule or it may have been some specific objection to Dr. Selders' application.

Q. In any event, what you told Mr. Kirkpatrick was that you would take up the question of your position as regards Group Health in the fall of 1938, and not as regards Dr. Selders.

A. That may be and then subsequently I found we didn't have a meeting in September.

Q. And when you said the matter is "one of great importance," weren't you referring to your decision with regard to Group Health?

A. Oh, the whole problem of Group Health; that is true.

Q. Then, I believe it is true, isn't it, that you wrote Mr. Kirkpatrick and told him you would take the matter up with the board at its meeting in September, and then, in September, after receiving another letter from Mr. Kirkpatrick, you told him you were under a misapprehension, that the board had not met in September,—and then you say your letter of November 2nd, 1938, is the last communication on the subject; is that right?

A. The last I know about.

Q. And that was just about a year after Dr. Selders had applied for privileges?

A. Yes, he had correspondence—Mr. Kirkpatrick with Miss Gibson, and she had given him what we regarded as some definite answer.

Q. That is what I was looking for. Can you [illegible] any definite answer?

A. I mean in advising him that in order to practice in the hospital he would have to be a member of the staff, and then placing back of that the thought that members of the staff must be members of the local medical society. That would seem to have been somewhat of an answer—not as direct and definite, perhaps, as you would like, but an answer.

Q. Did you know at the time that Dr. Selders himself was a member of the Harris County Medical Society, a constituent society or component body of the A. M. A.?

A. I don't know whether I heard that since or before.

Q. Did his application show that to you?

A. I never saw his application because, as I say, we leave that to the medical staff to pass on.

Q. Would that have brought him under the operation of this rule which you adopted in the early part of December, 1937?

A. Oh, you mean the rule concerning membership in the local society or ethical body?

Q. Yes. Would that have brought him under that rule?

A. That fact alone, if he had been in good standing and recognized as qualified to do the things that he claimed able to do, and made application to do, I would say yes.

Q. Well, do you know whether he was, or not?

A. Whether he was qualified or not?

Q. Yes.

A. I know that the medical staff didn't think so and they made inquiries concerning him, and rejected him for that specific reason.

Q. Do you know what inquiries the medical staff made?

A. They inquired of the College of Surgeons.

Q. You mean the Washington Academy of Surgery?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they refer his application to the Washington Academy?

A. They asked it concerning this man's qualifications; his application having been for all sorts of surgery at Children's Hospital.

Q. Did Dr. Selders give you some references?

A. Probably so.

Q. Did you write to his references?

A. I presume so and I am aware of one letter written to the Worcester Hospital, of which I have been told.

Q. That was written by your medical staff?

A. Yes, Dr. Titus wrote the letter and had a reply. He is a member of our staff.

Q. And he wrote it in his capacity as a member of your staff?

A. I don't know in what capacity he wrote it, but he wrote a letter and the report was adverse on Dr. Selders.

Q. I wonder if we might have that letter.

A. Well, you will have to get it from Dr. Titus. I haven't it. I am trying to answer your questions as best I can. I am not submitting that letter, because I haven't got it.

Q. Are you positive that you saw it in the files of the Children's Hospital in response to a letter from your staff making inquiry on the subject?

Mr. Leahy: He didn't say that.

The Witness: I didn't say I saw it in response to a letter of our staff. I said I had been told such inquiry had been made.

Q. You don't know whether your staff or any member representing it communicated with any of Dr. Selders' references?

Mr. Richardson: He said he did know. He said Dr. Titus did and that Dr. Titus was on their staff.

The Court: He very carefully told you he didn't personally know what went on; that the medical staff took care of those matters, and then you asked him if he heard concerning it, and he answered that question.

By Mr. Lewin:

Q. Well, I will see if I can make this clear: Do I understand that in the files of the Children's Hospital you have at any time had a letter from Dr. Selders' references?

A. I haven't examined that file; in fact, it was taken over by the Government.

Q. Did you respond to the subpoena?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you produce any such letter?

A. I wasn't asked for any such letter.

Q. Well, such files were not taken over by the Government.

A. There was some indication later that a great many of the letters were taken.

Q. Do you know, as a matter of fact, that the Government has received any such letter as you describe?

A. No, I said I hadn't seen any such letter.

Redirect examination.

At the time I wrote the letter of November 2, 1938 (Gov. Ex. 381) the whole atmosphere was charged with doubt about the legal status of Group Health, as witness the Corporation Counsel's opinion. Judge Bailey's decision was in August, 1938, and favorable to Group Health, after they had changed the by-laws, and so on; and then there was a possibility—in fact, it was understood—that further action was being taken to determine this question, or might be taken. The whole thing was in doubt, in view of the pendency of these several matters in the court, or in legal channels. We felt that we were not in a position then to do business with a group whose legal status was in doubt.

SAMUEL H. ROGERS, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am president of the board of directors of Casualty Hospital. I recall a meeting in 1938 with Mr. Loomis and Mr. Kirkpatrick. In fact, we had two meetings.

At a meeting at which Mr. Loomis and Mr. Kirkpatrick were present the proposition was made that they take over a wing or bay of the Casualty Hospital, and at that time either Mr. Kirkpatrick or Mr. Loomis pointed out it would be an excellent time for us to get some favorable publicity by joining in with Group Health, who had been favored with a great deal of publicity and was being favored with a great deal of pubilicity at that time. It was brought to our attention that they had excellent publicity and I couldn't recall the words exactly, but it amounted to the same thing; that they had a very excellent publicity man. They told us that high officials of the Government were very much interested in this movement and the members of Congress were interested in it; they didn't mention who or how many. They let us know that they had the backing of Government officials and at least some members of Congress. They made a proposition that they might lease a wing of the hospital, as they previously had representatives go through the hospital, and it happened that at that time we were not crowded. I told them that we were organized for a definite purpose and that that plan didn't fit in with the definite purpose. Our purpose was to maintain an institution for furnishing emergency medical and surgical service and hospitalization to all, regardless of race, color, religion, or ability to pay. They let us know that they were not interested in that part of it. They were interested in taking care of Group Health patients and having Group Health doctors attend them. At the second conference we merely told them that we didn't see how we could change our setup to suit their requirements.

DR. HENRY ROLFE BROWN, a witness for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I have resided in the city of Washington for seven years. I am a retired physician. I retired in June, 1937.

I took my medical course at the University of New York and graduated in 1889. I took my interneship at the Bellevue Hospital in New York and then went to San Francisco and engaged in the private practice of medicine until 1898. Then I practiced medicine in Providence, Rhode Island, until I joined the Army in 1916. I was a member of the Medical Corps then for several years and went overseas.

On my return from service overseas I went into the Veterans Administration for the purpose of operating and organizing their hospitals and clinics. I organized a Veterans Hospital in Rutland, Massachusetts, spent three or four years there. Then I was transferred to Aspinwall, Pennsylvania, opposite Pittsburgh, and stayed there for ten years. Then I came to the Veterans Administration in Washington where I was put in charge of all tuberculosis hospitals throughout the United States, where I remained until I retired in June, 1937. There are 20 tuberculosis hospitals under the direction of the Veterans Administration.

Mr. Otterman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation approached our medical director, Dr. Griffith, in the Veterans Administration and asked him if there was any member on his staff who would be interested in the Group Health venture. He contacted me, talked the matter over two or three times, laid out the plans for organizing Group Health, and I believed then, as I do now, that such a thing would be very valuable for the community, especially those in the low-income groups, and I went into it with the idea of developing it and making it a success. These conversations began in March or April of 1937. In the latter part of April definite arrangements were made for me to become the medical director of Group Health.

I first met Dr. Neill at a meeting of the executive committee of Group Health at the Medical Society Building on M Street. I again met Dr. Neill at Mr. Childress' house at a meeting which followed the meeting in the Medical Society. On the occasion of meeting Dr. Neill at Mr. Childress' house, Mr. Childress, Mr. Penniman, Mr. Zimmerman, and Mr. Russell and myself were present. Mr. Penniman was there as president of Group Health. Mr. Zimmerman never had any position in Group Health but was the real man behind the operation of it. Mr. Russell was the legal adviser and chief counsel of the HOLC. I was at the conference that night as the medical director of Group Health, as I had already assumed office.

At that conference at Mr. Childress' house Mr. Penniman to my knowledge did not offer the position of medical director to Dr. Neill, and I was there during the entire conversation, and had already been employed as medical director.

At the meeting at the Medical Society I don't remember all those present, but I do remember Dr. Neill, Dr. Groover, and Dr. Macatee, and there were quite a few more. Mr. Zimmerman and Mr. Penniman accompanied me. We discussed the proposed meeting at the Medical Society several days before, and finally I was called on the telephone and asked to meet Mr. Penniman and Mr. Zimmerman at the Mayflower Hotel, where we would have dinner together and then proceed to the medical meeting. The meeting at the Medical Society was the first time that I had met and discussed the matter with members of the District Society. We met at the Mayflower Hotel before we went to the Medical Society building—that is, Mr. Zimmerman, Mr. Penniman, and I.

At the dinner Mr. Penniman and Mr. Zimmerman advised me that the purpose of the meeting was for the Society and Group Health to try and get together on the organization of Group Health. I then asked them, "What information are you going to give them, and how far do you want to go with them in their plans?" and the replies from both Mr. Penniman and Mr. Zimmerman were not to do any more and not to go any further than was necessary, and to tell them as little as possible.

Following the dinner we walked to the Medical Society, and just before we entered they stated, "Now don't forget, we will give them just as little as possible," or words to that effect; and at the meeting the advice which was given at dinner and just before entering was followed pretty fairly.

Arrangements were made at the first meeting to meet the board of trustees of Group Health in the HOLC assembly room at a later date. I was present on that occasion, as were almost all of the board of trustees of Group Health, and a great many of the committee from the Medical Society. That meeting was not as satisfactory as the first meeting. Dr. Groover, I think, did most of the talking and told us a great deal about the failure of such organizations in different parts of the country and abroad.

After that we did not have any formal meetings of any kind between the District Medical Society and Group Health over the period of time when I was medical director, from June 7, 1937, until the 30th of April, 1938. When I first became medical director no arrangements had been made with the hospitals in the District for the reception of patients of Group Health. Mr. Penniman and Mr. Zimmerman met with me at lunch, and it was decided that I approach the hospitals on the question of courtesy privileges for the members of our staff.

This I did. I first went to Emergency where I contacted Mr. Sandidge, who referred me to Mr. Gist Blair, whom I saw. Major Blair asked me to submit a letter requesting what our desire was. I returned to the office. In the meantime my office had been in that of Mr. Zimmerman at the HOLC building where I had my headquarters. I formulated a letter requesting privileges at Emergency Hospital, as suggested by Major Blair, and submitted it to Mr. Penniman. Mr. Penniman contacted Mr. Zimmerman, and it was decided that we would meet again the next day at luncheon.

We met the next day, and at that meeting I was advised that they would take care of the hospital situation and I need give it no further thought. Following that I had nothing whatever to do with the hospital situation.

With reference to the mail coming to Group Health, a great many of the letters were addressed to the clinic on I Street and were usually addressed to the medical director. I opened several of those letters which were directed to the medical director. Some of them were from the hospitals, which I would return to Mr. Zimmerman and Mr. Penniman. Later I was instructed not to open any mail, and to send it on unopened to them, and from the time of the second luncheon I had no authority to deal with the hospitals at all as medical director, and it was done by Mr. Penniman.

The clinic opened on November 1, and at that time I had a staff. One of the members was Dr. Raymond E. Selders, whom I employed as a surgeon for the clinic, to do minor surgery. I did not employ him to do general surgery of all kinds, as I did not think he was competent to do general surgery, because he didn't have the training nor the qualifications. I had nothing to do with the attempt to try to get privileges to do general surgery in the Washington hospitals for Dr. Selders.

My agreement in the beginning was that I was to take complete charge of the medical direction of the clinic and of Group Health, and I accepted the position on that ground. But they didn't need a medical director there, it soon developed. They needed a rubber stamp. That was all that was required. With reference to the duties that had been been assigned to me as medical director, the board of trustees took them over themselves, and most of them were taken over by Mr. Zimmerman and Mr. Penniman.

In the beginning Group Health functioned very efficiently because we didn't have so many patients. On a small staff of four or five we could handle the patients very well, but gradually they crowded in so that we couldn't give attention to the patients on account of the great number of patients with so few doctors. I had complaints from the doctors and members of the staff about that. While it depends very largely on the class of patients or conditions that one meets, an average of 20 to 25 patients a day would be a good, hard day for any doctor in a clinic like Group Health.

After the clinic opened and when the patients began coming in, the patients ran as high as 60 per day to a doctor. I do not think that a doctor can give efficient service to as many as 60 patients a day.

After that condition started, it continued as long as I was associated with the group. The agreements we doctors had with Group Health were all verbal; there was never a written contract or agreement. I employed Dr. Selders and I employed Dr. Lee. I employed Dr. Lee under a verbal contract. I employed Dr. Scandiffio. I employed him under a verbal contract.

The two proposed written contracts which were received in evidence in this case were gotten up for the sole purpose of presenting them to the Medical Society. These were not in existence before the hearing of Dr. Scandiffio at the Medical Society. These papers were prepared by Mr. Neuman and Mr. York of the legal department of the HOLC.

After Dr. Lee and Dr. Scandiffio became members of that group I advised them that they should resign from the Medical Society and stated that I did not belong to the Society, and therefore they were without jurisdiction, and that I expected nothing from them. In pursuance of my advice they did resign. Later they withdrew their resignations. I attended the hearings at the Medical Society.

They told me that when they resigned they tendered to the Medical Society a letter in identical terms. Mr. York, Mr. Neuman and Mr. Russell of the legal staff of HOLC were the principal legal advisers of Group Health. Mr. York, Mr. Russell, Mr. Neuman, and Mr. Keely were all present at the trial of Dr. Scandiffio.

Mr. Penniman and Mr. Zimmerman displayed a great deal of interest in the operation and administration of the clinic, interfered quite frequently in small things, would frequently meet Dr. Selders and other members of the staff outside the clinic and discuss matters that should properly come before the medical director and through him to the trustees. There was a great deal of interference in many ways.

I selected the staff, both professional and lay, for the clinic almost entirely, with one exception, and that was Dr. Dabney, whom I contacted and was asked to present him to the board of trustees. In pursuance of a telephone call I sent Dr. Dabney to see Mr. Loomis and Mr. Russell, who employed him, so as medical director I did not arrange the employment of Dr. Dabney. Dr. Dabney was to serve upon the staff in nose and throat cases.

I know Mr. Kirkpatrick and first met him early in the organization of Group Health, and he was the second president of Group Health and was vice president under Mr. Penniman. Until he became president he didn't take much interest in the clinic. Mr. Penniman and Mr. Kirkpatrick circulated a great deal among the patients when they came to the clinic. The attitude of Mr. Penniman and Mr. Zimmerman toward the medical profession generally was not at all good. They very frequently, especially Mr. Penniman, presented me with everything that was against the doctor.

The witness then testified as follows, which testimony on motion of the Government was stricken from the record over the objection and exception of the defendants:

One day Mr. Penniman came in with a very scathing article from a West Coast paper regarding a patient in a hospital out there and passed it to me to read. It was a very nasty article. I read it very slowly, and after reading it I passed it to Mr. Penniman and said, "Mr. Penniman, you don't want to forget that I am a doctor, and I don't want any more such things from you."

Mr. Penniman did at that time, and on many previous occasions, hold doctors in more or less disdain and stated, "Well, they just don't amount to much," and said, "They are not up to date. They are not businesslike." They don't know how to do this, and they don't know how to do that. A lot of trivial stuff that didn't amount to anything.

When Mr. Kirkpatrick took office at Group Health there were quite a number of members of Group Health who had elected to be operated on. An elective operation is one that may be done at any time, whereas an emergency operation is one requiring immediate attention. As I recall, there were about 60 or 75 elective operations pending. Some of these operations were major operations, and I didn't want Dr. Selders to do them unless they were simple cases, and the others were those that the hospitals were not admitting, although we admitted all emergency cases to the hospitals, or those that were supposed to be emergency cases. The instructions that I received from responsible officials of Group Health with reference to dealing with these operations were to put as few in the hospital as possible because the funds were low.

While I was medical director I made an effort to replace Dr. Selders sometime in the latter part of January or early in February of 1938. I first met Dr. Selders when I contacted him through the Physicians' Exchange in Chicago, which is a sort of employment bureau for professional people, technicians and the like.

While I was at the Group Health the membership grew very rapidly. About 70 per cent of the HOLC membership joined Group Health. Then when it opened up for the other Government departments there was a great rush of applications, whereupon a great many of the HOLC men dropped out. Such a great number came from the Agricultural Department that they subsequently were so strong as to take over the management.

Q. Do you recall now, Doctor, whether Mr. Penniman, Mr. Zimmerman, and Mr. Kirkpatrick did anything toward getting new members in G.H.A.?

The question was objected to because immaterial. The objection was sustained and an exception noted. Thereupon the defendants offered to prove by the witness that there were solicitations of the employees of HOLC by the persons named in the question, in violation of the ethical standards of organized medicine, and that they then demanded that doctors employed by Group Health be permitted to be and remain members of the District Medical Society whether or not they complied with its rules and regulations, and to further prove through the witness that solicitation is what formed Group Health and that it was not a spontaneous outburst on the part of the members of HOLC, as testified to by Mr. Penniman.

The Court: I do not think we can go into that. It may not be ethical according to the ethical standards of organized medicine, but, after all, it was not illegal. It was not anything that the Court can do anything about.

Mr. Richardson: It is explained as a reason.

The Court: That may be; but I think it is quite clear—it seems to me—that even if they were not conducting it fairly according to the ethical ideas of organized medicine, that did not make them a legitimate victim of restraint.

* * * * * * *

Q. Doctor, do you recall now the rate of dues charged when you first became medical director?

The question was objected to as irrelevant and immaterial. This objection was sustained and an exception noted.

Q. Doctor, under the schedule of dues charged by G.H.A. what, if anything, have you to say of the capacity of G.H.A. to give adequate and complete medical care?

The question was objected to as irrelevant and immaterial. The objection was sustained, and exception was noted. The defendants offered to prove the amount of dues originally charged by Group Health, that it increased these dues, and that under the dues of G.H.A. complete and adequate medical care could not be rendered, in the opinion of Dr. Brown. The Court rejected the offer and defendants excepted.

The witness then continued:

I resigned from Group Health in the latter part of March, 1938, when I was convalescing and just recovering from an illness, as on that occasion I went down to HOLC one day to talk things over, and Mr. Penniman indicated that my resignation would be accepted, in the presence of Mr. Zimmerman and Mr. Kirkpatrick.

Q. Could you tell us why you resigned?

Government objection sustained.

While I was at Group Health I never had any interference from the District Medical Society.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. Dr. Brown, did you not know that Dr. Trible had refused to become a consultant for Group Health Association——

A. Dr. who?

Q. Dr. Trible—until——

A. He was never asked by me to become a consultant.

Q. Let me finish my question, please—until G.H.A. could be organized along lines compatible with organized medicine?

A. As far as I am concerned, I never asked him to be a consultant of Group Health or anything else that I am aware of.

Q. Did you ask him for advice about Group Health Association?

A. I talked with him a great deal about Group Health and with a great many other doctors.

Q. Did he not tell you that he could not have anything to do with G.H.A. or anything else unless it met the full approval of the District Medical Society?

A. I don't recall such conversation.

Q. Did you execute an affidavit for Dr. Trible in response to a request from him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Exhibit No. 570 and ask you if that is a photostatic copy of the affidavit which you executed?

A. It has my signature on it. It is.

Q. Is that your affidavit?

A. Yes.

Q. In that affidavit do you not state that Dr. Trible had——

Mr. Leahy: Show him the affidavit.

Mr. Kelleher: I showed it to him.

Mr. Leahy: Point to what you are asking about.

By Mr. Kelleher:

Q. In that affidavit did you not state that Dr. Trible had refused to have anything to do with G.H.A. until it was approved by the District Medical Society?

A. I don't recall it. It may be there, but I don't recall it. (After reading document referred to) Apparently that is right.

Q. Did you not also attempt to obtain the services of Dr. Cromer?

A. Dr. who?

Q. Dr. J. Keith Cromer. Do you remember Dr. Cromer?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Don't you remember talking with a gentleman in Washington by the name of Cromer concerning his coming with G. H. A.?

A. There were so many of those men that I do not really recall the names of all of them. I interviewed a great many, and the names of a great many have gone from my mind.

Q. Let me show you what purports to be a letter from Cromer to you, dated October 26, 1937, and ask you whether that refreshes your recollection as to whether you ever talked with Dr. Cromer.

A. Yes. I remember him now.

Q. You remember it now. Did you ask Dr. Cromer to come to G. H. A. on the medical staff?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Gov. Ex. 669 the reply you received from Dr. Cromer?

A. I don't quite recall. It is not very clear in my mind. It is no doubt a fact.

• • • • • • •

Q. While counsel is examining that document I will go over another matter. Did you also attempt to secure the services of Dr. C. Tiemeyer?

A. Yes.

Q. In Baltimore?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ask him to come on the staff of G. H. A.?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this a letter which you received in reply from Dr. Tiemeyer (handing paper to the witness)?

A. Yes.

Government counsel offered Gov. Ex. 669 in evidence. Defendants objected on the ground of hearsay. Objection was overruled and exception was allowed.

Gov. Ex. 669 was received in evidence and read to the jury:

Gov. Ex. 669 is a letter from J. Keith Cromer, M. D., to Dr. Brown, dated October 16, 1937, and reads as follows:

"Dear Dr. Brown:

Pursuant to our recent conversation, I wish to state that I would be glad to take care of the obstetrical work for your clinic on a part-time basis if and when such consultation work is recognized by the District Medical Society. I hope you understand my position in this matter.

Very truly yours, J. Keith Cromer, M. D."

Dr. Cromer was retained as a consultant and took care of quite a few obstetrical cases for Group Health on a fee-for-service basis and not on a salary basis.

Q. Dr. Brown, when you were testifying that some of the lay members of Group Health Association circulated among the patients that were attended by the doctors of G. H. A. you did not mean that there was any interference with the treatment of patients by lay members, did you?

A. I don't think that I made a statement that there was, so far as I recall.

Q. I just wanted to clarify that, that there was no interference with the treatment.

A. No, sir.

Q. At any time, to your knowledge?

A. Not that I know of.

The amount of the salaries to be paid to doctors was pre-agreed upon, and I passed upon the qualifications of the doctors coming with Group Health. My recommendations were accepted by the board of trustees, with one exception, Dr. Dabney. Dr. Dabney was employed in February or March while I was sick.

When I employed Dr. Selders I believed that he was qualified to do clinical work and medical surgery, and the other work I intended to give to consultants outside. I do not believe he was a finely-qualified doctor for general surgery. I did believe he was finely qualified for clinical work, minor surgery in the clinic.

An appendectomy is a major operation, but there are difficult appendectomies and there are very simple appendectomies, but the average appendectomy is a major operation. Dr. Selders did perform an appendectomy at Garfield Hospital, and I was with him. At the meeting of the executive committee I told the committee that I considered Dr. Selders a finely-qualified doctor, but the answer was not qualified, and I told the executive committee that he was doing appendectomies at Garfield Hospital. They were very simple cases.

Redirect examination:

When Dr. Selders did an operation at Garfield I stood right close to him as an observer. The salaries of the doctors of the staff of Group Health were a matter of discussion and agreement, and any salary over $4,800 per year to begin with had to be taken up with the executive committee or the board of trustees, and the board determined whether to give a man more salary or not.

A great many members of Group Health resigned because they did not believe they were getting sufficient medical care, and I do not believe that any doctor can give adequate medical care to 40, 50, or 60 patients daily.

Recross-examination:

That is my signature on the bottom of Gov. Ex. 671. I am 70 years old.

MRS. BETTY LOGSDON, a Witness for the Defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am employed by Dr. Warfield. I have been employed by him since 1936 as secretary. I recall a question that was asked me when I was on the stand as a witness for the Government with reference to sending out the questionnaires I prepared to the hospitals, and at that time I think that I said my best recollection was that I had mailed them out, but since then I have refreshed my recollection on going back to the office and realized I had made an incorrect statement, which I wish to correct. Those questionnaires did not go to the hospitals but were mailed to the members of the hospital committee of the Medical Society, and none of them were mailed to the hospitals.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Kelleher:

I recall that copies were sent to the members of the hospital committee, but I could not definitely say who they were at that time. On going back to the office I remembered distinctly that the questionnaires were not sent to the hospitals.

Def. Ex. 57 was received in evidence and read to the jury as follows:

"Sibley Memorial Hospital

"November 27, 1937.

"DEAR DOCTOR:

"Dr. Raymond Everett Selders has requested the privilege of treating the following in Sibley Memorial Hospital:

"Medicine, Minor & Major Surgery, Normal & Abnormal Obstetrics, Minor & Major Gynecology.

"As a member of the Advisory Committee on Medicine will you kindly indicate your approval or disapproval at the bottom of this letter and return it to the office of the President of the Hospital before Tuesday.

"Very sincerely yours, R. Lee Spire, M. D., Chairman."

"Applicant's credentials on file in the office of the President.

"Attention of the Committee is called to the fact that above applicant is one of the salaried physicians of the Home Owner's Loan Corporation Group Health Association and that information as to his qualifications and correspondence in connection with his application will be found on file in the president's office available to members of the various committees concerned for their information.

"Disapproved.

"(Signed) Thomas E. Mattingly, M. D.

"Explanation appended.

"Dr. Lewis H. Taylor, Sibley Memorial Hospital, Washington, D. C.:

"My Dear Doctor Taylor:

"As a member of the Medical Council, I have been asked to indicate my approval or disapproval of the application of Dr. Raymond Everett Selders for the privilege of practicing 'Medicine' in Sibley Memorial Hospital. Ordinarily I would regard it presumption to disapprove a candidate because in his application, he requested hospital privileges, other than those it is my jurisdiction to pass upon. Yet in this particular case, I cannot ignore the fact that this applicant, just ten years out of medical school, has requested, and has certified himself as eligible to receive such additional hospital privileges, that should they be granted, it will be the equivalent of the hospital board certifying him to prospective patients, as competent to practice without restraint or exception, all of the highly specialized branches of the Healing Arts, with the possible exception of psychiatry.

"Approval of this application, in its present form, would give to a stranger in our midst, privileges and sanctions not accorded to any other physician of professional eminence, practicing in our hospitals or occupying major chairs in our two, white, grade A medical schools. This rather unprecedented application for extraordinary privileges comes strangely from one whose unsurpassed erudition has not yet been recognized by honorary degrees bestowed by appreciative universities of learning, or stranger still, has not been admitted to membership in either the American College of Surgeons or the American College of Physicians.

"I did note with interest, his alleged membership in our parent body, the American Medical Association and logically assumed that he subscribes to its ideals and is obedient to its regulation and discipline. If such be the case, he will readily appreciate its injunction, making it mandatory for responsible hospital executives and hospital trustees to protect their prospective patients from the preventable hazards incident to a desultory and indifferent exercise of their appointive powers, in passing upon the qualifications of members of the visiting staff. Whereas a moderate degree of leniency and compromise is excusable, relative to their approval of general practitioners, both the American Medical Association and the American College of Surgeons most emphatically insist that the credentials of those soliciting the privilege of practicing the specialties, be thoroughly and conscientiously challenged. These credentials are challenged by responsible agencies of the organized medical profession despite the fact that the applicant may be already possessed of a mandate and authority from the state, in the form of a license, to do the very act or acts, he petitions the hospital board to approve.

"In this particular case, this applicant, like myself, is already licensed by the state to practice each and every branch of the Healing Arts for which he requests hospital privileges. So far as the state, in this instance, the Federal Government, is concerned, both the applicant and I have a legal right to practice medicine and surgery in all of its many branches, yet it is generally conceded that hospitals would be criminally derelict in their duty if they allowed their visiting staff, the comprehensive privileges sanctioned by the law. To protect the unsuspecting patient against incompetence, poor judgment, criminal negligence and rash experimentation, any or all of which might be legally defensible, the organized medical profession, acting through the appointive power of hospital boards and hospital executives, has forced high and exacting standards of internal discipline, professional competency and ethical liability upon all hospitals, without the dutiful observance of which no hospital may continue to operate with its seal of approval.

"To this end each and every applicant for hospital privileges, particularly in the specialties, must prove beyond any reasonable doubt, their indubitable fitness to receive the same. This means not only certifications of professional competency but those qualities of character commensurate with the extent of the authority so delegated. I can hardly conceive of our Medical Council being so derelict in its duty and responsibility to prospective patients as to admit by inference, that one person can adequately qualify as internist, obstetrician, gynecologist, nose and throat specialist and general surgeon, clothing him with authority and permission to perform the most hazardous and difficult procedures of these specialties.

"It is not unreasonable to demand that the Medical Council of Sibley Memorial Hospital apply the same conscientious rules of procedure in granting these most extraordinary privileges to a stranger in our midst as were used in the case of those of us who have been under the Medical Council's direct observation for a far longer period than this applicant has been out of medical school.

"I personally shall continue to disapprove this applicant until he with some modesty and reasonableness, makes up his mind whether he desires hospital privileges as a general practitioner, nose and throat specialist, obstetrician and gynecologist, or a general surgeon. Because this applicant has reduced his own request for hospital privileges to an absurdity by the unreasonable enormity of his demands, I heartily disapprove of it and petition the Executive Committee to reject it in its entirety.

Fraternally yours, Thomas E. Mattingly, M. D."

The defendants offered the following records identified as produced as the records of the Home Owners Loan Corporation: Def. Ex. for identification No. 48, Def. Ex. for identification No. 49, Def. Ex. for identification No. 50, and Def. Ex. for identification No. 50-A, as follows:

DEFENDANTS' EXHIBIT 48

Subpoena served on the undersigned in the case of the United States vs. American Medical Association, et al., #63,221, Criminal Docket, includes:

Item 3. "All resolutions of the Board of Governors of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board pertaining in any way to Group Health Association, Inc. up to and including December 20, 1938".

Item 5. "Except from the minutes of the meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of October 1, 1936, providing for the drafting of a letter pertaining to group medical service for employees to be signed by the Chairman of the Board and sent to all employees together with a copy of the letter so drafted and sent to all employees".

This is to certify that the attached excerpt from the minutes of a meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of October 1, 1936 is the only minute entry, including resolutions, in the minutes of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board pertaining in any way to Group Health Association, Inc., up to and including December 20, 1938.

(Signed) J. Francis Moore, Secretary, Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Mr. R. R. Zimmerman, Director of Personnel, and Mr. Luke E. Keeley, Associate General Counsel, Home Owners' Loan Corporation entered the meeting and discussed with the Board a plan for group medical service for employees of the Board and the agencies under its supervision. A committee was appointed consisting of Mr. Keeley, as Chairman, and Messrs. Loomis and Zimmerman to draft a letter on this subject for the signature of the Chairman of the Board to be sent to all employees.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct excerpt from the Minutes of a Meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, October 1, 1936.

To all Employees, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Washington, D. C.:

Arrangements have been made for a meeting of all employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its agencies at the Government Auditorium, located between the Department of Labor and Interstate Commerce Commission Buildings, on Constitution Avenue, at four o'clock Thursday afternoon, January 28. The subject of the formation of a group medical association is to be presented. It is requested that all but minimum skeleton staffs required to handle telephones, etc., attend promptly at four o'clock.

(Signed) T. D. Webb, Vice Chairman.

Subpoena served on the undersigned in the case of the United States vs. American Medical Association, et al. No. 63,221, Criminal Docket, includes:

Item 1. "Letter dated November 16, 1937 from Horace Russell, General Counsel to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, with the notation thereon 'Approved by Board, November 19, 1937, H. R. Townsend, Assistant Secretary.'."

Item 4. "Letter dated November 16, 1937 from Horace Russell, General Counsel to Federal Home Loan Bank Board pertaining to Group Health Association, Inc., which was approved by said Board on November 19, 1937".

This is to certify that the attached letter dated November 16, 1937 which corresponds with the request under Item 1 is the only letter in the files of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board which answers the description called for under Items 1 and 4. The two items appear to be one and the same.

Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

DEAR SIRS:

I find that Group Health Association, Incorporated, has agreed to submit any amendment of its by-laws to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for approval, and the attached amended by-laws are submitted for such approval.

The by-laws were amended by re-enactment in the attached form. Such amendment was necessitated to strengthen the legal position of the association. The original by-laws provided for payment of cash indemnities upon certain contingencies, such as hospitalization outside of the area of its operation, and such provision would have made it an insurance organization. These revised by-laws provide for it to secure doctors and provide hospital rooms and service for members to the extent of its available funds as limited in the by-laws, but do not provide for the payment of any cash indemnity at all. There is no change of substance but merely a change of the legal nature of the contract in this respect. The original by-laws permitted membership after separation from the Federal service. This revision excludes membership except in the case of employees of the executive branch of the Government, excluding the Army and the Navy, and this provision is made to assure us the benefit of an exception from insurance regulations, if we are held to be an insurance company.

While there are changes at a number of places in the by-laws, all of these are intended to strengthen the legal position of the association, and none of them seem to the Board of Trustees to be of any substance. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board is requested officially to approve the revised by-laws.

Very truly yours, Horace Russell, General Counsel.

Approved by Board November 19, 1937.

(s) H. R. Townsend, Assistant Secretary.

I hereby certify that the above is a true and correct carbon copy of a letter with the original signature of H. R. Townsend thereon.

Mr. W. F. Penniman, President Pro tempore, Group Health Association, Inc., Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. PENNIMAN:

Pursuant to your request of even date, the Board of Directors of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation today nominated A. S. R. Wilson and W. C. Kirkpatrick to be elected as trustees of Group Health Association, Inc., and as such trustees to be members of the executive committee of said Association.

The Board of Directors deemed it unnecessary to nominate four with two to be elected.

Very truly yours, H. R. Townsend, Assistant Secretary.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, New Postoffice Building, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN:

In accordance with the terms of the contract by and between the Group Health Association, Inc., and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, approved at a meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, held on March 17, 1937, it is provided, among other things, that two of the Trustees of the Group Health Association, Inc., shall be elected from nominations made by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, who shall be members of an Executive Committee of five.

It is respectfully requested, that in compliance therewith the Federal Home Loan Bank Board furnish the Group Health Association, Inc., with the names of those it desires to be placed on the ballot. If agreeable to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, it would be preferable to provide the names of four candidates which will be grouped separately on the ballot and instructions given to vote for two.

Very truly yours, Group Health Association, Inc.,
By (signed) W. F. Penniman, President Pro tempore.

Group Health Association, Inc.

Washington, D. C.

April 3, 1937.

To: Mr. Fred W. Catlett, Member Federal Home Loan Bank Board. From: William F. Penniman.

Pursuant to paragraph four of the agreement between the Group Health Association, Inc., and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, we take pleasure in presenting to you herewith a copy of the by-laws of this Association, as adopted by its Board of Trustees March 22, 1937, and later amended.

It would be appreciated if the Association could receive an early reply as to whether or not these by-laws meet with the approval of the Board of Directors of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Group Health Association, Inc., By (s) Wm. F. Penniman, President.

I hereby certify that the above is a true copy of a letter in the records in the Office of the Secretary, Federal Home Bank Board.

(Signed) J. Francis Moore, Secretary, Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Whereas, Home Owners' Loan Corporation contracted with Group Health Association, Incorporated, for certain services to be rendered as is shown by the resolution of March 17, 1937, and the contract in Minute Exhibit File No. 519, and

Whereas, said contract requires said association to provide by-laws satisfactory to the Corporation and to provide in its by-laws for two of its directors to be elected from nominations made by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board who shall be members of an Executive Committee of five, and

Whereas, proposed by-laws have been submitted and considered, therefore:

Be It Resolved, that said by-laws submitted as shown in Minute Exhibit File No. 519 be approved subject to amendment as follows:

By striking the words "and administrative" in the first line of Section 4, of Article V, on Page 9; and

By adding to Section 1, of Article IX, the following:

"Provided that so long as the association is obligated to Home Owners' Loan Corporation to permit the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to designate two members of the Board of Trustees who shall be members of the Executive Committee, no amendment shall be adopted which would violate that obligation."

I hereby certify the above is a true and correct copy of a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of Home Owners' Loan Corporation on June 4, 1937.

Mr. F. W. Catlett, Member of the Board, Federal Home Loan Bank Board Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CATLETT:

You are invited to attend a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel next Saturday evening, October 30th, at 6:30 o'clock.

This occasion marks the inauguration of a plan sponsored and developed by the employees of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and other agencies under the Home Loan Bank Board, to provide for themselves and their families, complete medical service at low monthly rates, through the establishment of a modern diagnostic and treatment clinic.

The principal speaker will be Dr. Richard Cabot of Harvard University, an outstanding medical authority, who has been in the forefront in the study of group practice and group payment plans. For many years he was Chief of the Medical Staff of the Massachusetts General Hospital and is now Professor Clinical Medicine at the Harvard Medical School. Other distinguished speakers will be present.

Tickets, which are $2.50 each, may be obtained from Mr. Ormond E. Loomis. It is hoped you will find it convenient to attend.

Sincerely yours, (S) W. F. Penniman, President.

I hereby certify that the above is a true copy of a letter in the records in the Office of the Secretary, Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

(Signed) J. Francis Moore, Secretary, Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Hon. R. N. Elliott, Acting Comptroller General of the United States, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. ELLIOTT:

In response to the request of your representatives, I have caused to be prepared certified copies of the action of the Board of Directors of Home Owners' Loan Corporation affecting its relationship with Group Health Association, Incorporated, which includes copy of the contract between Home Owners' Loan Corporation and Group Health Association, Incorporated. I attach also copy of the opinion of the General Counsel of the Corporation dated March 11, 1937, memorandum from him to Members of the Board and others dated December 28, 1936, and copy of an opinion and brief prepared by the legal staff, dated December 23, 1936.

I might add that the Director of Personnel of Home Owners' Loan Corporation made a study of the question of health conditions amongst its employees, including absences on account of illness, and conditions arising from indebtedness for doctors' and hospital bills, and advised the Board that heavy losses were resulting from the conditions existing and that it would contribute to the accomplishment of the purposes of the Corporation to provide medical examination upon employment and supervision of emergency rooms maintained by the Corporation and visiting nurse service maintained in connection with sick leaves, and to assist in preventing the conditions complained of. Upon those considerations and others, it was the opinion of the Board of Directors of Home Owners' Loan Corporation that the contract referred to should be entered into and the various adjustments made therein.

If we can furnish you further information in connection with this matter we shall be glad to do so.

Very truly yours, T. D. Webb, Vice Chairman.

Office of Horace Russell, General Counsel, Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

DEAR SIRS:

I attach a proposed resolution authorizing a contract between Home Owners' Loan Corporation and Group Health Association, Incorporated, copy of which proposed contract is attached.

In my opinion, Home Owners' Loan Corporation has legal power to adopt such resolution and enter into such contract, if in the opinion of the Board of Directors the service to be rendered under the contract and the benefits to flow from the arrangement are necessary for the most efficient operation of the Corporation for the accomplishment of its purposes, and if in the opinion of the Board of Directors the price paid is a reasonable price.

I supplied Members of the Board and certain executives with a memorandum on this subject and a copy of the brief of the law on December 28, 1936, which provide a more adequate discussion, if you desire it.

Very truly yours, Horace Russell, General Counsel.

Attach.

I hereby certify that the attached, consisting of nine (9) pages, is a true copy of the original memoranda and opinion on file in the office of the Secretary, Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Memorandum to: Members of the Board, Mr. R. R. Zimmerman, Mr. Charles A. Jones, Mr. Preston Delano, Mr. Nugent Fallon:

I attach for your information a brief on the question of the authority of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and Home Owners' Loan Corporation to incur reasonable expenses in the encouragement of a Federal Credit Union amongst its employees and in the encouragement of the development of an organized medical service for the general benefit of its employees. The same rules of law apply to Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

This matter has been carefully studied and we are of the opinion that in each case such reasonable expense may be incurred.

It is for the Board to determine in each case what is reasonable expense in this connection. I do not believe that it could be said that it would be reasonable expense to incur the total expense and provide completely a medical service, but on the other hand, it certainly would, in my opinion, be reasonable to incur the expense of investigating the question of an organized medical service and give advice and encouragement to the development of such, if, in the judgment of the Board, such development would promote the welfare of the establishment. How much further than the latter proposition would be reasonable is a matter for the exercise of the discretion of the Board.

In the case of a credit union, nominal space may be provided and all of the meetings of the union and all of its business may be transacted outside regular office hours, and it is clear that such would be justifiable. In some cases credit unions are being operated, I am informed, where the corporation, or establishment, or department, not only provides space, but provides such space during regular office hours and also provides personnel during regular office hours for the conduct of the business, and indeed, provides substantially for all expenses of the union. How much expense between these two extremes is reasonable and necessary for the welfare of the employees, and, therefore, of the establishment is a matter for the exercise of the discretion of the Board of Directors.

Horace Russell, General Counsel.

OPINION

Credit Union

Question.

The question has arisen as to whether the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation may incur expense for space and employees' time for the operation of a credit union, which is organized and operated for the general benefit and relief of employees.

A further question has arisen as to whether such expense may be incurred for space and employees' time for reasonable assistance in connection with the organization and operation of a medical service for the general benefit of employees.

Opinion.

Both questions are answered in the affirmative.

Discussion.

Section 19 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, provides in part as follows:

"The board shall have power to select, employ, and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys, and agents as shall be necessary for the performance of its duties under this Act without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment or compensation of officers, employees, attorneys, and agents of the United States. * * * The board * * * shall determine its necessary expenditures under this Act and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed and paid. * * *"

This gives the Board broad authority to employ additional personnel and to incur necessary expenses in order to carry out the duties of the Board under the Act. Section 4(j) of Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, provides in part, as follows:

The Corporation shall have power to select, employ, and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys; or agents as shall be necessary for the performance of its duties under this Act, without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment or compensation of officers, employees, attorneys, or agents of the United States. * * * The Corporation shall be entitled to the free use of the United States mails for its official business in the same manner as the executive departments of the Government, and shall determine its necessary expenditures under this Act and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, without regard to the provisions of any other law governing the expenditure of public funds. * * *"

The general rule is that corporations have those powers which are expressly granted in addition to those impliedly granted as reasonably incident and necessary to the carrying out of the powers expressly granted.

In McCulloch v. Maryland, (4 Wheat. 316), it is held that the word "necessary" is not to be given a narrow, restricted meaning.

In the case of Gilbert v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., (1933), 171 S. E. 814, Judge Kenna states in his opinion, as follows:

"Consistent with the general rule that a private business corporation is carried on primarily for the profit of the stockholders, and that therefore its charter powers and those of its board of directors must be exercised for that purpose, it has, nevertheless, been generally held that such corporations may, for the ultimate benefit of the corporation itself translated into profit, use the funds of such corporation for purposes which might appear directly to be charitable and humanitarian. It has been held that private corporations may take proper steps to insure adequate housing, school facilities, and churches; that they may supply medical attention for their employees, defray the expenses of taking care of injured employees, maintain benefit funds for sick and injured employees, and perform a variety of other acts which, upon their face, yield no direct return or benefit to the corporation and are in the nature of humanitarian grants to the employee. Without citing specific cases to maintain this general assertion, reference may be had for that purpose to the annotation following the case of Dodge v. Ford Motor Company, 3 A. L. R. 443 (case 204 Mich. 459, 170 N. W. 668, 3 A. L. R. 413). * * *"

In this annotation, 3 A. L. R. 443, at page 444, it is stated as follows:

"It is within the powers of a manufacturing corporation which has removed its plant to a sparsely settled locality, to purchase land in excess of its own needs, to make expenditures for streets and sewers, and a water supply therefor, to erect houses to be sold or rented to its employees, and to make contribution towards the establishment of a church, school, free library, and free baths, such a policy on its part reasonably tending to insure the continued and faithful service of a skilled and contented body of operators. Steinway v. Steinway & Sons, 1896, (17 Misc. 43, 40 N. Y. Supp. 718)."

Federal Credit Unions are organized under the Federal Credit Union Act (June 26, 1934, c. 750, sec. 1, 48 Stat. 1216), and in section 17 of said act are authorized to act as fiscal agents of the United States when requested so to do by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Credit unions are cooperative associations operating for the purpose of promoting thrift and of creating a source of credit for worthwhile purposes for its members. Through their operation saving is made easy and convenient. Credit unions are non-commercial in the sense that there are no promotional profits and that all investors share alike in proportion to the number of shares they own. The statute prescribes that membership is limited to persons having a common bond of occupation or association. Thus, the Washington Home Owners' Loan Corporation Federal Credit Union is exclusively for employees of the agencies under the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. A credit union now operates in each of the Regional Offices, the Richmond State Office and the San Antonio District Office. It is expected that each of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation's State Offices will soon have a credit union established. There are now upwards of 5,000 credit unions in the United States, of which 1,800 are under Federal charter and supervision as made possible by the Federal Credit Union Act.

It is assumed that in all cases where this question would arise the credit union is limited solely to the employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board agencies. R. N. Elliott, Acting Comptroller General of the United States, on November 3, 1936, held that in the absence of specific statutory authority therefor, the Postmaster General may not lease or provide free of charge vacant space in Federal post office buildings to private parties, private enterprises or commercial concerns and that the two credit unions occupying space in the Post Office Building at Oakland, California, which were incorporated under the laws of the State of California were private enterprises.

As the credit unions are under the Federal Credit Union Act organized for the purpose of promoting thrift and creating a source of credit for its members who in the case of the Washington Home Owners' Loan Corporation Federal Credit Union are employees of agencies under the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, it seems that the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has authority under the act to incur expense for space and employees' time for the operation of a credit union which is organized and operated for the general benefit and relief of employees of agencies under it, and it also has authority under the act to incur expense for space and employees' time for reasonable assistance in connection with the organization and operation of a medical service for the general benefit of employees. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation has both authority under the act and implied authority as reasonably incident and necessary to the carrying out of the powers expressly granted in the act to incur expense for space and employees' time for the operation of a credit union which is organized and operated for the general benefit and relief of its employees and also to incur expense for space and employees' time for reasonable assistance in connection with the organization and relief of its employees and also to incur expense for space and employees' time for reasonable assistance in connection with the organization and operation of a medical service for the general benefit of its employees.

Adm. Group Health, December 15, 1938

Mr. R. L. Nagle, Secretary
Federal Home Loan Bank Board
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. NAGLE:

The following comments are offered with respect to changes in the By-Laws of Group Health Association, Inc.

Mr. E. K. Neumann, of the Legal Department of Home Owners' Loan Corporation, who took charge of such litigation as the Association was obliged to engage in, urged the Board of Trustees not to alter the Association's structure as contained in the By-Laws other than changes made necessary by revision of rates. The Board of Trustees adhered to this request and Mr. Neumann has approved the changes embodied in the revised draft now before the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for approval. At the same time, in conversations with the Department of Justice, attorneys representing it indicated that it probably would be best not to make radical changes in our By-Laws until certain questions now before the courts concerning the Association had been settled. On advising the Department of Justice what we intended to do with respect to our rate structure, its representatives indicated their agreement.

The Advisory Council, consisting of approximately 51 persons, recommended to the Board of Trustees many other changes beyond what are contained in the present draft. These suggested changes were not adopted and are the ones that really reflect structural changes in the Association's set-up.

By reference to Article VIII on page 9 of the draft, you will observe that amendments to the By-Laws may be made by a two-thirds majority (8 members) of the Board of Trustees, at any regular or special meeting, with the exception that amendments to Article VIII and Section 7 of Article VII shall be made only after submission to and by vote of members of the Corporation. The particular portion referring to submission of amendments to members is new matter in the present revision and, of course, is intended for action in the future and not in the past. Heretofore, amendments to the By-Laws as provided in Article IX, Section 1 of the By-Laws, as revised to October 25, 1937, contained the following:

"Sec. 1. Amendments to these by-laws may be made, by affirmative vote of a two-thirds majority of the Trustees of the corporation at any regular meeting or at any special meeting when the proposed amendment has been set out in the notice of such meeting."

Respectfully, (S.) W. C. Kirkpatrick, President.

(Defendants' Exhibit No. 50)

Group Health Association, Inc.
For Employees of
Federal Home Loan Bank Board
And Affiliated Agencies.

Purpose

To bring the services of specially trained physicians and the benefits of modern medical equipment to people of average means, while preserving the personal relationship between patient and doctor.

Background

For some time, a group medical plan for employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its agencies has been studied. After extensive research followed by several preliminary meetings with some of our officials, a plan was created.

Mr. R. V. Rickcord of the Twentieth Century Fund, who is considered an authority in the field of group medicine, assisted materially in the formation of the plan. It was then presented to a meeting of about 1200 employees, the majority of whom indicated their interest in the proposal.

Since then over 800 employees have signed applications for membership and it is estimated 100 additional employees will desire to join as soon as the benefits are available.

Present Problem

The general health of our employees is a natural concern to Management from the standpoints of interrupted work and cost occasioned by lost time. It is estimated that absence from work caused by sickness costs the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its agencies in excess of one-half million dollars annually.

Regular physical examinations with the opportunity of consulting competent physicians in whom employees have confidence and the knowledge that the doctor bills can be paid without hardship will lead to highly desirable preventive medicine and a reduction of sickness.

An analysis of money spent by the average person for medical treatment shows that only 2% goes for preventive purposes. A group medical service plan such as we contemplate will stimulate our employees to take proper steps to prevent illness.

The benefits of the plan are primarily for the employees of the Washington Office, but through action taken by the Medical Director, it is believed that similar benefits may be made available to our field employees, especially those in Regional Offices, by cooperating with similar groups in other cities.

There are at present 22 nurses in our employ assigned to the larger offices whose combined salaries total over $30,000. In addition, about $6,000 is spent annually for emergency room supplies and equipment.

While it is true these nurses work under local administrative supervision, they have no one to assist them in technical matters, health education, etc. Our Medical Director would work out many improvements in practice and procedure for the nurses and assist them in the matter of proper and adequate materials and increase the effectiveness of our emergency service.

The employment of persons physically unfit or with communicable diseases could be eliminated in the Home Office and in many of the large field offices where arrangements have been made with other medical groups by requiring a physical examination. Surely our employees should be protected by this precaution.

Facilities

Employees will elect a Board of Trustees who, in turn, will appoint a Medical Director and a Business Administrator. There would be assistants including physicians, technicians, nurses and clerical employees. Most of the service would be furnished at headquarters, suitably located in the downtown district of Washington, having the necessary consulting, examining and treatment rooms, and equipped with apparatus and materials for extensive examination, diagnosis and treatment.

The medical benefits will include:

Consultations, treatments, analyses, X-Rays
Physical examinations
Surgery
Obstetrics
Hospitalization
Health education

Subscription Rates

Based on information secured from other groups which are furnishing these services, and the creation of an itemized budget of expenses, medical service would be furnished to members at the following rates:

For the individual	$2.20 per month
For the family	$3.30 per month

Drugs, medicines, biologicals, appliances and other materials would be procured upon prescription or special arrangements at reduced rates.

The Patient Speaks

The rich can buy the benefits of modern medical science. The very poor get these benefits in charitable or tax supported clinics. But most of us who work for a living and wish to pay for what we get cannot afford the full advantage of modern medicine.

When it comes to medical care, the best is none too good for anybody. I would like to have my private doctor, who knows me and understands my problems. But I would like to feel certain that my doctor never treats me for anything with which he is not completely familiar; I wish that he would never hesitate to call in a consultant. I would like to feel, too, that my doctor has at hand all of the modern apparatus necessary to aid him. I wish that X-Rays and laboratory tests were sufficiently inexpensive so that I could afford them whenever I need them.

When I get sick enough, the doctor sends me to a hospital where there are all kinds of equipment. But perhaps hospital bills could be avoided, and much sickness could be prevented, if it were possible for me to take advantage of modern medical science even while I am well.

It would be perfect to have a doctor, and a staff of specialists, and a place where they have everything.

The Doctor Speaks

The doctor can choose between two alternatives: he can become a "family doctor" doing general practice, or he can specialize. The average family doctor collects from whomever he can and wishes he had more opportunity for advanced study. The specialist, if he practices alone, finds it necessary to ask high fees for his services, and has a tendency to lose intimate contact with other fields of medicine.

Medical research has made immense strides, but medical administration has been slow in bringing the results to the people. A doctor may live in a great medical center like Washington and yet be unable to take full advantage of all the modern advances in diagnosis. We ought to have all the technical and laboratory services close at hand, and so moderately priced that we could use them without hesitation for our patients.

A perfect way to practice would be to have my own patients whose personal problems I know, and to be so situated that the factor of expense would never make it impossible for me to call in consulting physicians when they are needed. It would be fine to work in daily contact with a group of physicians. In this way my medical knowledge would be continually enriched and co-ordinated with other fields of medicine. Does this ideal have to remain a dream; can it not be accomplished by our organizing and co-operating?

What Is Group Medicine?

Medical care of a high quality has been made possible by recent scientific advances. The means used to distribute medical service to the public sometimes fail to keep pace with the development of medical knowledge. As this knowledge has advanced, new fields of specialization, and new accessories to diagnosis and treatment of disease have developed. "Group medicine" is a method of co-operative practice which brings together under one roof a number of physicians, the modern devices, and the technical assistants required for complete medical care. Every patient of the group of co-operating physicians and surgeons has not only the services of his own doctor, but also the attention of a large group of doctors.

Besides making complete modern medical care available to its patients, group medical practice results in a great decrease in the expense of this care. Shared overhead, co-operative utilization of costly equipment, and completely organized technical help servicing a large number of physicians, greatly lower the cost to the patient.

Thoroughness Is the Keynote of Group Medical Service

Complete Analytical Diagnostic Study: When it is deemed advisable by the attending physician; patients are given a complete analytical diagnostic study in which all the resources of modern medicine are utilized.

After a thorough general medical examination, careful studies are made in all the special departments. In every case the following laboratory tests are performed: urinalysis, blood counts, serological tests, electrocardiogram, X-Rays of the teeth, heart and lungs, abdomen, gall-bladder, and a fluoroscopic study of the entire gastro-intestinal tract.

When further information is desired, additional laboratory tests and X-Ray studies are made. These include examination of stomach contents, feces, spinal fluid, special blood tests, basal metabolism, X-Ray of the bones, joints, sinuses, etc. Such an examination is possible at the Group Health Association because of the co-ordinated functioning of its many departments, and its complete equipment.

The constant co-operation between the physicians studying a case assures every patient that interrelated facts will be properly observed and that an adequate program of treatment will be instituted. The rational and efficient method of administering this service at the Group makes it available to thousands to whom it has previously been an inaccessible luxury.

A Complete Eye Service Assures Thorough Examination and Correct Glasses

Eyestrain causes headaches, nervousness, and tiredness, and always leads to a further impairment of vision. Certain disorders of the body are due to eyestrain, and can be cured by properly fitted glasses. It is found frequently, on the other hand, that persons are wearing glasses unnecessarily, and that their eye disorder is due to disease in another portion of the body.

In the eye department at the Association the eyes are carefully examined by a specialist. Such conditions as conjunctivitis, styes, ulcers, cataracts, and glaucoma are readily diagnosed and treated here. Vision is thoroughly tested, and when necessary correct glasses are prescribed.

Complete Maternity Care

Complete medical service is available to expectant mothers including prenatal examinations, hospitalization, delivery and post-partum care. Here any woman may feel confident that she is obtaining the best of care throughout the entire period of her pregnancy.

Proper Care of Children in Babyhood Helps Assure A Healthy Life

Pediatrics: Perhaps no other single factor is so important in assuring life-long good health as proper medical attention during childhood. Working out proper feeding formulae for infants and watching over the first months of their lives are important factors. A child should be watched carefully for the first sign of heart, allergic, or glandular disturbances which, if neglected, often result in permanent invalidism.

Modern immunization procedures for children, protecting them against smallpox, dipthheria, scarlet fever, and whooping-cough will also be available. These children's diseases need the attention of a trained physician to prevent possible serious consequences.

Surgery

In no single field has more progress been made during the last fifty years than that of surgery. And yet, in no single field are the costs of adequate care so prohibitive. To the fees of the surgeon, often in itself a serious burden, are added the expenses of hospitalization, anesthesia, drugs and the use of the operating room.

These prohibitive costs are responsible every year for innumerable deaths which could have been prevented by timely surgery, particularly in such conditions as appendicitis, intestinal obstructions and early cancer. The services of our surgeon are available for the removal of tonsils and adenoids, appendix, gall bladders, goitre operations and other similar operations.

Hospitalization

Hospitalization will be provided to patients as recommended by the Medical Director or staff physician. All of the facilities necessary for the comfort and safety of the sick are at the command of our physicians.

In the event of accidents or sudden illness ambulance service is ready at all times without a charge to the patient.

Men and Machines

In the early days of medicine a stethoscope and a clinical thermometer were about the only mechanical aids available to the physician. But as medicine marches on, intricate machines are developed to aid man in his battle with disease and death. These complicated instruments, used chiefly in diagnosis, are often beyond the means of the average practitioner. Even if he could afford them a doctor practicing by himself might use them so infrequently as to make their maintenance a prohibitive expense. Yet, when the need arises, it is imperative that he have it.

But a group of physicians practicing together can own and make use of all the costly equipment so necessary to diagnosis and treatment. They can give their patients the benefits of these technical facilities at a fraction of the ordinary cost.

In the field of diagnosis X-Rays find their greatest value in the early detection of disease. Tuberculosis of the lungs may be discovered by X-Ray studies of the chest at an early stage, when direct examination by a thoroughly competent physician may fail to disclose it. The use of these valuable diagnostic aids results in a decrease of suffering and in a prolongation of life. Nevertheless, advantage is not always taken of this valuable aid in the study of disease because of its expense.

Estimated Budget

Technical Staff
Medical Director (surgeon)	$ 7,500
Special Nursing	2,000

900 Members would pay	30,888
Deficit		$18,612
834 Members would pay	$28,234.80
Deficit		$21,265.20

When the plan is put into effect, it is conservatively estimated that membership will aggregate between 834 and 900, indicating a mean deficit of about $20,000.

It is therefore recommended that the Board assist the enterprise to the extent of $20,000 during its early existence.

*Total $10,000 to be paid for on five-year basis.

(Defendants' Exhibit 50-A)

Whereas, Home Owners' Loan Corporation desires to provide physical examination of applicants for employment, before employment, supervision of its present provisions for emergency treatment, and to cooperate in providing a substantially complete medical and hospital service to its employees and their families, all in the interest of the acquisition and maintenance of the highest possible type of personnel, which in the judgment of the Corporation is necessary for the accomplishment of the purposes of the Corporation, and

Whereas, Group Health Association, Incorporated, has been formed by certain employees of the Corporation to provide a substantially complete medical and hospital service, which is in position to provide the service the Corporation requires, therefore, it is agreed as follows:

1. Group Health Association, Incorporated, agrees to provide a staff and service to provide a substantially complete medical and hospital service to employees of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation who are its members on substantially the basis outlined in the memorandum submitted to the Members of the Board by Mr. R. R. Zimmerman, dated March 1, 1937.

2. Group Health Association, Incorporated, further agrees to provide at its headquarters at the request of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation physical examinations at the time of employment of all new employees in the Washington office.

3. Group Health Association, Incorporated, shall be required and agrees to manage and supervise the emergency rooms and the employees in the nursing service maintained in connection with such emergency treatment and in visitations to employees of the Washington office who are on sick leave.

4. Group Health Association, Incorporated, further agrees to provide bylaws satisfactory to the Corporation and to provide in its bylaws for two of its directors to be elected from nominations made by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, who shall be members of an executive committee of five.

5. In consideration of the foregoing, and all of the benefits to flow to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, as a result of the operation of Group Health Association, Incorporated, Home Owners' Loan Corporation agrees to pay $10,000 upon request, and beginning on the date of the establishment of its service the sum of $833.33 monthly in advance for a period of twelve months, and thereafter the sum of $1,666.67 per month for the succeeding twelve months.

6. It is further agreed that this contract shall remain in full force and effect for a period of two years from the date of the establishment of its service by the Group Health Association, Incorporated.

Authorized, entered into, executed and delivered by both parties as of the 22nd day of March, 1937.

Home Owners' Loan Corporation. By John H. Fahey, Chairman, Board of Directors. Group Health Association, Inc. By W. F. Penniman, President.

M.E.F. #519, 2/23/38. H. R. Townsend, p. 8423.

Contract

Whereas on March 22, 1937, a contract was entered into between the undersigned Home Owners' Loan Corporation and Group Health Association, Incorporated, and

Whereas since said date Group Health Association, Incorporated, has completed its organization, has established its clinic, and is now prepared to provide, and is providing, on a reasonable monthly prepayment basis, a group medical and hospitalization service which is of direct and indirect benefit to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in providing such of its employees as desire to join the Group Health Association the opportunity to secure, on such reasonable monthly prepayment basis, medical service, preventive as well as curative, and hospitalization, and

Whereas since the execution of such contract certain of its provisions have already been performed, and certain changes have occurred which make it desirable to simplify and adjust the terms of the contract referred to;

Therefore It Is Agreed by and between the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and Group Health Association, Incorporated, that Group Health Association, Incorporated, shall, for a period of at least two years from November 1, 1937, operate its clinic and provide substantially complete medical and hospital service to such employees of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation as care to join it on a reasonable monthly prepayment basis, and that it continue to maintain the high standard professional service it now affords, all in accordance with its character and under by-laws satisfactory to the Corporation.

In Consideration of the benefits already received and to be received during the period of this contract, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation has paid to Group Health Association, Incorporated, the full amount provided in the contract referred to, and the receipt of such sum in full of all obligations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is hereby acknowledged.

Executed And Delivered this the 23d day of February, 1938.

Federal Home Loan Bank Board

DEAR SIRS:

I find that Group Health Association, Incorporated, has agreed to submit any amendment of its bylaws to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for approval, and the attached amended bylaws are submitted for such approval.

The bylaws were amended by re-enactment in the attached form. Such amendment was necessitated to strengthen the legal position of the association. The original bylaws provided for payment of cash indemnities upon certain contingencies, such as hospitalization outside of the area of its operations, and such provision would have made it an insurance organization. These revised bylaws provide for it to secure doctors and provide hospital rooms and service for members to the extent of its available funds as limited in the bylaws, but do not provide for the payment of any cash indemnity at all. There is no change of substance but merely a change of the legal nature of the contract in this respect. The original bylaws permitted membership after separation from the Federal service. This revision excludes membership except in the case of employees of the executive branch of the Government, excluding the Army and the Navy, and this provision is made to assure us the benefit of an exception from insurance regulations, if we are held to be an insurance company.

While there are changes at a number of places in the bylaws, all of these are intended to strengthen the legal position of the association, and none of them seem to the Board of Trustees to be of any substance. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board is requested officially to approve the revised bylaws.

Very truly yours, Horace Russell, General Counsel.

Hon. R. N. Elliott,
Acting Comptroller General of the United States,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Elliott:

In response to the request of your representatives, I have caused to be prepared certified copies of the action of the Board of Directors of Home Owners' Loan Corporation affecting its relationship with Group Health Association, Incorporated, which includes copy of the contract between Home Owners' Loan Corporation and Group Health Association, Incorporated. I attach also copy of the opinion of the General Counsel of the Corporation dated March 11, 1937, memorandum from him to Members of the Board and others dated December 28, 1936, and copy of an opinion and brief prepared by the legal staff, dated December 23, 1936.

I might add that the Director of Personnel of Home Owners' Loan Corporation made a study of the question of health conditions amongst its employees, including absences on account of illness, and conditions arising from indebtedness for doctors' and hospital bills, and advised the Board that heavy losses were resulting from the conditions existing and that it would contribute to the accomplishment of the purposes of the Corporation to provide medical examination upon employment and supervision of emergency rooms maintained by the Corporation and visiting nurse service maintained in connection with sick leave, and to assist in preventing the conditions complained of. Upon these considerations and others, it was the opinion of the Board of Directors of Home Owners' Loan Corporation that the contract referred to should be entered into and the various adjustments made therein.

If we can furnish you further information in connection with this matter we shall be glad to do so.

Very truly yours, T. D. Webb, Vice Chairman. (Seal.)

Re: Sale of Surplus Furniture to GHA by HOLC

I am in receipt of a copy of a memorandum from Mr. H. Caulsen, Assistant Secretary, addressed to Mr. D. C. Hair and the writer, under date of May 10, relative to the subject captioned above. Attached to this memorandum is a copy of Mr. Russell's opinion, under date of May 9, to the Corporation, in which he indicates that the furniture in question may be sold to this Association if the Board of Directors of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation deems it advisable.

I shall appreciate it if you will advise me as to whether or not the Board is willing to sell the furniture in question to this Association at a total cost of $300.00 (all furniture now in place at the clinic, 1328 Eye Street, N. W.) on terms which will enable the Association to pay for such furniture at the rate of $20.00 per month. I understand there are one or two typewriters, or possibly three, included in the list of furniture at the clinic which are of very little use because of their condition. It may be necessary that some adjustment will have to be made in connection with these typewriters.

I shall appreciate, however, hearing from you after you have consulted with the Board on this question.

W. C. Kirkpatrick, President.

I have your memorandum of April 19, 1938, in reference to Group Health Association by-laws and see no objection to the proposed amendments.

I suggest that you check this matter with Mr. Kenneth G. Heisler who has worked on the question before and put the matter, which in your opinion should be acted upon by the Board of Trustees, in proper form for action and discuss it with the president and go before the Board of Trustees and ask for such action as you advise. I believe the Board meets next Monday.

Amendment of By-Laws G. H. A.

Counsel for Group Health Association have found that the following amendments to its by-laws will relieve it of some rather embarrassing moments in disposing of the case of G. H. A. vs. U. S. Attorney and others now pending in the U. S. Court for the District of Columbia. None of the changes go far beyond the process of so revamping the language as to better meet the legal questions raised. It is hoped you will not find the changes objectionable.

(1) Amend Section 4 of Article II to read as follows:

"Dependents of those hereafter becoming members of this corporation will not be eligible to the benefits of this corpo- ration until the member has been in good standing for a period of three calendar months, beginning with the date of his or her application, provided, however, that this section shall not apply to dependents of members in good standing as of the date of beginning operations.

"Employees who do not apply for membership within one calendar month from the date of entrance on duty in the government service aforesaid shall not be eligible to the benefits of this corporation until three calendar months after the date of their application, during which three months, however, no dues shall be paid by or be chargeable to such applicants."

(2) Amend Section 5 of Article II to read as follows:

"The Board of Trustees shall reject an application for membership without cause if the applicant is not an employee of the character hereinabove designated. It shall have the right, for just and reasonable cause, to reject any application for membership, and may drop or expel from membership, after not less that fifteen (15) days notice and hearing before the Board of Trustees, any person who, in the opinion of said Board of Trustees, shall have abused the privileges of his membership or is otherwise guilty of wrongful conduct detrimental to the corporation or its membership. The Board of Trustees, after hearing as hereinbefore provided, shall be the sole judge of whether the conduct in question warrants expulsion from membership. Membership dues shall end upon expulsion."

(3) Amend Section 7 of Article II to read as follows:

"No dependent of a member not listed on the dependent list of such member at the time he becomes a member shall be eligible for benefits hereunder until the expiration of three calendar months after such dependent is placed on the dependent list of such member, with the exception of newly married wives or husbands, or newly born children, who shall be eligible for such benefits from the date of listing provided such listing is made not later than one calendar month after such marriage or birth. No dependent in any case shall be eligible for benefits at a time when the member himself is not so eligible."

(4) Amend Section 6 of Article III to read as follows:

"Every member shall have the right to vote, in person or by proxy, in any election or at any meeting of the corporation."

(5) Amend Section 5 of Article V to read as follows:

"The Board of Trustees shall contract for and in behalf of the members of this corporation, with physicians duly licensed to practice their profession in the District of Columbia, who shall render such service to the members as may be provided in said contract. One of said physicians shall be designated as the Medical Director, who, with the approval of the Trustees, may engage the services of such assistants, orderlies, nurses, or other help, in order to properly render the services contracted for.

(6) Substitute the following in lieu of Section 6, Article V, to-wit:

"The Board of Trustees shall in no way regulate or supervise the practice of medicine by any physician with whom it contracts for the care of members nor shall it in any way supervise, regulate or interfere with the usual professional relationship between such physician and his patient member, and every such contract entered into by and between a physician and the corporation shall contain a positive covenant to that effect.

(7) Amend Section 1 of Article X to read as follows:

"The contract or contracts to be made by this corporation on behalf of the members thereof with physicians, as provided in Section 5 of Article V, or with others, shall provide for the following services to members:

"Medical and surgical examinations and treatments, including examinations in special departments, such as refractions of eyes, laboratory tests, x-ray examinations; surgical operations, confinement cases, and professional consultations, nursing and ambulance facilities, house calls, and hospitalization in a semi-private room (two-bed room) or a private room, limited in either case to a period not to exceed 21 days for any one illness; provided, however, that each member desiring to occupy a private room or a semi-private room of his own choice shall pay so much of the cost of such room as shall exceed the sum of $4.00 per day; provided, further, that such member shall make such advance payments to assure the aforesaid reimbursement as the Trustees shall require; and provided, further, that the benefits provided outside of the territory of the association shall be limited to the provision of a hospital room for the time and as is herein provided.

"Members or dependents in order to avail themselves of medical and surgical service shall come to the doctor's office if such is possible from the nature of their illness. Doctors will answer necessary house calls within a radius of ten miles from the District of Columbia line, except that the Medical Director may provide for house calls not exceeding twenty miles. Members will furnish such doctor with any information he may request relative to their condition and membership and should, at all times, have available their membership card for identification.

"The extent that medical service relating to the foregoing items will be furnished to members shall be determined and prescribed by the Medical Director or his representatives in each individual case."

(8) Amend Section 2 of Article X to read as follows:

"The contract or contracts to be made by this corporation on behalf of the members, with physicians, as provided in Section 5 of Article V of these By-Laws, or with others, shall not provide for the following services to members:

(1) Treatment of industrial accident cases;
(2) Surgery of the brain or nervous system;
(3) Any treatment after the time that the Medical Director recommends commitment to an institution in mental, tubercular, drug or alcohol addiction cases.

(9) Amend Section 3 of Article X to read as follows:

"Any contract entered into by the corporation on behalf of its members will require the members to pay for the following:

(1) Medicines, drugs, surgical appliances, such as orthopedic devices and crutches; eye glasses; artificial limbs or eyes; and hearing devices;
(2) Radium and deep x-ray treatments;
(3) Dental work;

(4) Oxygen tanks or tents and materials;
(5) Blood transfusions;
(6) Special nursing service if not ordered by the Medical Director;
(7) Treatment, services, supplies and other items prescribed or ordered by a physician not in a contractual relationship with the corporation and its member, but employed by an individual member, including fees of such physician.
(8) Treatment of venereal diseases at the rate of Fifty Cents (50¢) per treatment.
(9) Hospitalization in excess of that mentioned in Section 1 of this article.

"The corporation shall make an effort to secure at reduced rates all the medical services and items for which the member is required to pay."

(10) That the following be adopted in lieu of Section 4 of Article X, as follows, to-wit:

"Section 4 (a) The corporation does not guarantee that it will provide any or all of the services above specified and for which it will attempt to contract on behalf of its members and it shall not be liable to any member or his dependent in any manner whatever if it should for any reason, including lack of funds, be unable to procure any or all of said services when called upon to do so.

"(b) The corporation does not guarantee that any physician or physicians with whom it may enter into a contract to render services to its members will perform such contract and its only obligation in the event of the breach of such contract by any physician shall be to use its best effort to procure the needed services from another source.

"(c) The corporation shall not be liable to its members or their dependents for any act of omission or commission on the part of physicians or other persons with whom it may contract for the rendition of services to its members and their dependents.

(11) That Section 6 of Article X be amended to read as follows:

"Any person referred to herein as dependent, to be eligible to the benefits of the corporation, must be totally dependent upon a member of the corporation for a livelihood prior to and at the time of such person's disability and prior to and at the time of need of medical service. Under this provision persons who are regularly working and receiving compensation for their services are not dependent, with the exception that wife or husband, or school children who work during the summer months only, may be considered dependent. Any member who accepts benefits hereunder to which he is not entitled, or who secures such benefits for any person not entitled thereto, shall pay a penalty commensurate with the value of the services so received as may be determined by the Board of Trustees."

(12) Repeal all of Section 7 of Article X.

Respectfully W. C. Kirkpatrick, President.

Memorandum to:

Members of the Board, Mr. R. R. Zimmerman, Mr. Charles A. Jones, Mr. Preston Delano, Mr. Nugent Fallon.

I attach for your information a brief on the question of the authority of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and Home Owners' Loan Corporation to incur reasonable expenses in the encouragement of a Federal Credit Union amongst its employees and in the encouragement of the development of an organized medical service for the general benefit of its employees. The same rules of law apply to Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

This matter has been carefully studied and we are of the opinion that in each case such reasonable expense may be incurred.

It is for the Board to determine in each case what is reasonable expense in this connection. I do not believe that it could be said that it would be reasonable expense to incur the total expense and provide completely a medical service, but on the other hand, it certainly would, in my opinion, be reasonable to incur the expense of investigating and the question of an organized medical service and give advice and encouragement to the development of such, if, in the judgment of the Board, such development would promote the welfare of the establishment. How much further than the latter proposition would be reasonable is a matter for the exercise of the discretion of the Board.

In the case of a credit union, nominal space may be provided and all of the meetings of the union and all of its business may be transacted outside regular office hours, and it is clear that such would be justifiable. In some cases credit unions are being operated, I am informed, where the corporation, or establishment, or department, not only provides space, but provides such space during regular office hours and also provides personnel during regular office hours for the conduct of the business, and indeed, provides substantially for all expenses of the union. How much expense between these two extremes is reasonable and necessary for the welfare of the employees, and therefore, of the establishment is a matter for the exercise of the discretion of the Board of Directors.

Opinion—Credit Union

December 23, 1936.

Legal Department, Home Owners' Loan Corporation

Horace Russell, General Counsel, Washington, D. C.

Question

The question has arisen as to whether the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation may incur expense for space and employees' time for the operation of a credit union, which is organized and operated for the general benefit and relief of employees.

A further question has arisen as to whether such expense may be incurred for space and employees' time for reasonable assistance in connection with the organization and operation of a medical service for the general benefit of employees.

Opinion

Both questions are answered in the affirmative.

Discussion

Section 19 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, provides in part as follows:

"The board shall have power to select, employ, and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys, and agents as shall be necessary for the performance of its duties under this Act without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment or compensation of officers, employees, attorneys, and agents of the United States, * * * The board * * * shall determine its necessary expenditures under this Act and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed and paid. * * *"

This gives the Board broad authority to employ additional personnel and to incur necessary expenses in order to carry out the duties of the Board under the Act.

Section 4(j) of Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, provides in part, as follows:

"The Corporation shall have power to select, employ, and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys, or agents as shall be necessary for the performance of its duties under this Act, without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment or compensation of officers, employees, attorneys, or agents of the United States. * * * The Corporation shall be entitled to the free use of the United States mails for its official business in the same manner as the executive departments of the Government, and shall determine its necessary expenditures under this Act and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, without regard to the provisions of any other law governing the expenditure of public funds. * * *".

The general rule is that corporations have those powers which are expressly granted in addition to those impliedly granted as reasonably incident and necessary to the carrying out of the powers expressly granted.

In McCulloch v. Maryland (4 Wheat. 316), it is held that the word "necessary", is not to be given a narrow, restricted meaning.

In the case of Gilbert v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. (1933), 171 S. E. 814, Judge Kenna states in his opinion, as follows:

"Consistent with the general rule that a private business corporation is carried on primarily for the profit of the stockholders, and that therefore its charter powers and those of its board of directors must be exercised for that purpose, it has, nevertheless, been generally held that such corporations may, for the ultimate benefit of the corporation itself translated into profit, use the funds of such corporation for purposes which might appear directly to be charitable and humanitarian. It has been held that private corporations may take proper steps to insure adequate housing, school facilities, and churches; that they may supply medical attention for their employees, defray the expenses of taking care of injured employees, maintain benefit funds for sick and injured employees, and perform a variety of other acts which, upon their face, yield no direct return or benefit to the corporation and are in the nature of humanitarian grants to the employee. Without citing specific cases to maintain this general assertion, reference may be had for that purpose to the annotation following the case of Dodge v. Ford Motor Company, 3 A. L. R. 443 (case 204 Mich. 459, 170 N. W. 668, 3 A. L. R. 413). * * *"

In this annotation, 3 A. L. R. 443, at page 444, it is stated as follows:

"It is within the powers of a manufacturing corporation which has removed its plant to a sparsely settled locality, to purchase land in excess of its own needs, to make expenditures for streets and sewers, and a water supply therefor, to erect houses to be sold or rented to its employees, and to make contribution towards the establishment of a church, school, free library, and free baths, such a policy on its part reasonably tending to insure the continued and faithful service of a skilled and contented body of operators. Steinway v. Steinway & Sons, 1896, (17 Misc. 43, 40 N. Y. Supp. 718)."

Federal Credit Unions are organized under the Federal Credit Union Act (June 26, 1934, c. 750, sec. 1, 48 Stat. 1216), and in section 17 of said act are authorized to act as fiscal agents of the United States when requested so to do by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Credit unions are cooperative associations operating for the purpose of promoting thrift and of creating a source of credit for worthwhile purposes for its members. Through their operation saving is made easy and convenient. Credit unions are non-commercial in the sense that there are no promotional profits and that all investors share alike in proportion to the number of shares they own. The statute prescribes that membership is limited to persons having a common bond of occupation or association. Thus, the Washington Home Owners' Loan Corporation Federal Credit Union is exclusively for employees of the agencies under the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. A credit union now operates in each of the Regional Offices, the Richmond State Office and the San Antonio District Office. It is expected that each of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation's State Offices will soon have a credit union established. There are now upwards of 5,000 credit unions in the United States, of which 1,800 are under Federal charter and supervision as made possible by the Federal Credit Union Act.

It is assumed that in all cases where this question would arise the credit union is limited solely to the employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board agencies.

R. N. Elliott, Acting Comptroller General of the United States, on November 3, 1936, held that in the absence of specific statutory authority therefor, the Postmaster General may not lease or provide free of charge vacant space in Federal post office buildings to private parties, private enterprises or commercial concerns and that the two credit unions occupying space in the Post Office Building at Oakland, California, which were incorporated under the laws of the State of California, were private enterprises.

As the credit unions are under the Federal Credit Union Act organized for the purpose of promoting thrift and creating a source of credit for its members who in the case of the Washington Home Owners' Loan Corporation Federal Credit Union are employees of agencies under the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, it seems that the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has authority under the act to incur expense for space and employees' time for the operation of a credit union which is organized and operated for the general benefit and relief of employees of agencies under it, and it also has authority under the act to incur expense for space and employees' time for reasonable assistance in connection with the organization and operation of a medical service for the general benefit of employees. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation has both authority under the act and implied authority as reasonably incident and necessary to the carrying out of the powers expressly granted in the act to incur expense for space and employees' time for the operation of a credit union which is organized and operated for the general benefit and relief of its employees and also to incur expense for space and employees' time for reasonable assistance in connection with the organization and relief of its employees and also to incur expense for space and employees' time for reasonable assistance in connection with the organization and operation of a medical service for the general benefit of its employees.

Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

DEAR SIRS:

I attach a proposed resolution authorizing a contract between Home Owners' Loan Corporation and Group Health Association, Incorporated, copy of which proposed contract is attached.

In my opinion, Home Owners' Loan Corporation has legal power to adopt such resolution and enter into such contract, if in the opinion of the Board of Directors the service to be rendered under the contract and the benefits to flow from the arrangements are necessary for the most efficient operation of the Corporation for the accomplishment of its purposes, and if in the opinion of the Board of Directors the price paid is a reasonable price.

I supplied Members of the Board and certain executives with a memorandum on this subject and a copy of the brief of the law on December 28, 1936, which provide a more adequate discussion, if you desire it.

Very truly yours, Horace Russell, General Counsel.

EXHIBIT F

Whereas, Home Owners' Loan Corporation desires to provide physical examination of applicants for employment, before employment, supervision of its present provisions for emergency treatment, and to cooperate in providing a substantially complete medical and hospital service to its employees and their families, all in the interest of the acquisition and maintenance of the highest possible type of personnel, which in the judgment of the Corporation is necessary for the accomplishment of the purposes of the Corporation, and

Whereas, Group Health Association, Incorporated, has been formed by certain employees of the Corporation to provide a substantially complete medical and hospital service, which is in positon to provide the service the Corporation requires, therefore, it is agreed as follows:

1. Group Health Association, Incorporated, agrees to provide a staff and service to provide a substantially complete medical and hospital service to employees of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation who are its members on substantially the basis outlined in the memorandum submitted to the Members of the Board by Mr. R. R. Zimmerman, dated March 1, 1937.

2. Group Health Association, Incorporated, further agree to provide at its headquarters at the request of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation physical examinations at the time of employment of all new employees in the Washington office.

3. Group Health Association, Incorporated, shall be required and agrees to manage and supervise the emergency rooms and the employees in the nursing service maintained in connection with such emergency treatment and in visitations to employees of the Washington office who are on sick leave.

4. Group Health Association, Incorporated, further agrees to provide bylaws satisfactory to the Corporation and to provide in its bylaws for two of its directors to be elected from nominations made by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, who shall be members of an executive committee of five.

5. In consideration of the foregoing, and all of the benefits to flow to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, as a result of the operation of Group Health Association, Incorporated, Home Owners' Loan Corporation agrees to pay $10,000 upon request, and beginning on the date of the establishment of its service the sum of $833.33 monthly in advance for a period of twelve months, and thereafter the sum of $1,666.67 per month for the succeeding twelve months.

6. It is further agreed that this contract shall remain in full force and effect for a period of two years from the date of the establishment of its service by the Group Health Association, Incorporated.

Authorized, entered into, executed and delivered by both parties as of the 22nd day of March, 1937.

EXHIBIT J

After discussion, the following resolution was adopted:

"WHEREAS on the 17th of March, 1937, Home Owners' Loan Corporation approved a contract with Group Health Association, Incorporated, by the provisions of which the Corporation agreed for its benefit to support the work of the Association through the first two years of its operation to the extent of $20,000 each year, and

WHEREAS it is now apparent that in order to secure at a reasonable rental appropriate quarters for the contemplated service of the Association it is necessary to expend several thousand dollars for alterations and prepare for occupancy on a five-year lease, and

WHEREAS in addition to the foregoing it is necessary for the Association to purchase several thousand dollars worth of professional equipment in which by obtaining favorable prices and substantial discounts it is necessary to make cash investments the totals of which were not adequately anticipated; Therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, That Home Owners' Loan Corporation, in order to provide for and make possible the economies contemplated in making building repairs and cash purchases, pay upon demand to Group Health Association, Incorporated, in addition to a $10,000 payment heretofore authorized on demand, the sum of $15,000 to be deducted from the payments to be made during the second year of the operation of Group Health Association, Incorporated, the remaining balance for such second year to be paid at the rate of $416.66 per month, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That Home Owners' Loan Corporation, in order to make use of its favorable buying power at government rates, purchase for cash at the maximum discounts supplies and equipment upon its regular voucher, approved by William F. Penniman, President of Group Health Association, Incorporated, at government contract rates, and deduct the amount paid for such equipment from the cash payment herein provided for, it being understood that the total purchases and cash payment will not exceed the total herein provided for."

Washington, D. C., December 2, 1937.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct excerpt from the Minutes of a Meeting of the Board of Directors of Home Owners' Loan Corporation held on August 10, 1937.

EXHIBIT K

"WHEREAS on March 17, 1937, Home Owners' Loan Corporation approved a contract with Group Health Association, Inc., providing for certain payments for health service, and

WHEREAS in equipping itself for the rendition of such service Group Health Association requires advance payment of some of the funds contracted to be paid and it appears to the interest of the Corporation to make such advance payment in order to facilitate the service to be rendered; Therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, That Home Owners' Loan Corporation, in addition to the payment under said contract heretofore authorized, does now authorize the payment of $5000 in cash upon demand in lieu of payments to be made under said contract for the second year of operation and the adjustment of the same made by resolution of August 10, 1937."

Washington, D. C., December 2, 1937.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors, Home Owners' Loan Corporation, September 9, 1937.

EXHIBIT M

November 16, 1937.

Federal Home Loan Bank Board,

DEAR SIRS:

I find that Group Health Association, Incorporated, has agreed to submit any amendment of its bylaws to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for approval, and the attached amended bylaws are submitted for such approval.

The by-laws were amended by re-enactment in the attached form. Such amendment was necessitated to strengthen the legal position of the association. The original bylaws provided for payment of cash indemnities upon certain contingencies, such as hospitalization outside of the area of its operations, and such provision would have made it an insurance organization. These revised bylaws provide for it to secure doctors and provide hospital rooms and service for members to the extent of its available funds as limited in the bylaws, but do not provide for the payment of any cash indemnity at all. There is no change of substance but merely a change of the legal nature of the contract in this respect. The original bylaws permitted membership after separation from the Federal Service. This revision excludes membership except in the case of employees of the executive branch of the Government, excluding the Army and the Navy, and this provision is made to assure us the benefit of an exception from insurance regulations, if we are held to be an insurance company.

While there are changes at a number of places in the bylaws, all of these are intended to strengthen the legal position of the association, and none of them seem to the Board of Trustees to be of any substance. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board is requested officially to approve the revised bylaws.

Very truly yours,

Horace Russell, General Counsel.

Defendants offered that portion of H. R. No. 1662 of the House of Representatives appearing on page 16 thereof, marked Def. Ex. 20, reading as follows:

"Mr. Woodrum, for the Committee on Appropriations, submitted the following report:

" 'Group Health Association contribution, Home Owners' Loan Corporation—Entirely irrespective of the merits of the work proposed to be done under the Group Health Association, for which the Home Owners' Loan Corporation recently made a contribution of $40,000, the committee is of the unanimous opinion that the expenditure was not one authorized by any law and that such expenditures should not hereafter be made without specific legal authority."

Defendants offered in evidence the complaint in Equity Cause No. 66293 in the District Court, marked Def. Ex. 58 as follows:

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA HOLDING AN EQUITY COURT

In Equity. No. 66392

GROUP HEALTH ASSOCIATION, a Corporation, Fed. Home Loan Bank Bldg., Plaintiff,

v.

J. BACH MOOR, Superintendent of Insurance for the District of Columbia, and David A. Pine, Acting United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia, Defendants

Petition for Declaratory Decree

Plaintiff, for its cause of action, states:

1. That it is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of said District of Columbia, with its place of business in the City of Washington, District of Columbia.

2. That defendant, J. Bach Moore, is Superintendent of Insurance for the District of Columbia, and defendant, David A. Pine, is Acting United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia, both with offices located in said District of Columbia.

3. That on February 24, 1937, plaintiff was duly incorporated as a non-profit mutual improvement society in the District of Columbia, pursuant to Section 121, Chapter 5, Title 5 of the Code of the said District. Copies of the Certificate of Incorporation with Amendments and the By-Laws of said corporation are hereto attached and made a part hereof and for identification marked Plaintiff's Exhibits "A" and "B", respectively.

4. That the membership in plaintiff corporation is composed solely of employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, affiliated groups and of other civil employees of the executive branch of the United States Government in the City of Washington, District of Columbia. Such employment is a prerequisite to membership in plaintiff corporation and termination of such employment automatically terminates membership therein. Membership is wholly voluntary and may be terminated by any member, at any time, upon the giving of one month's notice to plaintiff.

5. That the purpose of plaintiff corporation is as stated in its Certificate of Incorporation, as follows:

"To provide, without profit to the corporation, for the service of physicians and other medical attention and any and all kinds of medical, surgical and hospital treatment to the members hereof and their dependents, and the construction and operation of a clinic and medical office building; and the construction and operation of a hospital in the manner permitted by law, for the members hereof and their dependents, and the operation of a drug store or pharmacy, and the providing of nurses and of drugs and remedies for the members hereof and their dependents, and the furnishing of all forms of hospital service and attention to the members hereof and their dependents, and in general the giving to the membership of this association and their dependents of all forms of care, treatment or attention that may be required by the sick or in the prevention of disease."

6. That plaintiff has, on behalf of its members, expended the sum of approximately twenty-five thousand ($25,000.00) dollars in setting up and equipping a modern clinic for the said members at 1328 Eye Street, Northwest, in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, and has, on behalf of its members, retained physicians, duly licensed in the District of Columbia, on salary to serve its members at that address, at hospitals, and at the homes of such members.

7. That oral contracts, on behalf of its members, have been entered into by plaintiff with the physicians aforesaid. A draft of the written contracts proposed to be entered into has been forwarded to the Medical Society of the District of Columbia for approval, and a specimen copy of such contracts is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and marked Exhibit "C" for identification.

8. That plaintiff, on behalf of its members, has arranged hospitalization for its members in various hospitals operating in the District of Columbia so that its members may receive adequate service at all times, for which the corporation pays.

9. That plaintiff, through said practitioners and institutions with whom it has made arrangements, as aforesaid, has, since November 1, 1937, made available the following services to its members, in accordance with Article 10, Section 1 of its by-laws, to-wit:

"Medical and surgical examinations and treatments, including examinations in special departments, such as refractions of eyes, laboratory tests, x-ray examinations, surgical operations, confinement cases and professional consultations, nursing and ambulance facilities, house calls, and hospitalization in a semi-private room (two-bed room) or a private room, limited in either case to a period not to exceed 21 days for any one illness; provided, however, that each member desiring to occupy a private room shall reimburse the corporation for so much of the cost of such room as shall exceed the sum of $4.00 per day; provided, further, that such member shall make such payments to assure such reimbursement as the corporation shall require, and provided, that the benefits provided outside of the territory of the association shall be limited to the provision of a hospital room for the time and as is herein provided.

"The extent that medical service relating to the foregoing items will be furnished to members shall be determined and prescribed by the Medical Director or his representatives in each individual case."

10. That members of the plaintiff corporation pay for the said services arranged for by said plaintiff, as aforesaid, a fixed sum per month, there being two types of membership, namely, individual membership at two dollars and twenty cents ($2.20) per month, and a membership of three dollars and thirty cents ($3.30) per month which entitles a member to said services for himself and his listed dependents as outlined in plaintiff's by-laws.

11. That the business of plaintiff is managed by a Board of Trustees composed of eleven members thereof elected by the members of the plaintiff corporation in accordance with its by-laws, but the physicians employed by it on a salary basis and compensated out of the dues paid into the corporation by its members, are, under the direction of a Medical Director, a physician duly licensed in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, completely in charge of all medical attention given or necessary to be given to the individual members of plaintiff corporation and their dependents; that plaintiff is a non-profit corporation, organized and controlled by its members, who, in order to procure for themselves and their dependents adequate medical care, are simply cooperating, in corporate form, to that end.

12. That on or about January 15, 1938, notice was given by the defendant, David A. Pine, Acting United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia, to the plaintiff that, unless operations were immediately suspended and the affairs of the plaintiff were wound up, a bill for injunction or legal proceedings looking to the involuntary dissolution of the plaintiff corporation would be brought against the plaintiff on the ground that it, said plaintiff, is illegally engaged in the practice of medicine, as the same is defined by the Healing Arts Practice Act in the District of Columbia, and is illegally engaged in the insurance business within the meaning of Title 5, Chapter 7, Section 179 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia.

13. That on or about January 15, 1938, notice was given by the defendant, J. Bach Moor, Superintendent of Insurance for the District of Columbia, to the plaintiff that it, said plaintiff, is improperly incorporated under the laws of the District; that it is illegally engaged in the insurance business within the meaning of Section 179, Chapter 7, Title 5 of the Code of the District of Columbia; that it must reincorporate as an insurance company and comply with all provisions of the laws of the District of Columbia as to reserves, etc., applicable to such insurance companies, and that, unless these demands are immediately satisfied by said plaintiff, injunctive or other available legal proceedings will be brought to end the operations of said plaintiff.

14. That said plaintiff denies such charge in every particular and specifically denies that it in any sense practices medicine, illegally or otherwise, under said Healing Arts Practice Act of the District of Columbia, and in no manner commercializes the practice of medicine in contravention of law or public policy; it further specifically denies that it is engaged in the insurance business in the District of Columbia and further denies that it must in any way comply with insurance laws of the District of Columbia, and states that it makes no payments of indemnity and insures against no hazard or peril. Plaintiff alleges that in threatening the actions aforesaid the defendants are acting beyond the scope of their legal authority, and plaintiff refuses to comply with the demands of said defendants, or either of them, that is, the plaintiff, suspend its operations or comply with further demands of said defendants, or either of them.

15. That, if defendants take the action threatened, plaintiff will be irreparably injured; its business, its peace, and its freedom in the operation thereof, will be interfered with; that such action, if taken, threatens a valuable property right and franchise, raises doubt, insecurity in plaintiff's operation of its business, impairs and jeopardizes its business, property rights and franchise, and threatens the investment in equipment heretofore made by plaintiff, as hereinabove more fully described.

16. That, by reason of each and all the facts aforesaid, plaintiff's only remedy, in order to avoid suffering irreparable damage by reason of the action that is impending on the part of the said defendants, is to bring suit in Equity, praying a declaratory judgment or decree upon the part of this Court relative to the actual controversies hereinabove set out, and a declaration of the rights and other legal relations of the parties hereto with reference to the validity of Group Health Association, Incorporated.

Wherefore, plaintiff prays that this Court render a declaratory decree or judgment, defining the status of Group Health Association, Incorporated, and declaring the same to be in no sense illegally or otherwise engaged in the practice of medicine or engaged in an insurance business, that this Court render a declaratory judgment that, under the correct construction of the insurance statutes of the District of Columbia and the Healing Arts Practice Act of the District of Columbia, the plaintiff is entitled to continue its operations; that defendants, or either of them, are without authority to prohibit or interfere with the legal operations of plaintiff; and that the Court grant to plaintiff such other and further relief as justice may require, or to the Court may seem meet and proper in the premises.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 2474

IRENE KRAMER, 3505 14th Street N. W., Washington, D. C. Plaintiff,

v.

GROUP HEALTH ASSOCIATION, INC., a Body Corporate, 1427 Eye Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C.

and

RICHARD H. PRICE, 1328 Eye Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., Defendants

Complaint

(for damages for malpractice and negligence)

1. The Plaintiff, Irene Kramer, a resident and citizen of the District of Columbia, sues the defendants, Group Health Association, Inc., a body corporate doing business in the District of Columbia, and Richard H. Price, a doctor of medicine practicing in the District of Columbia, for damages for personal injuries she sustained as a result of defendants' negligence in their prescription and administration of certain medical treatments hereinafter more particularly described. The plaintiff was, on the dates of the grievances herein complained of, a member of defendant incorporated association and has performed all the necessary conditions before bringing this suit and has exhausted to no avail all her legal remedies within the said corporation as provided by the by-laws thereof.

2. The Group Health Association, Inc., and Richard H. Price are sued herein as co-defendants and plaintiff says that all acts complained of herein which were committed by any of their agents and/or employees upon the premises were committed with the knowledge, consent, approval and direction of both defendants, and that the defendant Price was at the times and places of all the grievances herein complained of in the employment of the technical, diagnostic, and all other medical services to members of said corporate defendant in need thereof, including the said plaintiff, for which the defendant Price was paid a salary by the corporate defendant.

3. In the early part of October, 1938, plaintiff visited the clinic of the corporate defendant and consulted with defendant Price about a certain skin irritation on the back of her neck. The defendant Price recommended and arranged for ultra-violet ray lamp treatments and thereafter, until the week of December 26, 1938, plaintiff received, at said clinic, these ultra-violet ray treatments at the rate of twice each week.

4. During the week of to-wit December 26th, 1938, defendant Price recommended and arranged for a "cold quartz" ray treatment for plaintiff and which treatment was given plaintiff at said clinic. On to-wit December 30th, 1938, plaintiff, at the instructions of defendant Price, was given another such treatment.

5. There was then and there, from the date of first treatment, to the date of last treatment, to-wit, December 30, 1938, a duty upon the said defendants, their employees and/or agents, to exercise great care, prudence, skill and science in the treatment of all members of the corporate defendant including said plaintiff, but nevertheless, in violation and breach of said duty, the defendant Price and the employees and/or agents of said defendants negligently and carelessly prescribed and administered the above-mentioned treatments and plaintiff says that defendants were negligent not only in the prescription of the method of treatment but also in the administration of such treatment, in that, to-wit, the use of the cold-quartz lamp used twice during the week of December 26, 1938, was negligent, careless and incorrect both in the period of time during which plaintiff was exposed to the rays thereof and also in the distance said lamp was placed by defendants from the plaintiff, and also in the mere use of such lamp for such ailment.

6. That as a result of defendants' negligent and careless acts as aforesaid, plaintiff, on to-wit December 30, 1938, suffered a severe burn of the skin of her face, neck, shoulders and both arms, and was rendered severely ill in great pain and agony and was compelled to remain confined in bed and at home for a long period of time, to-wit, from December 31, 1938, to February 2, 1939, during which time she lost much sleep because of the intense pain as aforesaid and was unable to attend to her ordinary and usual affairs and during that time she was compelled to remain home from work at her position in the Home Owners Loan Corporation where she was employed as a stenographer at the salary of $32.50 per week.

7. Because of the injuries received as aforesaid, plaintiff became obligated to spend certain sums of money for medical attention and services rendered and will be compelled to continue such expenditures in attempting to cure the aforesaid injuries, all of which is estimated as follows:

Medical expenses to date	$70.00
" " future estim.	70.00
Loss of earnings	130.00
Pain & suffering, etc.	4,730.00
Total	$5,000.00

8. Plaintiff anticipates that defendants will defend this action in part on the ground that plaintiff was allergic to the above-described treatments, and plaintiff says that defendants have never made any proper dermatological or other proper tests to ascertain such condition and plaintiff further says she was not on the dates of said treatments allergic thereto.

Therefore, plaintiff claims judgment against Richard H. Price or against Group Health Association, Inc., or against both defendants in the sum of $5,000.00, besides costs.

635 F Street N. W. Rep. 3380.

Jury Demand: Plaintiff demands jury trial of all issues herein involved.

No. 6436

BEATRICE KENNEDY, Executrix Under the Last Will and Testament of Monte R. Kennedy, Deceased, 6701 44th Street, Chevy Chase, Maryland, Plaintiff, v.

GROUP HEALTH ASSOCIATION, INC., a Corporation, 1427 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

LOUIS B. BACHRACH, Farragut Medical Building, Washington, D. C.

CHARLES J. ALBRIGHT, % Group Health Association, Inc., 1427 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

GERALD LONG, % Group Health Association, Inc., 1427 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., Defendants

Complaint for $10,000.00 Damages by Reason of Death by Wrongful Act

1. This is a suit for damages in the amount of $10,000.00 on a claim of death by wrongful act.

2. That prior to the 6th day of August, 1939, plaintiff's intestate became and was a member of Group Health Association, Inc., a corporation duly organized under the laws of the District of Columbia. That by virtue of his membership in said Association, plaintiff's intestate was entitled to receive, and said defendant, Grou Health Association, Inc., agreed to provide, certain medical and surgical care and attention, including hospital, medical and nursing services incident thereto should plaintiff's intestate be in need thereof.

3. That on, to wit, the 6th day of August, 1939, plaintiff's intestate became ill and in accordance with the agreement aforesaid, applied to the said defendant, Group Health Association, Inc., for medical care and attention in accordance with the agreement aforesaid; that at that time plaintiff's intestate was suffering from an illness or ailment which required immediate medical care and attention. That defendant, Group Health Association, Inc., undertook to furnish said medical care and attention in accordance with its agreement aforesaid, and in doing so, negligently and carelessly provided such medical care and attention; that it furnished incompetent medical care and attention; that it supplied or furnished the services of the defendant, Charles J. Albright and the defendant, Gerald Long, both regularly employed by said defendant, Group Health Association, Inc., as physicians or surgeons; that the defendant Dr. Albright and Dr. Long, as agents, servants and employees of the defendant, Group Health Association, Inc., negligently and carelessly diagnosed intestate's ailment or illness, and negligently and carelessly failed to enter said intestate in a hospital as was necessary in order to provide for proper and immediate surgical care and attention and negligently and carelessly prescribed for or otherwise professionally treated said intestate; that on, to wit, August 7, 1939, when the said defendant, Group Health Association, Inc., did enter said intestate in a hospital it supplied and provided the services of the defendant, Louis B. Bachrach and that said defendant, Bachrach negligently and carelessly diagnosed intestate's ailment or illness and negligently and carelessly failed to operate on plaintiff's intestate at a proper time and negligently and carelessly treated plaintiff's intestate during said illness or ailment.

4. As a result thereof plaintiff's intestate languished and died.

5. Plaintiff's intestate left surviving him his widow, Beatrice Kennedy, and the following children: Evelyn Lee

Jane Kennedy, Richard Clark Kennedy and Monte Ray Kennedy, Jr., who are his next of kin and who are entitled to have maintained on their behalf this action for death by wrongful act in accordance with the statute made and provided.

Wherefore, the plaintiff demands judgment against Group Health Association, Inc., Louis B. Bachrach, Charles J. Albright, and Gerald Long, or against each of them, in the sum of $10,000.00 and costs.

Answer of Defendant, Louis B. Bachrach

Defense Number 1

1. For answer to the complaint filed herein, the defendant, Louis B. Bachrach, says that the plaintiff fails to state grounds upon which relief can be granted.

Defense Number 2

1. For further answer to complaint filed herein against him, the defendant, Louis B. Bachrach, says that he has no knowledge of any contractual relation existing between plaintiff's deceased husband and Group Health Association, Inc.

2. He denies that the defendant, Group Health Association, Inc., supplied and provided the services of this defendant to the plaintiff's deceased husband, but says that Dr. Gerald Long called him to render surgical services, if needed, to the said plaintiff's deceased husband.

3. This defendant denies that he was negligent as alleged in said complaint.

4. This defendant denies paragraph 4 of the plaintiff's complaint.

5. This defendant has no knowledge of the allegations contained in paragraph 5 of said complaint and can therefore neither admit nor deny the same.

Answer of Defendants Charles J. Albright and Gerald Long

Defense No. 1

The complaint fails to state grounds upon which relief can be granted against these defendants.

Defense No. 2

1. These defendants state that they are without sufficient knowledge or information to enable them either to admit or deny the allegations of paragraph 2 of the complaint.

2. They admit that plaintiff's decedent became ill on August 6, 1939 and state promptly upon having the fact brought to their attention they rendered him necessary medical care and attention. They deny that they negligently and carelessly provided such medical care and attention, or that such care and attention was incompetent, and state that they were then physicians duly licensed to practice their profession in the District of Columbia. They deny that they or either of them were agents or servants of Group Health Association, Inc., and state they were independent contractors under the terms of their respective contracts with said association. They deny that they or either of them negligently and carelessly diagnosed the illness of plaintiff's decedent, or negligently and carelessly failed to enter plaintiff's decedent in a hospital in order to provide for proper and immediate surgical care and attention, or negligently and carelessly prescribed for or otherwise treated said decedent. They deny that the services of the defendant, Louis B. Bachrach were supplied and provided by Group Health Association, Inc., and state that said Gerald Long in his professional capacity and as such independent contractor engaged the services of said Bachrach. They deny that the defendant, Louis B. Bachrach was negligent as alleged in paragraph 3 of the complaint.

3. They deny the allegations of paragraph 4.

4. They are without sufficient knowledge or information to enable them to either admit or deny the allegations of paragraph 5 of the complaint.

Answer of Group Health Association, Incorporated

Defense Number 1

The complaint fails to state a claim against this defendant upon which relief can be granted.

Defense Number 2

1. This defendant admits that prior to August 6, 1939, plaintiff's decedent became and was a member of Group Health Association, Inc.; but it denies that by virtue of said membership it agreed unqualifiedly to provide him medical, surgical and other service; as alleged in the complaint. On the contrary it states that the undertaking of this defendant with plaintiff's decedent, as constituted by the by-laws of said Association, was that in consideration of certain dues paid by him to it (1) it would enter into contracts for and on his behalf with physicians duly licensed to practice their profession in the District of Columbia to render such medical and surgical care and attention as might be needed by him and as described in and limited by said by-laws; (2) that it would not regulate or supervise the practice of medicine by any physician with whom it contracted on his behalf, or supervise, regulate or interfere with the usual professional relationship existing between him and such physician; (3) that it did not guarantee that it would provide any or all of the services for which it would attempt to contract on his behalf; (4) that it would not be liable to him in any manner whatever if it should be unable for any reason to procure any or all of said services when called upon to do so; (5) that it did not guarantee that any physician with whom it might enter into a contract to render such service on his behalf would perform such contract or perform it properly; (6) that its only obligation in the event of the breach of such contract by any physician was, on his request, to use its best efforts to procure the needed services from another source; (7) and that it would not be liable to him for any act of omission or commission on the part of any physician with whom it might contract for the rendering of services to him.

2. This defendant admits that plaintiff's decedent became ill on August 6th, 1939, and states that promptly upon his request it provided him with necessary medical care and attention according to its undertaking. It denies that it negligently and carelessly provided such medical care and attention; or furnished incompetent medical care and attention. On the contrary it states that it furnished the services of the defendants, Charles J. Albright and Gerald Long, both of whom were then physicians duly licensed to practice their profession in the District of Columbia. It denies either of the said physicians was the agent or servant of this defendant, but alleges that both of them in their relationship to this defendant and plaintiff's decedent were independent contractors under the terms of their respective contracts with this defendant; that it denies that either of said physicians negligently and carelessly diagnosed the illness of plaintiff's decedent, or negligently and carelessly failed to enter plaintiff's decedent in a hospital in order to provide proper and immediate surgical care and attention, or that either of them negligently and carelessly prescribed for or otherwise professionally treated plaintiff's decedent; and that it denies that it provided the services of the defendant, Louis B. Bachrach, but states that said Gerald Long in his professional capacity and as such independent contractor engaged said Bachrach and this defendant denies that said Bachrach was negligent as alleged in the complaint.

3. It denies the allegations of paragraph 4 of the complaint.

4. It is without sufficient knowledge or information to enable it either to admit or deny the allegations of paragraph 5 of the complaint.

James Sherier, 910 17th St., N. W., Washington, D. C., and E. K. Neuman, 1422 K St., N. W., Washington, D. C., Attorneys for Defendant.

Service of copy of the foregoing Answer made upon Henry I. Quinn and Austin F. Canfield, attorneys for plaintiff by mailing same to them at their address, 637, Woodward Building, Washington, D. C. this 29th day of May, 1940.

James Sherier, Attorney for Defendant.

Mr. Richardson: Has your Honor as yet announced any ruling on the question held in abeyance, as to whether evidence would be admitted to show that subsidies were granted to GHA with the knowledge of the defendants?

The Court: My statement is that I have reached my conclusion and do not consider the evidence admissible; therefore, I sustain the Government's objection to that line of evidence. I might briefly indicate my reasons, which are two-fold.

First, I do not regard the financial and economic affairs of GHA as material to the issues of the case; secondly, as to its bearing upon the question of the Medical Society's approving GHA, there is nothing to show that at the time of any action by the Medical Society, or any of its committee or representatives, they knew of any subsidy or financial assistance being given by these organizations. Hence, it could not in any wise enter into their considerations.

So far as the evidence now shows, there is nothing to indicate that the defendants knew anything of these alleged subsidies up until the time that the evidence was produced here.

Mr. Richardson: I feel I should say part of our offer is to prove knowledge.

The Court: Where would it go back to?

Mr. Richardson: In the first place, the evidence in the record as it stands now is replete with statements from the very start that this thing was financed by the Twentieth Century Fund.

The Court: The evidence shows that there was no financial assistance given to them until August, 1938.

Mr. Lewin: That is right.

The Court: How do you reconcile that? You don't claim that they gave them any financial assistance, do you—any of those organizations?

Mr. Richardson: Oh, yes, because we have the evidence of Mr. Rickcord, who was the man who actually set it up. They paid his full salary from December 1, 1936. He was instrumental in setting it up. They paid his office rent, paid his clerks. They paid his rent for the administrative offices of GHA.

The Court: I may not have a correct understanding of that. I do recall that there was testimony of one of the doctors in the early stages of the matter that indicated that Mr. Rickcord had something to do with it.

Mr. Lewin: I think it is in evidence that he talked to Mr. Rickcord generally about the plan.

The Court: I will put my decision upon a broad basis, and that is the first ground.

The second ground is put as secondary, and I thought I was correct in my understanding of it.

I do recall that there is something in the evidence—I think it came out in the Government's evidence, perhaps, showing losses—indicating what may be termed a suspicion that the Filene Fund was back of it; but when you take your offer of evidence now, which indicates that no actual financial assistance was given, no actual support to the organization itself after it got started was given until August, 1938, I do not see how that could bear upon anything that was done by the defendants previous to that time.

Mr. Burke: In the annual report of the Twentieth Century Fund, which Mr. Brown identified, it is set forth that from December 1, 1936, they contributed financially and were instrumental——

The Court: I do not think it is material. I think the first ground is inclusive.

Then, of course, I have always had this in mind, with reference to this so-called matter of approval by the Medical Society. I think the Medical Society had a right to approve or disapprove as it pleased, if it saw fit.

Mr. Richardson: I wonder whether that might not have to be urged here.

The Court: They had the same right to approve or disapprove as I would have or anyone else would have. Now, if their action went no further than disapproval, that was not conspiracy; if it went further—if disapproval was supported by affirmative action in the nature of a conspiracy to do things to restrain, then you would have a conspiracy. But mere disapproval is merely the exercise of one's right to think and to say what he thinks, and that does not involve conspiracy. It may be a motive for conspiracy, don't you see, but of itself it is not conspiracy.

Mr. Richardson: The reason for it would not be an issue in your mind?

The Court: It is only evidence as showing motive, as showing background. It is just the same as though one of us went out and shot somebody. Evidence of dislike or personal animosity toward that person is evidence of motive.

Mr. Richardson: The only thing we are exercised about is that we fear we are going to be severely catechized as to the reasons why we disapproved, and we feel that we are shut out, on our side, from showing the reasons why we did disapprove.

The Court: I think you have that proof in, and also the documentary evidence.

I may say, so that there will be no misunderstanding about it, that I do not think, in view of my keeping out this evidence, which I consider immaterial upon the ground that I think the financial structure of GHA is irrelevant, that anything should be argued by the Government that they were a financially stable, sound concern. If you are going to make an argument of that sort on the one hand, then, of course it is going to open up the question.

Mr. Kelleher: I am sure we have no intention of doing that.

The Court: I do not see any ground now on which you would be justified in making any such observations, for the simple reason, as I say, that I consider it immaterial. But if you are, it might create an embarrassing situation, and I might have to reveal the fact, or the defendants might, that this evidence here indicating need of financial help was offered and was rejected by me.

I have known in this Court of breaks of that sort to be made in argument, and the Courts have re-opened the case to let in the evidence.

Mr. Richardson: We have some doubt as to whether the offer of proof should not be re-drawn and be amplified, unless the Government is willing that the record should show by stipulation that no point is made as to the form of the offer and that the Government does not make any point that we have not called the witnesses or produced the documents and, under oath, attempted to elicit the testimony.

The Court: I understood we had all agreed upon that, that we were not going through the useless formality of producing witnesses. When you made your written offer to prove these things, we all accepted the assurance that the witnesses would be available and that testimony could be offered tending to prove it. In making my ruling I assumed that such proof was available.

Mr. Lewin: We are in agreement with that statement, when you couple your offer with your oral statements in answer to the Court's inquiries.

The Court: I made a little note of that. I thought that was necessary. I noticed the same thing that you were speaking of when I was writing my memorandum. You will recall that at the bottom of it, in order to protect myself, there is this paragraph (reading):

"The offer of proof, as I have treated it, is the written paper filed March 14, 1941, as orally amended, revised and explained by counsel for the defendants. Many of the documentary items contained in the written offer are already in evidence. They can be dealt with later in keeping with this decision."

Certainly I will protect you in any way that is necessary.

Mr. Richardson: I did not want to be met with the idea that there had been some technical failure to complete the offer.

There is one further thing that ought to be fixed up. A number of these papers that were turned over to the court were already in evidence, such as the regulations and by-laws. The contract with H. O. L. C. and such contract as there was between Group Health Association and its members have never in fact been offered in evidence. It might be well to have a stipulation that they can be put in the record and then be objected to——

The Court: They should all be in.

Mr. Richardson: And then be ruled out?

The Court: They are ruled out under this. I have assumed you had them available. Of course, for purposes of the record, if the case should go up on appeal, they should be identified in the record, so that you would have them in if you should ever need to appeal, you see.

Mr. Richardson: Would there be any difficulty in taking the H. O. L. C. decision and these other various documents and having you identify them, satisfying yourself that they are the papers, and then have us offer them and have them ruled out under this?

The Court: They are offered in your offer of proof, but they are not identified in the record.

Mr. Richardson: Oh, yes. You mean, given an exhibit number.

Mr. Lewin: Just give them a number and state that they are the ones.

The Court: So that finally, if you should ever have to go up, in making up your record you will have those papers. It would be a matter of identification, now, because I have treated them in the offer when I considered them. You two can get together on that and just identify them and have the stenographer mark them in any way you say they should be marked, defendants' exhibit so and so far identification. If you want to, you can put on it "Part of the proof in defendants' offer of proof of March 12," or whatever date it was.

Mr. Richardson: I suppose the offer of proof itself ought to be in.

Mr. Kelleher: I think it is in.

Mr. Richardson: It is not in the transcript. It ought to be in the transcript.

The Court: You may have it copied in, if you wish.

Mr. Laskey: Is it not a mere matter of identifying the particular pamphlets and papers that you ruled on?

The Court: Exactly so. If you want to you can add to the identification that it is one of the documents contained in the offer of proof, as a further identification. That offer of proof is actually filed.

Mr. Burke: Would it be all right to put it into the transcript?

The Court: Surely. Anything you want to pay for can go into the transcript.

Mr. Lewin: In reference to the things already in evidence that touch on that point, I understand that your Honor's ruling that that subject was immaterial would go to such matters as are already in the record that would support it, and that it could not be argued to the jury?

The Court: Yes. Of course those things that were admitted may bear upon other questions.

Mr. Lewin: Yes. I think there were letters that had things in them that were admissible, and then another paragraph about something else.

The Court: That is what I mean when I say they may be dealt with in the future as circumstances may require.

Mr. Lewin: This is the point I want to make. I was concerned with your Honor's observation about argument. We cannot expect defense counsel to urge illegality as justification by referring to what was in the record to support it.

The Court: No, because if they did I would simply have to rule them out of order.

Mr. Burke: In considering that offer of proof you said that this went in and that went in, and others were under consideration. I take it you meant by that that the things you indicated you wanted in evidence, for instance, the contract——.

The Court: This (indicating) is the defendants' offer of proof. I referred to it as such in my memorandum which was filed March 14. When I looked at this overnight I saw that some of these things were in, but I wanted to be sure that all were before me which were necessary for me to consider, so that whatever ruling I made would be supported by the offer, you see. In arriving at my conclusions they are before me, and they are not before the jury. I assume them to be true for the purposes of my ruling. So I went over this and we agreed that this and that were in, and this was to be in. In other words, it was not in but it was to be in. One of them I have marked with a question mark.

Mr. Richardson: I think we understand it perfectly now.

Mr. Burke: I asked your Honor whether you intended that the contract of H.O.L.C. should be read in evidence or not.

The Court: No; I am excluding it. It is not to be read in evidence.

Mr. Richardson: It is to be offered as an exhibit and numbered, and then ruled out.

The Court: It is to be marked Defendants' No. so and so for identification.

Mr. Richardson: So that we will know what instrument ties up with the offer of proof.

The Court: And then this general ruling of mine will exclude it. If it is already in it will stay in to be dealt with appropriately later. If it is in, it is on some other ground. I think we understand each other. If you have not got an understanding about it I will clarify it.[8]

The objections of the United States to all of the foregoing offers and re-offers of proof of the defendants (pages 1363-1435 supra) were sustained, and all of the foregoing offers and re-offers of proof were rejected by the Court with an exception to the defendants.

REBUTTAL TESTIMONY ON BEHALF OF THE UNITED STATES

MRS. CHARLES HARDIN, a Witness for the Government.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Kelleher:

On June 19, 1938, my husband became sick with appendicitis, and Dr. Solet was called by me. Mr. Hardin was taken to the hospital and operated on. When Dr. Solet came into the house I had a conversation with him concerning Group Health, and he said Group Health doctors were not permitted to operate in the hospitals and therefore suggested calling another surgeon, to prevent a waste of time. I said we were members of Group Health, and we wanted to know about who should operate. Dr. Solet suggested Dr. Bachrach. When Dr. Bachrach came, Dr. Solet said, "These people are members of Group Health, but I have told them Group Health doctors are not permitted to operate."

And Dr. Bachrach said, "That is right."

[8] (The Court's written opinion covering similar offers and referred to by the Court, herein appears, pages 945-948, supra.)

I conducted negotiations with Dr. Solet about Dr. Bachrach coming in and seeing the patient. My husband did not participate in them at all, other than he said whatever I said was all right, and whatever occurred that evening there with Dr. Solet and Dr. Bachrach was done in my presence.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I remember that Dr. Solet mentioned some other names of several doctors, but I only recall Cafritz at this time. Others were mentioned, two others.

DR. MARIO SCANDIFFIO, a Witness for the Government.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Kelleher:

My present position is that of medical director of Group Health. I am a doctor of medicine. I received my medical degree from George Washington University in 1928 and spent three years of internship and residency at the New York Post Graduate School and Hospital, and since then I have been in private practice in pediatrics. I joined Group Health on November 1, 1937, as a pediatrician. Dr. Henry Brown was medical director when I came.

It was customary during 1938 for the Group Health clinic to keep records of the number of patients seen by doctors on the staff. Each doctor listed his patients "seen" in a book. From this book daily and monthly summaries were made by the clerical staff. Those records are under my control now as medical director. I have the monthly summaries showing treatments by Dr. Richard Price. I have all the daily summaries, except the month of September, 1938, which is missing. All records, both daily and monthly, of that month are completely missing. I have a daily record showing the treatments of Dr. Price for the rest of the year 1938—that is, with the exception of about 13 days throughout the year, for which I could not find any records.

The largest number of patients seen by Dr. Price in one day as shown by these records, was 51. The next highest number grades down to 34. There are exactly 17 days out of the entire year 1938 when Dr. Price saw more than 34 patients a day: that is, had 34 names of patients listed in his record; and outside of the 18 days during that period Dr. Price saw less than 34 patients a day. The average number of patients listed in Dr. Price's record for the entire year of 1938 was 18. The list of patients seen usually included, and did include with the exception of Dr. Price, those patients seen in the office, home, or hospital each day. I mean by the exception that Dr. Price listed in his record telephonic conversations, the names of patients who accosted him in the hall, and the names of patients who received services from him such as injections, interpretation of X-ray plates, fluoroscopic examinations, and X-ray skin treatments performed by Mrs. Davis, the X-ray technician, under his supervision.

Dr. Price took an average of one to two minutes for an ordinary chest and skeleton interpretation of an X-ray and an average of about five minutes for a gastro-intestinal series and gall bladder series. Dr. Price did not spend more than two minutes per patient on skin treatments; that is, administering X-ray dosages. The actual time spent by him was just a fraction of a second. The preparatory work was done by the X-ray technician. The average time spent in fluoroscopic examinations wasn't more than five minutes, and that includes preparation of the patient. The actual examination was probably less than one minute.

The monthly averages of Dr. Selders while Dr. Brown was medical director were 533 in January, 481 in February. Dr. Selders' daily average was 20 a day.

Dr. Hulburt in January saw 644 patients and in February 428 patients. His average for the day was 22.

Dr. Price in January saw 333 patients and in February 375 patients. His average was 15 a day.

There was no time during those two months, January and February of 1938, when any doctor in the clinic treated as many as 60 patients. Daily and monthly summaries of patients seen by various doctors in the clinic were kept in November and December, but they were only the total summary of patients seen.

While I was with GHA from November, 1937, until December, 1938, in my view Group Health most certainly supplied its members with adequate medical care, because we could give the patient better and more adequate medical care than we could as private practitioners.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I have the report for the patients treated from November 1, 1937, to May 31, 1938, and the summarization thereon is made from the records the clinic kept. And during that time we had on our staff Dr. Selders, Dr. Price, Dr. Scandiffio, Dr. Cahoon, and Dr. Dabney, although I am not certain about Dr. Dabney; Dr. Montgomery came in February, and the same applies for Dr. Edgington. Dr. Chase came in March. Dr. Marshall was only with us a day or two. Dr. Richardson was there from January through July, 1938. Dr. Cahoon came on at the time Dr. Hulburt resigned.

In the period from November 1, 1937, to May 1, 1938, the report shows that Group Health treated 19,130 patients. The report shows that the number of patients in the clinic was 19,130 for that period of time. The 19,000 and some odd included medical care, surgical, eye, ear, nose, and throat, pediatrics, obstetrics, also laboratory tests, physiotherapy treatments, basal metabolism, electric treatments, cardiographs, X-rays, and fluoroscopic examinations.

It shows that, and it is broken down into 6,218 medical cases, 2,443 surgical cases, 2,770 eye, nose, and throat cases, 2,179 pediatrics cases, 94 obstetrical cases, and 58 hospital cases, 1,308 home calls, 215 hospital calls, 248 cases with consultants, 3,464 physiotherapy cases, 1,735 ultraviolet-ray treatments, 1,729 short-wave treatments, 330 basal metabolisms, 66 electrocardiographs, 822 X-rays, 473 fluoroscopic examinations, 5,864 prescription cases, 5,528 laboratory and clinical laboratory report cases, 422 eye refractions, 16 eye, ear, nose, and throat cases in the clinic; treatments being given to 9,278 members and 9,013 dependents.

Many of our chest X-rays were simply routine procedures, not for the detection of pathology. If a plate showed pathology, the average time spent in interpreting it would be more. The average interpretation of a pathological X-ray plate should take at least five minutes. Pathology in a plate can be detected within a minute.

In testifying on direct examination and in testifying on the time of interpretation of these X rays I am not testifying from the records. I didn't stand by and see each X ray taken but saw many taken by Dr. Price, but not every one. I watched him make some examinations and interpret some plates. There wasn't any routine in giving X-ray examinations, but they were given in most cases if the patient requested an X ray, and in cases that we thought required X rays and on chest X rays I say that Dr. Price spent an average of from one to two minutes, and on X rays involving the gastro-intestinal tract about five minutes, but there is nothing in the record to indicate how much time he spent on X rays, and my testimony is that in cases where I saw Dr. Price interpreting such X rays he would take a minute or two in ordinary cases, and in cases of gastro-intestinal X ray he would take four or five minutes. I saw roughly Dr. Price interpret about ten X rays a week. I can't give the daily average as I wasn't with Dr. Price every day. The actual time spent by Dr. Price on fluoroscopic examinations was a matter of seconds, a minute or two at most. I didn't attend and see Dr. Price making many fluoroscopic examinations, and I can't give you the weekly average on those.

Dr. Price also attended patients outside the clinic, on house calls. I can't break down on a daily average how many he saw; I would say it was roughly one or two a day. All our doctors would make calls on patients who were sick at home. I have no breakdown of the monthly home calls. I have the total for the period of February 1 to August 31: 1,308 home calls. Seven doctors in that period were making home calls in the District of Columbia, Virginia and Maryland. The hours at the clinic are from 9 to 6 on week days and 9 to 1 on Saturdays.

Dr. Price resigned in January, 1939. I do not have Dr. Price's book that contains his record and have never examined Dr. Price's book myself. I don't know that the only patients Dr. Price saw were those shown on the records from which I testified. I do know that the patients, the names listed and the numbers listed are the exact copies of his own records. I do know it, that the names listed do not agree with the number of patients seen by him. He saw less patients than are listed on his records.

Q. You mean that the records he made show as patients seen people in fact he did not see?

A. That is correct. I testified that he included telephonic conversations, casual meetings in the hall with patients, injections,—not injections—X-ray interpretations were listed as patients seen, when they were not seen.

I testified on direct that all throughout this period I believed that GHA was supplying adequate medical care to patients and that we could give better care to patients than we could in private practice. I know Dr. Wall very well and served with him a good while before joining Group Health. He was my preceptor, in a manner of speaking. Dr. Price, Dr. Selders, and I did not go to Dr. Wall and Dr. Macatee and offer to resign in a body from Group Health at the very time about which I am talking, because we couldn't give adequate medical care to patients. Dr. Price, Dr. Selders and I did go to Dr. Wall's home and talked with Dr. Wall, but we did not offer to resign, though we discussed the resignations of us from Group Health. At that time we did not state that we thought that all others on the staff of Group Health would resign also, and we did not ask Dr. Wall and Dr. Macatee to help us. We did not state what would happen if we all resigned at once and did not state that that would break up Group Health if we resigned in a body, but I did state that it might break up Group Health if we all resigned. I don't recall that Dr. Wall and Dr. Macatee said no, they couldn't do anything for us, as there was no occasion for an answer like that.

Redirect examination:

The conversation with Dr. Wall and Dr. Macatee occurred in the fall of 1938. When Dr. Wall and Dr. Macatee were seen by Dr. Selders, Dr. Price, and myself at Dr. Selders' request, Dr. Selders being thoroughly dissatisfied with his position, we discussed exactly what Mr. Leahy brought out in my testimony. We asked Dr. Wall to meet with the three of us. At the time of the meeting Dr. Selders and Dr. Price asked certain questions of Dr. Wall and Dr. Macatee, particularly regarding the Medical Society privileges and hospital privileges. The question of resignations was brought up, that is, the question of our resigning from Group Health staff was brought up at the time and discussed by all of us, but not in connection with hospital privileges and membership in the Medical Society. The question of hospital privileges and Medical Society privileges was brought up by Dr. Selders and Dr. Price.

MRS. CAROLINE REECE EPPERLY, a witness for the Government (recalled).

Direct examination.

Gov. Ex. 291 is a correct copy of a letter from President Taylor of Sibley to Dr. Burns of Worcester Hospital. Gov. Ex. 292 is Dr. Burns' reply to Gov. Ex. 291. Gov. Ex. 298 is a copy of Dr. Taylor's letter to Dr. Brown. Gov. Ex. 299 is Dr. Brown's reply to Gov. Ex. 298. Gov. Ex. 295 is a correct copy of a letter from Dr. Taylor to Dr. Walter E. Lee of the University of Pennsylvania, which I took and sent to Dr. Lee. Gov. Ex. 296 purports to be a reply to Gov. Ex. 295. Gov. Ex. 672 is the application blank of Dr. Raymond E. Selders and lists the names thereon as references: Dr. Lee, Dr. Burns, Dr. Brown.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I do not know Dr. Brown of the Temple University. I never saw him write.

I do not know Dr. C. J. Burns. I never saw him write. And all I know is that I received a subpoena to produce certain papers and documents, and pursuant to that subpoena I produce those documents from my files.

RAYMOND R. ZIMMERMAN, a witness for the Government (recalled).

Direct examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

I recall a dinner on the evening of June 24, before going to the Medical Society, attended by Mr. Penniman, Dr. Brown, and myself. I didn't tell Dr. Brown in connection with the anticipated meeting at the Medical Society to tell the Society doctors as little as possible, and that was not the spirit of the meeting. I didn't say to Mr. Penniman to say as little as possible. There were no such instructions given at all. After the dinner we went to the Medical Society building, and in the lobby I didn't say to Dr. Brown or Mr. Penniman, "Don't forget, we'll give them just as little as possible." In the meeting we gave the Society a full statement of the purposes of Group Health.

I never gave instructions to Dr Brown that he was not to deal with the hospitals and I never heard any such instructions given. I never heard any instructions to Dr. Brown that he should send me or the president of Group Health mail received addressed to him, unopened. So far as I know Dr. Brown was never restricted, and I never did anything to restrict him and I do not know of anything being done to restrict him.

WILLIAM F. PENNIMAN, a witness for the Government (recalled).

Direct examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

I was the first president of Group Health. I recall a meeting on June 24, 1937, between Mr. Zimmerman, Dr. Brown, and myself. At that meeting I didn't make any remark to Dr. Brown that he should tell the District Medical Society as little as possible about the plans of Group Health. I didn't hear Mr. Zimmerman make any such remark. I didn't make any remark in the lobby of the Medical Society building to Dr. Brown or Mr. Zimmerman that, "Now, don't forget, we will give them as little as possible." I didn't hear Mr. Zimmerman make any such statement. At the meeting we did not follow the course of telling the doctors as little as possible. I received a report from Dr. Brown on Dr. Selders, Gov. Ex. 671. As president of Group Health I at no time limited Dr. Brown's medical activities and didn't exclude him from approaching the hospitals on behalf of the staff of Group Health. I didn't give Dr. Brown any instructions that he should send to me unopened mail he received from the hospitals, and nothing to that effect was done. I kept Dr. Brown informed about my correspondence with the hospitals.

The third page of Gov. Ex. 671 was received in evidence and read to the jury as follows:

Gov. Ex. 671 is a letter from Henry Rolfe Brown, Medical Director, to Mr. Penniman, President, Group Health Association, dated October 1, 1937, to which is attached information regarding the staff of Group Health which had been obtained up to that time.

I am permitted to read to you the third page of the report which relates to Dr. Raymond E. Selders. It gives his name, Raymond E. Selders: age, 44: nativity, born in Illinois: position, surgeon: salary, $4,800.

"Religion, Protestant.

"Marital Status. Married (No children).

"Licensed: Oklahoma, Texas; licensed in New York and Massachusetts by endorsement of Nation Board Credentials.

Licensed District of Columbia.

Degrees: BA University of Oklahoma, 1918; BS ChE University of Oklahoma, 1919; BS in Medicine, University of Oklahoma, 1925; MD University of Oklahoma, 1927; MSC University of Pennsylvania, 1937.

Experience:

July 1927 to July 1928: Interned, St. Joseph's Infirmary (209 beds) Houston, Texas.

July 1928 to October 1935: General Practice including surgery, Houston, Texas.

October 1934 to June 14, 1936: Post Graduate work at Graduate School of Medicine, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.

1936-1937: Resident Surgeon, Worcester City Hospital (600 beds) Worcester, Massachusetts. Has performed about 338 operations which was a part of the clinical and post graduate work taken by Dr. Selders for the purpose of securing the diploma and degree of Master in Surgery.

Dr. Selders is an experienced surgeon and has been in practice for about seven years and is splendidly qualified by his experience as a general surgeon.

Address: Home 2445 15th Street, N. W.

Telephone: Adams 5302."

The Government concluded its case.

SURREBUTTAL EVIDENCE ON BEHALF OF THE DEFENDANTS

DR. HENRY ROLFE BROWN, a witness recalled by the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I identify the third page of Gov. Ex. 671 as a letter of recommendation for Dr. Selders and the others for a position on the staff of the clinic of GHA. When I said in that letter: "Dr. Selders is an experienced surgeon and has been in practice for about seven years and is splendidly qualified by his experience as a general surgeon," I referred to his work in the clinic, as we had no general outside work, of course, in the hospitals and Dr. Selders was to take care of the clinic and the minor surgery in the clinic.

DR. EDWIN A. MERRITT, a witness recalled for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I am a practicing physician in the District. I have specialized in radiology, which is the use of radium energy in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases, both X ray and radium. I graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1904; after seven years of country practice I went to the Rush Medical School in Chicago and specialized in internal medicine; following that course I took a further course and studied X ray in Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1912; since that time I have confined my practice exclusively to radiology.

There are two different procedures for X raying and diagnosing conditions of the chest; one consists of taking X ray films or plates of the chest, and the subsequent reading of them. That involves one period of time. There is another medical examination which is used sometimes, a fluoroscopic survey of the chest is made, and then a plate is made. The first procedure takes a period of time and this takes another period of time. From the start it would take 30 minutes to make a fluoroscopic examination of one person's chest. In taking an X ray of the chest the matter of getting a person undressed takes the larger part of the time; the taking of the film is a matter of a few seconds; developing is ten minutes, drying 30 minutes, and reading five minutes. A fluoroscopic examination is an examination of the patient before a fluorescent screen, and it penetrates the patient's body and is reflected on a screen. It must be done in an absolutely dark room and the eyes must be perfectly accommodated to it. It takes as a minimum 25 to 30 minutes to make such an examination because you have to allow 25 minutes for adjustment of the eyes in the dark room. That is an invariable rule. The actual examination consumes perhaps five minutes. It takes longer to interpret an X ray of the gastro-intestinal tract than of the chest, as a complete gastro-intestinal involves a study of an individual over three successive days, and the reading of the film requires 10 to 15 minutes, reviewing the fluoroscopic evidence; the evidence secured in the three previous examinations, reviewing that evidence plus the films that are taken, consumes perhaps 10 minutes, maybe 15 minutes. That process could not be done in four or five minutes. An X ray of the chest cannot be taken and interpreted in a minute. Where pathology is indicated—that is the presence of abnormality—it leads to additional study and takes longer, because if the conditions are obscure we might spend hours on an X-ray examination.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Kelleher:

The interpretation of an X-ray plate is the study of the plate after the picture has been taken, and in an X ray of the chest that interpretation takes five minutes; one of the Gastro-intestinal tract would require, on the average, fifteen minutes for interpretation.

Dr. Joseph S. Wall, a witness recalled by the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Kelleher:

I am a practicing physician in Washington, where I have been in practice 45 years; I graduated from Georgetown University Medical School in 1897; I did postgraduate work in the New York Postgraduate School and at Oxford, England; I specialize exclusively in pediatrics and have done so for 30 years.

I have known Dr. Scandiffio eight or ten years; he was associated with me at Children's Hospital for a number of years and associated with me in teaching of pediatrics at Georgetown Medical School. I recall in the early fall of 1938 a conversation between Dr. Selders, Dr. Price, Dr. Scandiffio, Dr. Macatee and myself. The substance of the conference was that the doctors from Group Health were so dissatisfied with the work which they had to do down at the clinic that they wanted to resign in a body. The Group Health doctors asked me if I would try to do something for them so that they could have a living, or words to that effect, if they resigned, and asked if we thought if they did resign would they be taken back into membership in the Society and, secondly, Dr. Selders asked if he could be accorded hospital privileges if he resigned from Group Health. The Group Health doctors said that the other members of the staff of Group Health would probably resign in a body if they resigned, and that would probably result in breaking up Group Health.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Lewin:

I have been a member of the Medical Society for 40 years. Two years ago I was put on a life membership. I have been on its Executive Committee the three years following 1926. I made a statement to Dr. Woodward that I regretted that Dr. Scandiffio had "gone into the camp of the enemy," meaning Group Health, and stated my belief the Group Health doctors "will have visited upon them the displeasure of the medical profession in Washington and will probably become medical outcasts so far as we are locally concerned," and further stated, "We should certainly be grateful for the help which may be accorded us by the AMA."

Dr. Henry C. Macatee, a witness recalled for the defendants.

Direct examination.

By Mr. Leahy:

I recall a conversation held in the fall of 1938 at the office of Dr. Wall, at which Drs. Scandiffio, Price, Selders, Wall, and myself were present; the conversation was had between us; Dr. Scandiffio, Dr. Price, and Dr. Selders said they were dissatisfied with the work which they were called on to do at Group Health clinic and were prepared to resign in a body, and they stated, in effect, if they resigned probably the other members of the staff would resign likewise, and that would probably break up Group Health, if they all resigned in that fashion; then Drs. Scandiffio, Price, and Selders asked us to try to do something for them in the shape of helping them out if they did resign and if the remaining members of the staff of Group Health resigned.

The defendants rested.

Thereupon the defendants jointly and severally moved the Court as follows:

To strike from the record and advise the jury not to consider any and all evidence submitted in the record relating or having reference to the so-called background of the conspiracy and consisting of evidence with respect to acts and deeds of the defendant American Medical Association, its officers and agents, occurring and transpiring outside of the District of Columbia and prior to January 1, 1937, upon the ground that such evidence and the whole thereof is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial to any of the issues in the above-entitled action.

To strike from the record and advise the jury not to consider any and all evidence submitted in the record relating or having reference to the so-called Washington hospitals for the purpose of proving that said hospitals were co-conspirators with the defendants herein upon the ground and for the reason that said evidence and the whole thereof is insufficient, as a matter of law, to make or constitute the said hospitals or any of them co-conspirators as charged by the Government and alleged in the indictment.

To direct and advise the jury to return a verdict of not guilty in the above-entitled proceeding upon the ground and for the reason that the record in said case, and the whole thereof, shows as a matter of law that Group Health Association, its officers, members and operations were, with reference to all matters shown in the record, unlawfully engaged in the practice of medicine in the District of Columbia in violation of the laws applicable thereto, and were not, and none of the[illegible] unlawfully subject to or affected by any alleged restr[illegible]ts as charged and identified in the indictment.

To direct and advise the jury to return a verdict of not guilty in the above-entitled proceeding as to all defendants, upon the ground and for the reason that the facts, acts, and circumstances, as shown by the evidence, and the entire record herein submitted does not establish or tend to establish any conspiracy to violate Section 3 of the Sherman Act relating to trade or commerce, as set forth or defined in said Act.

To direct the jury in the above-entitled cause to return a verdict of not guilty as to each and all of the aforesaid defendants under that charge of said indictment that the said defendants and others conspired together "for the purpose of restraining the Washington hospitals in the business of operating such hospitals."

To direct the jury in the above-entitled cause to return a verdict of not guilty as to each and all of the aforesaid defendants under that charge of said indictment that the said defendants and others conspired together "for the purpose of restraining doctors (not on the medical staff of Group Health Association, Inc.) practicing in the District of Columbia, including the doctors so practicing who are made defendants herein, in the pursuit of their callings."

To direct the jury in the above-entitled cause to return a verdict of not guilty as to each and all of the aforesaid defendants under that charge of said indictment that the said defendants and others conspired together "for the purpose of restraining the doctors serving on the medical staff of said Group Health Association, Inc. in the pursuit of their callings."

To direct the jury in the above-entitled cause to return a verdict of not guilty as to each and all of the aforesaid defendants under that charge of said indictment that the said defendants and others conspired together "for the purpose of restraining the members of Group Health Association, Inc. in obtaining, by cooperative effort, adequate medical care for themselves and their dependents from doctors engaged in group medical practice on a risk sharing prepayment basis."

To direct the jury in the above-entitled cause to return a verdict of not guilty as to each and all of the aforesaid defendants under that charge of said indictment that the said defendants and others conspired together "for the purpose of restraining Group Health Association, Inc. in its business of arranging for the provision of medical care and hospitalization to its members and their dependents on a risk sharing prepayment basis."

To direct the jury in the above-entitled cause to return a verdict of not guilty as to each and all of the aforesaid defendants.

And for cause therefor defendants state that no sufficient case has been made out against them and each of them under the indictment herein returned, to warrant and support a verdict on all or any of the charges alleged in said indictment.

Mr. Magee: The defendants at this time desire to summarize very briefly the grounds of the motions filed in the case for a directed verdict of "not guilty."

First, all of the grounds urged upon the Court in support of the motions of the defendants for a directed verdict, presented at the close of the Government's case, are reasserted in support of the pending motions.

Second, it is contended that the evidence has failed to establish any violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Act by all or any of the defendants.

In addition none of the activities charged to the defendants or proven in the evidence concern trade or commerce in the District of Columbia.

The activities particularly of Group Health Association, Inc., its members and doctors are part and parcel of the illegal practice of medicine and the illegal operation of an insurance business, and any restraints thereon are not in violation of the Sherman Act.

All of the activities charged to defendants are within their lawful rights and do not violate Section 3 of the Sherman Act.

The defendants, the members of defendants, American Medical Association and the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors and members are all shown by the evidence to be engaged in the same trade or occupation, or have direct or indirect interests therein. The evidence further discloses that these parties are in a controversy concerning, involving or growing out of a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment pertaining to the care and treatment of patients and their hospitalization, or concerning the association or representation of persons, in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing, or seeking to arrange terms and conditions of employment of physicians in the care, treatment, and hospitalization of patients. This establishes the existence of a "labor dispute" and renders the activities charged or proven against the defendants legal under the terms of the Norris-La Guardia Act (Act of March 23, 1932, 29 U. S. C. A. 101-115) and of the Clayton Act (38 Stat. 738, 29 U. S. C. A. 52).

"United States v. Hutcheson (No. 43, October Term, 1940, decided February 3, 1940) —— U. S. ——.

Milk Wagon D. Union v. Lake Valley F. Products, 85 L. Ed. 91.

New Negro Alliance v. Grocery Company, 303 U. S. 469.

Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, 507, m. 26.

Senn v. Tile Layers Protective Union, 301 U. S. 468.

For the foregoing and other reasons apparent on the face of the record and in the evidence it is submitted a verdict of "Not Guilty" should be directed as to each and all of the defendants.

The Court overruled all of the defendants' motions and allowed an exception.

The Requests or Prayers for Instructions of the United States

The United States, at the close of the evidence, requested that the following instructions or prayers on the law be given the jury:

All of the defendants have entered pleas of not guilty to the indictment. The defendants, therefore, have entered upon this trial presumed by the law to be innocent of any crime until proven guilty and that presumption continues with the defendants until you reach your verdict. Granted. J. M. P.

The burden of proving the defendants guilty is upon the Government. This does not mean, however, that the Government's proof must establish the defendants' guilt to an absolute certainty. You may find the defendants guilty, if you are convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of all the essential facts necessary to establish the guilt of the defendants. Granted. J. M. P.

A reasonable doubt must be real and not imaginary. It must be an honest and substantial misgiving for which a good reason may be given, based upon the nature of the evidence or lack of evidence in the case. If all the evidence in the case, impartially and reasonably considered, produces in your minds a settled conviction or belief of the defendants' guilt—such an abiding conviction as you would be willing to act upon in the most important affairs of your own life—you may be said to be free from any reasonable doubt, and should find a verdict in accordance with that conviction or belief. Granted. J. M. P.

The Court: No. 3 sounds correct. It is not exactly the way I give it, but it is on the same lines. It is on reasonable doubt.

Mr. Burke: I think, your Honor, between the dashes it is not just right—

"such an abiding conviction as you would be willing to act upon in the most important affairs of your own life."

The Court: That is an old, approved instruction. Objection overruled and exception noted.

In considering the testimony, you should, as to each witness, consider his demeanor and manner of testifying, his interest, if any, in the result of the trial, any temptation to testify falsely, his opportunity to know the facts, the probability or improbability of the testimony given, and all other like circumstances appearing from the evidence; and, from all these, you should determine the weight and credit to be given to the testimony of the witness. In case you become satisfied from the evidence that any witness has wilfully testified falsely as to a material fact, you are at liberty in your discretion to disregard all the testimony of the witness. You may, however, in your discretion, elect to give credit to a part of his testimony and to give no weight to the rest. Granted. J. M. P.

While all of the defendants in this case have been jointly indicted and tried, each defendant is entitled to an independent consideration by you of the evidence as it relates to his conscious participation in the unlawful acts charged by the indictment. It is your duty to determine separately the guilt or innocence of each individual defendant and of each defendant society. Granted. J. M. P.

10

The indictment in this case charges the defendants with engaging in a combination and conspiracy in violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Where two or more persons are united together to accomplish an illegal object, they are engaged in a conspiracy. In determining whether a conspiracy exists, it is not necessary for you to find that there was a written or formal agreement among the defendants, or that any participant in the conspiracy was bound to another to perform any portion thereof. It is sufficient to establish a conspiracy if, from all of the evidence, it appears that the defendants were voluntarily acting together—however informally—in order to carry out their common objectives. Granted J. M. P.

Defendants objected on the ground that it is confusing; that there must be found an agreement and that this prayer doesn't leave that impression. Objections overruled and exception noted.

It is not necessary that all of the parties to a conspiracy shall actually meet together at one and the same time and place, or that all discuss its purposes or the means of carrying its objectives into effect, or that each party know all of the other parties. Nor do you need to find that all of the participants combined together at the start of the conspiracy. If it is shown that the conspiracy was entered into between two or more of the defendants and that at any later time during its existence new or additional parties, while aware of its existence, united with them for the purpose of aiding in the accomplishment of the scheme, they are from that moment fellow conspirators and equally responsible for all of the consequences which flow from the conspiracy. Granted J. M. P.

12

You will understand that mere passive knowledge of the existence of a conspiracy or mere passive knowledge of the acts of others in connection therewith is not sufficient to make the one having such knowledge a member of the conspiracy. Granted as amended. J. M. P.

13

Once you find a conspiracy to exist, the acts and declarations, both oral and written, of each party to the conspiracy in furtherance of the objects thereof may be considered as evidence against all of the parties to the conspiracy. This is true even though the party doing such act or making such declaration is not on trial or is not named in the indictment as a defendant. That is, every person who, knowing of the conspiracy, does any act or makes any statement intended to further the objects thereof, does thereby become party to the conspiracy. Granted as amended. J. M. P. Exc.

Defendants objected on the ground that it is too broad; assumes a conspiracy; incorrectly states the law applicable to the facts involved; incorrectly states the law as to how a person becomes a party to an unlawful conspiracy and incorrectly states what evidence is necessary to make a party a co-conspirator. Objections overruled and exceptions noted.

The indictment in this case charges, in substance, that the defendants combined and conspired together (1) for the purpose of restraining Group Health Association, Inc., in its business of arranging for the provision of medical care and hospitalization to its members and their dependents on a risk-sharing prepayment basis; (2) for the purpose of restraining the doctors serving on the medical staff of Group Health Association, Inc., in the pursuit of their calling; (3) for the purpose of restraining doctors not on the medical staff of Group Health Association, Inc., practicing in the District of Columbia, in the pursuit of their calling; and (4) for the purpose of restraining the Washington hospitals in the business of operating the hospitals. Granted. J. M. P.

"Mr. Richardson: Does fourteen do any more than bring in the indictment?

"The Court: I thought not. I notice you folks leave out two; it charges only part of one. You see, you first charged Group Health.

"Mr. Burke: I think it is an important part of our case because G. H. A. and its local members are two entities, are different. I think if that is so, your Honor should sustain the motion as to the second point.

"Mr. Magee: The Court of Appeals didn't approve that member charge.

"The Court: They approved the whole thing. They gave it a badge of honor.

"Mr. Kelleher: In any event, we are doing what the defendants want us to do.

"Mr. Burke: We are moving that it be stricken.

"The Court: The way it can be handled, as to the second paragraph, you can simply disregard that. It simplifies it.

"Mr. Kelleher: I think you have that affirmatively.

"The Court: We are talking about a lot of things that the jury never pay any attention to. I am going to state this indictment in my own way. I will grant this."

Objections overruled and exception noted.

If you find that the defendants were engaged in a combination such as I have explained, it is unnecessary for you to decide whether Group Health Association or its staff may have violated the Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association. Thus, even if such were the facts, it is immaterial that Group Health Association may have employed doctors on a contract basis, or that the members of Group Health Association may not have had complete freedom of choice of physician from the entire body of doctors practicing in the District of Columbia, or that Group Health Association or its organizers may have solicited Government employees to join Group Health Association. It is likewise immaterial to the issues which you must decide that the defendants may have believed that Group Health Association or the members of its medical staff violated the Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association. None of these matters should be considered by you in reaching your verdict. Granted. J. M. P.

"Mr. Richardson: Of course, twenty-two cannot be so. That is, it cannot be so and keep the society in existence.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Leahy: The trouble is that you are argumentative in your instructions. You cannot assemble points of evidence and throw them to the Court and ask the Court to argue it for you.

"The Court: Well, I think you are entitled in a colorless way to have the rule stated, without argument, that if they did in fact conspire to restrain, and they find that beyond a reasonable doubt, then the use of ethics and these other things as justification for it would afford no justification. That is very roughly stated, but that is what you mean.

"Mr. Lewin: That is it.

"The Court: I will revise it.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Kelleher: I think it is a very fair statement there. It is an uncolored unargumentative statement. I think in view of the stress laid upon these immaterial issues by both sides it ought to be given.

"Mr. Lewin: If a conspiracy did exist then the employment of ethics to restrain it would not justify it. The plea of the defendants that the object was unethical cannot justify their conduct.

"Mr. Leahy: No, you cannot say that. We have the right to use that in persuasion.

"The Court: You have the right to this: I don't think the matter of belief is material for this reason: that you have the right to argue and it doesn't matter whether your argument is right or wrong, whether you believe it or not. I have a right to argue as demagogues do every day on the street, or some fakers on the avenue, if I do not transcend the law by obtaining money under false pretenses. The fact that I may not be sincere in what I say makes no difference.

"Mr. Richardson: That is all right if you follow it up, but here we are charged with being actuated by an improper motive.

"Mr. Lewin: Your motive isn't material. The purposes with which you did what was done as charged in the indictment. If the jury finds you did those things purposely, then you have restrained G. H. A.

"Mr. Richardson: We don't care anything about the indictment.

"Mr. Laskey: They cannot consider it as evidence.

"The Court: I instruct them very carefully that the indictment is no evidence and raises no presumption of guilt, but on the contrary there is a presumption of innocence.

"Mr. Lewin: We would like to get away from these good motives.

"Mr. Richardson: I don't blame you.

"The Court: You said this was not sufficient?

"Mr. Kelleher: Here is what we were after in this charge: that it makes no difference if they find that Group Health did in fact violate the principles of ethics or that the defendant believes that they did.

"The Court: Yes, I understand. Of course, I shall tell them that it is unquestionably the law they are not required to live up to the ethics of the Medical Association. They are not required to have the ethics and standards of the Association. If they didn't have it, it would make no difference.

"Mr. Richardson: And if as a result of their not living up to the principles of ethics and they desired to associate with those who do, and are not accepted, they get what they deserved.

"Mr. Leahy: You can't make anybody consult with somebody else.

"Mr. Kelleher: If they refused to consult in order to drive G. H. A. out, it is illegal regardless of the reason. Even if they thought it was unethical.

"The Court: If they thought it was agreed that 'we are going to rush G. H. A., put it out of business; and we are going to do it by enforcing our rules of ethics' against them, then, of course, you have a conspiracy.

"Mr. Richardson: But you cannot take the action that was directed against G. H. A. and prove backwards by inference how the thing started.

"The Court: No, I can't say to the jury you have to assume that they did these things. The first thing is to find out whether they had a conspiracy.

"Mr. Leahy: What you want the Court to say is the refusal to consult amounts to conspiracy.

"Mr. Lewin: Well, here is a concerted refusal.

"Mr. Kelleher: If it is a refusal to consult for the purposes charged in the indictment, it is illegal.

"The Court: I am underscoring here 'if a conspiracy'; then 'employment of ethics, et cetera, to restrain would not be a defense'; the violation of ethics by G. H. A.

"Mr. Lewin: Or the belief on the part of the defendants that G. H. A. had violated these ethics.

"Mr. Leahy: I would like your Honor also to state that these various pieces of evidence are not proof per se of conspiracy.

"The Court: I shall tell them that there was no legal obligation, legal ethical obligation on the part of any physician to consult with any other physician.

"Mr. Leahy: Therefore even though they find that the members of the society refused to consult with G. H. A., they must further find that that was done with intent to destroy it.

"The Court: You see, let us assume that these regulations against consulting, et cetera, is an unlawful agreement to restrain physicians in medical practice. That is not what you are charged with. We don't have to deal with that.

"Mr. Richardson: No, but you have this situation: Here is a group of people in a meeting. Oh, they are confederating; one says something; they are all conspirators because of the very fact they were in a meeting. You are dealing with a society.

"The Court: I know you are arguing the matter now, but as a matter of fact anything that brings alleged conspirators together is a thing that may be considered by the jury whether it is reasonable or not, and the thing, in view of the fact that they are members of the society, will be argued on the one side; and whether it is unreasonable and may be treated as the act of a conspirator, may be argued on the other. That is a matter for argument. I cannot say the fact that men got together, this is some evidence. I can't consider it one way or the other, and I don't want to."

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Magee: So you make that clear, that reasonable belief."

Objections overruled and exception noted.

23

If you find that the defendants were engaged in a combination such as I have explained, it is unnecessary for you to decide whether the medical care given by the medical staff of Group Health Association was equal to, superior to, or inferior to, the quality of medical care rendered by doctors engaged in private practice. The quality of medical care rendered through Group Health Association is immaterial to the issues in this case and you are not to consider it in reaching your verdict. Granted. J. M. P.

"Mr. Richardson: Twenty-three.

"Mr. Magee: It is exactly the same.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Leahy: That falls in the same category as the other.

"The Court: I have it marked with a question.

"Mr. Kelleher: I think in view of the stress laid upon it it is certainly a relevant issue in your Honor's mind; certainly should be clarified.

"The Court: But you all stepped into it.

"Mr. Richardson: I don't think it is a false issue. The last sentence here is dead wrong.

"Mr. Leahy: The whole thing is dead wrong.

"The Court: I think this can be treated in this way: that there has been evidence pro and con in this case as to the ability of Group Health to render good medical care. That question has been injected into the case by reason of contradictory statements of the parties which evolved around it. It goes to the question of credibility of witnesses rather than to make this a relevant, material issue in the case, and you may consider it in that way.

"Mr. Leahy: I think that is a little confusing.

"The Court: Even if the general opinion of people was that Group Health was rendering good medical care, you have a perfect right to argue it, unless you should go to the point of libel.

"Mr. Richardson: One of the theories of the entire build-up of the prosecution is that that is the way to give good medical service.

"Mr. Lewin: No; we were very careful to refer to it as a reasonable experiment.

"The Court: I do not know just how it should be treated, to be frank with you. It has been a problem with me.

"Mr. Kelleher: If there has been a conspiracy to drive this organization out, they cannot justify it by saying that they thought it was not giving adequate medical care.

"Mr. Lewin: It is the same thing as the $40,000 grant. It is the same thing as the principles of ethics.

"Mr. Richardson: We want to offer the proposition that one of the reasons why we did not want our members to have anything to do with this organization was because it was a fraud medically.

"Mr. Lewin: But you cannot make that argument, because you would run right into the teeth of the law.

"Mr. Richardson: We have a right to use persuasion on our members.

"Mr. Kelleher: That is a boycott, and you cannot justify a boycott.

"Mr. Lewin: Not on any such grounds.

"Mr. Richardson: We are justified in trying to control our own members for our own good.

"Mr. Lewin: That is a boycott.

"Mr. Richardson: No, it is not.

"The Court: A question that has been in my mind—and I have not resolved it one way or the other—is whether or not these things may not give a background in behalf of the defendants to reflect upon the reasonableness of the things they did.

"Mr. Kelleher: The reasonableness is not in issue if the facts of the indictment are found by the jury.

"Mr. Lewin: It is unreasonable per se if they find the facts stated in the indictment.

"The Court: If they find that a conspiracy was entered into which involved boycotting and coercion and that sort of thing, why, of course, then you could not justify it by the fact that G. H. A. may have been running a poor business. No matter what your beliefs were, you cannot hop over all those hurdles. But why should I not also say to the jury, 'However, as bearing upon the question of the intention or the intended effect of the acts of the defendants, you may note the circumstances under which they did act as reflecting upon that intent and purpose.'

"Mr. Lewin: I do not see how they could. They either intended to destroy Group Health or they did not. That is the issue. That is the issue you are leaving to the jury.

"The Court: Suppose they were not attempting to destroy it, but merely attempting to protect themselves?

"Mr. Lewin: If it were a bad organization that would be one of the reasons for them to attempt——

"Mr. Leahy: It would be one of the reasons to protect themselves against it.

"Mr. Lewin: You have no right to protect yourselves by this kind of a conspiracy.

"Mr. Leahy: If you hit me, I have a right to hit you.

"The Court: I do not know whether it was in the Appalachian Coal case or in some other case, but it has been held that persons have a right to protect themselves in their business against——

"Mr. Magee: Against unfair practice in the industry. That is the language.

"The Court: Against their competitors. If that is all they have done it does not amount to a violation of the statute.

"Mr. Kelleher: They cannot refuse to deal for that reason. That is what is charged here. So they could not possibly justify it.

"The Court: I think we all agree on this, but it is just a question of how we are going to state it. You want me to state one part of it; they want me to state another part of it. If I state both parts of it, I suppose that will be all right. There is an element of intent.

"Mr. Lewin: You ought not to bear on that. These are reasons and beliefs. That is what these things are.

"The Court: The question is this: Did they intentionally do acts the natural and probable effect of which would be to restrain G. H. A.? If they did, then they are guilty.

"Mr. Lewin: Whatever their reasons.

"The Court: Whatever their ultimate motive may have been is unimportant. But as bearing upon the question of intent, as reflecting upon the question of intent, in order that you may determine what the intent and purpose were or what the natural and probable effects of their acts were intended to be, you may look into these things and see what they were dealing with, to determine whether or not their purpose was to restrain them merely by argument and persuasion to protect themselves.

"Mr. Laskey: To protect themselves and the public.

"The Court: They were not so much interested in the public.

"Mr. Laskey: Would not that be a good reason, however?

"The Court: That is a thing that might be considered, of course.

"Mr. Kelleher: Then it means that this jury is required to find specific intent to restrain.

"The Court: They have either got to find intent to restrain or they have got to find that the things which were intended would have the natural and probable effect of restraining them.

"Mr. Kelleher: The mere fact that they agreed among themselves to refrain from dealing with the organization because they believed that the organization was offering bad medical care would not tend to show that they did not intend to agree together for that purpose. The effect of it was to prevent them from obtaining a status irrespective of whether the medical care was good or not.

"Mr. Richardson: So that if G. H. A. was a band of bank robbers, you could not mention it?

"Mr. Lewin: That is right.

"Mr. Leahy: If I go out and buy a gun, and you say, 'Do you want it to shoot a bank robber?' And I say, 'No; I intend to use it to protect myself'——

"The Court: I have got this marked in the same category as the others.

"Mr. Lewin: If it is covered in the same way we are agreeable to it.

"The Court: I will pass it as it is. My inclination is to refuse it and treat it along the lines of these others.

"Mr. Kelleher: That is perfectly agreeable, your Honor."

Objections overruled and exception noted.

If you find that the defendants were engaged in a combination such as I have explained, it is unnecessary for you to decide whether Group Health Association was financially sound. The financial condition of Group Health Association and the sources of its financial support during the period of the conspiracy are immaterial to the issues in this case. It is also immaterial that the defendants may have believed that Group Health Association was financially unsound or that it was subsidized by other organizations. Such matters are not to be considered by you in reaching your verdict. Granted. J. M. P.

"Mr. Richardson: No. 24 is the same thing.

"The Court: I have them marked the same way. I am going to bulk these things a little more than you have got them here. I can shorten them."

Objections overruled and exception noted.

Defendants' objections as stated hereinbefore were overruled and the requests or prayers for instructions of the United States numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 22, 23 and 24 were granted by the Court, with an exception to the defendants.

The Requests or Prayers for Instructions of the Defendants

The defendants, at the close of the evidence, requested that the following instructions or prayers on the law be given the jury:

1.

I charge the jury to return a verdict of "Not Guilty" as to each and every defendant, as to each and every restraint charged in the indictment. Refused. J. M. P.

2.

The jury is instructed as a matter of law that this case is a criminal prosecution, under an indictment returned by a special grand jury in and for the District of Columbia, for an alleged violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, a Federal statute, which provides as follows:

"Sec. 3. Every contract combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce in any Territory of the United States or of the District of Columbia or in restraint of trade or commerce between any such Territory and another, or between any such Territory or Territories and any State or States or the District of Columbia, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the Court."

The burden of proof in a criminal case is on the plaintiff and in carrying this burden of proof the plaintiff must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendants and each of them are guilty of the offense charged in the indictment. If, after hearing all the evidence in the case, the jury finds that the evidence concerning the guilt of the defendants is preponderated by the evidence of the defendants or if the evidence of the plaintiff and the defendants is evenly balanced or if there remains in the minds of the jury a doubt based on reason, so that the jury is not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendants are guilty of the offense charged, then the verdict of the jury should be "Not Guilty" as to all defendants. Refused. J. M. P.

The jury is instructed as a matter of law that the Government must maintain its burden of proof and must prove each defendant guilty of the offense charged beyond a reasonable doubt, and if the jury finds from all the evidence in the case that there is a doubt as to the guilt or innocence of some of the defendants, then the verdict of the jury should be "Not Guilty" as to all such defendants. Refused. J. M. P.

"Mr. Lewin: Prayer No. 3 omits the word 'reasonable'.

"Mr. Laskey: Your Honor mentioned the fact that it is not necessary to find all defendants guilty. Put in that way it might leave the inference that it is necessary to find one of them guilty.

"The Court: I did not mean to say that I would state it in that way. I merely made a note on here. The note is rather misleading in suggesting that it would not be necessary to find them all guilty. I will treat that a little differently so there will be no question about it. I am going to refuse that prayer just as it is, and you can check up on me when I am charging the jury and see that I do it correctly. I will cover it."

5.

The jury is instructed as a matter of law that before any verdict of guilty can be returned against any of the defendants that the jury must find from the evidence that trade in the District of Columbia is involved in the offense charged in the indictment. Section 3 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, which the indictment charges the defendants have violated, concerns only trade and commerce. In this particular case the indictment concerns only trade in the District of Columbia. Trade as involved in Section 3 of the Sherman Act has a definite and fixed meaning in law. Whenever any occupation, employment or business, is carried on for the purpose of profit, or gain or livelihood, not in the liberal arts, or in the learned professions, it is constantly called a trade.

If the jury finds from all the evidence in the case that the activities charged to the defendants do not concern trade of the District of Columbia within the meaning of the foregoing definition, then the verdict of the jury should be "Not Guilty" as to all defendants. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: The fifth prayer I am going to refuse. I will mark it Refused, with exception. You can have an exception to all of them that I refuse, so that if I do not cover them properly in my charge you have got your exception. That may be understood."

6.

The jury is instructed as a matter of law, if they find from the evidence, first that the activities charged to the defendants concern trade in the District of Columbia, then they must find from the evidence that the objects of the activities charged to the defendants or the activities of the defendants, directly, materially and unreasonably restrained trade in the District of Columbia before a verdict of guilty can be returned against all or any of the defendants. Refused. J. M. P.

"Mr. Kelleher: We object to Prayer No. 6 on the ground that it is confusing.

"The Court: I have it marked Refused.

"Mr. Leahy: Your Honor will cover it in the charge, will you?

"The Court: Yes. I have got to cover it. I am bound to."

8.

The jury is instructed as a matter of law that only such combinations and conspiracies are within the provisions of Section 3 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act as by reason of intent or the inherent nature of contemplated acts, prejudices the public interests by unduly restricting competition or unduly obstructing trade. In applying this test, the jury is instructed that the probable fact that the defendants have combined is not enough to render their actions illegal. The legality of the acts charged to the defendants cannot be determined by the simple test of whether or not those acts restrained trade. Every combination or agreement concerning trade, every regulation of trade restrains. The application of the statute in each case is a question of intent and effect. In determining whether or not the actions, charged to the defendants directly, materially and unreasonably restrained trade, the jury should consider the economic conditions peculiar to the practice of medicine, the practice and rules of ethics which have obtained, the nature of the acts of the defendants, the nature of the defendants' alleged plan, the reasons which led the defendants to act as they did and the probable consequences of the carrying out by the defendants of the acts charged in relation to matters affecting the public interest in the practice of medicine.

If from all the evidence in the case the jury finds that the actions charged to the defendants did not adversely affect the public interest, then a verdict of "Not Guilty" should be returned as to all defendants. Refused. J. M. P.

"Mr. Kelleher: No. No. 8 we object to.

"Mr. Richardson. Is No. 7 allowed, Mr. Justice?

"The Court. Yes. I have marked No. 8 refused. One ground is that it is argumentative; the other is that it is an overstatement, if you know what that means.

"Mr. Magee. I followed the language of the court in that case.

"The Court. I have here, 'Not for jury to determine whether public interest adversely affected.'

"Mr. Kelleher: That is exactly right.

"The Court: The jury is only to determine whether the charge is proven. The next is that the jury does not determine public policy. That is a matter for the legislature."

9.

The jury is instructed as a matter of law that a combination or conspiracy is not unlawful unless it destroys competition to an extent injurious to the public interest. If the jury finds from the evidence in this case that the alleged combination or conspiracy charged to the defendants did not destroy competition to an extent injurious to the public interests then their verdict should be "Not Guilty" as to all defendants, as the Sherman Act is founded upon conceptions of public interest enacted not preventing probable injury to individuals, but the harm to the general public. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: No. 9 is the same as the other one. Refused."

10.

The jury is instructed as a matter of law that not all combinations and agreements affecting trade in the District of Columbia are condemned by the Sherman Act.

Where a combination or conspiracy was entered into with the object of properly and fairly regulating the practice of medicine in which the defendants are engaged or interested, such combinations or conspiracies are not a violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Act. If the jury finds from the evidence that the alleged combination or conspiracy was a reasonable regulation of the practice of medicine and further finds that the effect of its formation and enforcement on trade in the District of Columbia is but indirect and not its purpose or object, then a verdict of "Not Guilty" must be returned as to all of the defendants. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: I have No. 10 marked Refused. There is a contradiction in terms. The definition of a conspiracy is that it is an agreement to do a criminal thing.

"Mr. Magee. Not under the Sherman Act.

"Mr. Richardson. Justice Holmes expressly said that it may be either lawful or unlawful.

"Mr. Kelleher: He said that a combination may be lawful, but not a conspiracy.

"Mr. Magee: It is not every unlawful conspiracy that violates the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

"The Court: I think you will find the conventional definition of a conspiracy is that it is an agreement to do a criminal thing or to do something lawful in a criminal way. We can change those words. If the regulations and acts were not intended to restrain but were only reasonable regulation and acts for the government of the society, then there was no crime. I think that prayer ought to be refused. That is No. 10."

14.

"The jury is instructed as a matter of law that the defendants, American Medical Association and Medical Society of the District of Columbia, have the right to adopt rules for just and fair dealing among their members and the right of enforcement of these rules and regulations by such reasonable penalties as they may provide for their violation."

(The refusal of these defendants to approve any association or corporation affording facilities for the treatment and care of patients of the physicians or employing physicians for the treatment and care of patients is not improper or illegal and if the jury finds from the evidence that the compelling of members to abide by rules and regulations of these defendants and their members, including the individual defendants, from associating with or doing business with associations, corporations, or physicians who are not members of or have been approved by the defendants, such an effect is an indirect, immaterial and reasonable restraint of trade and does not violate Section 3 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.)[9] Granted as amended. J. M. P.

"(The Court:) I have two objections to prayer No. 14.

"Mr. Magee: It is in the ponderous and heavy language of the court in the Anderson case.

"The Court: The first sentence is all right.

"Mr. Richardson: We can find you fifty cases that approve the Anderson case.

"The Court: The first sentence is all right; there is no objection to that sentence. The next one is:

'The refusal of these defendants to approve any association or corporation affording facilities for the treatment and care of patients is not improper or illegal,' and so forth.

You have got me telling the jury it is not illegal, but I maintain that it may be illegal according to the intent or the necessary effect of their act. You have got me stating categorically to the jury that it would not be illegal.

[9] The portion in the parenthesis was denied.

"Mr. Leahy: We will strike out after the first sentence.

"The Court: The third part of it is bad, because it is the court finding the facts for the jury.

"Mr. Kelleher: Let us say 'in and of itself' again there.

"The Court: You may say it is not done for unlawful purposes. I do not understand that any of the rules and regulations were adopted after the conspiracy began. The only charge is that you used them for the purpose of carrying out a conspiracy.

"Mr. Lewin: One was adopted, as a matter of fact, afterwards.

"Mr. Kelleher: May we have 'in and of itself' there?

"Mr. Richardson: Not in the first sentence. The first sentence is absolute.

"The Court: Your prayers cover that, do they not? What I shall probably do when I get to working on this is to couple this thing with the statement, 'However, if adopted for serving a reasonable and proper purpose and were subverted to the execution of an unlawful purpose,' and so forth.

"Mr. Kelleher: That is fine.

"Mr. Lewin: That is just what we had in mind.

"The Court: Is it all right to strike this out, gentlemen?

"Mr. Richardson: Yes.

"Mr. Leahy: Yes.

"The Court: It is granted as amended. I have put down, 'Couple the Government's prayer as to lawful use.'"

15

The jury is instructed as a matter of law that the defendants have the right to refuse to do business with or be associated with any person or persons engaged in activities in violation of law. And if from all the evidence the jury finds that Group Health Association, Inc., during the period of the alleged conspiracy, was engaged illegally in the practice of medicine, then the jury is justified in finding that the enforcement of the defendant's rules and regulations, and principles of ethics forbidding members to associate themselves with Group Health Association, Inc., or to consult with members of its staff, were reasonable regulations of the defendants' profession, and do not spell out an unlawful combination or conspiracy in violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: No. 15 is refused."

16

The jury is instructed as a matter of law, if they find from the evidence that the activities charged in the indictment to the defendants concern and relate to the profession of medicine and that all of the restraints intended concern and relate to the practice of medicine, then the jury is instructed to return a verdict of "Not Guilty" as to all of the defendants because the profession of medicine is not a trade within the meaning of Section 3 of the Sherman Act. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: No. 16 is refused."

17

The jury is instructed as a matter of law that if they find from the evidence that Group Health Association, Inc., is a corporation, that it operates a clinic, that it employs licensed physicians and surgeons to treat its members, that it receives from its members dues or fees for such treatments, that its method of doing business destroys the proper doctor and patient relationship and renders the doctors on its staff the hired servants of the corporation, and that it is in fact thus practicing medicine illegally because a corporation as such lacks the qualifications necessary for a license to practice medicine in the District of Columbia. Any restraints found by the jury against Group Health Association, Inc., its members, its doctors, or other doctors in rendering services to the corporation are justifiable and a verdict of "Not Guilty" should be rendered by the jury as to all defendants. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: No. 17 is refused."

The jury is instructed as a matter of law that concerted action to remove a harmful and destructive method of practicing medicine, even though such removal may affect Group Health Association, Inc., does not violate the Sherman Act if it is not intended and does not operate to unreasonably restrain trade in the District of Columbia and leaves the defendants free to compete with each other. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: I think No. 18 is all right except for this—I have marked it Refused, with a question mark, on the ground that I should not say to the jury that G. H. A. is harmful and destructive.

"Mr. Magee: It does not say that.

"The Court: It carries that inference. What are you talking about when you say 'concerted action to remove a harmful and destructive method of practicing medicine'?

"Mr. Magee: It hits at G. H. A., that is the theory of group practice as a whole. It may affect any one of the groups.

"The Court: The jury may say, 'The Judge says that it is a harmful and destructive method of practicing medicine.'

"Mr. Richardson: 'What is claimed to be a harmful and destructive method;' and so forth.

"The Court: I will refuse it as it is. I will make a little note here to see if I can cover it in a proper way. I will go over this and see what I think ought to go in."

23

I charge you that the acts alleged to have been done by the defendants, do not constitute a criminal conspiracy or to impose unlawful restraints upon anyone and particularly upon Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors, members or operations, if you find that such acts done or intended by the defendants were reasonable as regulations of professional practice, and in this connection I charge you rules of conduct in medical practice are important both to the profession and to the public, and such reasonable rules can best be made by the profession itself for the purpose of eliminating evils which may exist in the field of the medical profession. Refused, J. M. P.

"Mr. Kelleher: Now, 23: I think it is all covered.

"The Court: Well, I have this: that your arrangement of your language is misleading. It seems to me that way. It is rather assertive, coming from the Court and is quite argumentative. That first part, especially; I wouldn't state it that way to the jury.

"Mr. Leahy: Could you give us the thought in there, because it is expressed by the Court of Appeals that reasonable rules may be made by the profession itself.

"The Court: I would say,—I will take care of that.

"Mr. Lewin: I believe it is purely argumentative.

"The Court: No, they have a right to consider these regulations; whether they are reasonable as applied to a lawful purpose.

"Mr. Lewin: I am not sure that it is a matter of fact they have any such right.

"The Court: I am going to refuse the prayer as it is on the ground that the present arrangement of the language seems quite misleading to me, especially as to the first clause; and that last part of it is quite assertive and argumentative; and then I will make a note here to cover it in some other way."

31

I charge you that free and fair competition is just as desirable in the medical profession as in other activities within the purview of the Sherman Act; and I charge you further that the defendants were entitled, both collectively and individually, to adopt and carry out reasonable regulations in professional practice for the purpose of maintaining free and fair competition in the District of Columbia and to use all legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument thought proper to support what the defendants believed was free and fair competition in the medical profession, and that any restraints caused thereby upon Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors, members or operations, without more, would not violate the Sherman Act. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: 31. Is this bad? I say this ought to be refused. It would leave the jury to determine; it would make them the judges as to whether acts were illegal or not. I think that is right, is it not? 'What the defendants believed was free and fair competition' et cetera—I will refuse that."

I charge you that the defendants, both collectively and individually, had a right to examine into and to approve or disapprove for themselves and all others whom they might persuade to agree with them, any and all types, kinds and methods for the securing or administering of medical service, and that the said defendants, either individually or collectively, had a right to reach such conclusion with respect to any particular plan for the furnishing of medical service as might seem proper to them, and that the said defendants had the right, both publicly and privately, to urge, advance and support that plan of medical service which, to them, seemed best, either in the interests of the defendants themselves, the interests of their Societies, the interests of the medical profession, or in the best interests of the public. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: 32 has this 'approved' and 'disapproved'. I say this: they had a right to disapprove and oppose by lawful means, and a right to support it by lawful means. This language is misleading. I can remember it very well when you say 'all others', et cetera. I am going to refuse that as it is and I am going to make a note to revise that language. As far as you are concerned it will be refused."

I charge you that the defendant District Medical Society and the defendant members thereof had a right to retain and employ competent legal counsel to advise them in matters in connection with which such advice was desired, and particularly in reference to their rights and duties in their Medical Societies, and in rules and regulations relating thereto, and I charge you that the defendants were entitled to rely upon the legal advice so obtained, and, if you find from the evidence that the defendants did rely upon such legal advice, then you are entitled to take that fact into consideration in determining whether or not that which such defendants did in the controversy here presented, as a result of such advice was reasonable or unreasonable. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: 33, that is out. There is no question about it."

36

I charge you that in order to convict the defendants, or any of them, in this case, you must find that the acts, if any, committed by such defendants were committed for the direct and primary purpose of restraining Group Health Association, Inc., and were not primarily committed for the purpose of supporting and protecting either the interests of the defendants themselves, their Societies, their profession, their code of ethics, the public interest, or their method and type of medical practice. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: What about 36?

"Mr. Lewin: I think it is bad.

"The Court: I have it marked 'Refused' with a question mark. The underlying thought is not objectionable but the statement is confusing and misleading, especially as to intent and motive. 'If restraint intended or effect natural it is immaterial, whether primary or secondary.'

"Mr. Lewin: That is the point. You have stated my point.

"The Court: I think I will refuse it.

"Mr. Richardson: Will you make a note to give the thought in it?

"The Court: I will."

38

I charge you that the offense of conspiracy may be established by circumstantial evidence, but circumstantial evidence to warrant a conviction in a criminal case must be of such a character as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis but that of guilt of the offense imputed to the defendants, or, in other words, the facts proved must all be consistent with and point to his guilt only, and inconsistent with his innocence. The hypothesis of guilt should flow naturally from the facts proven and be consistent with them all. If the evidence can be reconciled either with the theory of innocence or with guilt, the law requires that the defendant be given the benefit of the doubt, and that the theory of innocence be adopted. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: This is also circumstantial evidence. I have a question here about this part in the center beginning with 'in other words, the facts proved must all be consistent with guilt and inconsistent with innocence.' I think that is a little incorrect.

"Mr. Richardson: That is an exact quotation.

"The Court: If they are both reasonable inferences,—that is the point of it. If you have two inferences, either one of which is reasonable, then, of course, you cannot convict, because you have a reasonable hypothesis which necessarily involves a reasonable doubt, but if one is unreasonable and the other reasonable, you follow the line of reason. It ought to be qualified in that respect.

I will refuse it as it is but I will make a note to cover that."

40

I charge you that, if you find that it is a reasonable inference from the facts proven that the defendants in committing any acts which you may find they did commit, did so in the belief that they were acting lawfully and within their legal rights to act, and without any intention of committing any unlawful conspiracy or of furthering any unlawful intent or purpose, then I charge you that the evidence would be legally insufficient to warrant the conviction of the defendants in this case. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: 40. This ought to be refused. It deals with belief as to the legality of the act."

The evidence in this case discloses that Group Health Association, Inc., received the amount of $40,000 from the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

I charge you that, if the defendants believed that such payment was without authority of law and that the receipt of the same by Group Health Association, Inc., was wrongful, that the defendants would be lawfully entitled to act upon such belief in exercising their rights of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument in opposition to Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors, members and operations, and in enforcing their laws, rules and regulations against members accepting employment with Group Health Association, Inc. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: I think this: I think it should be refused because a little misleading the way stated but, of course, if the $40,000 was one reason which led you to argue against it, that is one thing. You can argue it on any reason you want, whether $40,000, or what not, but the last part, 'in enforcing their rules and regulations against G. H. A.',——

"Mr. Kelleher: The point is that persuasion; it should be pointed out.

"The Court: That is my idea about it. I say here as to the next prayer, which deals with the same thing, stated in a different way—I say, 'They have a right to persuade, et cetera, but that is not the issue; it is whether they conspired to restrain.'

"Mr. Richardson: Yes.

"The Court: You are trying to make a question of whether they argued and persuaded an issue in the case.

"Mr. Leahy: When you say they have a right to argue and persuade it seems like they have not if they cannot do it.

"The Court: I am not telling the jury that. I am going to refuse 41. I think the language is bad. I will make a note."

42

I charge you that, if you find from the evidence that the Comptroller General had held that the $40,000 payment made by Home Owners Loan Corporation to Group Health Association, Inc., was without authority of law and such decision of the Comptroller was known to the defendants, that you would be entitled to take such knowledge into consideration in determining whether the acts committed by the defendants were within the limits of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument. Refused. J. M. P.

"Mr. Richardson: And the same thing as to 42?

"The Court: It seems to me there seems to be some difference there.

"Mr. Kelleher: There isn't any evidence to show the Comptroller General so held.

"The Court: There is some indirect reference to that.

"Mr. Kelleher: Yes, but the direct evidence on the subject was excluded.

"Mr. Lewin: And the Comptroller General had no jurisdiction whatsoever.

"Mr. Kelleher: The point is this, that you are going to charge them that legitimate persuasion is all right.

"The Court: That word 'legitimate,' I often wonder what the courts mean by that. I think it means argument that has a reasonable foundation, reasonable basis. Wouldn't that be what they mean? Certainly they couldn't go out and slander and libel a person and justify as engaging in legitimate persuasion.

"Mr. Leahy: That is right.

"The Court: We can agree that they could not go out and by slander and libel put a merchant out of business. That is what I think they mean; some foundation in truth and reason.

"Mr. Richardson: It is not quite clear from what you say whether it is proper to argue the $40,000 item at all.

"The Court: My idea, of course, is this: In view of the fact that they had the right to argue and persuade, it doesn't make any difference that their argument involves the subject of $40,000 or something else.

"Mr. Richardson: No, but in discussing their argument and persuasion can one refer to what they argued and persuaded about?

"Mr. Kelleher: How does that fact that there was a $40,000 involved tend to show all they were doing was persuading and arguing?

"Mr. Richardson: Because from our standpoint it was the most extreme monkeying with Government money; practically embezzlement.

"The Court: The only thing you can say is, 'We did not intend to restrain. We argued against G. H. A., and we took our position against it, and we think it was legitimate argument; fair argument and persuasion, because we had circumstances which gave us a reasonable foundation and basis for that argument.' It seems that is as far as you can go.

"Mr. Richardson: If you cannot state what the basis of your argument and persuasion was, you are not saying anything. Here was this $40,000 transaction. We believed it; we want to argue it.

"The Court: I have here—speaking about 42, 'Yes, they have a right to argue and persuade, but that is not an issue in the case. In other words they are not charged with the purpose to restrain G. H. A. by illegitimate argument and persuasion.'

"Mr. Richardson: Yes, but unless we are able to state the basis on which we did argue we are given the right to persuade and argue and then not permitted to argue about it, because the Government contends you did this for an illegal purpose and we cannot say we did it for a legal purpose.

"The Court: You can say you didn't conspire; you didn't restrain.

"Mr. Richardson: That is a pure conclusion.

"The Court: You can say, 'We didn't do anything but argue and persuade and we did that because there were circumstances justifying that.'

"Mr. Lewin: The reasons which you wish to argue are consistent with boycott:

"Mr. Richardson: All right, if the argument is consistent with boycott then we have a right to make our argument and let the jury decide whether it was argument and persuasion, or not. If you will let us state to the jury what the argument is, then we can get some decision as to what is reasonable persuasion.

"The Court: If you were merely indulging in exercising your right of argument and persuasion, all right; but if you agreed to conspire, all wrong. You are charged with conspiring, not with arguing. Nothing in here charges you with argument and persuasion.

"Mr. Leahy: Of course, as I understand your Honor's ruling, it is if we conspired we are guilty but we have a right to show what we did and why.

"Mr. Lewin: But you cannot go back to that $40,000; that doesn't have a tendency to meet that issue.

"Mr. Richardson: Anything which operating on our minds led us to do something is legitimate in this case because we are charged with having done these things with a purpose in our mind, just exactly as your Honor held with reference to the letter that came here from Worcester, when you said you didn't care whether it was true or not; it furnishes a reason why these people did something.

"The Court: The issue there was this: Was it done arbitrarily, pursuant to the conspiracy, and that tended to show otherwise. It tended to show good faith in the rejection.

"Mr. Richardson: It is a perfect tendency. We are charged with having boycotted these people without any excuse whatsoever. We are charged that our refusal to put G. H. A. on the white list was an act done to further the conspiracy, and is one of the things that will be shaken in our faces. Now, then, if we refuse a demand under Section 5 because we believed this concern was handling Government money illegally, may we not say so?

"The Court: Then I have to reverse my whole position.

"Mr. Lewin: We are going to object to any argument about that. That is the reason it is in here.

"Mr. Richardson: Frankly, we put that in the case here because we think it is error. We want to increase the error.

Your Honor said we still could argue the question of $40,000 as the reason why we acted, as an example of our persuasion and argument.

"Mr. Lewin: It might be boycott; that is why it cannot be argued.

"The Court: I think I will refuse it. We have been all over this."

43

I charge you that, if you find from the evidence that a committee of the House of Representatives reported to Congress that the $40,000 payment made by Home Owners Loan Corporation to Group Health Association, Inc., was without authority of law and such report was known to the defendants and believed by them, the defendants would be justified in relying upon such report in the exercise of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument in opposition to Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors, members and operations, and in favor of the interests of the defendants, their Societies, rules of ethics, the medical profession and the public interest. Refused, J. M. P.

"Mr. Richardson: Now, you are on 43.

"Mr. Kelleher: 43 is the same kind.

"The Court: Yes, I think that is the same thing, stated in another way.

"Mr. Kelleher: It is the House of Representatives.

"The Court: Oh, sure, refused."

45

I charge you that criticism by the defendants of, or opposition to, Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors, members and operations, is not unlawful and, without more, does not establish a criminal conspiracy under the Sherman Act, even if such opposition and criticism was done collectively by the defendants, because the defendant Societies, if they act at all in criticism or opposition, must act collectively, and such collective action, being lawful, is not in violation of the Sherman Act. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: Well, I have this, 'To be qualified.' You see, all this in my charge will go in under the right to criticize, oppose, et cetera, if it is not a part of the conspiracy to restrain, and I have it in my mind that the last part of this is argumentative.

"Mr. Kelleher: I don't know why they must act collectively.

"The Court: I think that prayer—I will refuse the prayer, and make a note to cover it. It is very argumentative."

46

I charge you that objection and criticism made by the defendants, if you so find, directed at Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors, members or operations, no matter how severe or, in the opinion of Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors and members, how unjust, is not unlawful and in itself does not constitute a violation of the Sherman Act, whether done collectively by the defendants in and through their medical Societies, or individually. Refused. J. M. P.

"Mr. Leahy: Then 46, follows 45; probably qualified the same way.

"Mr. Lewin: The same objection to it.

"The Court: I am going to refuse it. I have these grounds stated here:

'Collective criticism may be unlawful but would not violate statute.'

"Mr. Richardson: I don't see why 46 isn't a good statement of the law.

"The Court: No, collective criticism may be an unlawful thing; such as a concerted course of libel as I have spoken of. That would be an unlawful means. Not the purpose, but the means are unlawful.

"Mr. Richardson: Well, the idea is that you severely criticized someone; that the defendants had a right to severely criticize.

"The Court: Sure they did.

"Mr. Richardson: And it didn't make any difference then if they criticized collectively rather than individually.

"The Court: That is your thought, but you have it so phrased, 'is not unlawful.' It may be unlawful, if it involves slander, libel. I will work that in. I have a note here."

49

I charge you that any acts done or committed by the American Medical Association or by its officers prior to January 1, 1937, are only admissible in this case as furnishing a background for a connection by American Medical Association with the alleged conspiracy. Such evidence cannot be used by you for the purpose of establishing the existence of the conspiracy itself as charged in the indictment. Such conspiracy, as here charged, must be established by evidence which convinces you beyond a reasonable doubt, w..olly separate and apart from any acts committed prior to January 1, 1937. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: I think his prayer is subject to this criticism. You say such evidence 'cannot be used for the purpose of establishing the existence of the conspiracy itself.' I know exactly what you mean, but that is misleading. It is evidence in the case, that is why it is there. It is evidence tending to show power out of which a conspiracy could be effectuated. It is evidence in the case. Don't you see what I mean?

"Mr. Leahy: Yes.

"The Court: The way you have it stated there, it is not evidence.

"Mr. Richardson: Not evidence for the purpose of proving the conspiracy itself.

"The Court: It is not enough in itself; it is an evidentiary fact.

"Mr. Richardson: I think it only tends to show that the A. M. A. was only getting into the conspiracy because it disliked that sort of practice.

"The Court: I will refuse the prayer; I will revise the language and make a note to qualify it."

50

I charge you that a plan or purpose on the part of the defendants, either individually or collectively, to protect and defend their organizations, their rules and regulations and their principles of medical ethics from an attack thereon or opposition thereto coming from Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors, its members or operations, was not unlawful and would not constitute an unlawful conspiracy in violation of the Sherman Act. Refused. J. M. P.

"Mr. Richardson: I do not think there will be any objection to that.

"Mr. Kelleher: There is no evidence in the case of that.

"The Court: I do not just get it, myself. What I have here is that if the acts did not go to the point of conspiracy to restrain, if they did not intend to restrain, or if the natural consequences were not to restrain, they had a right to do those things.

"Mr. Richardson: It should be considered that neither the White List nor Section 5 nor any of these long meetings in reference to our own members would ever have transpired if they had not come into our house and tried to take away members in violation of our rules.

"Mr. Lewin: That is no attack.

"Mr. Richardson: It is an attack which, if successful, would ruin the Society. If our members can disobey and break our rules we might as well fold up and quit.

"The Court: Suppose your purpose was to do that, but the necessary effect of it was to restrain G. H. A.?

"Mr. Richardson: There would be no restraint under the Sherman Act resulting from protecting ourselves.

"Mr. Lewin: There was no boycott by Group Health against you.

"Mr. Richardson: There was an attempt to take away members in violation of our rules.

"Mr. Kelleher: This is an attempt to try to torture the principle of self defense into this case.

"Mr. Richardson: The Court has several times said that we have a right to do these things to protect ourselves.

"Mr. Lewin: Protect against what?

"Mr. Richardson: The loss of our members and the breaking of the rules.

"Mr. Lewin: You could have kept Lee and Scandiffio on your roster. The rules were illegal. That is an issue in the case.

"Mr. Richardson: No; there is no such issue, and you have never contended to the Court that the rules are illegal, and the Court is not going to charge the jury to that effect.

"The Court: If these things were done for the sole purpose of maintaining and supporting the organization and its rules——

"Mr. Richardson: That is what I mean.

"The Court (continuing:) —that would be lawful.

"Mr. Richardson: It is protective.

"Mr. Lewin: Provided the rules were not bad.

"The Court: I do not understand that any rules adopted were adopted during the conspiracy, were they?

"Mr. Lewin: How about the White List?

"Mr. Richardson: That antedated the conspiracy, too. It was brought out the first of May, on this testimony.

"Mr. Kelleher: July 12.

"Mr. Leahy: Section 5 was adopted in 1935.

"Mr. Lewin: As applied here it was adopted on March 3, 1937.

"The Court: I think I have the right idea about this. I think I will refuse it as it is and work it out. I do not like the language of it. I am refusing it."

51

I charge you that the defendant members of the District of Columbia Medical Society and such Society had a lawful right to adopt the resolution of December 1, 1937, relating to the recommendation by the District Medical Society to have the medical staffs of the hospitals confined to its members and to transmit such resolution to the hospitals as legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument for the purpose of inducing and persuading the hospitals to so agree and act, and the tansmission of such request to such hospitals without more, would not constitute an illegal threat or unlawful coercion, as against such hospitals, and would not be in violation of the Sherman Act. Refused.

"The Court: What do you think about No. 51?

"Mr. Lewin: I think it is undue emphasis again on a false issue.

"Mr. Kelleher: It is calculated to persuade the jury to believe that they could use that sort of persuasion.

"Mr. Leahy: We had a right to do this as legitimate persuasion and argument.

"The Court: I have got this note here: 'Granted,' with a little question mark, and then——

'Yes, if not part of a conspiracy, if not intended to coerce,' and so forth. I think the language is a little off.

"Mr. Lewin: I am sure that the same idea has been undertaken in former prayers.

"The Court: There seems to be a lot of these.

"Mr. Richardson: This refers to the resolution of December 1st, and it is the only one that refers to that resolution.

"The Court: You want to say that all you intended by this was to give to the hospitals reasoned argument, and that you had a right to do it, and that is all?

"Mr. Richardson: Yes.

"Mr. Lewin: But of course if they went down there to persuade those hospitals to keep all Group Health doctors out because they were Group Health doctors——

"The Court: I do not think it means that.

"Mr. Lewin: That was at the same time they were expelling Scandiffio.

"Mr. Kelleher: That is the trouble with it, your Honor.

"Mr. Richardson: They were only expelling Scandiffio because he broke the rules; that was all.

"Mr. Lewin: I think it gives too much emphasis to this. I do not think the Court of Appeals meant it to be done in this case, that is, boycott.

"Mr. Leahy: You call it boycott all the time.

"Mr. Richardson: Every man that shoots another murders him.

"The Court: Suppose the doctors, members of organized medicine, pursuant to their belief that this would work to the betterment of the public interest in giving further assurance of proper doctors on the medical staff, adopted such a regulation as this and then went to the hospitals and said, 'Don't you think that would be wise for the benefit of your hospital and the practice of medicine?'

"Mr. Lewin: It would be an illegal attempt to monopolize.

"Mr. Leahy: Not the slightest.

"The Court: Suppose the jury believes that to be reasonable, in view of the fact that it involved the staffs of hospitals to which the public must go for operations and upon whom they must depend for operations. There undoubtedly is fair reasoning back of it.

"Mr. Richardson: It is uncontradicted in the testimony.

"Mr. Kelleher: There is not anything that shows it is reasonable.

"Mr. Richardson: There is not a man who testified that did not testify that it was a good thing.

"Mr. Leahy: There are lots of doctors who are not on the staffs of hospitals.

"The Court: Is there any reason why doctors might not, by argument and persuasion, attempt to induce the hospitals to adopt that as a reasonable regulation? It comes down to whether or not, under the conditions, it would be reasonable, of course.

"Mr. Kelleher: Under the Paramount case it does not make any difference how reasonable a regulation is; if it is one that shuts a man out it cannot be done."

"Mr. Leahy: They can shut a man out individually, and they have done it.

"Mr. Lewin: They canont do it by rule or regulation.

"Mr. Kelleher: When you get these doctors working on it you get collective action by the hospitals.

"Mr. Leahy: Oh, no; not at all."

Thereupon the following took place:

"The Court: Maybe we had better come down tomorrow and finish this. I do not believe we are going very far. I am tired.

"Mr. Leahy: Can you not work this out and let us know?

"The Court: Yes; I can do that. But you would not know what I had worked out. I can probably have a little session with you on Wednesday morning and indicate it to you. I think I know your arguments pro and con pretty well now. You might meet me here at 9:30 on Wednesday morning and I can indicate to you. If I can have a whole day to myself I may be able to clarify this thing in my mind so that I can indicate to you very clearly how I am going to handle it. But I am too tired now.

"Mr. Lewin: I think you know our position."

Thereupon the defendants offered the following prayers and instructions:

54

I charge you that the public is concerned with the maintenance of professional standards which will insure not only competency in individual practitioners, but protection against those who would prey upon the public peculiarly susceptible to imposition through alluring promise of physical relief, and the public is concerned in providing safeguards not only against deception but against practices which would demoralize the profession by forcing its members into an unseemly rivalry which would enlarge the operations of the least scrupulous. What is generally called the ethics of the profession is but the consensus of expert opinion as to the necessity of such standards. Refused. J. M. P.

I charge you that the defendant District Medical Society may lawfully provide and keep a list of organizations whose plans of medical service have been approved by the defendant Society and that such list may be kept not only for the use of the members of the defendant District Medical Society but also as notice to others, and the public generally, what organizations and methods of practice have been approved, and the fact that Group Health Associations, Inc., its doctors, members, and operations might be hindered or restrained as a result of such list and the publication thereof would not, of itself, constitute a violation of the Sherman Act. Refused. J. M. P.

56

The defendant members of the District Medical Society had a right to agree among themselves by duly constituted Society action that the Constitution of the Society should contain a provision forbidding members to have professional relationships with organizations (believed by it to be) engaged in the practice of medicine until such particular organization and its operations had first been approved by such Society, and I further charge you that, if, after having adopted such a provision and while the same was in force, any member violating the same might be properly subject to disciplinary proceedings, and to expulsion from the Society, if the Society, after due proceedings, should so determine.

Membership in the Society is conditioned upon obedience to the lawful rules of the Society and disobedient members have no right to insist upon securing the rights and advantages of membership without at the same time remaining in obedience to the lawful rules of such Society. Refused. J. M. P.

Each of the Washington hospitals had the right, if it might so choose, to take into consideration in passing upon the qualifications of applicants for membership upon its medical staff, the ethics as well as the professional qualifications of such applicants, and might thereafter grant or refuse any applicant upon any ground or reason which might, to the particular hospital seem to it desirable, proper or necessary. Refused. J. M. P.

60

Evidence has been permitted in this case with respect to the public need or lack of need of so-called low-cost medicine. I charge you that any need, or lack of need, for a low-cost medicine plan, has nothing to do with the right of the defendants to exercise their lawful powers and duties in connection with the practice of the medical profession. The rights of Group Health Association, Inc. are no greater because of an alleged need for low-cost medicine, than if no such need existed. Group Health Association, Inc. had a lawful right to disapprove of what it may have thought was the attitude of the defendants toward low-cost medicine plans, just as the defendants had an equal right to disapprove of what the defendants thought was the attitude of Group Health Association, Inc. with respect to low-cost medicine plans. Each party to the controversy had the right to further and advance its own opinion in the controversy by all methods of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument whether applied to members of the medical profession, the Washington hospitals, or the public. Refused. J. M. P.

61

I charge you that if the defendants in good faith believed that the plan and operation of Group Health Association, Inc. was not economically sound and that the result of such economic unsoundness would not be in the public interest, that you would be entitled to consider such belief on the part of the defendants in determining whether the defendants acted reasonably in doing or committing the acts, which, from the evidence, you may find they did commit. Refused. J. M. P.

63

Evidence has been offered concerning acts done in relation to certain Milwaukee hospitals. I charge you that it would be improper for you to find any of the defendants guilty by reason of your conclusion concerning such Milwaukee matter. Such evidence was admitted solely as a so-called background which might serve to explain other testimony in the case, and such Milwaukee testimony must be only so considered by you. Whether any of the defendants acted wrongfully in the Milwaukee matter is not for you to decide in this case. Refused. J. M. P.

64

I charge you that if the defendant District Medical Society and the defendant members thereof were advised by counsel that Group Health Association, Inc. was a corporation and as such was illegally engaged in the practice of medicine defendant Association could lawfully provide by constitution, by-law, rule or regulation that its members should not render medical services to Group Health Association, Inc. or through Group Health Association, Inc. to its members; and could lawfully expel any member who violated such constitutional provision, by-law, rule or regulation. Such expulsion under such circumstances would not be a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. Refused. J. M. P.

65

I charge you as a matter of law that if you find from the evidence that a dispute or controversy existed between the defendants as physicians and medical associations of physicians, and Group Health Association, Inc., its physicians, other physicians seeking employment with Group Health Association, Inc., and its members, concerning terms or conditions of employment or concerning the association or representation of defendants in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment pertaining to the practice of medicine and the care and treatment of patients by physicians, including hospitalization, and further find that the defendants and all other parties to the dispute or controversy, including the Washington hospitals, have direct or indirect interests in the same trade or occupation, and further find that the defendants acted in self-interest, and further find that the defendants acted peacefully and without violence, then you must return a verdict of "Not Guilty" as to all defendants. Refused. J. M. P.

66

I charge you that an unlawful combination and conspiracy is the confederation and agreement of two or more persons for an unlawful purpose or to accomplish a lawful purpose by illegal means. In this case the combination and conspiracy charged in the indictment if illegal must be found to be so because of an illegal purpose as there is no allegation or proof of any means in and of themselves illegal. In order to find an illegal combination and conspiracy you must find from the evidence that the restraints charged and proved beyond a reasonable doubt did or could operate to suppress competition in trade in the District of Columbia. The gist of a charge of conspiracy is agreement. If you find no agreement was entered into and agreed upon by the defendants that did or could operate to suppress competition in trade in the District of Columbia then you must return a verdict of "Not Guilty" as to all defendants. Refused. J. M. P.

"The Court: 59. That is granted.

62. That is granted. I don't like that term "per se" for a jury. I would prefer to speak of it as "of itself."

58. That is granted.

53 is granted, as amended. That is the one we stopped on. There is little amendment there. "The defendants can lawfully combine to support the medical organization." I have just struck out the term "conspire;" that is a bad use of the word; "conspire" does imply criminal acts.

"Mr. Kelleher: I wonder if I could question that.

"The Court: Well, you haven't much time.

"Mr. Kelleher: Isn't it true that they can combine to persuade for any purpose?

"The Court: Let us see. "The defendants • • • by persuasion and reasoned argument and by any other lawful means." That is too broad. The purpose here, of course, would be lawful. I think it is a good prayer. I mean when you read it along with the other prayers, it will work out. Just standing alone I think it is all right. Of course, I have been oppressed by these prayers; there are so many of them.

63. That is refused, the way it is stated. What have you got to say about that?

"Mr. Kelleher: Concerning the Milwaukee situation: that is power, purpose and general plan and scheme.

"The Court: I don't see how you could apply the general plan and scheme done in another place at another time.

"Mr. Kelleher: This Milwaukee thing is contemporaneous.

"The Court: That doesn't make any difference.

"Mr. Kelleher: If they had a general plan to force doctors throughout the United States out of hospitals, through this Mundt Resolution, the enforcement of that here would be material.

"Mr. Richardson: We are dealing with only one defendant in a conspiracy. When you did a certain act it might have had a certain purpose, but it doesn't establish the conspiracy and the purposes. They couldn't possibly find the local defendants guilty on the basis of what was done in Milwaukee.

"The Court: There isn't anything at all to connect the local defendants with that scheme or plan, whatever it may be. They were not interested in the outside activities of the American Medical Association concerning this plan. They were only interested in the local situation.

"Mr. Kelleher: We only offer it against the A. M. A. and Dr. Cutter, to show what he was doing when writing to these hospitals concerning the Mundt Resolution.

"Mr. Richardson: The only point would be when he wrote Milwaukee the Government will say he was using the Mundt Resolution to coerce.

"The Court: I will refuse the prayer. As stated, it is bad.

"Mr. Richardson: Something ought to be stated to show——

"The Court: I know. I may, if I can get time to construct some sort of a charge. You say this applies to the A. M. A. and Cutter only, this "intention, et cetera"?

"Mr. Kelleher: Intention, purpose and plan.

"The Court: Intention and purpose are the same.

"Mr. Kelleher: That is right, intention and scheme.

"The Court: Intention and plan.

66 is refused. 65 is refused. 64 is refused. 61 is refused. 60 is refused. 57 is refused. 56 is refused. 55 is refused. 54 is refused. Doesn't that cover them all?

"Mr. Richardson: I have 52 marked "Hold." It has not been discussed this morning.

"Mr. Kelleher: I would suggest it might be all right. We have no objection to 52.

"The Court: I have already covered that. I understand you are going to undertake the whole argument, Mr. Leahy?

"Mr. Leahy: Yes, I think so.

"The Court: If you want those prayers to go before the jury, I wish you would read them, or have one of your colleagues do so; the ones that are granted. It fits in better with your argument.[10] Secondly, it gives me an opportunity then to present my charge in which will be incorporated in substance the prayers, but not verbatim, thereby shortening my charge and smoothing it out. In it I will say that I granted certain instructions at the request of counsel "that have been read to you and you will consider them as proper statements of the law." That will be a great help to me.

"Mr. Kelleher: I don't know whether that is directed to us also, because we had not intended to read any of the instructions.

"The Court: Well, I don't think it is so appropriate or necessary for you to do so; I have covered the substance of everything.

"Mr. Kelleher: Then there will be no burden on us to do so if we do not wish to?

"The Court: No, I will give the substance.

"Mr. Magee: Is it understood that we have an exception to each prayer overruled?

"The Court: Yes. Of course, there were some prayers of yours which the record shows were amended with your approval. As to these, of course, I assume there is no exception to the refusal of the original prayer."

The objections of the United States as stated hereinbefore were sustained, and defendants' prayers or requests for instructions to the jury numbered 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 23, 31, 32, 33, 36, 38, 40, 41, 42, 43, 45, 46, 49, 50, 51, 54, 55, 56, 57, 60, 61, 63, 64, 65, and 66 were denied and an exception allowed the defendants.

The Charge to the Jury

The Court: Members of the jury, counsel for the respective parties have submitted to the Court many so-called prayers which are simply written requests to the Court to instruct the jury in particular matters on the law applicable to the case. Those prayers have been considered and quite a list have been granted by the Court as correct statements of the law. It will be necessary for me to read them to you. First, I will deal with the prayers in behalf of the Government.

[10] The Court later informed counsel that the instructions granted would be read by the Court in the charge.

The burden of proving the defendants guilty is upon the Government. This does not mean, however, that the Government's proof must establish the defendants' guilt to an absolute certainty. You may find the defendants guilty, if you are convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of all the essential facts necessary to establish the guilt of the defendants.

A reasonable doubt must be real and not imaginary. It must be an honest and substantial misgiving for which a good reason may be given, based upon the nature of the evidence or lack of evidence in the case. If all the evidence in the case, impartially and reasonably considered, produces in your minds a settled conviction or belief of the defendants' guilt—such an abiding conviction as you would be willing to act upon in the most important affairs of your own life—you may be said to be free from any reasonable doubt, and should find a verdict in accordance with that conviction.

In considering the testimony, you should, as to each witness, consider his demeanor and manner of testifying, his interest, if any, in the result of the trial, any temptation to testify falsely, his opportunity to know the facts, the probability or improbability of the testimony given, and all other like circumstances appearing from the evidence; and from all these you should determine the weight and credit to be given to the testimony of the witness. If you believe that any witness has wilfully testified falsely to a material fact, you may disregard all of the testimony of that witness, or give credit to such part thereof as you deem it warrants.

The fact that the defendants may have believed Group Health illegal is not material to the case. A mistake of law will not excuse a violation of the Sherman Act. The fact that the defendants may have had an honest and reasonable belief that Group Health Association was operating illegally would not constitute any justification to violate the law. If you find the defendants were engaged in a combination as charged, it is unnecessary for you to decide whether Group Health Association or its staff may have violated the principles of medical ethics of the American Medical Association, if such were the fact. It is immaterial that Group Health Association may have employed doctors on a contract basis, or that the members of Group Health Association may not have had complete freedom of choice of physicians from the entire body of doctors practicing in the District of Columbia, or that Group Health Association or its organizers may have solicited Government employees to join Group Health Association. It is likewise immaterial to the issues which you must decide that the defendants may have believed that Group Health Association or the members of its medical staff violated the Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association.

If you find that the defendants were engaged in a combination as charged, it is unnecessary for you to decide whether the medical care given by the medical staff of Group Health Association was equal to, superior to, or inferior to, the quality of medical care rendered by doctors engaged in private practice. That is immaterial to the issues in the case.

If you find that the defendants were engaged in a combination as alleged, it is unnecessary to decide whether Group Health Association was financially sound. The financial condition of Group Health Association and the sources of its financial support during the period of the conspiracy are immaterial to the issues in this case. It is also immaterial that the defendants may have believed that Group Health Association was financially unsound or that it was subsidized by other organizations.

The Sherman Act prohibits combinations unreasonably in restraint of trade. This prohibition extends to undue restraints upon the furnishing of medical service to the public. If you find that the defendants conspired together for the purposes charged and employed the means charged, and if you find that the defendants, in seeking to achieve those purposes, intended to prevent Group Health Association from competing with doctors engaged in private practice on a fee-for-service basis in furnishing medical care to members of the public eligible for membership in Group Health Association, then the defendants were engaged in a combination in restraint of trade.

If you find a conspiracy to exist, all acts and declarations, oral or written, of each party to the conspiracy, in furtherance of the objects, may be considered as evidence against all of the parties to the conspiracy. This is true even though the party doing such act or making such declaration is not on trial or is not named in the indictment as a defendant.

That is, every person who, knowing of the conspiracy, does any act or makes any statement intended to further the objects thereof, does thereby become a party to the unlawful conspiracy.

It is not necessary that all of the parties to a conspiracy shall actually meet together at one and the same time and place, or that all discuss its purposes or the means of carrying out its objectives, or whether each party knows all the others. Nor do you need to find that all combined together at the start of the conspiracy. If it is shown that the conspiracy was entered into between two or more of the defendants and that at any later time during its existence new or additional parties, while aware of its existence, united with them for the purpose of aiding in the accomplishment of the scheme, they would then become conspirators too and responsible for the consequences thereof.

In determining whether a conspiracy exists it is not necessary to find there was a written or formal agreement among the defendants, or that any participant was bound to another to perform any particular portion thereof. It is sufficient if you find from the evidence that the defendants were voluntarily acting together, however informally, in order to carry out the common objective. Notwithstanding the fact that all of the defendants are charged to have participated in the offense, it is not necessary for the Government to prove that all did so, and you are not required to find all guilty. If you find that the offense charged was in fact committed and that some of the defendants on trial were parties to it, you may convict those whom you so find guilty and acquit the others.

That completes the reading of the instructions on behalf of the Government.

These are instructions granted at the request of the defendants:

The defendants and each of them are presumed to be innocent of the crime charged to them and each of them in the indictment. This presumption surrounds and remains with each throughout the entire trial and should be considered by you in determining the guilt or innocence of each.

Before a verdict of Guilty can be returned against the defendants or any of them the evidence of the Government must not merely indicate guilt, but it must be inconsistent with any rational theory of innocence. Thus, if the jury finds from the evidence what the defendants did is just as consistent with innocence as with guilt, then the verdict must be Not Guilty as to those defendants.

The defendants had the lawful right to combine and form corporations and associations for the improvement of the practice of their profession and to advance their interests. They had the right to make reasonable rules and regulations respecting their profession and to ascertain the qualifications and character of their members. They had the right to discipline members who failed to abide by the regulations or rules adopted by the associations in the formation thereof and to suspend or expel from membership any member who failed to abide by the rules and regulations. The fact that the defendants adopted such rules and regulations and disciplined members does not of itself constitute an unlawful combination in violation of the statute. They must have combined together with the intent to injure, obstruct or restrain trade, or they must have intended to do acts the necessary effect of which would be to injure, obstruct or restrain trade.

The individual defendants as physicians had a right to determine with what other physicians they would consult, and their refusal to consult with any particular physician is not of itself illegal.

Physicians have the right to select the hospital in which they choose to treat and operate upon their patients; and the refusal of a physician to do business with any hospital because of the composition of its courtesy staff is not of itself illegal.

The defendants American Medical Association and Medical Society of the District of Columbia have the right to adopt rules for just and fair dealing among their members and the right of enforcement of those rules and regulations by such reasonable penalties as they may provide for violation thereof.

The defendants had the right to reach and attempt to reach their objective of advancing the interests of the medical profession by legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument, and to this end they had the right to tell their side of the story and to persuade others, including the Washington hospitals, other physicians, members of Group Health Association, Inc., and the public to utilize and use defendants' method of practicing medicine, and to use peaceful persuasion, publicity, articles in the press, in publications of defendants, including the Journal of the American Medical Association, and all lawful propaganda to have their methods of practicing medicine prevail over those of Group Health Association.

The defendants had the right to write letters or other statements among themselves or to other members of the profession or to the public generally, expressing disapproval of or opposition to Group Health Association and the form of medical service offered by it.

The defendants were entitled, through legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument, to endeavor to support and advance the interests and extension of that type of medical practice believed by the defendants to be in the public interest, without regard to whether such acts hindered Group Health Association, its doctors, members or operations, or any other type or method of medical practice. If they did not go further to conspire to restrain Group Health Association there would be no offense.

I charge you that the defendants have the lawful right, through action taken in their meetings and conferences, to formulate and adopt rules of medical ethics for the control and government of themselves and the members of their societies in the practice of their profession, and the support and maintenance of such principles of medical ethics by legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument or by enforcement of Society rules, laws and regulations, without more, would not constitute unreasonable restraints against Group Health Association, its doctors or members.

Any doctor who voluntarily joined the defendant Medical Societies was required to comply with the constitution, rules and regulations thereof. No doctor would have the right, as against the wishes of the particular society, to retain membership therein regardless of how valuable or advantageous such membership might be to him, and at the same time wilfully violate any provision of its constitution, rules or regulations.

If a doctor desires to retain membership he is bound to obey the constitution, rules and regulations, since membership therein is entirely voluntary; and if, as a result of his non-observance, he suffers discipline and possible expulsion from the society, any injury, damage or restraint thus suffered by him or by any corporation by which he might have been employed would, without more, not constitute a violation of the statute.

The Washington hospitals are private institutions under private management and control, and the lawful authority to constitute the medical staffs of such hospitals is vested in the governing board thereof. Hospitals have a lawful right to make such reasonable rules and regulations for the operation of the hospitals as to the authorities thereof may seem in their best interests. They are lawfully entitled to require obedience to such rules and regulations by all persons dealing with said hospitals, including doctors permitted by the hospitals to practice their profession therein.

The Washington hospitals had the lawful right, if they so desired, to adopt and enact a rule confining their medical staffs to members of the local medical societies, and any restraint resulting thereby to Group Health Association, its doctors, members, or operations would not in itself be a violation of the Sherman Act.

A member of the medical profession duly authorized by law to practice his profession in the District of Columbia is not by reason thereof entitled to practice in any of the private Washington hospitals. Permission to practice in such a hospital is not a right on the part of an applicant doctor, but is only a privilege which can be extended or withheld from him at the will of, or in the discretion of, the particular hospital.

If the Washington hospitals or any of them believed that it was in the best interests of such hospital to adopt and enforce a rule confining appointments to the medical staff to members in good standing of local Medical Societies, any such hospital had a lawful right to adopt and enforce such rule, and any resulting injury or restraint occasioned thereby to a particular doctor or other person would not be a violation of the statute.

The defendant American Medical Association had the lawful right, upon request of a hospital, to inspect it for the purpose of approving or disapproving it for interne or resident training, and it had a lawful right to approve or disapprove such hospital based on the inspection so made.

The American Medical Association was lawfully entitled to present for the consideration of the hospitals inspected the so-called Mundt Resolution concerning the selection of medical staffs exclusively from the members of local Medical Societies, and such action on the part of the American Medical Association would not of itself constitute an act of coercion as charged in the indictment.

Where the evidence in the case is in whole or in part circumstantial in its nature, the circumstances relied upon by the Government to establish the guilt of the defendants must so distinctly indicate the guilt as to leave no reasonable explanation consistent with innocence.

Facts which give rise to a reasonable and just inference that a conspiracy existed do not necessarily exclude every other reasonable hypothesis unless it can be said that only one just and reasonable inference may be drawn from the given state of facts.

The Medical Society of the District of Columbia is shown by the evidence to have been a component and constituent society and member of the American Medical Association. As such it was entitled to contact, communicate and advise with the officers and representatives of the American Medical Association with reference to matters affecting or relating to the practice of medicine, and such intercourse between the societies is not a violation of the Sherman Act.

If the defendants had objections to Group Health Association and the type of medical practice proposed by it, and believed that the system of medical practice approved by the defendants was better and more in the public interest, then the defendants were lawfully entitled, either individually or collectively, through legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument, either publicly or privately, to urge any and all persons to come to the support of the objectives of the defendants and to disapprove the objectives of Group Health Association, and any resulting restraint, injury, or damage to Group Health Association, its doctors, members or operations is not in violation of the law.

The defendant Wodward had a lawful right to prepare an article or a memorandum disapproving Group Health Association and matters relevant thereto, and to cause the same to be published by the American Medical Association in its Journal, and to do so, without more, would not be a violation of the Act on the part of Woodward or the American Medical Association.

The defendant Fishbein, the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, had a lawful right to publish in the Journal objections to Group Health Association and its proposed methods of medical practice; and such publication of articles criticizing Group Health and its plan for medical service, even though it may have restrained or injured Group Health Association, its doctors or members, standing alone and without more, would not make Fishbein guilty of a violation of the Act.

The American Medical Association and its officers had the lawful right to receive and answer inquiries concerning various so-called contract medicine plans, and the American Medical Association and its officers, in answering such inquiries, were lawfully entitled to state their own conclusions and beliefs with respect thereto, whether favorable or otherwise, and by so doing, without more, the American Medical Association and its officers would not violate the statute.

Evidence has been admitted tending to show the size and scope of the activities of the American Medical Association. Such fact does not raise any inference of wrongdoing or guilty conduct. Whether the American Medical Association is a large corporation or a small corporation does not affect its lawful right under the law; and the evidence is admitted here only for the purpose of showing the possible power, if any, of such corporation to induce and further the alleged illegal conspiracy set forth in the indictment.

A defendant does not become a party to a criminal conspiracy simply because he is a member of an association which might so conspire, or because he attends meetings of such organization where such conspiracy may be discussed, nor does he become a party to such conspiracy because he has knowledge of its existence or because he may even approve such conspiracy and its unlawful purpose. Before he can be found to be a member of a conspiracy it must appear that he knowingly and intentionally participated therein with the purpose and intention of aiding and furthering it; and you must find, before you can convict such defendant, that such intent existed beyond a reasonable doubt.

It is not unlawful to conspire and combine to effectuate a lawful purpose by lawful means. The defendants could lawfully combine to protect and support their medical organizations, their methods of professional practice, and the principles of medical ethics, by legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument or by any other lawful means.

There is nothing illegal of itself in enacting the so-called Mundt Resolution. The question is whether such resolution was intentionally used in order to aid in the carrying out of an illegal conspiracy on the part of the defendants. Nor would the fact that the Mundt Resolution was called to the attention of the Washington hospitals, in order to further the wishes of the American Medical Association in carrying out its purpose, be either improper or unlawful, unless you also find, beyond a reasonable doubt, that such acts were intentionally done to aid an illegal conspiracy then and there existing in the District of Columbia.

That, ladies and gentlemen, completes the reading of the instructions which were requested by counsel and granted by the Court.

And now may I, at the risk of some repetition, in my own way briefly outline the case to you and summarize some phases of the law which I deem important to guide you in your consideration?

The Act of Congress under which the indictment is brought makes illegal and punishable every combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade in the District of Columbia. The practice of medicine and the operation of hospitals and organizations to provide for medical care fall within the term trade as used in the Act.

The indictment charges a violation of the statute by the corporations, associations and individuals named in Article I thereof. You will have the indictment. It will inform you with particularity of the names of all the defendants and of the offense with which they are charged.

The case has terminated as to Thomas Allen Groover by reason of his death, and as to Harris County Medical Society, Washington Academy of Surgery, Leon Alphonse Martel and Joseph Rogers Young by the verdicts rendered at my direction.

For brevity, I shall refer to the American Medical Association as the American Association; the Medical Society of the District of Columbia as the District Society; and Group Health Association, Inc. as Group Health.

It is the duty of the Court to state the law of a case to the jury, and the duty of the jury to accept and follow the law as it is given by the Court. This, I am sure, you will do.

The indictment, and the action of the Grand Jury in returning the same, are no evidence of guilt. The defendants are not called upon to prove their innocence. They are presumed to be innocent and that presumption abides with them as a shield against conviction until and unless in your final judgment the evidence establishes guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Therefore, the burden rests upon the Government to prove guilt according to the charge laid in the indictment.

What is reasonable doubt, as that term is used in the trial of a criminal case? It is a doubt based upon reason; such a doubt as after a full and fair consideration of all the evidence, will leave a juror so undecided as that he cannot conscientiously say he has an abiding conviction of guilt, that is, a settled conviction; which he feels will abide with him in the future, so that if, perchance, his thoughts recur to his action in joining with his fellow jurors in a verdict of guilty, he will, in his own reflections, be justified in mind and conscience that he did the righteous thing.

Although proof beyond a reasonable doubt is necessary, that does not imply proof beyond all doubt and to an absolute certainty. Yet as a fair shield of protection to one accused of crime, the law does insist that before he shall be deprived of his good name and suffer the penalties of a criminal conviction his guilt shall be established by a measure of proof which leaves no reasonable doubt. The evidence must exclude any rational theory of innocence and admit only of an abiding belief in guilt. Hence, if an inference may be fairly drawn, as consistent with innocence as with guilt, a reasonable doubt would necessarily prevail. This is especially so in dealing with evidence of a circumstantial nature. Where such evidence is relied upon to prove essential elements of the charge, it must so clearly point to guilt as to exclude any rational theory of innocence.

Here in the case at bar the charge is that the defendants conspired to restrain trade in certain specified ways. A conspiracy takes form when two or more persons combine to do an unlawful thing, or to accomplish something of a lawful nature by unlawful means. Where such an agreement or understanding, however informal, is reached, all those who join therein become parties to the conspiracy. The object or the means to attain it must be illegal. There can be no criminal combination where both the object and the means are lawful. It is not essential that all details to carry out the plan be specifically arranged, or the particular acts of each be definitely assigned. It is enough if there has been a meeting of minds for concerted action to gain the common end. All need not know each other or meet together at any one time; nor need all combine at the start of the conspiracy. If two or more have done so, others with knowledge thereof may become participants at future times, while the conspiracy still continues, by uniting in the common design with the purpose to lend their encouragement and support to accomplish the same. Upon thus joining a conspiracy they render themselves liable not only for their own overt acts, but for those of other members to the enterprise. Hence, it is not necessary that all defendants take part in the unlawful acts charged in furtherance of the conspiracy or to know about the same. One may also be liable for an overt act, though actually performed by another, if he knowingly instigates or supports the same by advising, encouraging or abetting it. So, if the alleged conspiracy is found from the evidence to exist, the acts and declarations of each party, shown to be a conspirator, in furtherance thereof, may be considered by the jury in determining the guilt of others who are accused.

However, you will understand that guilt does not attach to one who merely knows of a conspiracy or of acts in furtherance thereof, even though done in his presence. A passive knowledge or attitude is not enough. There must be actual and conscious union with the criminal group. Therefore, membership in the defendant medical societies; presence at their meetings; knowledge of an unlawful plan or purpose among other members, if such there be, would not alone make one a participant. Besides such knowledge there must be the positive intention to give adherence and support to the criminal scheme. Those are brief statements of some rules of law of a general nature to be applied in your consideration of the case.

The indictment itself is very long. That, as you know, is a formal accusation of crime. Much of it is devoted to allegations descriptive of the defendants, as also of the Washington hospitals and Group Health. There are extensive allegations of acts done to effectuate the objects of the alleged conspiracy. All these matters have been frequently referred to during the trial, including the arguments of counsel, and need not be stated again in any detail.

An essential part of the indictment, important to understand, is that which specifically charges a violation of the statute. In substance it is alleged that the defendants conspired:

1. To restrain Group Health in its business of providing medical and hospital care to its members and their dependents on a risk-sharing prepayment basis;

2. To restrain doctors on the staff of Group Health in pursuit of their calling;

3. To restrain other doctors in the District of Columbia in the pursuit of their calling, and

4. To restrain the Washington hospitals in the business of operating such hospitals.

It is further alleged that the plan and purpose of the conspiracy was:

To hinder and obstruct Group Health in procuring and retaining qualified doctors and those doctors from consulting with other doctors and specialists practicing in the District by threatening with disciplinary action members of the District Society who should become members of the staff of Group Health or who should consult with members of that staff. Further, it is alleged the plan and purpose was to hinder and obstruct Group Health in obtaining access to hospital facilities for its members, and the doctors of Group Health from treating their patients in the hospitals.

These purposes, it is alleged, were to be attained by certain coercive measures against the hospitals and doctors designed to interfere with employment of doctors by Group Health and use of the hospitals by members of its medical staff and their patients. The plan is fully detailed in the indictment and has been referred to by Government counsel in their arguments.

To sustain that charge the Government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a conspiracy did in fact exist to restrain trade in the District in at least one of the several ways alleged, and according to the particular purpose and plan set forth. If the evidence fails to convince you of that basic element the charge will necessarily fall with resultant acquittal of all defendants. If you find that fact established, then you will consider the evidence in particular relation to each defendant, to determine whether it does prove beyond a reasonable doubt that such defendant was a party to the conspiracy. If you do so find, then that defendant should be convicted, but if a reasonable doubt of guilt prevails you will acquit.

The opposing contentions may be roughly stated as follows:

The Government claims that the evidence proves the medical societies were opposed to Group Health and its plan of group medical care on a fixed prepayment basis; that they feared competition by that method of practice as against the fee-for-service method of organized physicians; that to obstruct and destroy such competition the medical societies, with certain officers and members and the hospitals, conspired to prevent successful operation of Group Health's plan by imposing restraints on physicians affiliated with Group Health, through threats of disciplinary action and expulsion; by denying them professional contacts and consultations with other physicians, and by means of the societies' power, coercing the hospitals to deny Group Health doctors facilities for treatment of their patients. The plan, it is contended, was carried out by enforcing compliance with the so-called Mundt resolution of the American Society, the amendment of March, 1937, to Section 5 of the District Society's constitution, implemented by the "White List" and aided by corporate and individual acts of defendants.

On the other hand, the defendants insist there was no conspiracy; hence, no conspirators; that there was no purpose or plan to restrain Group Health, the hospitals or doctors; that their acts were intended only to oppose Group Health by legitimate argument and persuasion; that no coercion was practiced or intended against the hospitals, and that the "White List" and disciplinary proceedings against members of the District Society represented reasonable action taken by authority of their constitution and rules to protect the organization and its standards of medical practice. Therefore, it is claimed, in behalf of the defendants, that if those actions did interfere with Group Health and its doctors, the effect was but an incidental and indirect result of acts taken legally and in good faith for legitimate ends; and therefore were not wrongful or illegal.

If you believe the contention of the Government is established beyond a reasonable doubt, then the conspiracy is made out; whereas, if the contention of defendants prevails, the charge would altogether fail.

In the light of these contentions and the arguments supporting them, you will review the evidence fully and impartially to determine whether it does prove beyond a reasonable doubt the charge laid in the indictment.

Was there a conspiracy to restrain trade in one or more of the ways alleged? If so,

Who of the present defendants were parties to the conspiracy? All; or some; or none? To decide that question you will need to examine the evidence independently as it relates to each defendant. As to the corporate defendants, they would be responsible if authorized officers, acting for or in the name of the corporation, did acts within the apparent scope of the corporate powers, in forming or furthering the alleged conspiracy.

Did there exist the criminal intent? That is, was there a purpose and plan as charged? That would be so if in fact the positive intent to restrain prevailed, or there was a purpose to do acts the natural and probable effect of which would be to impose any of the restraints alleged. Another and different purpose would not suffice, even if wrongful, for the Government must prove the charge as laid—not some other offense.

If it be true, as defendants claim, that the District Society, acting only to protect its organization, regulate fair dealing among its members, and maintain and advance the standards of medical practice, adopted reasonable rules and measures to those ends, not calculated to restrain Group Health, there would be no guilt, though the indirect effect may have been to cause some restraint against Group Health. It would be justified if but an incidental result of reasonable regulation of the membership and affairs of the organization, for the statute comprehends only such restraints as do directly and unreasonably affect freedom of competition in the trades and professions.

In joining the District Society members assumed the duty of compliance with laws and regulations thereof. The right to practice medicine gave a doctor no right to be a member of the Society. Discipline and control of members of a society, within reasonable bounds, are essential. When applied in good faith, under fair rules, without ulterior purpose to injure the business of a member or others, there is no wrong. However, such rules and regulatory actions cannot be justified where the real purpose, or the natural results, are to interfere with free competition.

The defendant physicians had the individual right to determine with what other physicians they would consult, and refusal to do so with particular physicians is not of itself illegal. Although, if, as alleged, it was done in furtherance of a conspiracy against Group Health and its doctors, it would be illegal. So too, a doctor may refuse to treat patients in a particular hospital for any reason at all, but if a group of doctors, pursuant to a concerted scheme, refused so to do to injure the business of the hospital, their acts would be illegal; for in the eyes of the law there is danger to the public interests where many combine and act together to interfere with the free play of competitive forces in business and professions.

There was no duty on the societies, their officers or members, to approve Group Health or its plan of medical care. They could not rightfully oppose in a manner intended to restrain its operations. But they did have the right of legitimate criticism, argument and persuasion, however persistent and severe; either separately or by collective effort; through the medium of speech, letters or print. If their opposition was thus confined, and did not take the form of a conspiracy to restrain, or was not done in pursuance of such a scheme, there was no violation of the statute.

So too, the "White List" of the District Society and the Mundt Resolution of the American Society were not wrongful in themselves. Their apparent purposes were justifiable, and if those were in fact the real objects, the defendants had the right to combine and act together to promote the same in good faith; but if they were perverted to advance the aims of a conspiracy, any steps thus taken would bring the actors within the criminal scheme.

The hospitals had the lawful right to prescribe rules and regulations governing the use of their facilities by doctors and patients. In their boards was vested the authority to decide what physicians would be allowed the privileges. A doctor had no right to demand them. To grant or refuse the same rested solely with the hospital. Therefore, if denial of privileges to Dr. Selders, or other members of the Group Health staff, represented the voluntary decision of the boards, no question would arise as to the legality of their acts. However, if refusal was arbitrary and to serve a criminal conspiracy against Group Health or their doctors, it would violate the statute.

Much evidence relates to the so-called background of the alleged conspiracy. It is intended to show power of the medical societies over doctors and hospitals and opposition to certain forms of medical practice. No inference of guilt can be drawn from such evidence alone; nor from any power or opposition it may reveal, because those acts were before the alleged conspiracy. Therefore, that evidence can only be considered as it may shed light upon the intent and effect of later acts within the period of the alleged conspiracy.

Numerous letters, writings and oral statements of defendants and other persons have been proven. In many instances the authors have testified to the meaning they intended. However, arguments of counsel reveal frequent conflict as to the true meaning. It will be for you to interpret the writings and declarations fairly, in the light of all the evidence. If, when so considered, any are deemed equally susceptible of two meanings, one indicative of guilt, the other of innocence, then I think it only fair that you favor the innocent interpretation, just as you would in dealing with circumstantial evidence or the ultimate questions on which a verdict depends where there appear two reasonable theories or hypotheses one equally as reasonable as the other.

The respective merits of differing methods of medical care are not an issue in this case. Advocates and adherents of each are entitled to their views and may follow their choice. They had the right to support the same by fair competition and to oppose by way of discussion, argument and persuasion. But neither group would be justified in conspiring to restrain the activities of the other.

The legality of Group Health, or its methods of providing medical care, or the quality thereof, or its financial condition, or the grant of money by others to it are not issues in the case.

The defendants, however, had the lawful right to discuss and to argue these matters in opposition to Group Health Association and its methods of medical care, and to do so would constitute no violation of the statute.

In judging of the evidence you must necessarily evaluate the testimony of individual witnesses. Only thus can you determine the truth, and it is the truth you must seek. Bring to that task your knowledge of human nature; your ability to judge of men; their sources of knowledge; their intelligence; their motives; their intentions, so you may discern the real character behind the spoken words and measure their weight of truth and accuracy.

Interest in those things involved within the controversy or its results; friendship or animosity towards persons concerned therein, and many other human factors, may or may not affect the desire and capacity of a witness to tell the truth, depending largely upon his innate character. Give to the testimony of each witness only that weight to which in your good judgment it is entitled when tested by the foregoing considerations and the light of other evidence in the case. Interpret writings and declarations fairly according to reason and probabilities, as the circumstances surrounding their making may reflect a true meaning.

In your deliberations give thought to the views of your fellow-jurors. By full and free discussion, apply your best reason and judgment. Without sympathy or prejudice, calmly and dispassionately endeavor to reach a common understanding as to the truth, and return a verdict accordingly.

And now, ladies and gentlemen, as you retire to consider of your verdict, and throughout the course of your deliberations, be ever mindful of the solemn obligation imposed by your oath as jurors to render a true verdict according to the evidence; so help you God!

Is there anything further?

Mr. Lewin: The Government has nothing further, your Honor.

Mr. Leahy: May we approach the bench?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Richardson: If your Honor please, the defendants now object to sending with the jury in their deliberations a copy of the indictment in this case, for the reason that the same contains irrelevant, incompetent, and prejudicial matter in its allegations.

Objection overruled and exception to defendants.

The defense excepts to the charge with reference to disbelieving the testimony of a witness, because the charge does not permit the corroboration of such testimony by other credible testimony in the case.

Exception is further noted to the charge of the Court with respect to eliminating the belief of the defendants, the character of medical service, the financial soundness of the method of practice of Group Health Association, and the subsidization of such corporation by persons not members.

The defendants further object to the definition stated in the charge as to what facts would establish a violation of law.

The defendants further except to the statement in respect to violation of the Sherman Act by restraints which are not defined as unreasonable.

Mr. Magee: We want exceptions in the record and objections to the correctness of all the prayers granted to the Government which were read by the Court, as incorrect, misleading, and improper statements of the law pertaining to the facts in this case. We contend that the charge concerning what constitutes a conspiracy and how new conspirators can enter that conspiracy is misleading and prejudicial, as the charge as to conspiracy seems to ignore the fundamental principle that the gist of conspiracy is an unlawful agreement which must, under all the circumstances, be found to exist as a fact, particularly where a specific intent is charged.

We contend, further, that the charge over-emphasizes the allegations of the indictment without proper charges in the proper place. These allegations are no evidence against the defendants. We contend that it is error to charge that the defendants can be convicted on any single restraint or purpose charged in the indictment, as the indictment charges a large conspiracy to accomplish given purposes, and it cannot be proven by a number of smaller conspiracies.

We particularly object to the charge that they can be found guilty of a violation of the Sherman Act because of restraints on members of G. H. A. Further, we contend that the reference to the Society's approved list, constantly in the charge, as a White List instead of as an approved list, is prejudicial.

We contend that under the allegations of this indictment it was error to charge that the defendants could be found guilty because purpose might be inferred from natural and probable results and not be shown to be a specific intent, which is the gist of the charge.

We contend that it is error to include the activities of the profession, Group Health Association doctors, and the hospitals as within the scope of the Sherman Act.

We contend it was error to charge that natural results can interfere with competition.

We contend that the defendants can combine, and that it was error for the Court to charge that they cannot combine to injure G. H. A., as the evidence discloses a labor dispute clearly within the meaning of the Norris-LaGuardia Act and the Clayton Act and renders all of the restraints charged legal; so it was error to charge that neither group could restrain the other.

Mr. Burke: The defendants except because the reasonable doubt charge tendered by the Government and given by the Court was error, particularly the description of what is a reasonable doubt.

The defendants except to that part of the charge which tells the jury that the practice of medicine is a trade, that the operation of the hospitals involved in this case was a trade, that the business of G. H. A. was a trade, and that the activities of the members of G. H. A. were a trade, all within the meaning of the Sherman Act.

Mr. Magee: We except, further, to the failure of the Court to include within the charge the instructions submitted by the defendants and heretofore refused.

Objections overruled and exception noted.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen, you may retire.

(Whereupon, at 11:10 o'clock a. m., the jury were furnished a copy of the indictment and retired to consider their verdict.)

VERDICT OF THE JURY

(Thereupon, at 11:30 p. m., the jury returned to the courtroom, whereupon the following proceedings were had:)

The Court: I want to say this to those present: whatever the verdict may be I want it to be accepted in silence; no demonstration of any kind whatever. Please observe that.

By the Assistant Clerk:

Q. Mr. Foreman, have you agreed upon a verdict?

The Foreman: We have.

Q. Has the jury agreed upon a verdict?

The Foreman: Yes.

Q. What say you as to the defendant American Medical Association?

A. Guilty.

Q. What say you as to the District Medical Society?

A. Guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Arthur Carlisle Christie?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Coursen Baxter Conklin?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant James Bayard Gregg Custis?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant William Dick Cutter?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Morris Fishbein?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Robert Arthur Hooe?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Rosco Genung Leland?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Thomas Ernest Mattingly?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Francis Xavier McGovern?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Thomas Edwin Neill?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Edward Hiram Reede?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant William Mercer Sprigg?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant William Joseph Stanton?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant John Ogle Warfield, Jr.?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Olin West?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Prentiss Willson?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant William Creighton Woodward?

A. Not guilty.

Q. What say you as to the defendant Wallace Mason Yater?

A. Not guilty.

Q. The jury says that the defendant American Medical Association is guilty; the District Medical Society is guilty; the defendants Arthur Carlisle Christie, Coursen Baxter Conklin, James Bayard Gregg Custis, William Dick Cutter, Morris Fishbein, Robert Arthur Hooe, Rosco Genung Leland, Thomas Ernest Mattingly, Francis Xavier McGovern, Thomas Edwin Neill, Edward Hiram Reede, William Mercer Sprigg, William Joseph Stanton, John Ogle Warfield, Jr., Olin West, Prentiss Willson, William Creighton Woodward, Wallace Mason Yater, are not guilty?

A. Yes.

Q. And so say you each and all?

(Jurors individually answered in the affirmative.)

Q. And that is your verdict?

(Jurors individually answered in the affirmative.)

Exception noted by the defendants to the verdict.

MOTION TO SET ASIDE VERDICT AND FOR JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANTS

Come now defendants, American Medical Association, Incorporated, and The Medical Society of the District of Columbia, Incorporated, by their attorneys, and severally and individually and without waiving any other Motion herein filed or to be filed, move the Court to set aside the verdict herein as to each defendant, and to enter judgment of not guilty as to each defendant notwithstanding the verdict herein, on the following grounds:

(1) The law holds a corporation can only act through its officers, agents and employees. In the present case as a matter of fact the evidence shows that the two corporations could only have acted by their officers, agents and employees all of whom have been acquitted. As the theory upon which a corporation can be held criminally responsible is the theory that the illegal acts and criminal intentions of its employees can be imputed to the corporation, it follows that in the present case there is no factual foundation for inferring that the corporations are guilty.

(2) The indictment having charged that the acts were committed by the individual defendants, not as individuals but as agents of the two corporate defendants, and the individuals having been acquitted it follows that the corporations cannot be held.

(3) The indictment does not charge nor does the proof show that the activities of the defendants, or either of them, violated any law of the United States. There is nothing to show that they concern trade or commerce in the District of Columbia within the meaning of Section 3 of the Sherman Act.

(4) The indictment shows that the activities of Group Health Association, its doctors and members, constitute the illegal practice of medicine by a corporation, and therefore such activities could not be the subject of a conspiracy in restraint of trade under Section 3 of the Anti-Trust Law.

(5) The activities alleged and proved against the defendants, or either of them, were within their lawful rights.

(6) The jury having held the individual defendants are not guilty, there is no evidence left in the case with which to hold the corporate defendants.

(7) And for such other grounds as are apparent on the face of the record and the evidence herein and as may be argued at the hearing hereof.

Filed with supporting points and authorities on April 7, 1941.

Motion in Arrest of Judgment

Come now the defendants, American Medical Association and the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, by their attorneys, and, without waiving any other motion filed or to be filed, move the Court to arrest the judgment herein and hold for naught the verdict of "guilty" rendered against these defendants, and for grounds therefor, state:

(1) The activities charged to the defendants or shown by the evidence do not violate any law of the United States.

(2) The activities charged to the defendants or shown by the evidence do not concern trade or commerce in and of the District of Columbia under Section 3 of the Sherman Act.

(3) The business, operations and activities of Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors and members, and others dealing with the corporation, are part and parcel of the illegal practice of medicine and the illegal operation of insurance business and could not be the subject of unlawful restraints under Section 3 of the Sherman Act.

(4) The activities charged to the defendants or shown by the evidence are all within the lawful rights of the defendants.

(5) Because of the nature of the offense charged and the acquittal of all individual defendants, particularly the officers and members of defendant corporations, being the only persons charged or claimed to have acted illegally for and on behalf of the defendant corporations, the verdict is a legal anomaly, and is unsupported by the evidence, and amounts, in law, to a verdict of "Not Guilty" against said defendant corporations.

(6) The verdict is contrary to law and the evidence.

(7) And for other grounds apparent on the face of the record or in the evidence.

Filed with supporting points and authorities on April 7, 1941.

Motion for New Trial

Come now the defendants, American Medical Association and the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, by their attorneys, and, without waiving any other motion filed or to be filed, move the Court to set aside the verdict in the above-entitled cause and to grant these defendants a new trial and for the grounds therefor state:

(1) The evidence in the record was insufficient to find the individual defendants guilty, and it is, therefore, not sufficient to find these defendants, or either of them, guilty. There is no evidence in the record to support the verdict except the evidence applicable to the activities of the individual defendants, and the record discloses that whatever was done by these corporate defendants was done, if at all, solely through the individual defendants who have been found not guilty.

(2) The Court erred in refusing to admit evidence and testimony offered by the defendants.

(3) The Court erred in holding that evidence offered by the defendants relating to the so-called $40,000 payment of Home Owners Loan Corporation to Group Health Association, Inc., was irrelevant and could not be discussed to the jury in argument despite similar testimony theretofore received in evidence which remained before the jury.

(4) The Court erred in holding that testimony concerning and relating to Medical Dental Service Bureau, operated and carried on by the local defendants, was irrelevant.

(5) The Court erred in refusing to admit evidence tendered by the defendants pertaining to the solicitation of members and patients by Group Health Association, Inc., Home Owners Loan Corporation, and other persons acting on behalf of Group Health Association, Inc.

(6) The Court erred in rejecting evidence offered by the defendants tendered to show advertising on behalf of Group Health Association, Inc., pertaining to the medical services of members of Group Health Association, Inc.

(7) The Court erred in refusing to admit testimony tendered by the defendants tending to show subsidies paid in money, services, or other things of value, to Group Health Association, Inc., by The Twentieth Century Fund, Inc., Good Will Fund, Inc., Health Economics Association, Inc., Home Owners Loan Corporation, credit unions, and others.

(8) The Court erred in restricting the evidence offered by the defendants pertaining to the quality, nature and character of the medical services proposed and furnished by the Group Health Association, Inc.

(9) The Court erred in refusing evidence tendered by the defendants of the contract and the amended contract between Home Owners Loan Corporation and Group Health Association, Inc., wherein Group Health Association, Inc., as a corporation, promised to render medical services to Home Owners Loan Corporation for a consideration.

(10) The Court erred in refusing to receive testimony and evidence under offers of proof by the defendants pertaining to the illegality of the operations and activities of Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors and members, and other persons doing business with the Association.

(11) The Court erred in refusing to receive testimony and evidence under offers of proof by the defendants pertaining to the belief of the defendants in the illegality of the operations and activities of Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors and members, and other persons doing business with the Association.

(12) The Court erred in refusing testimony offered by the defendants tending to prove that one of the reasons for the disapproval or non-approval of Group Health Association, Inc., under the constitution of the defendant Medical Society of the District of Columbia, was an understanding and belief on the part of the Defendants that the said Group Health Association, Inc., was engaged in the illegal practice of medicine and the illegal operation of an insurance business in the District of Columbia and was the recipient of public moneys unlawfully paid to the said Group Health Association by the Home Owners Loan Corporation, together with the receipt by Group Health Association, Inc., of various subsidies from the various persons and agencies hereinbefore mentioned.

(13) The Court erred in refusing to admit evidence tendered by the defendants showing their reasons for their argument and persuasion pertaining to Group Health Association, Inc.

(14) The Court erred in refusing to admit evidence offered by the defendants pertaining to a justification on their part for any of the claimed restraints pertaining to the practice of medicine, the furnishing of medical services, the activities and operations of Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors and members, or other doctors, and the business of the Washington hospitals.

(15) The Court erred in rejecting evidence contained in the offers of proof of the defendants.

(16) The Court erred in admitting evidence offered by the United States.

(17) The Court erred in admitting in evidence the statements, oral and written, the letters and the remarks of the individual defendants heretofore found not guilty under the verdict.

(18) The Court erred in receiving evidence concerning the so-called "background" of the conspiracy charged in the indictment and in overruling the motion of the defendants to strike this evidence from the record.

(19) The Court erred, because of the prejudicial statements contained therein, in permitting the jury to take the indictment with the said jury into the jury room for examination and consideration by the said jury.

(20) The Court erred in admitting evidence of or pertaining to the Washington hospitals and the activities thereof in relation to Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors and members, and in overruling the motion of the defendants to strike such evidence from the record.

(21) The Court erred in denying the motions of these defendants and each of them for a directed verdict at the close of the Government's case.

(22) The Court erred in denying the motions of these defendants and each of them for a directed verdict at the close of all the evidence.

(23) The Court erred in charging the jury, among others, in the following respects:

(a) In charging that the practice of medicine, the furnishing of medical services, the activities and operations of the Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors and members, and the business of the Washington hospitals were trade of the District of Columbia and each within the purview and scope of Section 3 of the Sherman Act.

(b) In charging the jury of the nature and character of the offense alleged and the type and character of evidence sufficient for a conviction.

(c) In defining "reasonable doubt."

(d) In charging the defendants could be found guilty of the offense charged in the indictment by proof of any single purpose or intent as set forth as a part of the general conspiracy alleged, and particularly that intended restraint of members of Group Health Association, Inc., was sufficient basis for a conviction.

(e) In charging that the beliefs of the defendants concerning the illegality and unethical and improper character of the operations of Group Health Association, Inc., and its economic unsoundness and financial setup, including subsidies, were irrelevant.

(f) In charging the operations of Group Health Association, Inc., were legal and irrelevant.

(g) In charging that it was unnecessary for a conviction for the United States to prove the specific intent charged in the indictment.

(h) In charging that aiding and abetting made a defendant a conspirator.

(i) In charging the defendant corporations had no legal right to restrain Group Health Association, Inc., or do the other activities described in the indictment.

(j) In granting and giving the charges or instructions requested by the United States.

(k) In modifying and, as so modified, giving instructions tendered by the United States.

(l) In refusing and failing to give certain charges or instructions requested by the defendants.

(m) In modifying and, as so modified, giving instructions tendered by the defendants.

(n) In failing to properly charge that restraints to be illegal under Section 3 of the Sherman Act must be direct, material, and unreasonable.

(24) The charge of the Court was prejudicial, among others, in the following respects:

(a) It overemphasized to the prejudice of the defendants, the allegations of the indictment without proper protective instructions.

(b) It was highly misleading.

(c) It characterized the approved list of the defendant Medical Society of the District of Columbia as a "white list."

(24) The verdict is contrary to law.

(25) The verdict is contrary to the evidence.

(26) The verdict is contrary to the weight of the evidence.

(27) The verdict is a legal anomaly and is repugnant to the law and evidence.

(28) And for other reasons apparent on the face of the record or in the evidence.

Filed with supporting points and authorities on April 7, 1941.

By stipulation of the parties and order of Court dated April 10, 1941, the defendants' Motion to Set Aside the Verdict and For Judgment, Motion in Arrest and Motion For New Trial were set for argument, and submission under advisement on May 2, 1941. On May 2, 1941 said Motions were argued, submitted and taken under advisement by the Court. On May 29, 1941, the following proceedings occurred:

The above-entitled cause came on for hearing on motions filed by American Medical Association and The Medical Society of the District of Columbia, defendants, for:

(1) Judgment Non Obstante Veredicto

(2) In arrest of Judgment

Gov. Ex. 1

Stipulation

It is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between counsel for the defendants and counsel for the United States that:

1. The American Medical Association is, and has been since April 14, 1897, incorporated under the laws of Illinois as a corporation. The Act concerning corporations approved April 18, 1872, and all acts amendatory thereof, under which said corporation is incorporated are filed herewith. Filed herewith are true copies of the charter, constitution, by-laws, and principles of medical ethics of said Association in effect on December 20, 1938. Except for the changes made in said constitution, by-laws, and principles of medical ethics as indicated in the copies thereof filed herewith, said charter, constitution, by-laws, and principles of medical ethics were in effect throughout the period from February 24, 1937, to December 20, 1938. The office of the American Medical Association is located at Chicago, Illinois. On April 1, 1938, the American Medical Association had 109,435 members out of a total of 169,628 doctors in the United States.

[1] There may be some exhibits inadvertently herein set forth which were read to the jury and which appear in the body of the bill of exceptions. In addition certain exhibits are herein set forth which were described to the jury in the language appearing in the body of the bill of exceptions, but which were not read to the jury.

2. The Medical Society of the District of Columbia is, and has been for many years last past, a corporation incorporated under one or more Acts of Congress. Filed herewith are true copies of the Acts of Congress relating to the incorporation of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia. Filed herewith are true copies of the constitution and by-laws of said Society in effect on December 20, 1938. Except for the changes made in said constitution and by-laws as indicated in the copies thereof filed herewith, said constitution and by-laws were in effect throughout the period from February 24, 1937, to December 20, 1938. Said Society has its office in the District of Columbia. On April 1, 1938, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia had 825 members out of a total of 1,979 doctors in the District of Columbia.

3. The Harris County Medical Society is, and has been for several years last past, an unincorporated association of physicians and surgeons and has its office in Houston, Harris County, Texas.

4. The Washington Academy of Surgery is, and has been for several years last past, an unincorporated association of surgeons in the District of Columbia. The officers of the Washington Academy of Surgery during the period February 24, 1937, to April 23, 1937, were Dr. Charles S. White, President; Dr. J. P. Shearer, Vice President; and Dr. W. Warren Sager, Secretary and Treasurer. The officers of the Washington Academy of Surgery during the period April 23, 1937, to April 8, 1938, were Dr. John A. Cahill, President; Dr. Daniel Borden, Vice President; and Dr. F. C. Fishback, Secretary and Treasurer. The officers of the Washington Academy of Surgery during the period April 8, 1938, to December 20, 1938, were Dr. Daniel Borden, President; Dr. Fred Sanderson, Vice President; and Dr.

J. Ogle Warfield, Jr., Secretary and Treasurer. The members of the Advisory Committee on Hospital Privileges of the Washington Academy of Surgery during the period April 23, 1937, to April 8, 1938, were Dr. John H. Lyons, Chairman; Dr. Daniel Borden; Dr. Fred Sanderson; and Dr. A. L. Riddick. It is the best recollection of Dr. Crenshaw D. Briggs, Secretary of the Washington Academy of Surgery, and said Dr. Crenshaw D. Briggs would so testify if called, that the members of the Advisory Committee on Hospital Privileges during the period April 8, 1938, to December 20, 1938, were Dr. Fred Sanderson, Chairman; Dr. Alec Horwitz; Dr. F. X. McGovern; Dr. Paul Putzski; Dr. A. L. Riddick; and Dr. J. P. Shearer. Proof of additional members on said committee may be offered by either party and received in evidence.

5. Each of the following corporations and associations was engaged in operating a hospital throughout the period from February 24, 1937 to December 20, 1938: Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital; Children's Hospital of the District of Columbia; Columbia Hospital for Women; Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital; Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital; Garfield Memorial Hospital; National Homeopathic Hospital of the District of Columbia; Providence Hospital; Sibley Memorial Hospital; and Washington Sanitarium and Hospital. These hospitals are located in Washington, D. C., except that the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital is located in Takoma Park, Maryland. All of said hospitals claim to be incorporated not for profit.

6. Membership in the American Medical Association is ordinarily obtainable only through affiliated state or territorial medical associations. State or territorial medical associations are known as "constituent" societies of the American Medical Association. Membership in most constituent associations or societies is ordinarily obtainable only through membership in affiliated county or local medical societies, which are known as "component" societies of those constituent associations and of the American Medical Association. The Medical Society of the District of Columbia has no component medical society of the American Medical Association. Members of affiliated component or constituent medical societies are, ipso facto, members of the American Medical Association.

7. Membership in the American Medical Association was held by all individual defendants throughout the period from February 24, 1937, to December 20, 1938. Throughout said period Dr. Morris Fishbein was Editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association; Dr. Olin West was Secretary and General Manager of the American Medical Association; Dr. William Creighton Woodward was Director of the Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation of the American Medical Association; Dr. William Dick Cutter was Secretary of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association; Dr. Rosco Genung Leland was Director of the Bureau of Medical Economics of the American Medical Association. Said individuals during said period were full-time employees of the American Medical Association.

8. Each of the individual defendants, except the defendants Dr. Morris Fishbein, Dr. Olin West, Dr. William Dick Cutter, and Dr. Roscoe Genung Leland, was a member of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia throughout the period from February 24, 1937, to December 20, 1938. Dr. William C. Woodward was an honorary member of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia throughout said period.

9. Between February 24, 1937, and July 1, 1937, the following named persons were all members of the Executive Committee of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia: Dr. William Mercer Sprigg, Dr. Henry C. Macatee, Dr. J. Lawn Thompson, Dr. R. Arthur Hooe, Dr. C. N. Chipman, Dr. Daniel L. Borden, Dr. Earl R. Templeton, Dr. William P. Herbst, Jr., Dr. A. J. B. Connolly, Dr. David Davis, Dr. Herbert Schoenfeld, Dr. Charles B. Campbell, Dr. Wallace M. Yater, Dr. Coursen B. Conklin, Dr. Joseph L. Horgan, Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, Dr. Thomas E. Neill, Dr. A. B. Bennett, Dr. William T. Gill, Jr., Dr. Augustus C. Gray, Dr. Sterling Ruffin, Dr. Francis X. McGovern, and Dr. Raymond T. Holden, Jr.

den, Dr. Henry R. Schreiber, Dr. William Mercer Sprigg, Dr. Thomas E. Neill, Dr. Henry C. Macatee, Dr. Edward Hiram Reede, Dr. R. Arthur Hooe, Dr. C. N. Chipman, Dr. John A. Reed, Dr. S. A. Alexander, Dr. John F. Preston, Dr. Harry A. Fowler, Dr. R. Lomax Wells, Dr. Earle G. Breeding, Dr. John P. H. Murphy, Dr. Harry Lee Claude, Dr. Wallace M. Yater, and Dr. Coursen B. Conklin.

11. Between July 1, 1938, and December 20, 1938, the following named persons were all of the members of the Executive Committee of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia: Dr. Francis X. McGovern, Dr. Thomas E. Neill, Dr. Don R. Johnson, Dr. Raymond T. Holden, Jr., Dr. William J. Mallory, Dr. John Hugh Lyons, Dr. Henry C. Macatee. Mr. Theodore Wiprud was secretary of said Executive Committee during said period. The by-laws and constitution of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia define the duties of the Executive Committee.

12. Between February 24, 1937, and July 1, 1937, the following named persons were all of the officers of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia: Dr. William Mercer Sprigg, President; Dr. William P. Herbst, Jr., First Vice President; Dr. Morris I. Bierman, Second Vice President; Dr. Coursen B. Conklin, Secretary-Treasurer.

13. Between July 1, 1937, and July 1, 1938, the following named persons were all of the officers of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia: Dr. Thomas E. Neill, President; Dr. Daniel B. Moffett, First Vice President; Dr. Jacob Kotz, Second Vice President; Dr. Coursen B. Conklin, Secretary-Treasurer.

14. Between July 1, 1938, and December 20, 1938, the following named persons were the officers of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia: Dr. William J. Mallory, President; Dr. John Hugh Lyons, First Vice President; Dr. William T. Gill, Jr., First Vice President; Dr. David Davis, Second Vice President. Dr. Coursen B. Conklin was Secretary-Treasurer from July 1, 1938, to November 2, 1938. Mr. Theodore Wiprud was Secretary-Treasurer from November 2, 1938, to December 20, 1938.

15. Between February 24, 1937, and July 1, 1938, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia had a committee known as the "Hospital Committee."

16. Between February 24, 1937, and July 1, 1937, the following named persons were all of the members of said Hospital Committee: Dr. E. W. Titus, Dr. Francis X. McGovern, Dr. Ralph LeComte, Dr. John A. Reed, Dr. George R. Huffman, Dr. Fred R. Sanderson, Dr. Paul S. Putzki, Dr. Gregg C. Birdsall, Dr. Frank Leach, Dr. William H. Jenkins, and Dr. J. G. Lewis.

17. Between July 1, 1937, and July 1, 1938, the following named persons were members of said Hospital Committee: Dr. J. Ogle Warfield, Jr., Chairman, Dr. Leon A. Martel, Dr. William H. Jenkins, Dr. Gregg Custis Birdsall, Dr. J. G. Lewis, Dr. William B. Marbury, Dr. Jerome F. Crowley, Dr. Edward P. McLarney, Dr. Joseph P. Shearer, Dr. Warren Sager, and Dr. John H. Trinder. Proof of additional members on said committee during said period may be offered by either party and received in evidence.

18. Between July 1, 1938, and December 20, 1938, there was no Hospital Committee.

19. The following defendants were members of the regular and attending staffs of the Washington hospitals indicated after each name:

Dr. Coursen Baxter Conklin, Children's Hospital of the District of Columbia; Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital; George Washington University Hospital.

Dr. James Bayard Gregg Custis, National Homeopathic Hospital of the District of Columbia.

Dr. Robert Arthur Hooe, Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital.

Dr. Thomas Ernest Mattingly, Sibley Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Leon Alphonse Martel, Georgetown University Hospital.

Dr. Francis Xavier McGovern, Garfield Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Thomas Edwin Neill, Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital and Garfield Memorial Hospital.

Dr. William Mercer Sprigg, Columbia Hospital for Women.

Dr. John Ogle Warfield, Jr., Children's Hospital of the District of Columbia and Garfield Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Prentiss Willson, Columbia Hospital for Women.

Dr. Wallace Mason Yater, Georgetown University Hospital.

Dr. Joseph Rogers Young, Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital.

20. Group Health Association, Inc., is, and has been since February 24, 1937, a corporation incorporated under the laws of Congress for the District of Columbia. Filed herewith is a true copy of the original certificate of incorporation of said corporation and amendments thereto. Filed herewith is a true copy of the original by-laws of said corporation as adopted on March 22, 1937, the amendments thereto during the period from March 22, 1937 and the amendments thereto during the period from March 22, 1937, to December 20, 1938.

The foregoing contents of this stipulation and the stipulation itself are not to be considered as evidence offered on behalf of any of the parties hereto, unless and until the same, or any part thereof, is offered in evidence by any party hereto and then only as evidence on behalf of the party offering same. Upon the offer by any party of any part or all of this stipulation in evidence, said stipulation, or any part thereof, will be subject to the objection by any other party hereto that the facts hereby stipulated, or any of said facts, are incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial on the issues formed in this case. No objection will be made that the stipulation is not competent evidence upon the facts stated in the stipulation, but objection may be made that the facts stated in the stipulation are not competent on the issues. By this stipulation the parties hereto do not intend to stipulate that they, or any of them, had knowledge of the facts herein stated at the time they occurred.

It is further understood and agreed that the specifications of times herein do not preclude proof by any party of the facts covered by this stipulation at times other than those specified herein, nor preclude proof by any party that said facts were represented or believed to be otherwise.

Edward M. Burke, Seth W. Richardson, Wm. E. Leahy, Chas. S. Baker, John E. Laskey, Counsel for the Defendants. (S.) John Henry Lewin, Grant W. Kelleher, Special Assistants to the Attorney General.

(The foregoing stipulation was read to the jury).

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS OF THE MEDICAL SOCIETY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

(As Adopted in 1911 and Amended; Revised and Readopted on May 23, 1934)

[SEAL]

Washington, D. C., 1934

An Act to Incorpate the Medical Society of the District of Columbia

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that Charles Worthington, James H. Blake, John T. Shaaff, Thomas Sim, Frederick May, Joel T. Gustine, Elisha Harrison, Peregrine Warfield, Alexander McWilliams, George Clark, Henry Huntt, Thomas Henderson, John Harrison, Benjamin S. Bohrer, Samuel Horseley, Nicholas W. Worthington, William Jones, James T. Johnson, Richard Weightman, George May, Robert French, and such persons as they may from time to time elect, and their successors, are hereby declared to be a community, corporation, and body politic, forever, by and under the name and title of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia; and by and under the same name and title they shall be able and capable in law to purchase, take, have and enjoy, to them and their successors, in fee or for lease, estate or estates, any land, tenements, rents, annuities, chattels, bank stock, registered debts, or other public securities within the District, by the gift, bargain, sale, demise, or of any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, capable to make the same, and the same; at their pleasure, to alien, sell, transfer or lease and apply to such purposes as they may adjudge most conducive to the promoting and disseminating medical and surgical knowledge, and for no other purpose whatever: Provided, nevertheless, That the said society, or body politic, shall not, at any one time, hold or possess property, real, personal or mixt, exceeding in total value the sum of six thousand dollars per annum.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the members of the said society, above designated, shall hold, in the City of Washington, four stated meetings in every year, viz: on the first Mondays in January, April, July and October; the officers of the society to consist of a President, two Vice-Presidents, one Corresponding Secretary, one Recording Secretary, one Treasurer and one Librarian, who shall be appointed on the second Monday in March, one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and on the annual meeting in January forever thereafter, (not less than seven members being present at such meeting), and the society may make a common seal, and may elect into their body such medical and chirurgical practitioners, within the District of Columbia, as they may deem qualified to become members of the society; it being understood that the officers of the society now elected are to remain in office until the next election after the passage of this act.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the said Medical Society, or any number of them attending, (not less than seven), to elect by ballot five persons, residents of the District, who shall be styled the Medical Board of Examiners of the District of Columbia, whose duty it shall be to grant licenses to such medical and chirurgical gentlemen as they may, upon a full examination, judge adequate to commence the practice of the medical and chirurgical arts, or as may produce diplomas from some respectable college or society; each person so obtaining a certificate to pay a sum not exceeding ten dollars, to be fixed on or ascertained by the society.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That any three of the examiners shall constitute a board for examining such candidates as may apply, and shall subscribe their names to each certificate by them granted, which certificate shall also be countersigned by the President of the society, and have the seal of the society affixed thereto by the Secretary, upon paying into the hands of the Treasurer the sum of money to be ascertained, as above, by the society; and any one of the said examiners may grant a license to practice, until a board, in conformity to this act, can be held; Provided, That nothing herein contained shall authorize the said corporation in any wise to regulate the price of medical or chirurgical attendance, on such persons as may need those services.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That after the appointment of the aforesaid medical board, no person, not heretofore a practitioner of medicine or surgery within the District of Columbia, shall be allowed to practice within the said District, in either of said branches, and receive payment for his services, without first having obtained a license, testified as by this law directed, or without the production of a diploma, under the penalty of fifty dollars for each offense, to be recovered in the county court where he may reside, by bill of presentment and indictment; one-half for the use of the society, and the other for that of the informer.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That every person who, upon application, shall be elected a member of the Medical Society, shall pay a sum not exceeding ten dollars, to be ascertained by the society.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That the Medical Society be, and they are hereby empowered, from time to time, to make such by-laws, rules and regulations, as they may find requisite, to break or alter their common seal, to fix the times and places for the meetings of the board of examiners, filling up vacancies in the medical board, and to do and perform such other things as may be requisite for carrying this act into execution, and which may not be repugnant to the constitution and laws of the United States: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall extend to prohibit any person during his actual residence in any of the United States, and who, by the laws of the state wherein he doth or may reside, is not prohibited from practicing in either of the above branches, from practicing in this District; Provided always, That it shall and may be lawful for any person, resident as aforesaid, and not prohibited as aforesaid, when specially sent for, to come into any part of this District, and administer or prescribe medicine, or perform any operation for the relief of such to whose assistance he may be sent for.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That Congress may, at any time, alter amend, or annul this act of incorporation of said society at pleasure.

H. CLAY,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
DANIEL D. TOMPKINS,
Vice-President of the United States and President of the Senate.
JAMES MONROE.

Approved February 16, 1819.

M. D., Richmond Johnson, M. D., Thomas Sewall, M. D., George W. May, M. D., Nicholas W. Worthington, M. D., Joshua Reily, M. D., James S. Gunnell, M. D., Harvey Lindsly, M. D., James C. Hall, M. D., Thomas Miller, M. D., Joseph Borrows, M. D., Alexander McD. Davis, M. D., Benjamin King, M. D., Noble Young, M. D., H. F. Condict, M. D., W. B. Magruder, M. D., Peregrine Warfield, M. D., J. B. Blake, M. D., and such other persons as they may from time to time elect, and their successors, are hereby declared to be a community, corporation, and body politic, forever, or until Congress shall by law direct this charter to cease and determine, by and under the name and title of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia; and by and under the same name and title they shall be able and capable in law to purchase, take, have and enjoy, to them and their successors, in fee or for lease, estate or estates, any land, tenements, rents, annuities, chattels, bank stock, registered debts, or other public securities within the District, by the gift, bargain, sale, demise, or of any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, capable to make the same, and the same, at their pleasure, to alien, sell, transfer, or lease and apply, to such purposes as they may adjudge most conducive to the promoting and disseminating medical and surgical knowledge, and for no other purpose whatever: Provided, nevertheless, That the said society or body politic shall not, at any one time, hold or possess property, real, personal or mixed, exceeding in total value the sum of six thousand dollars per annum.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the members of the said society above designated shall hold, in the City of Washington, two stated meetings in every year, viz: on the first Monday in January and July; the officers of the society to consist of a President, two Vice-Presidents, one Corresponding Secretary, one Recording Secretary, one Treasurer, and one Librarian, who shall be appointed on the first Monday in July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-eight, and on the annual meeting in January forever thereafter, and who shall hold their offices for one year, and until others are chosen in their stead (not less than seven members being present at such meeting); and the society may make a common seal, and may elect into their body such medical and chirurgical practitioners, within the District of Columbia, as they may deem qualified to become members of the society, it being understood that the officers of the society now elected are to remain in office until the next election after the passage of this act.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the said Medical Society, or any number of them attending, (not less than seven), to elect by ballot five persons, residents of the District of Columbia, whose duty it shall be to grant licenses to such medical and chirurgical gentlemen as they may, upon a full examination, judge qualified to practice the medical and chirurgical arts, or as may produce a diploma from some respectable medical college or society, each person so obtaining a certificate to pay a sum, not exceeding ten dollars, to be fixed on or ascertained by the society.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That any three of the examiners shall constitute a board for examining such candidates as may apply, and shall subscribe their names to each certificate by them granted, which certificate shall also be countersigned by the President of the society, and have the seal of the society affixed thereto by the Secretary, upon paying into the hands of the Treasurer the sum of money to be ascertained as above by the society; and any one of the said examiners may grant a license to practice until a board in conformity to this act can be held: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall authorize the said corporation in anywise to regulate the practice of medical or chirurgical attendance on such persons as may need those services nor to establish or fix a tariff of charges or fees for medical attendance or advice, or to interfere in any way with charges or fees for medical attendance or advice.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That after the appointment of the aforesaid medical board no person, not heretofore a practitioner of medicine or surgery within the District of Columbia, shall be allowed to practice within the said District, in either of said branches, without first having obtained a license, testified as by this law directed, or the production of a diploma from a respectable medical college, or a board of examiners established by law: Provided, That the professors in such college, or the examiners in such board, be men regularly instructed in medicine and surgery, and the collateral branches of medical education, anatomy, chemistry, under the penalty of fifty dollars for each offense, to be recovered in the county court where he may reside, by bill of presentment and indictment, one-half for the use of the society, and the other for that of the informer.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That every person who upon application shall be elected a member of the Medical Society, shall pay a sum not exceeding ten dollars, to be ascertained by the society.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That the Medical Society be, and they are hereby, empowered, from time to time, to make such by-laws, rules, and regulations as they may find requisite; which by-laws, rules, and regulations shall, in their application and operation, be exclusively confined to said society, as a society, or body corporate, and not to its members individually, when not acting in a corporate character; to break or alter their common seal; to fix the times and places for the meetings of the boards of examiners; filling up vacancies in the medical board; and to do and perform such other things as may be requisite for carrying this act into execution, and which may not be repugnant to the Constitution and laws of the United States: Provided always, That it shall and may be lawful for any person, resident as aforesaid, and not prohibited as aforesaid, when specially sent for, to come into any part of this District and administer or prescribe medicine, or perform any operation for the relief of such to whose assistance he may be sent for: And provided also, That nothing in this act contained shall be so construed as to prevent any person, living within or without said District, from administering medicine, or performing any surgical operation, with the consent of the person or the attendants of the person to whom such medicine is administered, or upon whom such surgical operation is performed, without fee or reward; nor to prevent the giving advice or assistance in any way to the sick or afflicted, upon charity and kindness; nor to prevent the receipt of reward for the same, if voluntarily tendered or made; nor to extend to midwifery by females; and any person so administering medicine or performing any surgical operation, not authorized to practice physic and surgery agreeably to the provisions of this act, shall be prohibited from collecting any fee or reward for the same by any process of law: And be it further provided, That no person shall be admitted to an examination until he shall produce satisfactory evidence that he has studied physic and surgery three years, including one full course of medical lectures, as usually taught at medical schools, or four years without such a course of lectures.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time alter, amend, or annul this act of incorporation of said society at pleasure.

[Public—No. 138—68th Congress]

[H. R. 4122]

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act to revive, with amendments, an Act to incorporate the Medical Society of the District of Columbia," approved July 7, 1838, as amended.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Act entitled "An Act to revive, with amendments, an Act to incorporate the Medical Society of the District of Columbia," approved July 7, 1838 (Sixth Statutes at Large, page 741), as amended, be, a. the same hereby is, amended so as to read as follows:

"That Doctors George Wythe Cook, William Gerry Morgan, John B. Nichols, John D. Thomas, E. Y. Davidson, Philip S. Roy, A. L. Stavely, Henry C. Macatee, E. G. Seibert, J. Russell Verbrycke, junior, A. W. Boswell, Charles S. White, J. A. Gannon, D. S. Lamb, and Virgil B. Jackson, and such other persons as they may associate with themselves, and their successors, be, and they hereby are, constituted a body corporate not for profit, of the District of Columbia, for the purpose of promoting and disseminating medical and surgical knowledge, and for no other purpose; and not for the purpose of establishing a medical school or schools.

"Sec. 2. That the Medical Society of the District of Columbia be, and it is hereby, empowered to own, mortgage, and convey such property as may be necessary for its purposes, and to make such rules and regulations as it may require, and which may not be repugnant to the constitution or laws of the United States.

"Sec. 3. That Congress may at any time alter, amend, or annul this Act of incorporation of said society."

FRED H. GILLETT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
ALBERT B. CUMMINS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS OF THE MEDICAL SOCIETY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

(As adopted in 1911 and amended; revised and readopted on May 23, 1934)

Constitution

Chapter I.—Name, Object and Status

Article I. The name of this organization shall be The Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

Article II. The object of this Society shall be the promotion, locally and generally, of the science and art of medicine and sanitation and the interests of the medical profession.

Article III, Section 1. This Society, chartered by Act of Congress of May 24, 1924, shall be a continuation and amalgamation of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia (founded September 26, 1817, and chartered by acts of Congress of February 16, 1819, and July 7, 1838) and the Medical Association of the District of Columbia (organized January 11, 1833).

Sec. 2. All funds, records, papers and property belonging to the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and the Medical Association of the District of Columbia at the time of their amalgamation shall become the property of this Society. All the records, minutes and important papers of these organizations shall be carefully and perpetually preserved.

Sec. 3. This Society shall be a representative medical organization of the District of Columbia, constituted and maintained in conformity with the general plan of the American Medical Association; it hereby declares its allegiance to the American Medical Association and agrees with other state and territorial medical associations to the formation and the perpetuation of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association.

Chapter II.—Membership

Article I. The members of this Society shall be of four classes: active, life, associate and honorary.

Article II. Every active, life, associate and honorary member of either the Medical Society of the District of Columbia or the Medical Association of the District of Columbia, or of both, in good standing at the time this Constitution goes into effect, shall ipso facto become a member (active, life, associate, or honorary, as the case may be) of this Society; and the order of seniority of such members shall be reckoned from the date of their first admission into either of those bodies. Seniority since the amalgamation shall be dated from the date of last admission.

Article III, Section 1. Active membership shall (with such exceptions as may occur in consequence of the operation of the foregoing section) be limited to reputable, legally qualified practitioners of medicine who are solely or mainly engaged in the lawful practice of medicine in the District of Columbia, and who are not active members of any other component association of the American Medical Association.

Sec. 2. Applications for active membership must be made in writing on forms provided by the Society, indorsed by three active members of the Society, and sent to the Secretary-Treasurer, who shall present them at the next stated meeting of the Society and publish the list to the membership. They shall then be referred to the Committee of Censors, which shall investigate and submit a report thereon at the next ensuing stated meeting; when they shall be voted on by the Society. No application for membership that is rejected or withdrawn shall be renewed until after two years from the time of its rejection or withdrawal. Due notice of the names of all candidates to be voted on for membership at each stated meeting shall be sent to all active members. The voting shall be by individual secret ballot (in no case by empowering any officer or member to cast a unanimous ballot), and a favorable concurrence of two-thirds of the votes cast shall effect election to membership. After election each applicant shall, within three months, sign an obligation to be governed by the Constitution and By-laws of this Society and pay the dues for the current calendar year.

Sec. 3. Active members who are non-residents of and have ceased to practice medicine in the District of Columbia may, upon written request, become associate members by a two-thirds vote of the Society at any meeting.

Article IV. Life members shall be active members who have been active members for a total of forty years. They shall have all of the privileges of active membership and shall be exempt from paying dues and assessments.

Article V. Associate members shall be medical men not eligible for active membership or scientists engaged in collateral lines of research. They shall be elected in the same manner as active members; they shall have the privilege of attending and participating in the scientific sessions of the Society, and shall receive its publications and notices of its meetings; they shall not vote or hold office in the Society, shall be subject to its discipline, and pay such dues and assessments as may be imposed by the Society. Associate members, upon becoming eligible for active membership, shall make formal application for active membership. On failure to do so within three months, they shall cease to be associate members.

Article VI. Honorary members. Any physician, scientist, or other person who deserves recognition, by reason of eminent contributions to medical or collateral science or of meritorious services to the medical profession, may be proposed for honorary membership by the Executive Committee in writing at any stated meeting. The proposal shall be considered by the Committee of Censors and reported on at the next stated meeting, and shall then be voted on by the Society in the same manner as applications for active membership. Favorable concurrence of two-thirds of the votes cast shall effect admission of the candidate as an honorary member. Honorary members shall have the privilege of attending the meetings and participating in the scientific proceedings of the Society, but shall not hold office nor vote, nor pay dues or assessments; notices of meetings need not be sent to them unless they are resident in the District of Columbia or so desire.

Article VII. Resignations shall be submitted in writing and, after being read at any regular meeting, shall be voted on at the next regular meeting, and, with the concurrence of a majority, be accepted; except that no resignation shall be accepted from a member who is indebted to the Society for dues or assessments.

Chapter III.—Meetings

Article I, Section 1. This Society shall hold regular meetings every Wednesday during the months from October to May, inclusive, excepting the last two Wednesdays in December and May, and Wednesdays falling upon a National holiday or the day before; at eight o'clock, P. M., unless the Society by a two-thirds vote shall cancel a meeting.

Sec. 2. The first meeting in the months of January, March, May and November shall constitute the stated meetings, and shall be devoted to the transaction of the formal business of the Society. The stated meeting in May of each year shall constitute the annual meeting of the Society and shall be devoted to the reception of annual reports and other annual business, including election of officers as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 3. The first meeting of each month, other than the stated meetings, shall be devoted primarily and mainly to the transaction of the current business of the Society. All other meetings shall be devoted entirely to scientific proceedings, namely, the presentation of cases, specimens, and papers on medical subjects, and only announcements may be made and emergency business transacted. The conduct of the scientific programs of such meetings may be assigned equitably to the various sections. Social sessions may be held at any meeting.

Sec. 4. Special meetings shall be held as may be ordered by the Society or the Executive Committee, or upon the written request of any ten members.

Article II. Consideration of motions or resolutions involving an expression of the opinion of the Society in public matters shall be in order only provided due notice of the subject and time of its consideration shall have been sent to all active members.

Article III. Due notice of each regular and special meeting shall be sent to each active member, in which shall be specified, so far as possible, the program contemplated for the meeting, both as to scientific material and items of important business.

Article IV. Any business due to be transacted at any stated, regular, or special meeting of the Society may, if circumstances necessitate, by vote of the Society (or, in case of emergency, of the Executive Committee), be postponed to a specified subsequent meeting. Due notice of such postponement shall be sent to every member, and such postponed action shall be as valid as if effected at the original meeting.

Article V. This Society shall be governed and conducted exclusively by its active and life members.

Article VI. Twenty-one active and life members present shall constitute a quorum for the valid transaction of the business of the Society.

Chapter IV.—Dues and Assessments

Article I. Dues shall be for the calendar year and shall be paid to the Secretary-Treasurer before April 1st of each year.

Article II. Active members shall pay twenty dollars, except that members who have been graduated in medicine less than three years shall pay for their first year ten dollars, for their second year fifteen dollars, and thereafter twenty dollars.

Article III. Associate members shall pay five dollars.

Article IV. Special assessments may be proposed only by the Executive Committee at any meeting; notice of the proposed assessment shall then be sent to every member stating the regular or special meeting at which action will be taken.

Article V. Members who have not paid their dues and assessments before the first day of April of each year, shall, after due notice of their delinquency, be placed on the list of members in arrears for dues and assessments. If dues and assessments are not paid by December 31st of each year, such delinquents shall be automatically dropped from membership in the Society. Members so dropped may, after report by the Committee of Censors, be reinstated by the Society upon payment of arrears in dues and assessments.

Article VI. Dues and assessments, upon recommendation of the Executive Committee, may be temporarily or permanently remitted by a two-thirds vote at any stated meeting.

Chapter V.—Officers and Their Duties

Article I, Section 1. The officers of this Society shall be a a President, a President-elect, who shall assume office the following year, a First and a Second Vice-President, a Secretary-Treasurer, a Delegate and an Alternate to the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association.

Sec. 2. The President shall preside over the meetings of the Society; sign papers and disbursement warrants of the Society; call special meetings at the request of the Executive Committee or any ten members; deliver an annual address during his term after January 1st; be ex officio a member of the Executive Committee; and perform such duties as may be imposed on him by the Society, and in general as pertain to his office.

Sec. 3. The Vice Presidents shall, in order of their rank, assume the duties of the President during his absence or inability to act.

Sec. 4. The Secretary-Treasurer shall make full records of the proceedings of the Society; and after their approval by the Society preserve them in secure and permanent bound form; he shall act as reading clerk at the meetings; he shall be custodian of the official seal of the Society and be responsible for all records, papers, and other similar property of the Society, which he shall keep in secure and accessible form; he shall obtain the signatures of newly-elected members to the obligation to be governed by the Constitution and By-laws of the Society; he shall notify members and officers of their election, inform committee appointees of their selection and the duties with which they are charged, advise persons concerned of action affecting them taken by the Society, and in general conduct the correspondence of the Society; he shall prepare proper credentials for the Delegate to the American Medical Association; he shall maintain a complete and accurate list of active, life, associate and honorary members of the Society; he shall cooperate with the Program Committee in securing and arranging for the presentation of clinical cases, specimens, and papers at the meetings of the Society; he shall, a sufficient time previously, send to all members, and to such others as may be designated, an announcement of each regular and special meeting, specifying the cases, specimens and papers to be presented, the names of all applicants for membership to be voted on, reports of the Executive Committee on the investigation of accused members to be presented or considered and acted on, amendments to the Constitution and By-laws and proposed special assessments to be voted on, postponed stated business, interim elections, and so far as possible, all important items and the general character of the business to be transacted, a notice of the names of members resigned, dropped or expelled from the Society; he shall, upon the request of an officer of a recognized section, announce upon any regular or special notice of the Society the notice of program of a meeting of that section; he shall also collect and have charge of all moneys due the Society, sending out bills therefor at proper times, deposit all moneys to the credit of the Society in a bank designated by it for that purpose, keep the accounts of the Society with its members and others, make all disbursements ordered by the Society on warrants authenticated by the President, keep an accurate record of receipts, disbursements, funds and assets; he shall be bonded at the Society's expense; at each annual meeting, or at any time he is so ordered by the Society, shall render a statement of his accounts, with vouchers, which shall be audited by the Executive Committee; he shall be ex officio a member of the Executive Committee without vote; and perform such other duties as may be imposed on him or pertain to his office. For his services he shall receive a salary of five hundred dollars per annum.

Sec. 5. The Delegate to the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association, or, if he be unable to serve, the Alternate, shall attend the sessions of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association as the accredited representative of this Society; and shall make report thereon at the next stated meeting of the Society. The Delegate to the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association shall be a member of the Executive Committee, ex officio.

Chapter VI.—Election and Terms of Officers and Elective Committees

Article I. Elections shall be by ballot, and a majority of the votes cast shall be necessary to elect. In case no nominee receives a majority of the votes on the first ballot, the nominee receiving the fewest number of votes shall be dropped and a new ballot taken. This procedure shall be continued until one of the nominees receives a majority of the votes cast, when he shall be declared elected.

Article II. Nominations for office shall be made orally at the first meeting in March. The election of officers shall be held at the annual meeting.

Article III. The fiscal year shall be from the first day of July to the following thirtieth day of June.

Article IV, Section 1. The officers, except the President, the Delegate and the Alternate, shall be elected yearly at the annual meeting, and shall assume office and serve during the following fiscal year or until their successors assume office.

Sec. 2. The President and Vice Presidents shall be ineligible for reelection until after two years from the expiration of their terms of office.

Article V. The Delegate and the Alternate (who must have been members of the American Medical Association for at least two years) shall be elected biennially at the annual meeting of odd number years to serve for the following two fiscal years.

Article VI. One elective member of the Executive Committee shall be elected yearly at the annual meeting to serve for the following four fiscal years. Elective members of the Executive Committee shall be ineligible for reelection as elective members before one year after the expiration of the four year term.

Article VII. Two elective members of the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee shall be elected yearly at the annual meeting to serve for the following two fiscal years.

Article VIII. Whenever a vacancy occurs in any office or elective committee, an election for the remainder of the term of office may be held at any regular meeting after due notice shall have been sent to all active members.

Chapter VII—Committees

Article I. There shall be standing, regular and special committees.

Article II, Section 1. The standing committees shall be an Executive Committee, a Committee of Censors, a Committee on Program, a Committee on Public Information, a House Committee, a Committee on Public Health, and a Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee.

Sec. 2. The terms of office of all members of the present Executive Committee or of any member or members thereof taking office prior to July 1, 1938, shall terminate on that date.

Sec. 3. At the annual meeting of the Society in May, 1938, there shall be elected four members of the Executive Committee to take office July 1, 1938, and of the four so elected the one receiving the highest number of votes shall hold office for a term of four years, the next highest for three years, the next highest for two years, and the next highest for one year. Thereafter, at the annual meeting of the Society in May, there shall be elected one member of the Executive Committee who shall hold office for a term of four years. In the event of the death, resignation or other inability of an elective member to serve, or in the event of the election of such member as President, President-elect, or Delegate to the American Medical Association, the vacancy on the Executive Committee thus created may be filled by election for the unexpired term at any regular or special meeting of the Society, provided due notice of such election shall have been sent to all active and life members. An elected member of the Executive Committee shall be ineligible for reelection to this Committee for a period of two years following the completion of his or her term of office.

Sec. 4. After July 1, 1938, the Executive Committee shall consist of the President, President-elect, and Delegate to the American Medical Association, all ex officio, and four elected members whose term of office shall be four years except as provided in Section 3 above. The Secretary of the Society shall be ex officio secretary to the Executive Committee without vote. Four members of the Committee shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Sec. 5. The chairmen of all standing committees, except the Executive Committee, shall be appointed by the President.

Sec. 6. The Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee shall consist of four elective members and a chairman.

Sec. 7. The Committee on Public Health shall consist of not less than seventeen members.

Sec. 8. All other standing committees shall consist of five members each.

Sec. 9. All members of standing committees, except the elective members, shall be appointed by the President upon his assumption of office, to serve one year or until their successors are appointed.

Sec. 10. Vacancies in appointive positions on standing committees shall be filled by appointment by the President for the unexpired term.

Article III, Section 1. The Executive Committee shall maintain the following organization: The senior elected member shall serve as Chairman, his immediate junior as Vice Chairman, and the Secretary of the Society as Secretary without vote. It shall keep full records of its proceedings. It shall hold meetings at the discretion of its chairman or at the call of any two of its members. It shall keep informed in all matters pertaining to the objects, interests, policy and conduct of the Society, and report to the Society such recommendations as it may deem advisable. It shall exercise general oversight over the work of the officers, committees and sections. It shall annually audit the accounts of the Secretary-Treasurer. It shall supervise the affairs of the Society's publication and shall, in July of each year, elect for the term of one fiscal year, the Managing Editor and Editor of the Medical Annals of the District of Columbia and assign them their duties; it shall fill vacancies in the editorial staff by election for the unexpired term. It shall receive, investigate and report to the Society, in the manner herein prescribed, all charges against members of violation of requirements of the Constitution or By-laws. It shall endeavor to adjust minor complaints and differences of members, without reporting to the Society; subject, however, to appeal to the Society. It shall consider, report upon, and under the direction of the Society, promote or oppose legislative matters affecting the Society or the health of the community. It shall perform such duties as the Society may assign to it; in emergencies it may act for the Society, reporting such action to the Society; and it shall be subject to the control and direction of the Society. No provision of this section shall be construed to grant authority to the Executive Committee to commit the Society on any question of public policy; action on such matters shall always be in accordance with the provisions of Chapter III, Article II, of the Constitution.

Sec. 2. The Committee of Censors shall investigate and report upon all applicants for membership and receive all complaints as provided in Chapter X, Article I.

Sec. 3. The Committee on Program shall secure and arrange for the presentation of medical cases, specimens and papers at the meetings of the Society, and shall prepare the notices of the business and scientific programs of the meetings to be sent to the members by the Secretary-Treasurer.

Sec. 4. The Committee on Public Information shall disseminate among the public suitable information concerning medical and hygienic matters.

Sec. 5. The House Committee shall have general supervision of the Society's Building and all the property contained therein. It shall make all necessary purchases for emergency and minor repairs and changes to maintain the property and for the supplying of refreshments, and shall approve all bills contracted for under the authority of this provision. It shall attend to all arrangements pertaining to entertainments except the scientific program. It shall recommend to the Society such extensive and unusual repairs as may be deemed necessary for the safety and value of the property. It shall hire the service employees required and determine their compensation, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee. It shall, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee, prescribe such rules and regulations necessary for the proper government of the building and post them on the bulletin board, and shall report infractions of these rules to the Executive Committee.

Sec. 6. (a) The Committee on Public Health shall act as liaison committee between the various civic organizations and the Society. It shall be its duty to keep the Society informed of any activities which would affect in any way the health of the community and the organized profession. From time to time it shall seek the advice of the Society on such matters and actively pursue any course according to instructions from the Society.

(b) It shall maintain subcommittees on communicable diseases, on tuberculosis, on venereal diseases, on public sanitation, and on mental health, and shall appoint such other subcommittees from time to time as may be expedient to perform special duties as they may arise.

Sec. 7. (a) The Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee shall act in matters of difference between members of the Society and insurance carriers. The chairman of the committee is empowered to appoint two members of the Society, not necessarily members of the committee, to meet with two qualified representatives of insurance carriers for the settlement of any disputed bills between physicians and carriers. No such arbitrator shall sit in any case in which he, or a party he represents, is interested. If no agreement can be reached by such arbitrators, the matter in dispute shall be referred to the full committee, and any member of the Society submitting to arbitration as herein provided shall abide by its final decision.

(b) It shall investigate all charges of unethical conduct against members of the Society as regards workmen's compensation, industrial medicine and/or contract practice; and to review contracts between physicians and employers on any matter pertaining to workmen's compensation or contract practice.

(c) In all matters pertaining to workmen's compensation and/or contract practice, it shall be a fact-finding committee and to this end shall make such investigations as it may deem proper or as it may be requested to do by the Executive Committee or by the Society.

(b) Upon failure to amicably adjust any case which has received the consideration of the committee, or if it finds that which in its opinion indicates a serious breach of medical ethics on the part of a member of the Society, it shall in such instances report its findings, with definite recommendations, to the Committee of Censors and/or the Executive Committee.

(e) It shall prepare a list of qualifications for members in compensation practice for adoption by the Society.

(f) It shall adopt a fee table for compensation work.

Article IV. Section 1. Regular committees shall be committees provided for by the Constitution, other than the standing committees. Regular committees shall be:

Sec. 2. A Nominating Committee as provided for in Chapter VI, Article II.

Sec. 3. An Obituary Committee appointed by the President upon the death of each member. It shall present a suitable memorial and resolutions to the Society at the earliest practical date.

Sec. 4. A Hospital Committee of ten members and a chairman shall be appointed by the President upon his assumption of office to serve for one year. This committee shall investigate the ethical relations between the hospitals and dispensaries in the District of Columbia and physicians and recommend to the Society at the stated meeting in November a list of hospitals to be approved by the Society. Recommendations of changes in this approved list may be made at any business meeting. This committee shall inform the Committee of Censors of the names of members who are associated in any way with hospitals which are not on the approved list.

Sec. 5. A Medical Defense Committee as provided in the following articles:

(a) Active members of the Society are entitled, subject to the conditions and limitations hereinafter specified, to aid from the Society in defending themselves against unwarranted claims based on alleged malpractice.

(b) The Executive Committee shall appoint a committee, to be known as the Medical Defense Committee, to administer the provisions of this section. The Medical Defense Committee shall consist of three active members of the Society in good standing and the Secretary-Treasurer of the Society, ex officio. No member of the Executive Committee shall be eligible for membership on the Medical Defense Committee; in the event of the election of a member of the Medical Defense Committee to membership on the Executive Committee, his term as a member of the Medical Defense Committee shall expire on the day previous to the day when he assumes office as a member of the Executive Committee. All appointments shall be made in the month of March, to take effect on the first day of April next following and to continue for three years from and including that day. Vacancies shall be filled by appointment by the Executive Committee for the unexpired term. All appointments shall be made so that the term of one member, and of not more than one member, shall expire on March 31 of each year. Any member of the Medical Defense Committee may be removed by the Executive Committee, after hearing, for due cause.

The Medical Defense Committee shall elect a chairman in the month of April of each year or as soon thereafter as is practicable, to serve for one year. The Secretary-Treasurer of the Society shall be an ex officio member of the Medical Defense Committee, without vote, shall serve as its Secretary, shall supply all needed clerical assistance, and shall be custodian of its records. The Medical Defense Committee shall make an annual report to the Society in the month of May of each year, with such recommendations as the committee deems proper.

(c) The Medical Defense Committee shall investigate all claims based on alleged civil malpractice referred to it by members entitled to the benefits of this section. If after the investigation a claim is believed by the committee to be well founded, the committee, if the interested member so requests, shall endeavor to effect an equitable settlement. If a claim is believed by the committee not to be well founded, or if without fault on the part of the interested member an equitable settlement cannot be reached in a well founded claim, the committee, with the consent of the interested member, shall conduct the defense of the case. The committee, however, shall not assist in the defense of any criminal suit. The committee shall not assist in the defense of any claim if, in its judgment, the member was under the influence of narcotics or intoxicating liquor when the act or default constituting the alleged malpractice occurred, but the committee may, with the consent of the Executive Committee, cooperate with the member in the equitable adjustment of any such claim, having in mind the interests of the medical profession as well as of the offending member.

The Medical Defense Committee shall diligently inquire into the circumstances surrounding each case of alleged malpractice coming to its notice, whether the claim was referred to it by a member of the Society or came to its notice in any other manner, to ascertain the circumstances that gave rise to it. The committee may take such action as it deems proper to eliminate preventable causes that are believed to breed claims. The committee shall particularly report its findings with respect to the causes and prevention of malpractice claims, with such recommendations as it deems proper, in its annual report.

(d) The Medical Defense Committee is authorized to expend not more than three hundred dollars in the defense of any one claim, except that an additional two hundred dollars may be expended in any case in which in the judgment of the Executive Committee the facts warrant and in which the Executive Committee has previously approved such additional expenditure. The interested member, however, may employ additional counsel of his own choice and at his own expense and may otherwise contribute to the defense of the case, provided that the Medical Defense Committee retains at all times complete control and direction of the case.

(e) The Society will pay no judgments rendered or compromise effected, nor will it indemnify any member on account of any such judgment or compromise.

(f) If a member applying to the Medical Defense Committee for assistance is protected by an insurance policy, indemnifying him against loss by reason of malpractice, the committee shall lend such assistance, except financial, as in its judgment is advisable.

(g) If the Medical Defense Committee decides that a member who has sought its aid is not entitled to it, the member may appeal to the Executive Committee. The judgment of the Executive Committee shall be final. If, however, a decision adverse to the member is rendered by the Executive Committee, and the member thereafter defends his case in the trial court to a successful termination, the Medical Defense Committee, with the approval of the Executive Committee, may reimburse him to the amount that the Medical Defense Committee would have expended in his defense had the committee conducted his defense in the first instance.

(h) The Executive Committee shall establish a separate fund for the purpose of carrying this Section into effect, to be known as "The Medical Defense Fund of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia." An initial allotment of fifteen hundred dollars from the general funds of the Society shall be made by the Executive Committee and placed to the credit of this fund. Thereafter one dollar shall be set aside without further action by the Executive Committee, from the annual dues of each member at the time of the payment of such dues, and placed to the credit of this fund, until the fund amounts to three thousand dollars. Thereafter, whenever the fund falls below three thousand dollars, the Executive Committee shall allot such further amounts as may be necessary to restore it to three thousand dollars, but in no year shall the amount so allotted exceed an amount equal to one dollar for each active member of the Society. The Medical Defense Fund shall be disbursed by the Secretary-Treasurer of the Society on vouchers signed by members of the Medical Defense Committee and approved by the Executive Committee.

(i) Every active member of the Society in good standing, whose dues are paid before April 1st of any year, shall be entitled to the benefit of this section. Every member admitted to active membership subsequent to March 31 in any year, whose dues are paid at the time required by the Constitution, shall be entitled to such benefits from the time when he qualified as a member of the Society until March 31 next following.

No member shall be entitled to the benefits of this section in any case in which the cause of action arose prior to his becoming a member or prior to the date when this section became effective, or while the member is under suspension or otherwise not in good standing. The estate of a deceased member shall be entitled to the same benefits under this section as the member would be entitled to if he were living.

(j) Members entitled to and desiring the assistance of the Medical Defense Committee shall request such assistance in writing. As a condition precedent to such assistance, the member shall agree in writing that he will not compromise or settle his case without the consent of the committee and that the committee shall have complete control of the case. Without such a written agreement the Medical Defense Committee shall render only such assistance as provided in Section 5, Paragraph (f). A member desiring or receiving assistance from the committee shall immediately send to the Secretary of the committee every letter, process of court, or other evidence of a pending or threatened malpractice suit received by him and shall furnish such additional information in such detail and in such manner as the committee may require. Every member of the Society shall, on request, appear before the Medical Defense Committee and cooperate with it to the fullest extent in the investigation and the defense of any case, so far as he can ethically or legally do so.

(k) The Medical Defense Committee shall obtain the services of competent counsel as occasion requires, to advise and defend members entitled to the benefits of this section; but the member involved in any case shall have the right to employ additional counsel, at his own choice and at his own expense, provided, however, that the Medical Defense Committee retains complete control of the case.

Article V. Special committees may be established by vote of the Society for any special or temporary purpose as the needs for such committees demand.

Chapter VIII.—Sections

Article I. Whenever a sufficient demand therefor arises, active, life and associate members may organize sections, composed of special classes of the membership or devoted to the consideration and promotion of special branches of medical science, and art, by securing the adoption of amendments to this Constitution recognizing and establishing each section by name as a definite department of this Society. Each section shall form and maintain an organization by adopting By-laws, and annually in May electing a chairman, vice chairman, secretary and treasurer, to serve for the ensuing fiscal year. Any active, life or associate member of the Society may, at his option, join any section, but must conform to such financial or other regulations as may be imposed by the section, under penalty in case of not so conforming of forfeiting membership in the section. Each section shall arrange for the time and place of its meetings, but shall not hold sessions at the same time with the regular meetings of the Society; by arrangement with the Society or the Committee on Program, however, the scientific proceedings of regular meetings of the Society may, either occasionally or at stated intervals, be conducted by the sections. All members of the Society shall have the right to attend the scientific sessions of any section, but not without permission or invitation to participate in the discussions (except when held at the regular meetings of the Society). So far as possible, notices of the programs of the meetings of the sections shall be sent to all the members of the Society in conjunction with the notices of the weekly meetings of the latter. The transactions of the sections may be published with the transactions and proceedings of the general Society. Sections may at any time submit to the general Society reports or recommendations for the information or action of the latter. Each section shall be governed and conducted by its own active and life members; but its proceedings and organization must conform to the Constitution and By-laws of this Society, and it shall be subject to the control of, and appeal to, the Society; provided, that it shall require a two-thirds vote of the Society to reverse any action taken by any section. The Society shall not, without its consent, be put to any expense on behalf of any section. Each section shall furnish to the Society a copy of its By-laws and all amendments thereto, and shall submit such information concerning its operations as the Society may at any time require. Each section at the annual meeting shall submit a report of its proceedings during the preceding year, giving the names of its officers, the number of its members, the number of and attendance at its meetings, the work accomplished, and in general such information as may keep the Society advised as to its activity, success and character. The existence of any section may be terminated by the adoption of an amendment to this Constitution annulling its recognition and establishment.

Article II. The following sections are recognized and established as definite departments of this Society:

Section 1, on Internal Medicine
Section 2, on Ophthalmology, Otology, Rhinology and Laryngology.
Section 3, on Neurology and Psychiatry.
Section 4, on Pathology and Laboratory Medicine.
Section 5, on Neoplastic Diseases.
Section 6, on Gastro-enterology.
Section 7, on Pediatrics.

Chapter IX.—Professional Obligations

Article I. Section 1. The Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association shall be binding upon the members of the Society.

Sec. 2. Members shall comply when summoned as witnesses in cases under investigation by the Executive Committee; Committee of Censors; Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee; Medical Defense Committee; and the Hospital Committee.

Sec. 3. All duties, obligations and regulations as to their professional conduct and relations with this Society and with one another which shall be imposed by the Constitution and By-laws of this Society shall be binding and mandatory upon all members, and for violation thereof they shall be subject to discipline by the Society.

Sec. 4. The following obligation shall be signed by each new member within three months of his election to membership: "I hereby agree to be governed by the Constitution and By-laws of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, and to abide by the regulations prescribed therein."

Article II. Duties and Professional Relations of Members with Reference to Private Practice.

Section 1. In giving certificates of illness or of physical or mental condition, the physician shall have regard for the accepted code of ethics and the legal code, both of which impose upon him the duty of holding inviolate the confidential disclosures of patients, and shall not divulge the diagnosis except when required to do so by law, or under the terms of a contract to which the patient is a party, or upon the explicit request of the patient.

Sec. 2. It shall be the duty of members of this Society to discourage patients from defrauding other members, and it is expected that the members will use all just and proper means to assist one another in the collection of their fees for professional services.

Sec. 3. No member of this Society who has been called in as consulting physician shall assume sole charge of the patient, during the same illness, unless he shall have been specifically requested to do so by the attending physician.

Sec. 4. No member of this Society shall offer, solicit, give or receive any commission for recommending or referring patients for general or special treatment, diagnosis, or operation; or shall solicit or accept any commission from any pharmacist or other dealer in supplies and appliances for the sick and injured on account of patients referred to them.

Sec. 5. Any member guilty of violating any of the public laws relating to medical and surgical practice shall be subject to discipline by the Society.

Article III. Duties and Professional Relations of Members with Reference to Compensation, Contract and Industrial Practice.

Section 1. "It is unprofessional for a physician to dispose of his services under condifions that make it impossible to render adequate service to his patient or which interfere with reasonable competition among the physicians of a community. To do this is detrimental to the public and to the individual physician, and lowers the dignity of the profession." (Chap. III, Art. VI, Sec. 2, Principles of Medical Ethics, American Medical Association.) No member of the Society shall enter into a written, verbal, or implied contract or agreement of employment with any person, firm, corporation, association, club, lodge, or other similar organization, including the Federal and/or District Government, the terms of which contract or agreement are in violation of the principles herein expressed. The customary professional relationship of a physician to his patients, upon the basis of individual fees for services rendered, shall not be regarded as a contract within the meaning of this section.

Sec. 2. Every member of the Society before entering into a contract or agreement for rendering professional services shall submit a copy of his contract, if written, or a true declaration of the terms of the agreement, in writing, to the Committee on Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine for approval. In the event that the Committee disapproves the contract, a member may appeal to the Executive Committee.

Sec. 3. Members desiring to do compensation practice shall equip themselves to meet the qualifications provided for in Chapter VII, Article III, Section 7, paragraph (e).

Sec. 4. It shall be unprofessional for members in compensation practice to place posters, or for them or their agents to solicit work, directly or indirectly, or to charge less than the fees provided in Chapter VII, Article III, Section 7, paragraph (f).

Sec. 5. A member called to treat a patient injured in industry, and insured under the Workmen's Compensation Act, shall promptly and from time to time contact the adjuster of the company insuring the employer of the patient, making all suitable efforts to determine his identity in cases where this may be necessary, inform him of all the circumstances of the case and keep him posted on its progress. If, bearing in mind the qualifications of members doing this class of practice, the member feels aggrieved by any action of the Company, he may present the matter to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee, which shall make every effort to effect a satisfactory adjustment and to safeguard the interests of the member making the appeal.

Sec. 6. Any member notified by employers and/or insurance companies to examine and/or treat an injured employee already under the care of another member can do so only after a full and frank discussion with the member in charge to the end that he, the member in charge, shall completely understand the situation; to do otherwise is unprofessional. If, following this discussion, the member in the employ of the insurance company assumes the treatment of the patient, and the member originally in charge feels himself aggrieved, he may appeal to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee; and at hearings held by this committee in such cases the member in the employ of the insurance company must be prepared to justify his action, or be liable to citation to the Committee of Censors under charges of unprofessional conduct.

Article IV. Duties and Professional Relations of Members with Reference to Hospitals and their Medical Staffs.

Section 1. Members shall not accept appointment to, or continue to serve upon, the medical staff of any hospital or dispensary which is not approved by the Society. A list of approved hospitals and dispensaries shall be available in the Society's office.

Sec. 2. Members of the Society who are members of the staff of any hospital or dispensary, when attending patients in such hospital or dispensary, shall insist on proper payment for their services, except in the case of patients who are unable to pay.

Sec. 3. No member of the Society who is a member of the staff of any hospital receiving patients in private accommodations, shall attend such private patient, sent to the hospital by a member of the Society, unless specifically requested to do so by the physician at whose instance the patient entered the hospital.

Sec. 4. In the case of a private patient brought to a hospital or dispensary in emergency, no member of the Society, acting as a member of the staff of such hospital or dispensary, shall render other than the necessary first aid treatment, pending the arrival of the patient's physician. In every instance the patient or his nearest relative or friend shall be asked to choose a physician.

Sec. 5. No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group or individual, by whatever name called or however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, which has not been approved by the Society.

The Executive Committee is authorized and directed to prepare an approved list of organizations, groups and individuals, by whatever name called and however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, and the same shall be kept in the office of the Secretary-Treasurer. Before any such organization, group or individual can be placed on the approved list of the Society, such organization, group or individual, or the member of the Society proposing professional relations therewith, shall submit to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee such evidence as the Committee or the Society may require showing the character, activities, financial condition and ethical standards of said organization, group or individual, and after considering the same, said committee shall make a report of its investigation and findings to the Executive Committee for such action as it may deem necessary.

Chapter X.—Discipline

Article I. The Committee of Censors shall receive all complaints and evidence of violations of the regulations of the Society or of alleged unprofessional and unethical practice and malpractice by members of this Society and if in its opinion the complaint or evidence is well founded, it shall prepare against the accused charges in writing, stating the facts in detail and forward them to the Executive Committee. If the Committee of Censors decides that there is no ground for action against the accused and the member or committee making the complaint does not agree with the decision, the complainant may then prepare charges in writing, stating the facts in detail and forward them to the Executive Committee.

Article II. Charges against any member or members must be submitted in writing, giving specific facts, to the Executive Committee, and shall then be fully and impartially investigated by it, the accused being given a fair hearing. Should this committee by a two-thirds vote find the accused guilty of a violation of the regulations of the Society, or of unprofessional or unethical practice or malpractice of which the committee shall be exclusive judge, it shall submit its report and recommendations in writing to the Society at a regular meeting, due notice of such prospective report to be previously sent to all active members; the matter shall then lie over until a subsequent regular or special meeting to be fixed by vote of the Society; at which meeting (of which due notice shall be sent to all active members) the matter shall be discussed and acted upon, and such punishment (reprimand, fine, suspension, expulsion, or the like) may be imposed as may be determined upon a concurrence of two-thirds of the votes cast. No punishment shall be imposed upon any member except after the foregoing procedure is carried out and by a two-thirds vote.

Article III. Proceedings for the impeachment of any officer or committee member shall be instituted and conducted in a similar manner as specified in the foregoing article.

Article IV. Any member who changes his occupation in such a way as to render him ineligible for membership in this Society may, unless he resign, be proceeded against in the manner specified in the foregoing articles with a view to terminating his membership.

Chapter XI.—By-laws and Amendments

Article I. By-laws not inconsistent with this Constitution may be adopted by a favorable concurrence of two-thirds of the votes cast at any stated meeting, after having been proposed in writing at a previous stated meeting and a copy thereof been sent to all active members with a notice of the meeting at which their adoption is to be voted on.

Article II. The operation of any By-law may, at any meeting and for a definite purpose, be suspended by a two-thirds vote; but for that purpose and at that meeting only.

Article III. Amendments to this Constitution or By-laws may be submitted in writing at any stated meeting and referred to the Executive Committee for report. A copy of the proposed amendment shall be sent to each member with the notice of the following stated meeting at which action shall be taken. A favorable concurrence of two-thirds of the votes cast shall result in adoption.

Article IV. No provision of this Constitution shall be suspended or abrogated under any circumstances whatever, even by unanimous consent, except through amendment by the procedure specified in the foregoing section.

By-laws.

Article I. Order of Business.—Section 1. The following shall be the order of business for the meetings of the Society:

1. Call to order.
2. Reading of minutes of previous meeting.
3. Reports of officers.
4. Reports of committees and sections.
5. Election of members.
6. Election of officers.
7. Correspondence.
8. Unfinished business.
9. New business.
10. Introduction of visitors.
11. Presentation of clinical cases and pathological specimens.
12. Essays.
13. Adjournment.

Sec. 2. The time devoted to business shall not exceed thirty minutes excepting at stated and special meetings and at meeting devoted to the election of officers.

Article II. Rules of Order.—The parliamentary procedure of this Society shall be governed by Robert's Rules of Order.

Article III. Vistors.—Any reputable physicians or persons engaged in collateral sciences or arts may, at the invitation of any member, attend the scientific meetings of the Society. Applicants for membership in the Society may also attend the meetings during the pendency of their applications. Medical officers of the public services while stationed in or near Washington are given a standing invitation to attend the scientific meetings of the Society and its Sections, and notices of the meetings shall at the order of the Society be sent to such as may so desire. The privilege of visiting the meetings shall always, however, be subject in individual cases to the will of the Society.

Article IV. Guest cards shall be issued only to distinguished members of the medical profession as medical educators, research workers and physicians who hold a high place in the official life of this or other Governments and who have been appointed or assigned to duty in Washington for a limited time. This does not include the regular assignment of physicians in the United States Army, Navy, or Public Health Service to local duty. Any member of the Society may nominate a Guest in writing, stating his qualifications, and forward it to the Committee of Censors, who shall report their finding to the Executive Committee where the final decision in the award of a Guest Card shall be made. The term of the Guest Card shall be for the duration of the fiscal year in which the Guest Card is issued. Guests shall be placed on the Society's mailing list and shall be privileged to attend and take part in the scientific meetings of the Society.

Article V. Essays.—No papers shall be presented (without express permission) before the Society that have been previously elsewhere read or published. The time allowed for delivery of essays shall be limited to thirty minutes; for presentation of cases or specimens, to ten minutes; and for discussions, to seven minutes each; but these time limits may be extended by majority consent of the Society.

Article VI. Motions or resolutions involving the expenditure of money shall be referred to the Executive Committee for a report before action is taken.

Article VII. Forms of Application for Membership.—The following forms are prescribed for application for active and associate membership in this Society:

Active Membership.

Washington, D. C., ..., 19....

To the Medical Society of the District of Columbia:

The undersigned, a legally qualified practitioner of medicine, hereby applies for active membership in the Medical Society of said District, and respectfully submits the following information as to his qualifications therefor: Full name; date of birth; place of birth; college of graduation as Doctor of Medicine, date of such graduation; date licensed by the Commission on Licensure, license number, series; date of beginning the practice of medicine in the District of Columbia. At what times and places, other than this District, have you practiced medicine? Name the medical and scientific societies and associations of which you have been a member, indicating those in which you still retain membership. Name the public and institutional appointments which you have had, indicating the dates of such connections, and specifying the institutions with which you still retain connection. Are you solely or mainly engaged in the lawful practice of medicine in the District of Columbia? Are you engaged in any business, trade or profession, other than the practice of medicine? If so, please specify. What degrees have you, other than Doctor of Medicine? Degree, College, Year. Have you previously made application for membership in this Society? If so, when? I hereby agree to notify immediately the Secretary of this Society of any change in my address, and to inform him at once should I engage in any business, trade, or profession other than the practice of medicine, prior to the meeting at which this application is acted upon.

Appreciating the requirement for investigating my eligibility for membership in this Society, I hereby agree to permit a full investigation and discussion by the Society and the Censors, and to abide by their decision.

Article VIII. Fees.—Section 1. The fees to be charged for professional services, subject, however, to the several rules which are appended, shall be maintained in the Society's office for the information of the membership.

Sec. 2. The table provided for in Section 1 contains the standard fees which shall be demanded; they shall be increased according to the judgment of the practitioner concerned, in all cases of extraordinary detention or attendance; also in proportion to the importance of the case, of the responsibility attached to it, and to the services rendered, when these are extraordinary. They shall be diminished at the discretion of the physician when he believes that the patient cannot afford to pay the regular fees, and yet is abla to make some compensation; but diminishing the fees except for motives of charity and benevolence is a violation of this regulation.

Sec. 3. Graduates in medicine are not entitled to gratuitous services unless they devote their entire time to the practice of medicine or by reason of age or infirmity have retired from the regular practice of medicine, or unless such graduates in medicine are in indigent circumstances.

Sec. 4. It is not designated by these regulations to prevent gratuitous services to those who are incapable of making remuneration without distressing themselves or their families.

Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association *

Chapter I.—General

Section 1. The Physician's Responsibility.—A profession has for its prime object the service it can render to humanity; reward or financial gain should be a subordinate consideration. The practice of medicine is a profession. In choosing this profession an individual assumes an obligation to conduct himself in accord with its ideals.

Sec. 2. Groups and Clinics.—The ethical principles actuating and governing a group or clinic are exactly the same as those applicable to the individual. As a group or clinic is composed of individual doctors, each of whom, whether employer, employee or partner, is subject to the principles of ethics herein elaborated, the uniting into a business or professional organization does not relieve them either individually or as a group from the obligation they assume when entering the profession.

Chapter II.—The Duties of Physicians to Their Patients

Section 1. Patience, Delicacy and Secrecy.—Patience and delicacy should characterize all the acts of a physician. The confidences concerning individual or domestic life entrusted by a patient to a physician and the defects of disposition o. flaws of character observed in patients during medical attendance should be held as a trust and should never be revealed except when imperatively required by the laws of the state. There are occasions, however, when a physician must determine whether or not his duty to society requires him to take definite action to protect a healthy individual from becoming infected, because the physician has knowledge, obtained through the confidences entrusted to him as a physician, of the communicable disease to which the healthy individual is about to be exposed. In such a case, the physician should act as he would desire another to act toward one of his own family under like circumstances. Before he determines his course, the physician should know the civil law of his commonwealth concerning privileged communications.

* Printed by permission of the American Medical Association.

Sec. 2. Prognosis.—A physician should give timely notice of dangerous manifestations of the disease to the friends of the patient. He should neither exaggerate nor minimize the gravity of the patient's condition. He should assure himself that the patient or his friends have such knowledge of the patient's condition as will serve the best interests of the patient and the family.

Sec. 3. Patients Must Not Be Neglected.—A physician is free to choose whom he will serve. He should, however, always respond to any request for his assistance in an emergency or whenever temperate public opinion expects the service. Once having undertaken a case, a physician should not abandon or neglect the patient because the disease is deemed incurable; nor should he withdraw from the case for any reason until a sufficient notice of a desire to be released has been given the patient or his friends to make it possible for them to secure another medical attendant.

Chapter III.—The Duties of Physicians to Each Other and to the Profession at Large Article I. Duties to the Profession

Section 1. Uphold Honor of Profession.—The obligation assumed on entering the profession requires the physician to comport himself as a gentleman and demands that he use every honorable means to uphold the dignity and honor of his vocation, to exalt its standards and to extend its sphere of usefulness. A physician should not base his practice on an exclusive dogma or sectarian system, for "sects are implacable despots; to accept their thraldom is to take way all liberty from one's action and thought." (Nicon, father of Galen.)

Sec. 2. Medical Societies.—In order that the dignity and honor of the medical profession may be upheld, its standards exalted, its sphere of usefulness extended, and the advancement of medical science promoted, a physician should associate himself with medical societies and contribute his time, energy and means in order that these societies may represent the ideals of the profession.

Sec. 3. Deportment.—A physician should be "an upright man, instructed in the art of healing." Consequently, he must keep himself pure in character and conform to a high standard of morals, and must be diligent and conscientious in his studies. "He should also be modest, sober, patient, prompt to do his whole duty without anxiety; pious without going so far as superstition, conducting himself with propriety in his profession and in all the actions of his life." (Hippocrates.)

Sec. 4. Advertising.—Solicitation of patients by physicians as individuals, or collectively in groups by whatsoever name these be called, or by institutions or organizations, whether by circulars or advertisements, or by personal communications, is unprofessional. This does not prohibit ethical institutions from a legitimate advertisement of location, physical surroundings and special class—if any—of patients accommodated. It is equally unprofessional to procure patients by indirection through solicitors or agents of any kind, or by indirect advertisement, or by furnishing or inspiring newspaper or magazine comments concerning cases in which the physician has been or is concerned. All other like self-laudations defy the traditions and lower the tone of any profession and so are intolerable. The most worthy and effective advertisement possible, even for a young physician, and especially with his brother physicians, is the establishment of a well-merited reputation for professional ability and fidelity. This cannot be forced, but must be the outcome of character and conduct. The publication or circulation of ordinary simple business cards, being a matter of personal taste or local custom, and sometimes of convenience, is not per se improper. As implied, it is unprofessional to disregard local customs and offend recognized ideals in publishing or circulating such cards.

It is unprofessional to promise radical cures; to boast of cures and secret methods of treatment or remedies; to exhibit certificates of skill or of success in the treatment of diseases; or to employ any methods to gain the attention of the public for the purpose of obtaining patients.

Sec. 5. Patents and Perquisites.—It is unprofessional to receive remuneration from patents for surgical instruments or medicines; to accept rebates on prescriptions or surgical appliances, or perquisites from attendants who aid in the care of patients.

Sec. 6. Medical Laws—Secret Remedies.—It is unprofessional for a physician to assist unqualified persons to evade legal restrictions governing the practice of medicine; it is equally unethical to prescribe or dispense secret medicines or other secret remedial agents, or manufacture or promote their use in any way.

Sec. 7. Safeguarding the Profession.—Physicians should expose without fear or favor, before the proper medical or legal tribunals, corrupt or dishonest conduct of members of the profession. All questions affecting the professional reputation or standing of a member or members of the medical profession should be considered only before proper medical tribunals in executive sessions or by special or duly appointed committees on ethical relations. Every physician should aid in safeguarding the profession against the admission of its ranks of those who are unfit or unqualified because deficient either in moral character or education.

Article II. Professional Services of Physicians to Each Other

Section 1. Physicians Dependent on Each Other.—Experience teaches that it is unwise for a physician to treat members of his own family or himself. Consequently, a physician should always cheerfully and gratuitously respond with his professional services to the call of any physician practicing in his vicinity, or of the immediate family dependents of physicians.

Sec. 2. Compensation for Expenses.—When a physician from a distance is called on to advise another physician or one of his family dependents, and the physician to whom the service is rendered is in easy financial circumstances, a compensation that will at least meet the traveling expenses of the visiting physician should be proffered. When such a service requires an absence, from the accustomed field of professional work of the visitor that might reasonably be expected to entail a pecuniary loss, such loss should, in part at least, be provided for in the compensation offered.

Sec. 3. One Physician to Take Charge.—When a physician or a member of his dependent family is seriously ill, he or his family should select a physician from among his neighboring colleagues to take charge of the case. Other physicians may be associated in the care of the patient as consultants.

Article III. Duties of Physician in Consultations

Section 1. Consultations Should Be Encouraged.—In serious illness, especially in doubtful or difficult conditions, the physician should request consultations.

Sec. 2. Consultation for Patient's Benefit.—In every consultation, the benefit to be derived by the patient is of first importance. All the physicians interested in the case should be frank and candid with the patient and his family. There never is occasion for insincerity, rivalry or envy and these should never be permitted between consultants.

Sec. 3. Punctuality.—It is the duty of a physician, particularly in the instance of a consultation, to be punctual in attendance. When, however, the consulant or the physician in charge is unavoidably delayed, the one who first arrives should wait for the other for a reasonable time, after which the consultation should be considered postponed. When the consultant has come from a distance, or when for any reason it will be difficult to meet the physician in charge at another time, or if the case is urgent, or if it be the desire of the patient, he may examine the patient and mail his written opinion, or see that it is delivered under seal, to the physician in charge. Under these conditions, the consultant's conduct must be especially tactful; he must remember that he is framing an opinion without the aid of the physician who has observed the course of the disease.

Sec. 4. Patient Referred to Specialist.—When a patient is sent to one specially skilled in the care of the condition from which he is thought to be suffering, and for any reason it is impracticable for the physician in charge of the case to accompany the patient, the physician in charge should send to the consultant by mail, or in the care of the patient under seal, a history of the case, together with the physician's opinion and an outline of the treatment, or so much of this as may possibly be of service to the consultant; and as soon as possible after the case has been seen and studied, the consultant should address the physician in charge and advise him of the results of the consultant's investigation of the case. Both these opinions are confidential and must be so regarded by the consultant and by the physician in charge.

Sec. 5. Discussions in Consultation.—After the physicians called in consultation have completed their investigations of the case, they should meet by themselves to discuss conditions and determine the course to be followed in the treatment of the patient. No statement or discussion of the case should take place before the patient or friends, except in the presence of all the physicians attending or by their common consent; and no opinions or prognostications should be delivered as a result of the deliberations of the consultants, which have not been concurred in by the consultants at their conference.

Sec. 6. Attending Physician Responsible.—The physician in attendance is in charge of the case and is responsible for the treatment of the patient. Consequently, he may prescribe for the patient at any time and is privileged to vary the mode of treatment outlined and agreed on at a consultation whenever, in his opinion, such a change is warranted. However, at the next consultation, he should state his reasons for departing from the course decided on at the previous conference. When an emergency occurs during the absence of the attending physician, a consultant may provide for the emergency and the subsequent care of the patient until the arrival of the physician in charge, but should no do more than this without the consent of the physician in charge.

Sec. 7. Conflict of Opinion.—Should the attending physician and the consultant find it impossible to agree in their view of a case another consultant should be called to the conference or the first consultant should withdraw. However, since the consultant was employed by the patient in order that his opinion might be obtained, he should be permitted to state the result of his study of the case to the patient, or his next friend in the presence of the physician in charge.

Sec. 8. Consultant and Attendant.—When a physician has attended a case as a consultant, he should not become the attendant of the patient during that illness except with the consent of the physician who was in charge at the time of the consultation.

Article IV. Duties of Physicians in Cases of Interference

Section 1. Criticism to Be Avoided.—The physician, in his intercourse with a patient under the care of another physician, should observe the strictest caution and reserve; should give no disingepuous hints relative to the nature and treatment of the patient's disorder; nor should the course of conduct of the physician, directly or indirectly, tend to diminish the trust reposed in the attending physician. In embarrassing situations, or wherever there may seem to be a possibility of misunderstanding with a colleague, the physician should always seek a personal interview with his fellow.

Sec. 2. Social Calls on Patient of Another Physician.—A physician should avoid making social calls on those who are under the professional care of other physicians without the knowledge and consent of the attendant. Should such a friendly visit be made, there should be no inquiry relative to the nature of the disease or comment upon the treatment of the case, but the conversation should be on subjects other than the physical condition of the patient.

Sec. 3. Services to Patient of Another Physician.—A physician should never take charge of or prescribe for a patient who is under the care of another physician, except in an emergency, until after the other physician has relinquished the case or has been properly dismissed.

Sec. 4. Criticism to Be Avoided.—When a physician does succeed another physician in the charge of a case, he should not make comments on or insinuations regarding the practice of the one who preceded him. Such comments or insinuations tend to lower the esteem of the patient for the medical profession and so react against the critic.

Sec. 5. Emergency Cases.—When a physician is called in an emergency and finds that he has been sent for because the family attendant is not at hand, or when a physician is asked to see another physician's patient because of an aggravation of the disease, he should provide only for the patient's immediate need and should withdraw from the case on the arrival of the family physician after he has reported the condition found and the treatment administered.

Sec. 6. When Several Physicians Are Summoned.—When several physicians have been summoned in a case of sudden illness or of accident, the first to arrive should be considered the physician in charge. However, as soon as the exigencies of the case permit, or on the arrival of the acknowledged family attendant or the physician the patient desires to serve him, the first physician should withdraw in favor of the chosen attendant; should the patient or his family wish some one other than the physician known to be the family physician to take charge of the case the patient should advise the family physician of his desire. When, because of sudden illness or accident, a patient is taken to a hospital, the patient should be returned to the care of his known family physician as soon as the condition of the patient and the circumstances of the case warrant this transfer.

Sec. 7. A Colleague's Patient.—When a physician is requested by a colleague to care for a patient during his temporary absence, or when, because of an emergency, he is asked to see a patient of a colleague, the physician should treat the patient in the same manner and with the same delicacy as he would have one of his own patients cared for under similar circumstances. The patient should be returned to the care of the attending physician as soon as possible.

Sec. 8. Relinquishing Patient to Regular Attendant.—When a physician is called to the patient of another physician during the enforced absence of that physician, the patient should be relinquished on the return of the latter.

Sec. 9. Substituting in Obstetric Work.—When a physician attends a woman in labor in the absence of another who has been engaged to attend, such physician should resign the patient to the one first engaged, upon his arrival; the physician is entitled to compensation for the professional services he may have rendered.

Article V. Differences Between Physicians

Section 1. Arbitration.—Whenever there arises between physicians a grave difference of opinion which cannot be promptly adjusted, the dispute should be referred for arbitration to a committee of impartial physicians, preferably the Board of Censors of a component county society of the American Medical Association.

Article VI. Compensation

Sec. 1. Limits of Gratuitous Service.—The poverty of a patient and the mutual professional obligation of physicians should command the gratuitous services of a physician. But endowed institutions and organizations for mutual benefit, or for accident, sickness and life insurance, or for analogous purposes, have no claim upon physicians for unremunerated services.

Sec. 2. Contract Practice.—It is unprofessional for a physician to dispose of his services under conditions that make it impossible to render adequate service to his patient or which interfere with reasonable competition among the physicians of a community. To do this is detrimental to the public and to the individual physician, and lowers the dignity of the profession.

By the term "contract practice" as applied to medicine is meant the carrying out of an agreement between a physician or a group of physicians, as principals or agents, and a corporation, organization or individual, to furnish partial or full medical services to a group or class of individuals for a definite sum or a fixed rate per capita.

Contract practice per se is not unethical. However, certain features or conditions if present make a contract unethical, among which are: 1. When there is solicitation of patients, directly or indirectly. 2. When there is underbidding to secure the contract. 3. When the compensation is inadequate to assure good medical service. 4. When there is interference with reasonable competition in a community. 5. When free choice of a physician is prevented. 6. When the conditions of employment make it impossible to render adequate service to the patients. 7. When the contract because of any of its provisions or practical results is contrary to sound public policy.

Each contract should be considered on its own merits and in the light of surrounding conditions. Judgment should not be obscured by immediate, temporary or local results. The decision as to its ethical or unethical nature must be based on the ultimate effect for good or ill on the people as a whole.

Sec. 3. Commissions.—When a patient is referred by one physician to another for consultation or for treatment, whether the physician in charge accompanies the patient or not, it is unethical to give or to receive a commission by whatever term it may be called or under any guise or pretext whatsoever.

Sec. 4. Direct Profits to Lay Groups.—It is unprofessional for a physician to dispose of his professional attainments or services to any lay body, organization, group or individual, by whatever name called, or however organized, under terms or conditions which permit a direct profit from the fees, salary or compensation received to accrue to the lay body or individual employing him. Such a procedure is beneath the dignity of professional practice, is unfair competition with the profession at large, is harmful alike to the profession of medicine and the welfare of the people, and is against sound public policy.

Chapter IV.—The Duties of the Profession to the Public

Section 1. Physicians as Citizens.—Physicians, as good citizens and because their professional training specially qualifies them to render this service, should give advice concerning the public health of the community. They should bear their full part in enforcing its laws and sustaining the institutions that advance the interests of humanity. They should cooperate especially with the proper authorities in the administration of sanitary laws and regulations. They should be ready to counsel the public on subjects relating to sanitary police, public hygiene and legal medicine.

Sec. 2. Public Health.—Physicians, especially those engaged in public health work, should enlighten the public regarding quarantine regulations; on the location, arrangement and dietaries of hospitals, asylums, schools, prisons and similar institutions; and concerning measures for the prevention of epidemic and contagious diseases. When an epidemic prevails, a physician must continue his labors for the alleviation of suffering people, without regard to the risk to his own health or life or to financial return. At all times, it is the duty of the physician to notify the properly constituted public health authorities of every case of communicable disease under his care, in accordance with the laws, rules and regulations of the health authorities of the locality in which the patient is.

Sec. 3. Public Warned.—Physicians should warn the public against the devices practiced and the false pretensions made by charlatans which may cause injury to health and loss of life.

Sec. 4. Pharmacists.—By legitimate patronage, physicians should recognize and promote the profession of pharmacy; but any pharmacist, unless he be qualified as a physician, who assumes to prescribe for the sick, should be denied such countenance and support. Moreover, whenever a druggist or pharmacist dispenses deteriorated or adulterated drugs, or substitutes one remedy for another designated in a prescription, he thereby forfeits all claims to the favorable consideration of the public and physicians.

Conclusion

While the foregoing statements express in a general way the duty of the physician to his patients, to other members of the profession and to the profession at large, as well as of the profession to the public, it is not to be supposed that they cover the whole field of medical ethics, or that the physician is not under many duties and obligations besides these herein set forth. In a word, it is incumbent on the physician that under all conditions, his bearing toward patients, the public and fellow practitioners should be characterized by a gentlemanly deportment and that he constantly should behave toward others as he desires them to deal with him. Finally, these principles are primarily for the good of the public, and their enforcement should be conducted in such a manner as shall deserve and receive the endorsement of the community.

American Medical Association

Certificate of Change in Its Articles of Association

STATE OF ILLINOIS,
County of Cook, ss:

We Hereby Certify, that at an Annual Meeting of the members of the American Medical Association, held at Saratoga Springs, in the State of New York, on the 13th day of June, 1902, the Articles of Incorporation or Association of said American Medical Association were amended in the following manner, (more than four-fifths of the members of said Association present and participating, voting in favor of said changes):

By amending Sections 1 and 2 thereof, by striking out all after said members 1 and 2 respectively, and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Constitution, or Articles of Incorporation

Article I.—Title of the Association, or Corporation.

The name and title of this organization shall be The American Medical Association.

Article II.—Object of the Association, or Corporation.

The object of this Association shall be to federate into one compact organization the medical profession of the United States, for the purpose of fostering the growth and diffusion of medical knowledge, of promoting friendly intercourse among American physicians, of safeguarding the material interests of the medical profession, of elevating the standard of medical education, of securing the enactment and enforcement of medical laws, of enlightening and directing public opinion in regard to the broad problems of state medicine, and of representing to the world the practical accomplishments of scientific medicine, with power to acquire and hold property, publish Journals, etc.

9-13935

Article III.—Composition of the Association, or Corporation.

Section 1. This Association shall consist of Members, Members by Invitation, Honorary Members, Associate Members and Delegates.

Sec. 2. Members.—Members shall consist of such members of the state societies, together with their affiliated local societies, entitled to representation in this Association as shall make application for admission, in writing to the Treasurer, and accompany said application with a certificate of good standing signed by the president and secretary of the society of which they are members, and the annual fee.

Sec. 3. Members by Invitation.—Members by Invitation shall consist of distinguished physicians of foreign countries who may be invited by the officers of Sections or of the Association. They shall hold their connection with this Association until the close of the annual session to which they are invited, and shall be entitled to participate in all of its affairs, as in the case of members, but they shall not be assessed the annual dues.

Sec. 4. Honorary Members.—Honorary Members shall by physicians of foreign countries who have risen to preeminence in the profession of medicine.

Sec. 5. Associate Members.—Representative teachers and students of the allied sciences, not physicians, may become Associate Members by the vote of the House of Delegates.

Sec. 6. Delegates.—Delegates shall consist of such members of the affiliated state and territorial medical societies and of the medical service of the United States Army, of the United States Navy, and of the United States Marine-Hospital Service as shall be chosen in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, or Articles of Incorporation, and By-Laws of The American Medical Association.

Article IV.--House of Delegates

Section 1. —There shall be a House of Delegates which shall consist of (1) delegates elected by the permanently-organized state and territorial medical societies in affiliation with this Association; (2) delegates elected by each of the component scientific Sections of this Association; (3) one delegate each from the medical departments of the United States Army and United States Navy, and one from the United States Marine-Hospital Service.

10-13935

Sec. 2.—The total membership of the House of Delegates shall not exceed 150, and the delegates representing the affiliated state and territorial medical societies shall be apportioned among the several affiliated state and territorial medical organizations in direct ratio to their true membership.

Article V.—Sections

In order that its appropriate scientific work may be expeditiously and systematically performed this Association shall be divided into Sections, each of which shall be devoted to the encouragement and pursuit of knowledge in one of the recognized branches into which the science and art of medicine are for convenience divided. New Sections may be organized, or existing Sections discontinued, from time to time as necessity arises and when authorized by the House of Delegates.

Article VI.—Branches

The House of Delegates shall have authority to provide for and to create such branch organizations as may be deemed essential to the promotion of the welfare of the medical profession.

Article VII.—Sessions and Meetings.

The Association shall hold an Annual Session, during which there shall be held daily a General Meeting, which shall be open to all registered members and delegates. The place and time for holding each Annual Session shall be determined for each next succeeding year by the House of Delegates.

Article VIII.—Officers.

Section 1.—The officers of this Association shall be a President, four Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and nine Trustees.

Sec. 2.—The officers of this Association shall be elected by the House of Delegates.

Sec. 3.—Each officer, with the exception of the Trustee, shall hold office for one year, or until his successor is elected and installed. Three Trustees shall be elected annually by the House of Delegates for a term of three years.

Sec. 4.—No member of the House of Delegates shall be eligible to any of the offices mentioned in the foregoing sections of this article.

Article IX.—Funds and Appropriations.

Funds for meeting its current expenses and awards from year to year shall be raised by the Association, by an equal assessment of not more than ten dollars annually on each of the members; by voluntary contributions for specific objects; and from the profits of its publications. Funds may be appropriated by the House of Delegates in accordance with the articles of incorporation for defraying the expenses of its annual meetings; for publication; for enabling standing committees to fulfill their respective duties, conduct their correspondence, and procure materials necessary for the completion of their stated annual reports; for the encouragement of scientific investigation by prizes and awards of merit; and for defraying the expenses incidental to specific investigation.

Article X.—Referendum.

Section 1.—The General Session shall have the right to discuss questions referred to it by the House of Delegates, and it may, by a two-thirds vote, order a general referendum on any question pending before the House of Delegates.

Sec. 2.—The House of Delegates shall, upon a two-thirds vote of its own members or upon a two-thirds vote of the General Meeting, submit any question, either through The Journal or by mail, to the general membership for final vote; and if the persons voting shall comprise a majority of the members, the majority of such votes cast shall determine the question, and this vote shall be binding upon the House of Delegates.

Article XI.—Amendments.

The House of Delegates shall have authority to amend any article of this Constitution, or Articles of Incorporation, by a three-fourths vote of all the members composing the House of Delegates.

And Section 3 of said Articles of Incorporation was amended by striking out all after the figure 3, and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"The Management of the aforesaid, The American Medical Association, shall be vested in a Board of Ten Trustees, of whom the President of the Association, from time to time, shall be ex officio one, to be elected as in these Articles of Incorporation, and the By-laws of said Association or Corporation directed."

AND WE FURTHER CERTIFY, that the said Annual Meeting of said Association, so held at Saratoga Springs, on the 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th days of June, 1902, was, upon motion, duly adjourned on the 13th day of June, 1902, to meet at 103 State Street, Chicago. Illinois, on the 16th day of June; that the adjourned session of the Annual Meeting of said American Medical Association was duly held at 103 State Street, Chicago, Illinois, pursuant to the said adjournment, and that at the said adjourned session of said Annual Meeting, so held in Chicago, Illinois, (more than a quorum being present), the previous action of the Meeting, in adopting the said Amendment to the Articles of Incorporation, above set forth, were approved by the unanimous vote of all the members present.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, we have hereunto set our hands and affixed the Seal of said Corporation, this 20th day of June, A.D. 1902.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS OF THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 1938

American Medical Association, 535 North Dearborn Street, Chicago

Constitution

Article 1.—Title and Definition

The name of this corporation is the American Medical Association; it is a federacy* of its constituent associations.

Article 2.—Objects

The objects of the Association are to promote the science and art of medicine and the betterment of public health.

Article 3.—Constituent Associations

Constituent associations are those state and territorial medical associations which are, or which may hereafter be, federated to form the American Medical Association, in accordance with this Constitution and By-Laws.

Article 4.—Component Societies

Component societies are those county or district medical societies contained within the territory of and charted by the respective constituent associations.

Article 5.—House of Delegates

Section 1. The legislative powers of the Association reside in the House of Delegates. The House of Delegates shall transact all business of the Association not otherwise specifically provided for in this Constitution and By-Laws, and shall elect the general officers.

*Federacy: A federation or union of several states under one central authority, consisting of delegates from each state in matters of general policy but self-governing in local matters. American Dictionary and Cyclopedia.

Sec. 2.—Composition.—The House of Delegates is composed of delegates elected by the constituent associations and by the Sections of the Scientific Assembly, and of delegates from the Medical Departments of the Army and the Navy and the Public Health Service, appointed by the Surgeon-General of the respective departments. The Trustees, the ex-Presidents of the Association and the members of the several Councils shall be ex officio members of the House of Delegates without the right to vote, provided that members of the Councils who are also elected delegates may exercise all of the rights of elected delegates.

Sec. 3.—The total voting membership of the House of Delegates shall not exceed 175. The Medical Department of the Army and of the Navy, the United States Public Health Service and the scientific sections shall each be entitled to one delegate, and the remainder shall be apportioned among the constituent associations in proportion to their actual active membership as hereinafter provided in the By-Laws. (As amended, 1925.)

Article 6.—General Officers

Section 1.—The general officers of the Association shall be a President, a President-Elect, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, a Speaker and a Vice Speaker of the House of Delegates, and nine Trustees. (As amended, 1925.) Prior to June 14, 1938, this Section read: "These officers shall be elected annually and, except the Trustees, shall serve for one year or until their successors are elected and installed."

Sec. 2.—The President-Elect shall be elected annually. He shall serve as President-Elect until the annual session of the Association next ensuing after his election and shall become President on his installation in the course of that session, serving thereafter as President until the next following annual session and the installation of his successor. If the President-Elect dies, resigns or, in the judgment of the Board of Trustees confirmed by the House of Delegates, is permanently disqualified for the performance of the duties of his office by any just cause, the Vice President shall become President-Elect and in due course succeed to the presidency, with all of the prerogatives and duties pertaining to that office, as fully as if elected to it in the first instance: Provided, however, that the President-Elect who is elected at the annual session of the Association in 1937 shall, notwithstanding his election as such for the period of one year only, be installed as President in the course of the session in 1938 and continue as such until the session in 1939 and the installation of his successor.

A Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and a Speaker and a Vice Speaker of the House of Delegates shall be elected, each to serve for one year and until his successor is elected and installed: Provided, however, that in event of the death, resignation or removal, or of the permanent disability of the President-Elect as determined by the Board of Trustees, the Vice President shall succeed to the office of President-Elect and in due course to the office of President, notwithstanding the fact that he was in the first instance elected as Vice President for one year only. (As amended, 1938.)

Sec. 3.—Two Trustees shall be elected annually, except every fifth year, when but one shall be elected, each to serve for five years, or until his successor is elected and installed: Provided, that at the session of the House of Delegates at which this amendment is adopted, two Trustees shall be elected to serve three years and one to serve four years; that at the next annual session, one Trustee shall be elected to serve three years and two to serve four years; and that at the next subsequent session two Trustees shall be elected to serve four years and one to serve five years. No Trustee shall serve for more than two consecutive terms, but a Trustee elected to serve an unexpired term shall not be regarded as having served a term unless he has served three or more years. (As amended, 1924.)

Article 7.—Trustees

The Board of Trustees shall have charge of the property and financial affairs of the Association and shall perform such duties as are prescribed by law governing directors of corporations.

Article 8.—Members and Fellows

Section 1.—Members of the American Medical Association.—Members in good standing of the constituent associations are the members of the American Medical Association, subject, however, to the provisions of these By-Laws regarding members.

Sec. 2.—Fellows of the Scientific Assembly.—Members in good standing of the Association, who have complied with the provisions of the By-Laws regarding Fellows, are Fellows of the Scientific Assembly of the American Medical Association.

Article 9.—Scientific Assembly

Section 1.—The Scientific Assembly of the American Medical Association is the convocation of its Fellows for the presentation and discussion of subjects pertaining to the science and art of medicine.

Sec. 2.—The Scientific Assembly is divided into sections, each section representing that branch of medicine described in its title.

Sec. 3.—New sections may be created or existing sections discontinued by the House of Delegates. The Scientific Assembly and its sections shall be conducted in accordance with the rules and regulations set forth in this Constitution and By-Laws.

Article 10.—Annual Sessions

The House of Delegates and the Scientific Assembly shall meet annually at times and places to be fixed by the House of Delegates. Places desiring to entertain the House of Delegates and the Scientific Assembly in annual session shall submit their invitations in writing, together with such data as may be required, to the Board of Trustees, not less than sixty days prior to the annual session at which the selection of the place of meeting is to be made. The Board of Trustees shall investigate or cause to be investigated all such places from which said invitations have been received, and shall make report to the House of Delegates, advising which, if any, of said places possess, or may be expected to furnish, the necessary facilities and conveniences for entertaining the Association and accommodating its various activities. The time and place of any of these sessions may, however, be changed by the unanimous action of the Board of Trustees at any time not less than sixty days prior to the time selected for that session. A session may be held at any place in the United States. (As amended, 1927.)

Article 11.—Funds

Funds may be raised by an equal assessment of not more than ten dollars annually on each of the members; from the Association's publications, and in any other manner approved by the Board of Trustees. Funds may be appropriated by the Board of Trustees to defray the expenses of the Association, to carry on its publications, to encourage scientific investigations and for any other purpose approved by the Board of Trustees.

Article 12.—Amendments

The House of Delegates may amend this Constitution at any annual session, provided the proposed amendment shall have been introduced at the preceding annual session, and provided two thirds of the voting members of the House of Delegates registered at the session at which action is taken vote in favor of such change or amendment. (As amended, 1928.)

By-Laws

Business and Legislation

Chapter I.—Qualifications, Term, Apportionment and Registration of Delegates

Section 1. Delegates Must Have Been Fellows of the American Medical Association Two Years.—A member of the House of Delegates must have been a member of the American Medical Association and a Fellow of the Scientific Assembly for at least two years next preceding the session of the House of Delegates at which he is to serve.

Sec. 2. Term.—Delegates and alternates from constituent associations shall be elected for two years. Constituent associations entitled to more than one representative shall elect them so that one half, as near as may be, shall be elected each year. Delegates and alternates elected by the sections, or delegates appointed from the United States Army, United States Navy and United States Public Health Service shall hold office for two years. (As amended, 1923.)

Sec. 3. Apportionment of Delegates.—At the annual session of 1925, and every third year thereafter, the House of Delegates shall appoint a committee of five on reapportionment, of which the Speaker and the Secretary shall be members. The committee shall apportion the delegates among the constituent associations in accordance with Article 5, Section 3, of the Constitution, and in proportion to the membership of each constituent association as recorded in the office of the Secretary of the American Medical Association on April 1 of the year in which the apportionment is made. This apportionment shall take effect at the next succeeding annual session, and shall prevail until the next triennial apportionment, whether the membership of the constituent association shall increase or decrease. (As amended, 1925.)

Sec. 4. Registration of Delegates.—Each delegate representing a constituent association, before being seated, shall deposit with the committee on credentials a certificate signed by the secretary and under the seal of the constituent association stating that he has been regularly elected a delegate by that constituent association. Each delegate from a section shall present similar credentials signed by the chairman and the secretary of the section which he represents. Each delegate from a government service shall present credentials stating he has been duly appointed by the Surgeon-General of the department which he represents.

Sec. 5. A Delegate, Once Seated, to Retain His Seat for the Entire Session.—A delegate whose credentials have been accepted by the committee on credentials and whose name has been placed on the roll of the House, shall remain a delegate of the body which he represents until final adjournment of the session and his place shall not be taken by any other delegate or alternate.

Chapter II. Procedure of House of Delegates

Section 1. Order of Business.—The following shall be the order of business, unless otherwise ordered:

1. Call to order by the Speaker.
2. Roll call.
3. Reading and adopting the minutes.
4. Reports of officers.
5. Reports of committees.
6. Unfinished business.
7. New business.

Sec. 2. During the annual presentation of the report of each Council or Bureau the privileges of the floor of the House of Delegates, for a period of five minutes, shall be extended to each Council secretary and Bureau head. (As amended, 1924.)

Sec. 3. Limit of Time for Introduction of New Business.—Unanimous consent shall be required for the introduction of new business at the last meeting of the annual session of the House of Delegates, except when presented by the Board of Trustees, the officers of the sections, or the sections. All new business so presented shall require three fourths affirmative vote for adoption.

Sec 4. Rules of Order.—The House of Delegates shall be governed by Robert's Rules of Order when not in conflict with these By-Laws or with the rules of the House.

Sec. 5. Quorum.—Fifty of the voting members of the House of Delegates shall constitute a quorum. (As amended, 1928.)

Chapter III.—Meetings of the House of Delegates

Section 1. Regular Sessions.—The House of Delegates shall meet annually on the Monday preceding the opening of, and at the same place as, the Scientific Assembly of the Association.

Sec. 2. Special Sessions.—Special sessions of the House of Delegates shall be called by the Speaker on written request of twenty-five or more delegates representing one third or more of the constituent associations, or on request of a majority of the Board of Trustees. When a special session is thus called, the Secretary shall mail a notice to the last known address of each member of the last House of Delegates at least twenty days before such special session is to be held, in which notice shall be specified the time and place of meeting and the items of business to be considered. No other business shall be transacted at the special session than that specified in the call.

Chapter IV.—Nomination and Election of Officers and Affiliate, Associate and Honorary Fellows, and Installation of Officers

Section 1. Nominations.—Nominations for office shall be made orally, but a nominating speech must not exceed two minutes. The Treasurer shall be nominated by the Board of Trustees. No member of the House of Delegates nor general officer of the Association shall be eligible for election to the office of President-Elect or Vice President. (As amended, 1937.)

Sec. 2. Qualifications of General Officers.—The General Officers must have been members of the Association and Fellows of the Scientific Assembly for at least two years next preceding their election. The Speaker and Vice Speaker of the House may but need not be elected from among the members of the House.

Sec. 3. Method of Holding Elections.—All elections shall be by ballot, and a majority of the votes cast shall be necessary to elect. In case no nominee receives a majority of the votes on the first ballot, the nominee receiving the lowest number of votes shall be dropped and a new ballot taken. This procedure shall be continued until one of the nominees receives a majority of all the votes cast, when he shall be declared elected. However, when there is only one nominee for an office, a majority vote without ballot shall elect.

Sec. 4. Time of Election.—The election of officers shall be the order of business of the House of Delegates immediately following the final supplementary reports of the Board of Trustees and Committees on the afternoon of the fourth day of the annual session of the House of Delegates (Thursday): Provided, however, that the House of Delegates may change the time of election by action taken at least one day in advance of that to which the election is to be changed, and provided further that the motion to change the time of election shall be supported by two thirds of the delegates registered.

The election of Affiliate, Associate and Honorary Fellows shall immediately follow the election of officers. Not more than three Honorary Fellows shall be elected at any annual session except on special recommendation of the Council on Scientific Assembly and the unanimous vote of the House. (As amended, 1927.)

Sec. 5. Associate Fellows.—Applications for Associate Fellowship from foreign physicians and from American physicians engaged in missionary and similar labors in foreign countries must be approved by the Judicial Council; applications from dentists must be approved by the Section on Laryngology, Otology and Rhinology, from pharmacists by the Section on Pharmacology and Therapeutics, and from representative teachers and students of science allied to medicine by the officers of a section.

Sec. 6. Affiliate and Honorary Fellows.—Nominations for Affiliate Fellowship shall be made by the constituent association of which the nominee is a member, and nominations for Honorary Fellowship shall be made by the sections, and must be submitted to the House of Delegates not later than the second day of the Scientific Assembly. These nominations shall be referred without debate to the Council on Scientific Assembly, which shall consider the scientific attainments and professional character of the applicants and report to the House of Delegates.

Sec. 7. Installation.—The general officers of the Association, except the President, shall assume their duties at the close of the last meeting of the annual session at which they are elected.

Sec. 8. Installation of the President.—The President-Elect shall be installed as and assume the duties of President at the opening general meeting of the Scientific Assembly of the annual session following that at which he was elected. (As amended, 1937.)

Chapter V.—Duties of Officers

Section 1. President.—The President shall preside at the general meetings of the Scientific Assembly. At the opening general meeting of the Scientific Assembly next following his election he shall deliver an address on such matters as he may deem of importance to the public and to the medical profession. He may attend the meetings of and make suggestions to the House of Delegates or the Board of Trustees. With the approval of the Board of Trustees he is authorized to appoint committees (a) requested by the Councils, and (b) for emergencies and purposes not otherwise provided for. He shall nominate members of standing committees for election by the House of Delegates. (As amended, 1937.)

Sec. 2. Vice President.—The Vice President shall officiate for the President during the latter's absence, or at his request. In case of death, resignation or removal of the President, the Vice President shall officiate during the unexpired term.

Sec. 3. Speaker.—The Speaker shall preside at the meetings of the House of Delegates and shall perform such duties as custom and parliamentary usage require. He shall have the right to vote only when his vote shall be the deciding vote.

Sec. 4. Vice Speaker.—The Vice Speaker shall officiate for the Speaker in the latter's absence or at his request. In case of death, resignation, or removal of the Speaker, the Vice Speaker shall officiate during the unexpired term.

Sec. 5. Secretary.—The Secretary, in addition to the duties ordinarily devolving on the secretary of a corporation and those delegated in other sections of these By-Laws, shall give due notice of the time and place of annual and special sessions of the House of Delegates and of the Scientific Assembly in The Journal of the American Medical Association. He shall send an official notice of each annual or special session to the secretary of each constituent association and to the secretary of each section. He shall keep the minutes of the House of Delegates. He shall notify members of committees of their appointment and of the duties assigned them. He shall verify the credentials of the members of the House of Delegates and shall provide a registration book in which shall be recorded the name of each delegate in attendance at each session, together with that of the constituent association, government service or section which he represents. He shall prepare for publication the official programs for the Scientific Assembly, and shall perform such other duties as may be directed by the House of Delegates, or the Board of Trustees.

Sec. 6. Treasurer.—The Treasurer shall be the custodian of all moneys, securities and deeds belonging to the Association which may come into his possession, and shall hold the same subject to the direction and disposition of the Board of Trustees: Provided, however, that the Board of Trustees may select a bank or trust company to act as custodian, in place of the Treasurer, of all or any part of the investments and securities owned by the Association, and to act as the agent of the Association in collecting the income therefrom. The Board of Trustees may, from time to time, change such custodian as it may deem best for the interest of the Association. The Treasurer shall give to the Board of Trustees a suitable bond for the faithful performance of his trust, and shall receive for his service a salary to be fixed by the Board of Trustees. (As amended, 1931.)

Sec. 7. Officers to Complete Business of Session.—All business of each annual session shall be completed by the officers (including section officers) who have served during the session.

Chapter VI.—Board of Trustees

Section 1. Board of Trustees.—The Trustees at their first meeting after the annual session of the House of Delegates, shall organize by electing a chairman, a secretary, and an executive committee of three members. It shall be the duty of this Board to provide for and to superintend the publication of The Journal of the American Medical Association, and of all proceedings, transactions and memoirs of the Association. It shall have full discretionary power to omit from The Journal, in part or in whole, any paper that may be referred to it by any of the sections. It shall appoint a general manager and an editor of The Journal, which two positions may be held by one person, and such assistants as may be necessary, and shall determine their salaries and the terms and conditions of their employment. All resolutions or recommendations of the House of Delegates pertaining to the expenditure of money must be approved by the Board of Trustees before the same shall become effective. During the annual session of the Association the Board shall hold meetings as often as may be deemed necessary by the chairman, and all matters referred to it by the House of Delegates shall be reported on within twenty-four hours, if so requested by the House. The Board of Trustees shall have the accounts of the Treasurer and of The Journal office audited annually or oftener, if deemed necessary, and shall make an annual report to the House of Delegates, which report among other items shall specify the character and cost of all the publications of the Association during the year and the amount of all property belonging to the Association. Should a vacancy occur, on account of death or otherwise, among the general officers of the Association, the Board of Trustees may fill such vacancy until the next annual session of the House, unless otherwise provided for in this Constitution and By-Laws. The Board of Trustees shall fix the salary of the Secretary and of the Treasurer. Regular meetings of the Board shall be held immediately after the annual session of the House of Delegates, and on the third Friday in the month of February of each year. Special meetings of the Board may be called at any time by the chairman, or by five members of the Board, by mailing a written or printed notice to the last known address of each trustee, at least five days before such meeting is to be held; in which notice shall be specified, in general terms, the object of such special meeting, and no other business shall be transacted thereat: Provided, that the proceedings of any meeting of the Board at which all the members are present or which are approved in writing by every member of the Board shall be valid without previous notice having been given. Five members of the Board shall constitute a quorum. During the intervals between the sessions of the House of Delegates the Board of Trustees shall supervise the action of committees constituted by the action of the House and may appoint emergency committees. (As amended, 1925.)

The President, the President-Elect and the Speaker of the House of Delegates shall be ex officio members of the Board of Trustees, but without the right to vote. (As amended, 1923.)

An amendment of June 14, 1938, substituted "Bureau of Health Education" for "Bureau of Health and Public Instruction."

Sec. 2. To Establish Bureau of Health Education.—The Board of Trustees shall establish a bureau, to be known as the Bureau of Health Education, to carry on such activities in the field of health and the dissemination of information in relation thereto as the House of Delegates may direct or the Board of Trustees, in the absence of such directions, may determine. (As adopted, 1923, and amended, 1938.)

Sec. 3. To Publish a Journal for the Laity.—The Board of Trustees shall publish a journal for the dissemination among the laity of information concerning health and matters of popular interest concerning medical matters, the editorial policies of which shall be determined by said Board, with the cooperation of an editorial advisory committee, consisting of five members, appointed by said Board from among the Fellows of the Association. (As adopted, 1923.)

Sec. 4. Trustees to Control Session.—The Board of Trustees shall have full control of all arrangements for the annual sessions and shall provide meeting places for the House of Delegates, the general meetings and the scientific sections. It shall also have control of all exhibits. It may appoint a local committee on arrangements, which shall be at all times under the Board.

Sec. 5. To Establish a Distinguished Service Award of the American Medical Association.—The Board of Trustees shall create and establish an award to be known as the Distinguished Service Award of the American Medical Association, which shall consist of a medal and a citation.

One Fellow of the Association shall be eligible to receive the award each year and shall be selected in a manner prescribed in these By-Laws.

The Board of Trustees shall consider the merits of nominees for the award recommended by the Committee on Distinguished Service Awards and shall select from the list not more than three Fellows to be balloted on by the House of Delegates. The Board of Trustees shall submit the list of nominees so selected to the House of Delegates for consideration, together with a brief statement of the findings of the Committee on Awards with respect to each nominee.

The House of Delegates shall select the recipient of the award from the list of nominees submitted by the Board of Trustees. The selection shall be by ballot, in the same manner as officers are elected. The vote shall be taken immediately after the nominees are placed before the House by the Board of Trustees.

The Board of Trustees is charged with the duty of having a suitable medal and citation prepared each year and is further charged with the duty of fixing the time and method of presentation. (As adopted, 1937.)

Chapter VII.—Committees

Section 1. Classification of Committees.—Committees shall be classified as (a) Standing Committees, (b) Reference Committees, and (c) Special Committees. The standing committees shall be nominated by the President and elected by the House of Delegates, unless otherwise provided for. Reference and special committees shall be appointed by the Speaker as provided in these By-Laws. Special committees may be created by the House of Delegates to perform the special functions for which they are created; they shall be appointed by the Speaker unless otherwise ordered by the House. Committees acting during the interval between the sessions of the House of Delegates shall be subject to the Board of Trustees. In case of vacancies in committees occurring during the interval between annual sessions, the President or the Speaker, according to the committee on which said vacancies occur, shall have the power to appoint Fellows to fill the vacancies until the next annual session.

The Speaker of the House of Delegates may appoint from the members of the House such additional committees as he may deem expedient in advance of the annual meeting to expedite the business of the House of Delegates. All such committees shall be subject to the approval of the House of Delegates. (As amended, 1923.)

Sec. 2. Membership of Committees.—Any Fellow shall be eligible to serve on standing or special committees. Reference committees shall be appointed from the members of the House of Delegates. Member of committees not members of the House of Delegates shall have the right to present their reports in person to the House and to participate in the debate thereon, but shall not have the right to vote. (As amended, 1924.)

Sec. 3. Standing Committees.—Standing committees shall be the following:

(a) Judicial Council.
(b) Council on Medical Education and Hospitals.
(c) Council on Scientific Assembly. (As amended, 1923.)

Chapter VIII.—Organization of Standing Committees or Councils

Section 1. Membership.—The Standing Committees, or Councils, including the Judicial Council and the Council on Scientific Assembly, shall consist of five members, each elected for five years. The Council on Medical Education and Hospitals shall consist of seven members each elected for seven years. The term of office of the members of each committee shall terminate in succession, one each year, and the House of Delegates shall elect annually, on nomination by the President, one member to each committee to fill the vacancy, except that in 1925, three members of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals shall be elected by the House of Delegates. The members of the Council on Scientific Assembly shall be chosen, as far as practical, from ex-section officers representing different sections. The President-Elect, the Secretary of the Association and the Editor of The Journal shall be ex officio members of this Council. (As amended, 1925.)

Sec. 2. Officers.—The Councils shall organize and elect their own officers except that the Secretary of the Association shall be the Secretary of the Judicial Council and of the Council on Scientific Assembly, and that on nomination by that Council, the Board of Trustees shall elect annually, to serve one year, a secretary of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals, and shall fix his salary. (As amended, 1923.)

Sec. 3. Expenditures.—Each Council shall submit to the Board of Trustees a budget of its expenses for the fiscal year, and the Board shall make such appropriation for each Council as it may see fit. Each Council shall be limited in its expenditures to the appropriation made for it by the Board of Trustees and no Council shall expend or contract to expend any money in excess of its appropriation without the consent and approval in writing of the Board of Trustees.

Sec. 4. Rules and Regulations.—Each Council may make its own rules to govern its action; such rules shall not conflict with these By-Laws nor with standing rules or resolutions of the House of Delegates.

Sec. 5. Committees. Each Council shall have authority to appoint committees subject to the approval of the Board of Trustees for any purpose within the jurisdiction of the Council.

Sec. 6. Headquarters.—The headquarters of each Council shall be at the general office of the Association where the transactions of the Council shall be recorded.

Sec. 7. Reports.—Each Council shall submit annually a report of its work to the House of Delegates. All such reports, so far as possible, shall be transmitted thirty days before the annual session to the Secretary of the Association, who shall have them printed for distribution to the members of the House of Delegates.

Chapter IX.—Duties of Standing Committees or Councils

Section 1. The Judicial Council.—The judicial power of the Association shall be vested in the Judicial Council, whose decision shall be final. This power shall extend to and include (1) all questions involving Fellowship in the Scientific Assembly or the obligations, rights and privileges of Fellowship; (2) all controversies arising under this Constitution and By-Laws and under the Principles of Medical Ethics, to which the American Medical Association is a party; and (3) controversies (a) between two or more recognized constituent associations, (b) between a constituent association and a component society or societies of another constituent association or associations or a member or members of another constituent association or other constituent associations, and (c) between members of different constituent associations. In all these cases the Judicial Council shall have original jurisdiction. (As amended, 1937.)

In all cases which arise (a) between a constituent association and one or more of its component societies; (b) between component societies of the same constituent association; (c) between a member or members and the component society to which said member or members belong, or (d) between members of different component societies of the same constituent association, the Judicial Council shall have appellate jurisdiction in questions of law and procedure but not of fact. The period of time within which appeal to the Judicial Council may be taken shall be limited to the six months following the date of decision by the constituted authority of a constituent association. (As amended, 1937.)

The Judicial Council shall have jurisdiction on all questions of ethics and in the interpretation of the laws of the organization.

The Judicial Council may, at its discretion, investigate general professional conditions and all matters pertaining to the relations of physicians to one another and to the public, and may make such recommendations to the House of Delegates or the constituent associations as it deems necessary.

The Judicial Council shall have authority in its discretion from time to time to request the President to appoint investigating juries to which it may refer complaints or evidence of unethical conduct which in its judgment is of greater than local concern. Such investigating juries, if probable cause for action be shown, shall report with formal charges to the President, who, under Chapter V, Section 1, of the By-Laws, shall appoint a Prosecutor, who, in the name and on behalf of the American Medical Association, shall prosecute the charges against the accused before the Judicial Council. The Council shall have the power to acquit, admonish, suspend or expel the accused. (As adopted, 1937.)

Sec. 2. Council on Medical Education and Hospitals.—The functions of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals shall be (1) to investigate conditions of medical education, hospitals and associated subjects and to suggest means and methods by which the same may be improved; (2) to endeavor to further the realization of such suggestions as may be approved by the House of Delegates.

Sec. 3. Council on Scientific Assembly.—The functions of the Council on Scientific Assembly shall be: (1) to secure cooperation between the sections; (2) to pass on questions of policy in relation to scientific work and to investigate and report on scientific questions, either on its own initiative or when such questions are referred to it by the House of Delegates; (3) to stimulate the development of the sections; (4) to consider at first hand applications for new sections, or for changes in existing sections, and to report to the House of Delegates; (5) to appoint officers for meetings making up the section on miscellaneous topics and for the first session of a newly established section; (6) to arrange the programs for the general meetings of the Scientific Assembly [and with the cooperation of the section officers to combine section programs and to arrange such other changes as may seem advisable]. (As amended, 1925, 1938.) Clause in brackets, added June 14, 1938.

Chapter X.—Reference Committees

Section 1. Appointment.—Immediately after the organization of the House of Delegates at each annual session the Speaker of the House of Delegates shall appoint from the members of the House such committees as may be deemed expedient by the House of Delegates. Each committee shall consist of five members, unless otherwise provided, the chairman to be specified by the Speaker. These committees shall serve during the session at which they are appointed.

Sec. 2. References.—Resolutions, measures and propositions presented to the House of Delegates shall be referred to the appropriate committee which committee shall report to the House before final action shall be taken, unless otherwise unanimously ordered by the House of Delegates.

Sec. 3. Organization.—Each Reference Committee shall, as soon as possible after the adjournment of each meeting, or during the meeting, if necessary, take up and consider such business as may have been referred to it, and shall report on the same at the next meeting or when called on to do so. Three members shall constitute a quorum.

Sec. 4. Committees.—The following committees are hereby provided:

(1) A Committee on Sections and Section Work, to which shall be referred all matters relating to the sections and the section work. (The members of the Council on Scientific Assembly shall be members, ex officio, of this committee.)

(2) A Committee on Rules and Order of Business, to which shall be referred all matters regarding rules governing the action, methods of procedure and order of business of the House of Delegates.

(3) A Committee on Medical Education, to which shall be referred all matters relating to medical colleges and medical education. (The members of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals shall be members, ex officio, of this committee.)

(4) A Committee on Legislation and Public Relations, to which shall be referred all matters relating to state and national legislation, memorials to legislatures, to the United States Congress, or to the President of the United States. The Director of the Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation shall be ex officio a member of this committee. (As amended, 1923, 1929.)

(5) A Committee on Hygiene and Public Health, to which shall be referred all matters relating to hygiene and public health.

(6) A Committee on Amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws, to which shall be referred all proposed amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws. (The members of the Judicial Council shall be members, ex officio, of this committee.)

(7) A Committee on Reports of Officers, to which shall be referred addresses of the President and of the Speaker of the House of Delegates and the reports of the Secretary and of the Board of Trustees.

(8) A Committee on Credentials, to which shall be referred all questions regarding the registration and the credentials of delegates.

(9) A Committee on Miscellaneous Business, to which shall be referred all business not otherwise disposed of.

Chapter XI.—Committee on Distinguished Service Awards

Section 1. There is hereby created a special committee to be known as the "Committee on Distinguished Service Awards of the American Medical Association."

This committee shall consist of five members, who shall serve for a period of three years, except the first committee, two of which shall be appointed for three years, two for two years and one for one year.

Nomination for the award may be made by any Fellow of the Association, provided it is made in a manner prescribed by the committee and not less than two months in advance of the next regular annual session of the Association. (As adopted, 1937.)

Sec. 2. Duties and Powers of the Committee on Awards.—The Committee on Awards shall make its own rules of procedure, not in conflict with the By-Laws, with respect to the performance of its duties, subject to the approval of the Board of Trustees.

It shall consider the eligibility of nominees for the Distinguished Service Award of the American Medical Association on the basis of meritorious services in the science and art of medicine and shall submit its findings and recommendations to the Board of Trustees annually within a time limit fixed by the Board of Trustees.

In the event that more than five nominations are received, the committee shall elect therefrom a list of not more than five to be submitted to the Board of Trustees, together with a brief statement of its findings with reference to each. (As adopted, 1937.)

Scientific Assembly

Membership and Fellowship

Chapter XII.—Membership and Fellowship

Section 1. Tenure of Membership.—Membership in this Association shall continue only so long as the individual is a member of a component society of the constituent association through which he holds membership. When the Secretary shall be officially informed by the secretary of the constituent associations through which a member holds membership in this Association that the member is not in good standing, the Secretary shall remove the name of said member from the membership roll of the American Medical Association. A member of a constituent association who removes to and engages in the practice of medicine at a location in another state in which there is a constituent association shall forfeit his membership in this Association, and the Secretary shall remove his name from the roster of members of the American Medical Association, unless within one year after such change of residence he becomes a member of the constituent association in the state to which he has moved: Provided, that when the member is also a Fellow of the Scientific Assembly the By-Laws defining the effect on Fellowship of removal to another state shall have precedence over this section. (As amended, 1935.)

Sec. 2. Fellows.—Any member of this Association holding a degree equal in requirement to that of M.D., granted by a school of medicine recognized by the American Medical Association entitling the holder to apply to a state board of medical examination and registration for license to practice medicine, and who on the prescribed form shall apply for Fellowship and subscribe for The Journal, paying the annual Fellowship dues for the current year, shall be inducted into the Association as a Fellow unless the application is disapproved by the Judicial Council. In exceptional cases a member holding a degree equal in requirement to that of M.D., but not graduated at a recognized school, who formerly was a Fellow or who has established a high standard of professional attainment, may be admitted as a Fellow by the Judicial Council if in its judgment such action is desirable. (As amended, 1930, 1934.)

Commissioned medical officers of the United States Army, United States Navy and the United States Public Health Service shall be Fellows of this Association so long as they are engaged actively in their respective service, and thereafter if they have been retired on account of age or physical disability, or, after long and honorable service, under the provisions of an Act of Congress. These Fellows shall not be required to pay Fellowship dues and shall not receive The Journal of the American Medical Association except by personal subscription. (As amended, 1924.)

Sec. 3. Effect on Fellowship or Removal to Another State.—A Fellow who changes the location at which he practices medicine, from the state through whose constituent association he holds membership in the American Medical Association to another state in which there is a constituent association, is eligible to membership in the component society of his new location on the presentation of a transfer card and an official statement that his dues have been paid in full in the society in which he holds membership, provided that no evidence which would otherwise disqualify him for membership arise. He shall forfeit his Fellowship in the American Medical Association one year after such change of location, unless he becomes a member of the constituent association of the state to which he has moved: Provided, however, that if the component society into whose territory such Fellow has moved shall refuse him membership, the Fellow shall be privileged to appeal to the Judicial Council of this Association to determine whether or not he be guilty of any act that warrants the enforcement of the provisions of this section. Pending the decision of such appeal he shall retain his Fellowship in the American Medical Association through his original state association. A member of a constituent state association who is located for the purpose of practicing medicine in a state adjacent to that through the association of which he holds Fellowship in the American Medical Association may become and may be continued a Fellow of the American Medical Association, provided the council of the constituent association of the state in which he is practicing medicine waives jurisdiction over his membership.

Sec. 4. Affiliate, Associate and Honorary Fellows.—There shall be Affiliate, Associate and Honorary Fellows, who shall be elected and shall qualify in accordance with the provisions set forth in these By-Laws.

Sec. 5. Affiliate Fellows.—A Fellow who has been a Fellow for a continuous term of fifteen (15) years, who is not less than sixty-five (65) years of age, and who is an honorary member of his component society and of his constituent association, or is connected with these organizations in an equivalent manner whereby he is relieved from the payment of dues or fees, on request of his constituent association, may be made an Affiliate Fellow by a majority vote of the House of Delegates of this Association. Affiliate Fellows shall be privileged to participate in the Scientific Assembly of the Association; they shall not be required to pay Fellowship dues and shall not receive The Journal of the American Medical Association except by person subscription. Affiliate Fellowship shall be conditioned on such an Affiliate Fellow continuing the relationship with his constituent association herein defined.

Sec. 6. Associate Fellows.—The following may be elected in accordance with Section 5, Chapter IV, to Associate Fellowship: Physicians who are members of the chartered national medical societies of foreign countries adjacent to the United States; American physicians located in foreign countries and engaged in medical missionary and similar educational and philanthropic labors; dentists holding the degree of D.D.S. who are members of state or local dental societies; pharmacists who are active members of the American Pharmaceutical Association, and representative teachers and students of science allied to medicine, resident in the United States and not eligible to regular membership. Associate Fellows shall enjoy the same privileges as regular Fellows, and shall be subject to the same conditions.

Sec. 7. Honorary Fellows.—Physicians of foreign countries may be elected Honorary Fellows by the House of Delegates in accordance with Section 6, Chapter IV.

Sec. 8. Invited Guests.—Scientists resident in the United States who are not engaged in the practice of medicine, and eminent physicians and scientists from foreign countries, may be invited by the general officers or by the officers of a section, to attend an annual session of the Scientific Assembly and participate in the scientific work and social functions. They shall be designated as Invited Guests.

Sec. 9. Tenure of Fellowship.—Fellowship in this Association shall continue only so long as the individual is a member. When the Secretary shall be officially informed that the Fellow is not a member, the Secretary shall remove the name of such Fellow from the Fellowship roll of the American Medical Association and shall notify the Fellow of the action taken, together with the reason therefor. Fellowship shall be further conditioned on a Fellow conducting himself in accordance with this Constitution and By-Laws and the Principles of Medical Ethics of this Association.

Sec. 10. Delinquency.—Any Fellow who, for one year, has failed to pay his annual Fellowship dues, shall forfeit his Fellowship thirty days after notice of his delinquency has been mailed to his last known address by the Secretary.

Sec. 11. Fellowship Restored.—Any former Fellow who complies with Section 2, Chapter XII, shall be reinstated on payment of his indebtedness, including his subscription for the current calendar year.

Sec. 12. Infractions of Constitution, By-Laws or Principles of Medical Ethics. —The House of Delegates shall have the power to discipline or expel a member of the American Medical Association on recommendation of the Judicial Council. (As amended, 1930.)

Chapter XIII.—Registration

Fellows, Affiliate, Associate and Honorary Fellows and Invited Guests only shall be allowed to register or to take part in the work of any of the sections of the Scientific Assembly of the Association.

A Fellow shall be eligible to register at an annual session only after he has paid all of his current indebtedness.

A Fellow shall not be permitted to take part in the proceedings of the Association or of any of the sections until he has registered his name and address in the registration office.

A Fellow on registering shall designate the section in which he wishes to be enrolled, but shall be enrolled in one section only at any Scientific Assembly.

Chapter XIV.—General Meetings

Section 1. General Meetings.—General meetings of the Scientific Assembly may be arranged by the Council on Scientific Assembly with the approval of the Board of Trustees.

Sec. 2. The Opening General Meeting.—The opening general meeting shall be held on the evening of Tuesday of the week of the annual session, and shall be presided over by the President or, in his absence or at his request, by the Vice President.

Sec. 3. President's Address.—The President, immediately after he is inducted into office, shall deliver an address before the opening general meeting, and his recommendations, if he makes any, shall go to the House of Delegates for action.

Chapter XV.—Sections

Section 1. Title of Sections of Scientific Assembly.—The Scientific Assembly of the American Medical Association shall be divided into the following sections:

1. Practice of Medicine.
2. Surgery, General and Abdominal.

3. Obstetrics and Gynecology.
4. Ophthalmology.
5. Laryngology, Otology and Rhinology.
6. Pediatrics.
7. Pharmacology and Therapeutics.
8. Pathology and Physiology.
9. Nervous and Mental Diseases.
10. Dermatology and Syphilology.
11. Preventive and Industrial Medicine and Public health.
12. Urology.
13. Orthopedic Surgery.
14. Gastro-Enterology and Proctology.
15. Radiology.
16. Miscellaneous Topics. (As amended, 1932, 1937.)

Sec. 2. Officers of Sections.—The officers of each section shall consist of a chairman, a vice chairman and a secretary, and of such other officers as the section shall deem advisable. These shall serve for one year, or until their successors are elected and qualified: Provided, that each section may elect its secretary to serve a longer time at its discretion. If any vacancy occurs in the office of chairman, vice chairman or secretary of a section, such vacancy shall be filled by the election by the executive committee of such section of a Fellow who shall serve in the office indicated until the next annual session. Each section shall also elect biennially one delegate and one alternate to the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association to serve for two years. (As amended, 1925.)

Sec. 3. Election of Officers.—The election of officers of the several sections shall be the first order of business of the final meeting of the section at each Scientific Assembly. To participate in the election of any section a Fellow must have indicated on registering that he desires to affiliate with such section, and must have recorded his name and address on the section register book.

Sec. 4. Duties of Section Officers.—(a) Chairman.—The chairman shall preside at the meetings of the section and shall perform such duties as usually belong to such an office, or as may be provided by the by-laws of the section. He shall cooperate with the secretary in arranging the program, and shall see that proper arrangements are made for his section at the Scientific Assembly.

(b) Vice Chairman.—The vice chairman shall assist the chairman in the performance of his duties and shall preside in his absence, or at his request.

(c) Secretary.—The secretary shall keep a record of the proceedings of the section in a book provided for such purpose; shall, with the cooperation of the chairman, and in accordance with rules and regulations enacted by the House of Delegates, arrange the program; shall at least thirty days before the Scientific Assembly, forward it to the Secretary of the Association for insertion in the official program, and shall perform such other duties pertaining to his office as may be provided by the by-laws of the Association or of the section.

Sec. 5. Executive Committee.—Each section shall have an executive committee, which shall consist of the chairman and the last two retiring chairmen. In case of absence of a member of the executive committee of a section from a Scientific Assembly, the vacancy shall be filled by the chairman of the section. This committee shall examine and pass on all papers read before the section, and shall endorse for publication only those that are of scientific or of practical value, and which will reflect credit on the section before which they were read. It shall act as the nominating committee of the section.

Sec. 6. Meetings.—Sections shall hold meetings at 9 a. m. and 2 p. m. daily in accordance with the program for the Scientific Assembly, as arranged by the Council on Scientific Assembly.

Sec. 7. Who May Take Part in Section Work.—Fellows and Associate Fellows only shall have the right to participate in the business deliberations of a section. Fellows, Affiliate, Associate and Honorary Fellows, and Invited Guests may present papers and take part in the scientific discussions.

Sec. 8. Associate Fellows.—The officers of a section may nominate for Associate Fellowship representative teachers and students of sciences allied to medicine, resident in the United States, not eligible to regular membership. The secretary shall immediately notify the Secretary of the Association of such nominations.

Sec. 9. Honorary Fellows.—Each section at each Scientific Assembly may nominate for Honorary Fellowship in the American Medical Association a physician of a foreign country who has risen to preeminence in the profession of medicine: Provided, however, that nominations for Honorary Fellowship in the American Medical Association shall be acted on by the sections on or before the second day of each Scientific Assembly. The secretary of the section shall immediately notify the Secretary of the Association of such nomination.

Sec. 10. Time at Which Titles Must Be In.—Titles of papers to be presented to the section must be in the hands of the secretary of the section at least thirty-five days before the first day of the Scientific Assembly. With the title, the writer shall submit an abstract of the paper not less than thirty or more than one hundred and fifty words in length and an estimate of the time required to read his paper.

Sec. 11. Length of Papers and Discussions.—The time allowed for the presentation of a paper before a section shall be limited to fifteen minutes. No one shall discuss any paper more than once, nor for longer than five minutes except with the unanimous consent of those present. A section, by the unanimous consent of its officers and with the approval of the Council on Scientific Assembly, may arrange for one paper each annual session which will not be subject to restrictions, as to time or length, affecting other section papers. (As amended, 1928.)

Sec. 12. Number of Papers on Program.—The number of papers, including addresses, on the program of any section shall not exceed twenty-five.

Sec. 13. Can Present Only One Paper at an Annual Session.—A Fellow shall present no more than one paper at any Scientific Assembly.

Sec. 14. Failure to Keep Engagements.—Any Fellow accepting an assignment on a section program and without valid reason failing to be present to read his paper at the time designated shall be debarred from a place on any section program for a period of two years after the session at which he failed to keep his engagement. (As adopted, 1925.)

Sec. 15. Section to Provide By-Laws.—Each section may make by-laws for its own government, provided that they shall in no way conflict with the Constitution and By-Laws of the American Medical Association.

Chapter XVI.—Publication

Section 1. Papers Approved for Publication.—No paper shall be published as having been read before a section unless it has received the approval and the endorsement of each member of the executive committee of the section before which it was read.

Sec. 2. Papers Must Be Ready for Publication.—Each author shall hand his paper to the secretary of the section immediately after it is read. The secretary shall endorse thereon that it has been read and shall hand it to the chairman of the executive committee. All papers approved by the executive committee shall be returned to the secretary of the section, who shall at once forward them to the editor of The Journal.

Sec. 3. Papers "Read by Title."—No paper shall be published as having been read before a section unless it has actually been read by its author, or unless, for special reasons, when the author has been present and prepared to read the paper, the section shall unanimously vote to have it read by title.

Sec. 4. Papers the Property of the Association.—All papers and reports presented to a section and approved by the executive committee shall become the exclusive property of the Association, provided that the Board of Trustees may permit an author to publish his paper elsewhere than in The Journal of the American Medical Association.

Miscellaneous

Chapter XVII.—Official Resolutions Approved by the House of Delegates

No memorial, resolution or opinion of any character whatever shall be issued in the name of the American Medical Association unless it has been approved by the House of Delegates.

Chapter XVIII.—Annual Fellowship Dues

The annual Fellowship dues and the subscription price of The Journal of the American Medical Association shall be fixed by the Board of Trustees, and the same shall be payable in advance, on the first day of January of each year, provided that the annual dues shall not exceed $8, and provided that the amount of the same shall be announced in The Journal of the American Medical Association not later than November 1 of each year. (As amended, 1929.)

Chapter XIX.—Articles of Incorporation

The House of Delegates, at any annual session, wherever the same may be held, may instruct the Board of Trustees to make any changes in the articles of incorporation in accordance with the law, which may appear desirable or which may be made necessary by any change or amendment to the Constitution and By-Laws of this Association.

Chapter XX.—Amendment to These By-laws

These By-Laws may be amended on a two thirds vote of the House of Delegates, provided that no amendment shall be acted on till the day following that on which it is introduced, except that the Board of Trustees may, by unanimous vote, make such changes, and such changes only, as may be required to adapt them to the rules and regulations of the United States postal authorities. (As amended, 1929.)

STANDING RULES, HOUSE OF DELEGATES, AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 1923

Papers for Publication

Adopted at Boston, June 8, 1865

"Resolved, That the several sections of this Association be requested, in the future, to refer no papers or reports to the Committee of Publication [the Board of Trustees], except such as can be fairly classed under one of the three following heads, viz.: 1. Such as may contain and establish positively new facts, modes of practice or principles of real value. 2. Such as may contain the results of well devised original experimental researches. 3. Such as present so complete a review of the facts on any particular subject as to enable the writer to deduce therefrom legitimate conclusions of importance."

Solicitation of Votes

Adopted by the House of Delegates at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., June 13, 1902

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that the solicitation of votes for office is not in keeping with the dignity of the medical profession, nor in harmony with the spirit of this Association, and that such solicitation shall be considered a disqualification for election to any offices in the gift of the Association."

Reports, Resolutions, Etc.

Adopted by the House of Delegates at Boston, June 7, 1906

"Resolved, That in future all reports, resolutions, amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws, etc., be furnished in duplicate, one copy to be furnished the Secretary for the official minutes and the other to committeemen; and that the Secretary be instructed to engage a typewritist for the use of committeemen in making their reports."

Pensions or Annuities

Adopted by the House of Delegates at Atlantic City, N. J., June 9, 1909

"Resolved, That no proposition or resolution advocating the payment of a pension or annuity to any member or former member of the Association be established by the House of Delegates without the previous consent and endorsement of the delegation of the state association of which the proposed beneficiary is or was a member."

Regarding the Effect on Membership of Removal to Another State

Adopted by the House of Delegates at Minneapolis, Minn., June 18, 1913

"Resolved, That nothing in Section 3, Chapter XI of the By-Laws (Effect on Membership of Removal to Another State) shall be construed as exempting any member of the American Medical Association from compliance with the requirements of the civil laws of the state or district into which he may have removed."

The Councils and the House of Delegates

Adopted by the House of Delegates at Atlantic City, N. J., June 4, 1912

The House of Delegates extends the courtesy of the floor to the members of the various councils of the Association, and especially requests the secretaries of these councils to attend the sessions of the House, according them the privilege of the floor, in order that the House may be constantly in position to obtain information concerning work that is being done by these councils, that this body may direct these activities.

Rules for the Guidance of the Committee on Credentials

Adopted by the House of Delegates at Atlantic City, N. J., June 6, 1912

1. Credentials shall be of two parts. The first part shall be sent to the office of the Secretary of the American Medical Association by the secretary of the constituent association, not later than seven days prior to the first day of the first meeting of the House of Delegates, and shall be a list of delegates and alternates for that association. The constituent associations shall designate an alternate for each delegate, who may take the pledge of the delegate when authorized to do so by said delegate in writing. In the absence of such authority, any alternate who has been duly chosen by the constituent association may be seated in place of any delegate who is unable to attend, provided he presents proper official authority from said association. A certificate signed by the president or secretary of the constituent association shall be deemed legal authority (as amended June 7, 1921).

2. Each delegate shall be furnished with a credential by the secretary of the association by which he is elected on a prescribed form furnished by the Secretary of the American Medical Association, which shall give the date and term for which he was elected and who was elected to act as alternate for him in case of his inability.

3. A delegate, on presenting himself to the Committee on Credentials, may be seated even though he may not present part 2 of his credential, provided he is properly identified as the delegate who was elected by his association and whose name appears on the Secretary's record.

4. No alternate may be seated unless his credentials meet the same requirements as designated for the delegate and he can show written evidence that he is empowered by his delegate to act for him, except as provided for in Section 1 as amended. (as amended June 7, 1921).

5. When a constituent state association reports that one of its elected delegates and his elected alternate are both unable to attend a specified annual session of the American Medical Association, the constituted authority of said constituent state association may fill the vacancies caused by the absence of both an elected delegate and his elected alternate, and such a substitute delegate or his substitute alternate who presents proper credentials signed by the president and secretary of said constituent state association shall be eligible to regular membership in the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association in such a specified session (as adopted, May 12, 1932).

Procedure in Preferring Charges

Adopted by the House of Delegates at San Francisco, Cal., June 22, 1915

The Secretary of the American Medical Association shall file charges with the Judicial Council against Fellows of the Association when overt acts on the part of such Fellows, supported by reasonable evidence, are brought to the attention of the Secretary of the American Medical Association.

Rules for the Guidance of the Council on Scientific Assembly

Adopted by the House of Delegates at New York, June 7, 1917. Revised at Atlantic City, June 10, 1919

1. The term "unit" shall signify a single meeting of a section at an annual session.

2. The sections of the Scientific Assembly shall be limited at each annual session to the maximum number of three units.

3. The sections shall not hold more than one meeting on each of the days of the annual session during which section meetings are held.

4. The Council on Scientific Assembly shall apportion the morning and afternoon units at each annual session to the several sections.

Supplemental Certificate of Amendment of the Certificate of Incorporation of Group Health Association, Incorporated

Whereas, under date of April 26, 1937, there was filed for record in the Office of the Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia a Certificate of Amendment of the Certificate of Incorporation of Group Health Association, Incorporated; and

Whereas, it has since been discovered that by mistake of the scrivener said Certificate recites, among other things, that "a meeting of the members of Group Health Association, Incorporated, was held in the Auditorium of the Department of Labor between 12th & 14th Strets, N. W., in the City of Washington, D. C., at the hour of 4:30 P. M., on the 22nd day of April, 1937" when, as a matter of fact said meeting was held at said place on the 21st day of April, 1937; and the purpose of this Certificate is to correct said error.

Now, Therefore, This is to Certify that, pursuant to the provisions of Section 601 et seq., of Sub-Chapter 3, of Chapter 18 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia, the Board of Trustees of Group Health Association, Incorporated, at a regular meeting held on the 22nd day of March, 1937, in the HOLC Building, in the City of Washington, D. C. unanimously adopted the following Resolution:

"Resolved, That Section Sixth of the Certificate of Incorporation of the corporation be amended so that the same shall read as follows:

The affairs of the corporation shall be managed and controlled by a Board of Trustees consisting of eleven members and until the election of the full Board, the names and post office addresses of three (3) of the members of the Board of Trustees are as follows:

Name and address: W. F. Penniman, 1869 Wyoming Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.; R. T. Berry, 3119 Rittenhouse St., N. W., Washington, D. C.; Pearl B. Murphy, 1630 Fuller Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Be it further Resolved, That a meeting of the members of the corporation be called in the Auditorium of the Department of Labor for the purpose of considering and ratifying the foregoing Resolution; and

Be it Further Resolved, That W. F. Penniman, its President be, and he hereby is, designated and constituted as its Attorney in Fact to execute and record these presents."

That, pursuant to said Resolution, a meeting of the members of Group Health Association, Incorporated, was held in the Auditorium of the Department of Labor, Constitution Avenue, between 12th & 14th Streets, N. W., in the City of Washington, D. C., at the hour of 4:30 P. M., on the 21st day of April, 1937, and the Resolution set forth above was adopted and ratified by a vote of 503 in favor of ratification.

In Testimony Whereof, the said Group Health Association, Incorporated, hath on the 11th day of October, A. D. 1937, caused these presents to be signed by W. F. Penniman, its President, attested by R. T. Berry, its Secretary, and its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed; and doth appoint W. F. Penniman, its true and lawful attorney in fact, to acknowledge and deliver these presents as its act and deed.

No. 24234.

Certificate of Group Health Association, Incorporated

We, the undersigned persons, of full age, citizens of the United States, a majority of whom are citizens of the District of Columbia, desiring to form a corporation in accordance with the provisions of, and for the purposes outlined in Chapter 5, of Title 5, Corporation of the Code of the District of Columbia, do hereby certify as follows:

First. The name by which this corporation shall be known is "Group Health Association, Incorporated". Its address, principal office, and place of business shall be Washington, D. C.

Second. The term for which it is organized shall be perpetual.

Third. The objects and purposes for which this corporation is formed are as follows:

To provide, without profit to the corporation, for the service of physicians and other medical attention and any and all kinds of medical, surgical and hospital treatment to the members hereof, and their dependents, and the construction and operation of a clinic and medical office building, and the construction and operation of a hospital in the manner permitted by law, for the members hereof and their dependents, and the operation of a drug store or pharmacy, and the providing of nurses and of drugs and remedies for the members hereof and their dependents, and the furnishing of all forms of hospital service and attention to the members hereof and their dependents, and in general the giving to the membership of this association and their dependents of all forms of care, treatment or attention that may be required by the sick or in the prevention of disease.

To these ends the said corporation shall have the right of acquiring, taking, receiving and holding all manner of land, tenements, leaseholds, or any other kind of real estate or any interest therein, and of owning, improving and disposing of the same; borrowing money and securing the same by mortgage upon its real estate and otherwise, and holding and owning any kind of property, goods and chattels acquired by it in any manner, and of employing and disposing of the same for the purposes for which the corporation is formed and to further its general welfare; and of entering into, making, performing, and carrying out contracts of every sort and kind which may be necessary or convenient for the business and purposes of this corporation and which may be permitted by law.

The foregoing enumeration of specific powers shall not be deemed to limit or restrict in any manner the general powers of the corporation and the enjoyment and exercise thereof as conferred by the laws of the District of Columbia upon corporations organized under the provisions of the law for the purposes stated, but this corporation shall have the power to do all and everything necessary, suitable, and proper for the accomplishment of any of the purposes, or the attainment of any of the objects, or the furtherance of any of the powers herein set forth, so far as the same may be permissible under thhe law, and provided that the same may not be inconsistent with the laws under which this corporation is organized.

Fourth. The corporation shall have no capital stock but shall be an association controlled by its members. The membership of the corporation shall be composed solely of employees of any branch of the United States Government service other than officers and enlisted men of the United States Army and Navy. All members shall have equal rights of membership and those whose dues have been paid at the time, if ever, liquidation of its affairs takes place shall have the right to share in the distribution of its assets.

Fifth. The private property of the members shall not be subject to the payment of the corporate debts or obligations and no personal liability therefor is assumed.

Sixth. The affairs of the Corporation shall be managed and controlled by a Board of Trustees. The names and post office addresses of the members of the Board of Trustees are as follows:

W. F. Penniman, 1869 Wyoming Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C.

R. T. Berry, 3119 Rittenhouse Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Pearl B. Murphy, 1630 Fuller Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Seventh. Whenever, for any reason or cause, this corporation is dissolved, its affairs shall be liquidated by the Board of Trustees who are hereby vested with full power, within the limit provided by law, to sell any or all assets of the corporation, either separately or en masse, and to convey full and complete title thereto; and shall have full power, as prescribed by law, to do and perform all acts necessary and proper to fully and completely liquidate the affairs and distribute the proceeds, if any, among members of this corporation then in good standing and whose dues and assessments, if any, have been fully paid.

In Testimony Whereof we have hereunto subscribed our respective names and affixed our seals on this the 19th day of February, 1937.

In the presence of: Anthony W. De Poto, A. Blaine York, W. F. Penniman, R. T. Berry, Pearl B. Murphy. (Seal.)

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, ss:

I, Anthony W. De Poto, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, do hereby certify that W. F. Penniman, R. T. Berry and Pearl B. Murphy, parties to the foregoing and annexed Certificate of Incorporation bearing date on the 19th day of February, 1937, personally appeared before me, in said District of Columbia, the said W. F. Penniman, R. T. Berry and Pearl B. Murphy, being personally well known to me as the persons who executed the said Certificate of Incorporation and acknowledged the same to be their act and deed.

Given under my hand and seal this 23 day of February, 1937. Anthony W. De Poto, Notary Public, D. C. (Notarial Seal.)

My commission expires 15th day of January, 1939.

Office of the Recorder of Deeds

District of Columbia

This is to certify that the foregoing is a true and verified copy of the Certificate of Incorporation of the Group Health Association, Incorporated, and of the whole of said Certificate of Incorporation, as filed in this Office the 24th day of Feb., 1937, and recorded in Liber 53, folio 556, et seq., one of the Incorporation Records of the District of Columbia.

In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of this Office this 21st day of Oct., A. D. 1940.

By-Laws of Group Health Association, Incorporated.

The American Medical Association Was Incorporated in the State of Illinois Under the Provisions of "An Act Concerning Corporations", Approved April 18, 1872. As Amended and In Force on April 14, 1897, November 27, 1902, and September 24, 1904, said Act Provides:

Not for Pecuniary Profit

Associations (not for pecuniary profit) may be formed as hereafter provided. Any three or more persons, citizens of the United States, who shall desire to associate themselves with any lawful purpose, other than for pecuniary profit, may make, sign and acknowledge, before any officer authorized to take acknowledgements of deeds in this state, and file in the office of the secretary of state, a certificate in writing, in which shall be stated in the name or title by which such corporation, society or association shall be known in law, the particular business and objects for which it is formed, the number of its trustees, directors or managers, and the name of the trustees, directors or managers selected for the first year of its existence.

Upon filing a certificate as aforesaid, the secretary of state shall thereupon issue a certificate of the organization of the corporation, society or association, making a part thereof a copy of all papers filed in his office in and about the organization thereof, and duly authenticated under his hand and seal of state; and the same shall be recorded in a book for that purpose, in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the principal place of business of such corporation, society, or association is located. Upon complying with the foregoing conditions, the corporation, society or association, shall be deemed fully organized, and may proceed to business; provided, the secretary of state shall not issue a certificate of organization to any corporation, society or association under the name of any then existing.

Corporations, associations, and societies, not for pecuniary profit, formed under this act shall be bodies corporate and politic, by the name stated in such certificate; and by that name they and their successors shall and may have succession, and shall be persons in law capable of suing and being sued; may have power to make and enforce contracts in relation to the legitimate business of their corporation, society, or association; may have and use a common seal, and may change or alter the same at pleasure, and they and their successors by their corporate names, shall, in law, be capable of taking, purchasing, holding and disposing of real and personal estate for purposes of their organization; may, by their trustees, directors, or manager, make by-laws of this State, or of the United States, which by-laws among other things, shall prescribe the duties of all officers of the corporation, society, or association, and the qualifications of members of the corporation, and shall provide for annual meetings of such members, and for the calling of special meetings, when necessary, and for the number of members that shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at any such annual or special meetings.

At any such meeting members of the corporation may take part and vote in person or by proxy. The by-laws of the corporation, made by the trustees, directors, or managers, may be modified, altered, or amended at any such annual meeting; or at any adjourned session thereof. Associations and societies which are intended to benefit the widows, orphans, heirs and devisees of deceased members thereof, and members who have received a permanent disability shall not be deemed insurance companies.

Corporations, associations, and societies not for pecuniary profit, formed under the provisions of this act, may elect trustees, directors, or managers from the members thereof, in such manner, at such times and places, and for such periods, as may be provided by the certificate of incorporation, or in case such certificate does not contain such provisions, then as may be provided by the by-laws, which trustees, directors, or managers shall have the control and management of the affairs and funds of the corporation, society or association. Said trustees, managers or directors may upon consent of the corporation, society or association, expressed by the vote of a majority of the members thereof, borrow money, to be used solely for purposes of their organization, and may pledge their property therefor. Whenever trustees, managers or directors shall be elected, a certificate under the seal of the corporation giving the names of those elected and the term of their office, shall be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds, where the certificate obtained is recorded. Vacancies in the board of trustees, directors or managers, shall be filled in the manner provided by their by-laws, and upon filling any vacancy, a like certificate shall be recorded.

No dividend or distribution of the property of such corporation, society or association shall be made until all debts are fully paid, and then only upon its final dissolution and surrender of organization and name; nor shall any distribution be made except by a vote of a majority of the members. When a distribution of their property is contemplated, the trustees, directors or managers shall file a statement under oath, in the office of the recorder of deeds, in the county where the business office is located, that all debts of the corporation, society or association are paid. And in case a distribution shall be made before filing such statement under oath, or if such statement shall be wilfully false, said trustees, directors, or managers, shall be jointly and severally liable for the debts of such corporation, society or association. When a final dissolution of any corporation, society, or association, organized by virtue of this act, has been agreed upon, the trustees, directors, or managers shall file, in the office of the secretary of state, a certificate thereof, under seal of the corporation; and upon the filing of said certificate such organization shall cease to exist.

Any such corporation, society, or association may change its articles of association, in the manner prescribed by their own rule; but no such change shall be of legal effect, until a certificate thereof, under seal of such corporation, society, or association, shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, and recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds in which the original certificate was recorded.

Gov. Ex. 23

November 8, 1937.

George Washington University Hospital, 1339 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN:

The Group Health Association, Inc., a mutual, voluntary organization, has been created by the employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its agencies for the purpose of providing themselves and dependent members of their families with medical and surgical care and, when necessary, with hospitalization in recognized hospitals of high standing.

As the representative of the Group Health Association, I hereby request the George Washington University Hospital to admit members of the Group Health Association for customary hospital service upon the request of its Medical Director, Dr. Henry Rolf Brown.

Request is also made to permit Dr. Raymond E. Selders, Surgeon, attached to the staff of the Group Health Association, * * * to attend these patients while hospitalized. For your information, we are attaching hereto a record of Dr. Selders' education, training and experience.

The Group Health Association will be responsible for the payment of the costs of hospitalization at customary rates, in each case for a period limited to 21 days for any one illness for each patient admitted upon the request of the Medical Director.

If you desire further information or a conference with us, we shall be glad to have you let us know. Because of the importance of this request, however, an early and favorable reply will be appreciated.

Very truly yours, William F. Penniman, President.

December 13, 1937.

Dr. Peterson.

GENTLEMEN:

What requirements must be met by hospitals to be recognized for interne training?

As I understand it members of the staffs of these institutions must be members of their local county medical society. Is this equally true of associate and visiting staff members?

I would appreciate an early reply.

Cordially yours, Theodore Wiprud, Executive Secretary.

The Medical Society of the District of Columbia
Washington

May 18, 1938.

Committee: Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine.

Dr. William M. Sprigg, Chairman, Executive Committee, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia, Washington, D. C.

Dear Doctor Sprigg:

A letter addressed to Dr. George B. Trible, under date of May 14, 1938, and sent by registered mail, follows:

"Dear Doctor Trible:

You are hereby directed to appear before the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee at the Medical Society Building, 1718 M Street, N. W., on Tuesday evening, May 17, 1938, at 8 P. M.

Very truly yours, (Signed) R. Arthur Hooe, M. D.,
Chairman, C. C. & I. M. Committee."

Accordingly upon convening Dr. Trible was presented with the following charges, in writing:

"Dr. George B. Trible:

The Committee hereby charges you with having violated Section 2 of Article 3 of Chapter 9 of the Constitution of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, reading as follows:

'Every member of the Society before entering into a contract or agreement for rendering professional services shall submit a copy of his contract, if written, or a true declaration of the terms of the agreement, in writing, to the Committee on Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine for approval. In the event that the committee disapproves the contract, a member may appeal to the Executive Committee.'

And again Chapter 9, Article 4, Section 5, as follows:

'No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group or individual, by whatever name called or however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, which has not been approved by the Society.

'The Executive Committee is authorized and directed to prepare an approved list of organizations, groups and individuals, by whatever name called and however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, and the same shall be kept in the office of the Secretary-Treasurer. Before any such organization, group or individual can be placed on the approved list of the Society, such organization, group or individual, or the member of the Society proposing professional relations therewith, shall *but*mit to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee such evidence as the Committee or the Society may require showing the character, activities, financial condition and ethical standards of said organization, group or individual, and after considering the same, said committee shall make a report of its investigation and findings to the Executive Committee for such action as it may deem necessary.'

(Signed) R. Arthur Hooe, M. D., Chairman, Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee."

Please find herewith attached complete transcript of the proceedings together with a true copy of a business card filed in the office at Children's Hospital.

In view of the evidence as therein set forth and in particular consideration of the correspondence therein contained as having occurred between Dr. George B. Trible and Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, Medical Director of Group Health Association, Inc., we desire to submit to your committee our verdict of guilty as charged, (possibly unwittingly), with the recommendation that such disciplinary measure be in turn recommended to the Medical Society as may seem commensurate with the gravity of the offense.

Respectfully submitted, (Signed) R. Arthur Hooe, M. D., Chairman, Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee.

H-e.

Resolution presented at the Business Meeting of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, in session on February 2, 1938, by Dr. Thomas E. Mattingly; ordered referred to the Executive Committee for consideration and report.

That the proper agency of the Society take immediate measures to ascertain if any member or members of the Society are party to secret understandings and unethical arrangements with Group Health Association, Inc., whereby Group Health patients are admitted to Washington hospitals and treated under the service or supervision of Medical Society members possessing hospital privileges.

June 7, 1938.

DEAR DOCTOR TRIBLE:

I have been instructed by the Executive Committee to communicate with you following their meeting. As you perhaps know a meeting of the Committee was held on Monday evening, June 6. The letter which you addressed to the Committee was read.

After some deliberation the Committee voted to accept your explanation and your assurance that you would not engage in any practice contrary to the Constitution and By-laws of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and that the matter be carried no further.

Cordially yours, Wm. Mercer Sprigg, M. D., Chairman, Executive Committee.

Gov. Ex. 54

November 10, 1937.

Dr. Allan E. Lee, 1621 Connecticut Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.

DEAR DOCTOR LEE:

Under date of November 2, 1937, and by registered mail, you were directed to appear before the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, Medical Society Building, 1718 M Street, N. W., at 8 P. M., November 4, 1937. You failed to appear. The committee now, therefore, charges you of having violated Chapter IX, Article III, Sections 1 and 2 of the Constitution of the Society, reading as follows:

"1. 'It is unprofessional for a physician to dispose of his services under conditions that make it impossible to render adequate service to his patient or which interfere with reasonable competition among the physicians of a community. To do this is detrimental to the public and to the individual physician, and lowers the dignity of the profession.' (Chap. III, Art. VI, Sec. 2, Principles of Medical Ethics, American Medical Association.) No member of the Society shall enter into a written, verbal, or implied contract or agreement of employment with any person, firm, corporation, association, club, lodge, or other similar organization, including the Federal and/or District Government, the terms of which contract or agreement are in violation of the principles herein expressed. The customary professional relationship of a physician to his patients, upon the basis of individual fees for services rendered, shall not be regarded as a contract within the meaning of this section."

"2. Every member of the Society before entering into a contract or agreement for rendering professional services shall submit a copy of his contract, if written, or a true declaration of the terms of the agreement, in writing, to the Committee on Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine for approval. In the event that the committee disapproves the contract, a member may appeal to the Executive Committee."

And again, Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5, of the Constitution of the Society, reading as follows:

"No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group or individual, by whatever name called or however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, which has not been approved by the Society.

The Executive Committee is authorized and directed to prepare an approved list of organizations, groups and individuals, by whatever name called and however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, and the same shall be kept in the office of the Secretary-Treasurer. Before any such organization, group or individual can be placed on the approved list of the Society, such organization, group or individual, or the member of the Society proposing professional relations therewith, shall submit to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee such evidence as the Committee or the Society may require showing the character, activities, financial condition and ethical standards of said organization, group or individual, and after considering the same, said committee shall make a report of its investigation and findings to the Executive Committee for such action as it may deem necessary."

Should you desire to defend in this matter and will so advise within 10 days, a hearing by the Committee will be arranged.

Very truly yours, R. Arthur Hooe, M. D., Chairman,
C. C. & I. M. Committee.

In the event that the committee disapproves the contract, a member may appeal to the Executive Committee."

And again, Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5, of the Constitution of the Society, reading as follows:

"No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group or individual, by whatever name called or however, organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, which has not been approved by the Society.

The Executive Committee is authorized and directed to prepare an approved list of organizations, groups and individuals, by whatever name called and however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, and the same shall be kept in the office of the Secretary-Treasurer. Before any such organization, group or individual can be placed on the approved list of the Society, such organization, group or individual, or the member of the Society proposing professional relations therewith, shall submit to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee such evidence as the Committee or the Society may require showing the character, activities, financial condition and ethical standards of said organization, group or individual, and after considering the same, said committee shall make a report of its investigation and findings to the Executive Committee for such action as it may deem necessary."

Should you desire to defend in this matter and will so advise within 10 days, a hearing by the Committee will be arranged.

Very truly yours, R. Arthur Hooe, M. D., Chairman, C. C. & I. M. Committee.

DEAR DOCTOR TAYLOR:

For your information I would state that Group Health Association has launched out in the pursuit of activities which, we believe, cannot fail to have detrimental effect upon the profession and above all upon the public. Two members of the staff have sent letters of resignation, the acceptance of which I understand the Chairman of the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee, has failed to approve. My last information was that proceedings toward expelling these members had been instituted.

It may be added parenthetically that the present staff, insofar as we have information, is not at all impressive and it is our belief that the project will have its difficulties which, however, may possibly be solved at a later date through the present administration's open approval.

With cordial regards, I am,

Sincerely yours, C. B. Conklin, M. D., Secretary.

President & Board of Directors, Garfield Memorial Hospital, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN:

Miss Sarah Abbott was brought to this institution by the hospital ambulance on the evening of January 26th. She was given first aid in the Emergency Room and assigned to a bed in the hospital under the care of the staff surgeon on that service, with a diagnosis of possible fracture and possibly other injuries.

On January 27th, about noon, Dr. Raymond E. Selders, of Group Health Association, Inc., called and requested permission from the hospital authorities to take over the medical care of Miss Abbott, due to the fact that she was a member of Group Health Association, Inc.

Dr. Selders was advised that we were informed that he was not a member of the District Medical Society and he was not on our courtesy list, and therefore we could not extend him the privileges requested. It is a prerequisite with this hospital for practicing physicians, to become a member of our courtesy list, to belong to the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

Dr. Selders contacted Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, at his office, in charge of Group Health Association, Inc., whereupon Dr. Brown called the Superintendent of this hospital and demanded a direct answer as to whether Dr. Selders would be permitted to take entire direct medical charge of the patient. He was advised that due to the fact that Dr. Selders was not on our courtesy list, we could not extend him that privilege, but Dr. Selders was advised that he would be privileged to visit and observe the patient and consult with the staff doctor in charge. Dr. Brown then advised that he was sending an ambulance for the patient to be removed from this institution, and a short time later an ambulance from Garfield Memorial Hospital arrived, and we understand the patient was taken to Garfield Memorial Hospital.

We shall be under obligation to you for a full explanation of the circumstances under which this patient has been permitted to enter Garfield since it is not unlikely that we may be criticized for having declined to care for the patient as described when Garfield apparently is willing to take the patient as described.

Thanking you for as full an explanation of this case as you can possibly give us.

Very truly yours, Gist Blair, President.

Dear Major Blair:

Your letter of the 27th in regard to Dr. Selders' patient has been sent to me.

This patient was brought in to the Garfield Hospital by private ambulance on the 27th at 3 P. M., with a fractured leg, and was admitted to Ward H.

In regard to Dr. Selders himself, he had been given the temporary courtesy privileges in accordance with our general practice, pending report on his credentials and standing by the Staff. Upon the recommendation of the Staff these temporary courtesy privileges were withdrawn from Dr. Selders by the Board of Directors at its meeting on Tuesday the 25th instant. However, the notification of this action had not been received by Dr. Selders on the 27th when the patient in question was brought to the Hospital.

I observe that you have sent a copy of your letter under acknowledgment to the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, and I am, therefore, sending a copy of this reply to them also.

Dr. John B. Sears, 416 Marlborough Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Doctor Sears:

Your request for information concerning a health insurance plan was referred to this Bureau for reply.

The organization by an individual physician of a prepayment medical care plan for a group of persons has been tried for years. We do not know of any such plan that has been satisfactory. The attempt of a physician to portion off for himself a section of the medical market through a contract agreement is not conducive to good medical service. Professional excellence is dependent on constant free choice by patrons whose preference for superior work selects the more capable from among those admitted to the profession. The age old method of selecting and encouraging professional excellence is fair competition in a field of equally qualified competitors. Interference with free choice of physician is the most serious fault of methods for organizing payments for medical services.

Most of the prepayment medical care schemes are not sound, both from an economic and a medical viewpoint. Medical and hospital services cost on the average from $120.00 to $150.00 per family per year, or about $30.00 per individual. No plan for medical service can render the same services as are now given for less money. Either the amount of service will be restricted or the quality of service will deteriorate.

The incomes of the persons in the group you mentioned are evidently high enough to permit them to purchase their medical service independently without any special paying arrangements. Practically all health insurance insurance plans, proposed or in operation, exclude persons with incomes above $3,000.

If a medical service plan is to be organized, the county medical society is the proper and logical unit to formulate such a plan. We are forwarding our publications, "Medical Service Plans," which is an outline of medical society plans, and "Organization of Medical Services," which is a description of a few of these plans. In the several localities indicated, the county medical societies have organized methods to assist persons in meeting bills for hospital and medical care. Practically all of the county medical society plans are organized on a post-payment arrangement. The collection of funds on a prepayment basis usually raises the question of complying with the insurance laws. Likewise, prepayment plans require an additional charge to the patient of about 40 per cent for administration costs and reserves, whereas, the post-payment plans require no reserves and can be administered at a cost of 10 per cent, which is absorbed by physicians and hospitals and not by the patient.

The medical society plans that are in operation demonstrate that the percentage of the population requiring any special financial arrangements for medical service is much smaller than is ordinarily reported by those urging a general transformation of methods of payment for medical service. As shown in the Organization Section of the Journal of February 20, 1937, it appears that not more than 3 to 5 per cent of the population will require the services of the medical service plan. This fact has made it clear that the problem of organizing payment for medical services should not be the dominant one in the activities of any medical society. Methods of advancing preventive medicine; caring for those with tuberculosis and cancer, and for crippled children; cooperation with the public health officials; and other methods of organizing medical services are often more important in providing for the community than special prepayment arrangements.

DEAR DOCTOR PALMER:

The Medical Service Plan of Trinity Hosptal, Little Rock, Arkansas, is one type of several prepayment plans for medical care that has been attempted. The plan was inaugurated in 1931 and is operated by a staff of six physicians. Under the plan, six weeks of hospitalization, including operating room, anesthetics, and general nursing, as well as medical and surgical services, are offered for a rate of $2.50 a month for individuals; $2 a month for persons enrolled in groups; and $5 a month for families, regardless of size. Hospitalization is restricted to Trinity Hospital, and the medical treatment and surgical care are performed by the staff of Trinity Hospital only.

The Hospital does not appear in the American Medical Association Register, and the staff members are no longer associated with the local medical society. Solicitors are employed on a percentage basis to secure members from groups of employees in business organizations and by house-to-house canvasses.

As a general rule most of these plans do not provide the complete services claimed, nor are they supported solely by the dues collected from members. A number of independent surveys have agreed that medical services cost an average of not less than $100 per family or $25 per person. It is inconceivable that any "insurance" or prepayment plan can provide the same services for lower average charges. Either the services offered are not as complete or the quality of the services is impaired. Frequently the members who ask for services are given the complete "run of the mill" which always entails special charges for special services. It is also not uncommon to find that the dues and special charges are insufficient to support the plan, but the deficits are made up by the profits from soda fountain, magazine, or drug sales. Income from nonmembers is also an important financial item.

We are forwarding to you under separate cover some of our publications which discuss plans of this nature.

DEAR MR. TIBBALS:

Doctor Bauer has referred your letter requesting information on the Clinic at Little Rock, Arkansas, and the Cooperative at Atlantic City to us for a reply.

The Medical Service Plan of Trinity Hospital, Little Rock, Arkansas is one type of several prepayment plans for medical care that have been attempted. The plan was inaugurated in 1931 and is operated by a staff of six physicians. Under the plan, six weeks of hospitalization, including operating room, anesthetics, and general nursing, as well as medical and surgical services, are offered for a rate of $2.50 a month for individuals; $2 a month for persons enrolled in groups; and $5 a month for families, regardless of size. Hospitalization is restricted to Trinity Hospital, and the medical treatment and surgical care are performed by the staff of Trinity Hospital only. As of September 1936, the number of members was reported to be 4,300.

The Hospital does not appear in the American Medical Association Hospital Register, and the staff members are no longer associated with the local medical society. Solicitors are employed on a percentage basis to secure members from groups of employees in business organizations and by house-to-house canvasses.

Concerning the Group Health Association, Inc. at Washington, D. C., the enclosed article prepared by Doctor Woodward will probably give you the information you want. As you know, this Association was discussed rather extensively at the Secretaries' Conference.

The enclosed outlines of the Bassett Hospital Guild, Cooperstown, New York; the Economy Mutual Health Association, Economy, Indiana; and the Thompson Benefit Association, Brattleboro, Vermont, may also be of interest. There are several other plans of a similar type, but as a general rule they do not provide the complete service claimed nor are they solely supported by the dues collected from members.

A number of independent surveys have agreed that medical services cost an average of not less than $100 per family or $25 per person. It is inconceivable that any "insurance" or prepayment plan can provide the same services for lower average charges. Income from nonmembers is also an important financial item.

I am forwarding to you under separate cover several of our reprints in which you will find considerable information on the topics we discussed.

Two articles descriptive of the Trinity Hospital Plan appeared in the American Magazine, one in January 1935, page 52, and the other in 1937 (abstracted in the August 1937 issue of Reader's Digest, page 65). The enclosed abstract of an address by Dr. Ogden before the Association of Clinic Managers is also descriptive of the Trinity Plan. We trust that you will return this enclosure as soon as possible.

Dr. C. B. Conklin, Secretary, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia, 1718 M Street, Washington, D. C.

DEAR DOCTOR CONKLIN:

In your request for "a list of local, county and state medical societies, also of individual groups of physicians, that have established a plan of prepayment medicine in the United States, with the name and address of officers in charge," you probably do not want an exhaustive list. Accordingly, the enclosed is a list of outstanding examples of each of the designated types of prepayment medical care plans, with the exception that the list of plans under the auspices of medical societies is complete.

You will notice that practically all of the medical society controlled prepayment plans are those in Washington. The workmen's compensation law in Washington, contrary to the practice in most states, provides that the employees may be charged regular monthly payments to provide medical services for compensable injuries and diseases. This called into existence "hospital associations" which are private corporations organized to contract with employers for the provision of the necessary medical services. To meet this situation, county medical societies organized medical service bureaus which seek to return to the general medical profession that section of the medical service which has been monopolized by a few physicians and hospitals under contract with privately owned hospital associations. The medical service bureaus have striven to supplant the private contract organizations by offering free choice of physician and by insisting on a higher standard of medical service. It has been intimated that these medical service bureaus would not have been organized or would be abandoned if it were not for the peculiar features of the workmen's compensation law which permit private commercial associations to contract for and to provide medical services on a prepayment basis.

The Utah and the Fulton County (Georgia) plans and the Canadian plan are the only other known attempts of medical societies to operate prepayment plans which are still of any consequence. Several medical societies have made special prepayment arrangements for the care of indigents and for W. P. A. workers, but it is believed these are not the type of plans you have in mind.

It is difficult to know what plans may be put in the category "prepaid insurance medicine as conducted by or may be conducted by or controlled by reputable acceptable physicians." Most of the plans not under the auspices of medical societies usually are organized by lay individuals or administrators of hospitals or, even if the plan is sponsored by a group of physicians, they are not usually recognized as ethical. For example, several of the hospital associations in Washington and Oregon which are considered as private commercial associations are organized by physicians or a group of physicians. There are very few examples of this type of organization in states other than Washington and Oregon. Here in Chicago there is the National Health Service, operated by Dr. Joseph Berkowitz, which is a prepayment plan for complete medical and hospital services. Dr. Berkowitz is also connected with the United Medical Service, Inc. and National Medicine, Inc. A somewhat similar organization is the Civic Medical Center of Chicago. There are other prepayment plans of this type operated by physicians who own substandard hospitals or clinics.

Probably what you really have in mind are the so-called private group clinics which offer a prepayment plan. In our publication "Group Practice," which is a study of these private group practice arrangements, out of 224 bona fide groups only 20 reported a prepayment arrangement. Most of these were the groups mentioned in Washington and Oregon. The following statement is taken from that report:

Comments indicated that some of these arrangements were in the nature of contracts with a single firm to care for its employees, and that the service given was confined to industrial accidents and care at the plant. That less than 9 per cent of the groups had ever tried any such plan and that 60 per cent of these were in the states in which this form of practice is highly developed furnish ample proof of a lack of any high correlation between group practice and sickness insurance, and also of the absence of any pronounced trend in that direction among groups.

We have no record of any private group of reputable physicians offering a prepayment plan. C. M. Bond, Chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Association of Clinic Managers, Sheboygan Clinic, Sheboygan, Wisconsin may be able to help you locate clinics which offer prepayment arrangements.

The other plans listed are prepayment arrangements for medical care organized for rural communities or as a special community subsidized project.

From the experiences of the existing prepayment arrangements for medical care, it appears that even the experiments controlled by medical societies or by physicians have not been entirely free from the criticisms directed at lay or politically controlled plans. The undesirable practices of advertising and solicitation have to be followed, particularly if competing plans are in existence, and the organization of a medically controlled plan encourages the organization of lay controlled plans. Whether the prepayment plan is medically, lay, or politically controlled, it still must overcome the difficulty of calculating in advance a premium or yearly fee for the proposed medical services which will constantly expand to include new and expensive methods of treatment. Likewise, administrative expenses will be incurred regardless of the nature of the control over the plan. The diversion of receipts for administrative expenses, and the increase of demands of insured persons for services place a severe strain on the resources of any prepayment medical care plan.

We trust that this will fulfill your request, but if not please feel free to call on us again. We should like for you to keep us informed as to developments and to make a copy of any of your findings for our information.

Sincerely yours, J. D. Laux, Bureau of Medical Economics.

Dr. A. C. Christie, 1835 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

DEAR DOCTOR CHRISTIE:

The information we have on the Stanocola Employees' Medical and Hospital Association of Baton Rouge, Louisiana is not particularly up to date as there has been very little interest in this plan since 1933. You will find a description of the Association in a Julius Rosenwald Fund publication entitled "Group Payment for Medical Care," prepared by C. R. Rorem and J. H. Musser, published in 1932. The following is abstracted from this publication and from the material we have in our files.

The Stanocola Employees' Medical and Hospital Association was organized in 1924 to furnish designated medical and hospital services for employees of the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana and their dependents. Fees of $3 monthly are collected through payroll deductions from members of the Association. The Association is empowered to levy three special assessments of $3 each during any one calendar year. In 1930 the Association was incorporated under the laws of the State of Louisiana as a nonprofit corporation with authorized capital of $100,000 consisting of 5,000 shares of stock at $20 par value. At the time of incorporation the ownership of a share of stock was made a condition of membership, payment being made in eight monthly installments of $2.50 each. The funds obtained by sale of stock were used to purchase a former private building for use as a clinic, and equipment.

Membership in the Association is voluntary and is limited to the white employees of the Standard Oil Company. Approximately 75 per cent of the white employees, around 2,000 annually, are members of the Association. The affairs of the Association are managed by a Board of Directors elected from the membership.

Services are provided by a staff of seven physicians (a surgeon, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, and five general practitioners). The clinic personnel also includes two graduate nurses, a telephone operator, and a caretaker.

Members of the Association are entitled to the services of the medical staff in their homes, in the clinic, and in two local hospitals where the Association physicians are staff members. A maximum of $250 is allowed for hospitalization and special nursing in any one illness. Hospitalization is paid for by the Association at ward rates in two local hospitals. X-ray and radium services are not provided. Special charges are also made for prescribed medicines and for drugs required to an unusual degree in the course of treatment. A mileage charge is made for house calls beyond a seven mile radius from the clinic. Eye glasses and artificial appliances are not supplied. Obstetrical cases are not hospitalized except for special conditions. Dentistry is not included.

Practically all of the expenses of the Association, which were above $90,000 in 1931, are said to be secured through the $3 monthly payroll deduction from members. Tables showing the kind and volume of services are given for each year up to 1931 in the publication mentioned above.

The records of the clinic are said to be incomplete and inadequate, and the physicians are asked to work from twelve to fourteen hours a day and then to be on call at night. On the other hand, the medical staff receives salaries from $6,000 to $9,000 which are said to be far above the income of the other practitioners in the community. Likewise, each member is entitled to one day's full absence from work each week, and a two weeks' vacation annually.

In 1929 the East Baton Rouge Parish Medical Society declared that the contracts entered into by the doctors with the Stanocola Employees' Medical and Hospital Association were unethical, and that a continuation of the contracts would be prima facia evidence that membership in the Society would no longer be desired by those physicians. An appeal to the courts of Louisiana by the physicians concerned for an injunction to restrain the Society from such action was denied.

If we are successful in obtaining some information concerning the present status of the Association, we shall communicate with you again.

The workmen's compensation law in Washington, contrary to the practice in most states, provides that the employees may be charged regular monthly payments to provide medical services for compensable injuries and diseases. This called into existence "hospital associations" which are private corporations organized to contract with employers for the provision of the necessary medical services. To meet this situation, county medical societies organized medical service bureaus which seek to return to the general medical profession that section of the medical service which has been monopolized by a few physicians and hospitals under contract with privately owned hospital associations. The medical service bureaus have striven to supplant the private contract organizations by offering free choice of physician and by insisting on a higher standard of medical service.

The King County Medical Service Bureau of Seattle, Washington is one of ten bureaus that have been developed by county medical societies in Washington as a means of meeting this situation created by the workmen's compensation law. The King County Medical Service Bureau is a voluntary association of physicians who agree to furnish services to the King County Medical Service Corporation. The King County Medical Service Corporation is a charitable corporation and contracts with employers to provide medical and surgical care, hospitalization, nursing, and ambulance services for its employees. The Corporation in turn forms an agreement with the physicians of the King County Medical Service Bureau to provide the medical and surgical services; and with hospitals, druggists, and firms engaged in furnishing ambulance service to provide hospitalization, medicines, and ambulance service.

As to the method of operation, the Medical Service Corporation sells two contracts: a Medical Aid Contract which provides medical care for employees injured in the course of their employment, and a Standard Group Contract which provides care for sickness and nonoccupational injuries. In King County, only employees earning less than $1,800 annually are allowed to participate and at present about 25,000 such employees are under contract with the King County Medical Service Corporation.

The Department of Labor and Industries classifies all industries in the State and stipulates the premiums which range from 1¢ to 15¢ for each day worked by an employee, to be paid into the Medical Aid Fund. One half of the premiums are paid by the employer and one half by the employees. The medical service corporations or "hospital associations" receive 89 per cent of the premiums for the employees covered by medical aid contracts, the remainder going to the State for administration of the Act and for the care of employees in need of treatment after the expiration of the contracts. The Department of Labor and Industries also draws up a maximum fee schedule for all services to be rendered employees under medical aid contracts. Copies of the fee schedule and the classifications and rates may be obtained by writing to the Department of Labor and Industries.

The Standard Group Contract is paid for by the employee who authorizes his employer to deduct the premium from his wages. The premiums for the Standard Group Contract vary, but range from $1.25 to $1.75 monthly for each employee. Some "Hospital Associations" write a "Full Coverage" contract which includes benefits for dependents. For the services under the Standard Group Contract, a fee schedule is agreed upon between the participating physicians and the medical service corporation. In most corporations the French Unit System is used to divide the monies received in order to avoid any difference in the amounts paid to the physicians rendering service to patients under workmen's compensation (the Medical Aid Contract) and to physicians rendering general medical or nonoccupational service (the Standard Group Contract).

The enclosed list of bureaus and hospital associations in Washington (and in Oregon where a similar situation exists) and tables showing some operating statistics may be of interest to you.

From an examination of the contracts it is apparent that the numerous exceptions and limitations leave large gaps in the medical services provided. As a general rule, most prepayment contract medical care plans give the impression of providing complete medical services for the small fee charged while, as a matter of fact, numerous services are excluded and special charges are often made. It has been intimated that the contract arrangements through medical service bureaus controlled by county medical societies would not have been undertaken or would be abandoned if it were not for the peculiar features of the workmen's compensation law which permits private commercial associations to contract for and to provide medical services on a prepayment basis. Apparently, the medical society experiments with prepayment medical care plans have not been entirely free from the criticisms directed at lay or politically controlled plans. One investigator (Dodd, W. F.: Adminstration of Workmen's Compensation, Commonwealth Fund, New York, 1936) concludes, "The medical service [in Washington] appears to be inadequate under the contract system, however administered."

We trust that the above information will be of assistance.

Sincerely yours, J. D. Laux, Bureau of Medical Economics.

DEAR DOCTOR HATHAWAY:

Our reply to your request for information concerning group medical care plans has been delayed because of the press of work in preparation for the nationwide study of the need for medical care which has been inaugurated recently by the American Medical Association through its county medical societies.

Only a few medical societies have undertaken the operation of prepayment medical care plans. Practically all of these plans are in the State of Washington where the Workmen's Compensation Law permits the hospital associations, which are private corporations, to contract with employers for the provision of medical services for employees. To return to the general medical profession that section of the medical services which was being monopolized by a few physicians and hospitals under contract with these privately owned hospital associations, ten county medical societies in Washington have organized medical service bureaus. These medical service bureaus offer a contract similar to that of the hospital associations, but they have striven to supplant the private contract organizations by offering free choice of physician and insisting on a higher standard of medical service. A medical service bureau organized by the Utah State Medical Association in 1934 but which is now inactive, and a medical service bureau organized by the Fulton County Medical Society (Atlanta, Georgia) in 1934 and which has 778 active members at the present time, are the only other examples of prepayment plans sponsored by medical societies.

You may have in mind prepayment plans sponsored by groups of physicians, such as the Ross Loos Clinic in California, or the Civic Medical Center in Chicago. Such plans are usually in the nature of a contract with a single firm to care for its employees. The enclosed typewritten copy of a circular for the Ross Loos Clinic will give you an idea of the plan. A pamphlet entitled "Ross Loos Clinic" published by the Civil Service Assembly, 850 East 58th Street, Chicago may be purchased for 40 cents.

Other types of prepayment arrangements are organized by lay individuals, by hospitals, or as a special community subsidized project.

As a general rule, most prepayment contract medical care plans give the impression of providing complete medical services for the small monthly or annual fee charged. After an examination of the contract, it will usually be found that numerous services are excluded and that special charges are made. It is inconceivable that any organizational arrangement of medical services can lower the average annual cost of about $25 to $30 per person except by excluding many services or by offering medical services of an inferior quality.

In regard to your specific questions, a different answer would have to be given for practically every plan. For example, in the Ross Loos Plan, practically no limit is set on house calls except "the subscriber will not demand house calls to be made when he is in such physical condition that a visit to the office during regular office hours would not be detrimental to his wellbeing." In the Fulton County Plan, there is apparently no limit on house calls. The Ross Loos Plan provides 90 days of hospitalization in a ward. The Fulton County Plan provides no hospitalization although visits made to the hospital by the participating physicians are paid for. The exemptions of diseases and conditions usually make quite a sizeable list varies with each contract. The payment of participating physicians also follows a variety of arrangements. The medical service bureau plans use the French Unit System whereby each service represents a certain number of units and an agreed amount is paid for each unit. The medical service plan in Fulton County pays the participating physicians by prorating the net income for each month, according to the bills received. Under the clinic plans the participating physicians may receive a salary or a percentage of the net income.

No ethical plan has evolved from the studies of the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care.

Under separate cover we are forwarding to you a number of our publications in which you will find considerable discussion of prepayment plans and the principles which should be observed by such plans. Notice in particular the requirements for free choice of physician and for payments in cash directly to the patient.

Sincerely yours, J. D. Laux, Bureau of Medical Economics.

DEAR DOCTOR ROWE:

The Medical Service Plan of Trinity Hospital, Little Rock, Arkansas, is one type of several prepayment plans for medical care that have been attempted. The plan was inaugurated in 1931 and is operated by a staff of six physicians. Under the plan, six weeks of hospitalization, including operating room, anesthetics, and general nursing, as well as medical and surgical services, are offered for a rate of $2.50 a month for individuals; $2 a month for persons enrolled in groups; and $5 a month for families, regardless of size. Hospitalization is restricted to Trinity Hospital, and the medical treatment and surgical care are performed by the staff of Trinity Hospital only.

The Hospital does not appear in the American Medical Association Register, and the staff members are no longer associated with the local medical society. Solicitors are reported to be employed on a percentage basis to secure members from groups of employees in business organizations and by house-to-house canvasses.

The Trinity Hospital Plan has sold about 2,000 contracts covering about 5,000 people. Subscribers include wealthy persons in the community as well as factory employees, and persons from towns as far as 140 miles from Little Rock. We have not been able to obtain any financial information concerning the plan other than that the premiums received from members paid 56.3 per cent of the charges for similar services rendered private patients which is approximately the same as if the members of the staff had accepted a 40 per cent reduced fee schedule. Part of this reduction is said to be made up because most of the credit losses ordinarily incurred in private practice are reduced. The staff members have also been willing to participate in such a plan because additional income for special services could be secured from subscribers to the plan. Likewise, staff members do not provide free medical services for persons in the community.

The objections to such an arrangement are the same as the objections to other types of contract practice which prohibit free choice of physician and rely on advertising or solicitation to secure patients. Aside from violating ethical principles which are designed to promote good medical services for the patient, such arrangements do not lower the cost of medical care. The advertised rate does not, as a general rule, provide for complete medical and hospital services and the plan is not supported solely by the dues collected from members. No insurance or prepayment plan which must add administrative costs can provide the same average services now received in private practice for lower than average charges. Either the services offered are not so complete or special charges are made for numerous services. It is also not uncommon to find that deficits are made up by the profits from extra activities such as soda fountain, magazine, and drug sales or income from non-members.

There are several possible arrangements to assist persons to meet medical or hospital bills which avoid most of the objections to contract arrangements for such services. The essential feature of these plans is that the benefits are payable in cash. A number of mutual benefit associations and community health associations have been operating satisfactorily on a cash benefit basis. The July 2, 1938 issue of the Journal, page 59, has the report of the reference committee on the cash payments for medical services which was adopted by the House of Delegates. Under separate cover we are forwarding to you some of our publications in which the questions indicated before are discussed fully.

Excerpt from minutes of Board of Trustees of A. M. A. dated June 6-10, 1937.

Cooperatives: Doctor Woodward reported that in February of this year, employees of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, which has about 2,000 employees in Washington and a number of regional offices throughout the country, organized a cooperative medical service association in Washington, called the Group Health Association, Inc., and financed in part at least by the HOLC, the purposes of which are set forth in its articles of incorporation as follows:

To provide, without profit to the corporation, for the service of physicians and other medical attention and any and all kinds of medical, surgical and hospital treatment to the members hereof and their dependents, and the construction and operation of a clinic and medical office building, and the construction and operation of a hospital in the manner permitted by law, for the members hereof and their dependents, and the operation of a drug store or pharmacy, and the providing of nurses and of drugs and remedies for the members hereof and their dependents, and the furnishing of all forms of hospital service and attention to the members hereof and their dependents, and in general the giving to the membership of this association and their dependents of all forms of care, treatment or attention that may be required by the sick or in the prevention of disease.

To these ends the said corporation shall have the right of acquiring, taking, receiving and holding all manner of land, tenements, leaseholds, or any other kind of real estate or any interest therein, and of owning, improving and disposing of same; borrowing money and securing the same by mortgage upon its real estate and otherwise, and holding and owning any kind of property, goods and chattels acquired by it in any manner, and of employing and disposing of the same for the purposes for which the corporation is formed and to further its general welfare; and of entering into, making, performing, and carrying out contracts of every sort and kind which may be necessary or convenient for the business and purposes of this corporation and which may be permitted by law.

The foregoing enumeration of specific powers shall not be deemed to limit or restrict in any manner any general powers of the corporation and the enjoyment and exercise thereof as conferred by the laws of the District of Columbia upon corporations organized under the provisions of the law for the purposes stated, but this corporation shall have the power to do all and everything necessary, suitable and proper for the accomplishment of any of the purposes, or the attainment of any of the objects, or the furtherance of any of the powers herein set forth, so far as the same may be permissible under the law, and provided that the same may not be inconsistent with the laws under which this corporation is organized.

The corporation shall have no capital stock but shall be an association controlled by its members. The membership of the corporation shall be composed solely of employees of any branch of the United States Government service other than officers and enlisted men of the United States Army and Navy. All members shall have equal rights of membership and those whose dues have been paid at the time, if ever, liquidation of its affairs takes place shall have the right to share in the distribution of its assets.

Doctor Woodward stated that he had been informed that this undertaking is financed by a government loan and that the President has given his approbation to the plan. If it is successful, similar organizations will probably be created in other departments of the government. Doctor Woodward quoted the following from a notice that the Group Health Association, Inc., sent out in April:

Under the terms of the contract between your Association and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, two persons are selected by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board who shall serve on the Board of Trustees.

He stated he had attempted to procure a copy of the contract, to see what they propose to do, but had not succeeded.

Doctor Woodward called attention to the fact that while the Group Health Association, Inc., exists now only among members of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, its charter does not limit its membership to employees of that corporation. He understood that the loan for the purpose of organizing this corporation was based in part on the fact that the corporation will render service to the HOLC. In his investigation he had inquired of a representative of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation whether medical care for government employees did not have to be rendered by the United States Public Health Service and that the response was, "No; the Home Owners' Loan Corporation can employ whomsoever it sees fit." The entire plan, in Doctor Woodward's opinion, will put the Group Health Association, Inc., into the corporate practice of medicine.

Doctor Woodward stated that he called attention to the fact that if the government can lend money to a medical cooperative in the District of Columbia, it can lend money anywhere in the United States for the same purpose, and that if it is generally known that loans of this kind are possible, the government will be put under pressure to make loans everywhere.

On motion of Doctor Booth, seconded by Doctor Fenton and carried, the Board voted to refer this matter to the Executive Committee.

DEAR DR. COOLE:

I am acknowledging receipt of your letter of November 24, to Dr. Taylor, enclosing minutes of a special business meeting of your Society, November 23, at which meeting charges of unethical practice against Dr. Raymond E. Selders, now in Washington, D. C., were dismissed without prejudice.

I note that Dr. Selder's check for dues for 1938 was accepted, and that Dr. Selders is a member in good standing in your Society.

I note, further, that the request of Dr. Selders for a transfer to the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, Washington, D. C. will be voted upon at your next regular business meeting, November 30, and your unofficial opinion is that the transfer will be granted at that time. I have considered your letter an official notification of the close of this case, as far as Harris County Medical Society is concerned, and I am so notifying Mr. Freeman, our General Attorney, whose advice has been consulted in the matter, and Dr. Olin West, secretary of the American Medical Association.

I have written in Dr. Taylor's absence from the office.

Dr. A. P. LaFrance, 634 Main Street, Laconia, New Hampshire.

DEAR DOCTOR LAFRANCE:

Your inquiry concerning the proposal of some people in your locality to start a cooperative scheme has been referred to the Bureau of Medical Economics.

There have been a very large number of similar proposals within the last year; they have come from nearly all sections of the country and have been especially numerous in some states. Although we have kept a close watch of all such developments, we do not know of a single one that has actually gone into operation.

The fact is that the distribution of medical service is not suited to cooperative methods. Even in nations where the cooperative movement has its greatest strength, all efforts to apply such fundamental principles of cooperation as the "patronage dividend" and "wholesale buying" have proved impossible. Because of the difficulty in applying a real cooperative scheme, cooperatives, both in this country and in Europe, have attempted to utilize their organizations and financial resources to set up plans of contract practice. This is probably what is taking place in your district.

We are enclosing a description of some plans in Binghamton, New York that avoid some of the evils of contract practice. These may be of interest to you and of some value in the way of a suggestion as to how to meet the local situation.

The most important thing in all these plans is to see that the entire situation is handled only through the local medical society. We are therefore forwarding a carbon copy of this letter to Dr. C. S. Abbott, Secretary of the Belknap County medical society, for his inforr ation, should the county medical society care to take any action in the matter.

case the outcome, after a number of years, is an increase in the demand for medical services, with a resulting excess of work for the physicians and a consequent decline in the quality of service given. It is almost impossible to avoid these consequences under any plan of sickness insurance that does not include a free choice of physician and payment for medical service according to the "medical act." Even under these conditions there is no certainty of successful outcome.

Where the contract does not include freedom of choice and the physicians are placed on a salary or a per capita basis, the results are apt to be more unsatisfactory. This is especially true where, as we judge from your letter is the case in your locality, the contract does not include all the people in the locality. In that case there is always a division of services, which puts the physicians outside of the contract at a disadvantage and results in poorer service for the remainder of the community and conflict within the medical organization.

As to the financial basis of any such organization, one of the few things on which there has been substantial agreement between the defenders and opponents of sickness insurance is that adequate medical service can not be provided for less than twenty dollars a person; in fact, the usual calculation places it closer to thirty dollars; this means that for a family of four, at least seventy-five dollars a year is required, if complete medical service, including hospitalization is to be included. While we have no information as to the wages paid in the plant to which you refer, it is probable that the payment of such a sum from theaverage income would leave the individual family unable to provide other things which may be more essential to good health than the sort of perfunctory medical service that usually results from such contracts.

The nearest approach to a satisfactory plan that has been developed is that now in operation in Binghamton, New York, a description of which we are enclosing. The central idea of this plan is that a fund is created by whatever payments the employees are able to make, which is used for the payment of medical service according to an agreed-upon fee schedule. The service is then limited by the amount of funds available. The quality of the service and professional standards in general are guaranteed by the local county medical society. All physicians who accept the fee schedule can give service and are paid according to the schedule. This does away with most of the evils of contract practice, insures free choice of physician, and is not so apt to arouse professional antagonism.

We would suggest that the best thing to do as a first step is to take the matter up with the county medical society and make all arrangements through that organization. We are sending you under separate cover a copy of "Medical Service Plans," which might contain some further suggestions. We might add that some of the county medical societies in Washington and Oregon, in order to meet conditions created by the peculiar Compensation Laws in those states, have attempted to set up plans of medical care with a lower rate of payment than that mentioned above. We believe that it is the general opinion that these plans, while still considered necessary in order to meet the competition of so-called "hospital associations" and private contract practice, are by no means a wholly satisfactory way of practicing medicine.

If we have not answered the questions in which you are interested, do not hesitate to write us further and more specifically, as we are anxious to give all the assistance that we can.

Sincerely yours, A. M. Simons, Assistant Director, Bureau of Medical Economics.

GENTLEMEN:

We are confronted with a problem about which we want some help, if you are in a position to give it. It is this:

We have, in our town, a small cotton mill, employing approximately 175 people. They, with their families, number approximately 600 people, about one third of the employees unmarried. The owner of this mill wants to get a plan started whereby these people and their families can be taken care of medically. Of course they carry compensation insurance, so that accidents are adequately cared for. If you have any plan already outlined please help me for one of the following three arrangements: (1) Whereby the employees and their families could receive medical attention, (2) whereby they could receive medical attention and hospitalization, (3) hereby they could receive necessary hospitalization. Th fees in this locality are, for house visits $3.00, office visits are $1.00 or $1.50, this exclusive of any laboraory work, etc. We do not intend to make a contract in this affair, we only want some schedule of how much should be withdrawn from their wages, and a plan whereby that can be managed so that a reserve fund is continually at hand to give the above mentioned necessities.

Yours truly, J. Fred Adams, Macon County Clinic,

Mr. Dan Steible, 1422 Cedar Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:

We are snding you under separate cover the pamphlets for which you asked, with the exception of the one "Collecting Medical Fees" which is now out of print.

Regarding the Trinity Hospital at Little Rock, Arkansas, this is one of a variety of plans that have been offered. The attitude of the American Medical Association in regard to such plans is stated in the opinion of the Judicial Council, given herewith:

"So-called Hospital and Health Associations.

"In its report to the House of Delegates at Philadelphia, the Judicial Council gave consideration to the ethical and economic status of so-called hospital and health associations, controlled by groups of laymen, or by individuals, offering medical and hospital service to any one who will buy "membership" and pay a nominal sum each month as dues."

The Judicial Council's report states: "Such schemes have been put into operation in various places and have failed within a few weeks or months because of inadequate income or because of failure to render good service. The Judicial Council has regarded these schemes as being economically unsound, unethical and inimical to the public interest.

"Within the last year, 1930-31, some community hospitals have announced their intention to provide medical, surgical and hospital service to families on a flat rate basis. In at least one instance, such service has been offered to families, for $35 a year, irrespective of the number of members in such families. In most instances, certain exceptions are made in that persons with chronic diseases are not entitled to receive the benefits of the plan and obstetrical service is not supplied without additional compensation. The members of the Judicial Council doubt that it is wise to lead the people in any community to believe that all necessary medical and hospital service, even though chronic diseases and obstetrical care be excepted, can be provided for the average family for $35 a year. In the cases presented to it the Judicial Council has advised against adoption of such plans by community hospitals because it is believed that they are not economically sound in that they may be unfavorably affected by conditions entirely beyond control under which contracts cannot be fulfilled. There are other aspects of the matter that readily present themselves for consideration involving the interest of physicians in the community who cannot participate in such plans."

I have not yet seen the August issue of the American Magazine to which you refer. An article in the January 1935 issue of the American Magazine, where this plan was first given publicity, stated:

"In the United States the idea has been meeting bitter opposition, principally from the American Medical Association, which at its annual convention in Cleveland some weeks ago threw its weight against the plan. Even so, sentiment may change as the idea spreads—after eight months' study the American College of Surgeons, meeting a few days earlier in Chicago, wholeheartedly endorsed the periodic prepayment plan."

As you will note, the official position of the A.M.A. is not correctly stated in the above quotation. Neither is the statement true concerning the American College of Surgeons. Aside from the objections noted in the opinion of the Judicial Council, there has always been opposition to any form of advertisement or solicitation for patronage in connection with medical services.

I am adding to the list of pamphlets for which you asked, one entitled "Economics and the Ethics of Medicine" where you will find this subject discussed on pages 18 to 26.

Sincerely yours, A. M. Simons, Assistant Director, Bureau of Medical Economics.

GENTLEMEN:

I am making a study of group medical services and prepayment plans. Am informed that the following booklets are available from you:

Collecting Medical Fees
Contract Practice
Group-Hosp. Contracts and Ins. Contracts
Group Practice
New Forms of Medical Practice
Prepayment Plans for Hospital Care
Some Phases of Contract Practice
Economics and the Ethics of Medicine.

I will appreciate any or all of these if available. I am particularly interested in the type of institution represented by Trinity Hospital, Little Rock, Ark., as described in articles in the August American Magazine and Readers Digest.

Very truly yours, Dan Steible.

DEAR DR. CONKLIN:

I thank you for your letter of August 14, stating the present position of The Medical Society of the District of Columbia with reference to the Group Health Association.

I understand from your letter that everything that was said and done by Dr. Leland and me in the course of our recent conference with the committee then having the Group Health Association under consideration is now before the committee newly appointed to study the matter. If there is anything in what either of us said or did that was obscure and that calls for explanation or elaboration, we shall be glad to undertake to explain or elaborate it for the information and guidance of the committee. Neither of us has at the present time any further proposal looking toward forestalling the growth of the Group Health Association or toward preventing the organization and growth of similar groups in the District of Columbia.

Has The Medical Society of the District of Columbia taken the advice of counsel with respect to the situation? If so, we shall appreciate it very much if you let us know what that advice was, with citations to statutes and cases supporting it.

Yours truly, Wm. C. Woodward, Director.

MY DEAR DOCTOR CUTTER:

I acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 8th, enclosing Dr. C. M. Peterson's report of June 11th, 1937, on Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-In Asylum.

I shall take great pleasure in submitting this report and its contained recommendations to the Board of Directors and the Medical Board at the times of their next regular meetings. Meanwhile, I would draw your attention to three minor errors as to facts. Under the first paragraph of the heading "General Statement" occur the statements "The board of trustees meets annually" and "There is no representation from the medical board". The facts are that the board of trustees (Directors) meets quarterly, and the medical board is represented on this (as well as on the Executive Committee, which meets monthly) by its president and vice-president, who are always invited to attend meetings and often do so. There they have all the rights of members except the vote. They hear all of the hospital business and are free to discuss any matters or to introduce new matters, to make recommendations as they see fit.

In the third paragraph under the same heading "General Statement", it is sated "There is a private floor, a semi-private floor and a ward floor." Of the three floors for patients, two are devoted to both private and semi-private cases, and the third mostly to ward cases, but it has also two private rooms and one semi-private.

I am not quite clear as to the statement under C-2, Teaching, that "residents occasionally are asked to demonstrate to clerks from Georgetown University." There is an arrangement whereby two Georgetown undergraduates at a time may be present as onlookers at labor in ward cases and receive instruction, but not take any part in the delivery. I presume that this is what is meant.

Very sincerely yours, P. M. Ashburn, Supt.

Dr. William D. Cutter, American Medical Association, 535 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois.

DEAR DOCTOR CUTTER:

In your letter of July 16 you state that Trinity Hospital has been omitted from the register of hospitals in the directory because "it became apparent that policies adopted by the hospital made it inconsistent for us to further continue to endorse the institution before our readers". I would be interested to know just how you arrived at this conclusion. As you are aware, we do have a plan of prepaid medical care which conforms in all particulars to the ten requirements of the A.M.A. This plan, as you are also probably aware, has met with violent opposition by the local medical society and we have been accused of almost every crime in the calendar.

I hesitate to believe that you have acted upon these unsupported accusations and then too, I notice that the Missouri Pacific Railroad Hospital is listed in the directory. This is the hospital of another prepayment medical care plan, which is not voluntary, allows no free choice of physician, but which is compulsory to the point that if the employees do not contribute they lose their jobs and moreover it is entirely managed by laymen who employ physicians on a salary.

All of this has me somewhat confused,—I do not know just what steps we can or should take to make Trinity Hospital eligible for listing. I would appreciate very much your suggestions in this matter.

Yours very truly, Trinity Hospital. Caroline T. Snyder, Superintendent.

DEAR DOCTOR FISHBEIN:

Your answer to my letter of the nineteenth of this month has been received. Since I wrote to you I have obtained some additional information regarding the group that I wrote you about and have heard from the director of the same. The group concerned is the Group Health Association, Incorporated, 1328 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. It is apparently an organization composed of government employees and their dependents, and I am told is fully supplied with all necessary equipment and technical personnel for the operation of a complete modern clinic with the highest standard of ethical, medical and surgical and obstetrical care and treatment, including hospitalization. The director of this group is Dr. Raymond E. Selders. The position open is for an obstetrician who would perhaps have to do some general work in addition for a time. The salary I am told is about the figure that I stated in my other letter to you.

I do not know whether this will aid you more in advising me, but at the present time is all the information that I have. I am contemplating on going down there soon and looking into the matter at first hand, and if there is any other pertinent information that I can learn while there I shall write you again. I appreciate very much, indeed, your interest and willingness to advise me. Since I complete my work here a week from today, I shall most probably go home to Wisconsin for a short time before doing anything about this proposition one way or another. In the meantime I shall run down and investigate further, since I am interested.

With sincere appreciation, I am

To the Board of Trustees, American Medical Association:

At the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of the American Medical Association, June 29, 1937, a resolution was adopted authorizing the Editor and the Secretary and General Manager to inform the medical profession of the country as to the efforts of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to enter upon the practice of medicine and as to the present status of the proposal to organize cooperatives by the Government. In response to your request for information concerning the matter, I submit the following report.

Group Health Association, Incorporated
Unlicensed Health Insurance and Corporation Practice of Medicine Under Federal Auspices

Unlicensed and unregulated health insurance and corporate practice of medicine in the District of Columbia, and wherever else in the world a civil officer or employee of the United States Government may be found, are proposed in a certificate purporting to be a certificate of incorporation, filed on behalf of Group Health Association, Inc., in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia, February 24, 1937. The certificate makes eligible for membership every employee of every branch of the United States Government other than officers and enlisted men of the Army and Navy. It attempts to authorize the corporation—

"To provide, without profit to the corporation, for the service of physicians and other medical attention and any and all kinds of medical, surgical and hospital treatment to the members hereof and their dependents, and the construction and operation of a clinic and medical office building, and the construction and operation of a hospital in the manner permitted by law, for the members hereof and their dependents, and the operation of a drug store or pharmacy, and the providing of nurses and of drugs and remedies for the members hereof and their dependents, and the furnishing of all forms of hospital service and attention to the members hereof and their dependents, and in general the giving to the membership of this association and their dependents of all forms of care, treatment or attention that may be required by the sick or in the prevention of disease. Certificate of Incorporation, pages 1 and 2.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, a fiscal agency of the United States Government, is sponsoring the Group Health Association morally and through a contract of such a character that neither the Federal Home Loan Bank Board nor the Group Health Association is willing to make it public (Letter from John W. Childress, Assistant to Chairman, Home Owners' Loan Corporation, July 27, 1937, to Hon. Louis Ludlow), but which, according to newspaper reports, guarantees up to $100,000 as an advance to help inaugurate the system (Washington Herald, August 25, 1937).

Origin of Group Health Association.—The development of a health insurance organization among employees of the Federal Government in the District of Columbia, to pay benefits to its members in the form of medical and hospital service and not in cash, was foreshadowed by an anonymous

19-page prospectus, marked "Confidential: For Private Circulation Only," that came to light in the early part of the current year. It offered "A Plan for a Cooperative Medical Service on a Periodic Payment Basis for Federal Employees and Their Families in Washington." The prospectus said:

"The aim of this plan is to make available to Federal employees in Washington, and to their families, adequate medical care, both preventive and curative; to provide this care at moderate cost; and to place that cost on a regular, budgetable basis within the means of the group to be served. If Federal employees are typical of the general population with equivalent incomes, many do not now obtain adequate medical care, especially preventive service and care in chronic conditions, while many others incur disastrous debts each year because of sickness costs. The provision of better care should promote health and well-being and reduce time lost from work because of illness. The plan should be of benefit not only to the employees and their families, but also to the Government they serve." Prospectus, page 2.

The prospectus stated incidentally that "federal employees lose approximately 7 days a year from work because of illness" (Prospectus, page 2), but it did not purport to justify the proposed organization of a health insurance association on the basis of any study of the nature and extent of illness among federal employees and their dependents, nor on the cost of such illness to such employees or to the Government. Later, however, after Group Health Association had been organized, its president, by way of justification or excuse, asserted that the Association was the result of studies of health conditions among the employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its affiliated agencies. (Minutes of Special Meeting of Executive Committee, Medical Society of District of Columbia, June 24, 1937, Penniman—pages 1, 2, 9, Zimmerman—page 9.) No report of any such studies, however, their methods and results has ever been made public. Admittedly, too, even the secret study referred to did not include a parallel study of sickness among employees of the Federal Government other than those in the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, one of the affiliated agencies of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. (Minutes of Special Meeting, supra, Penniman, page 9.) To determine the significance even of the health studies made it would be necessary to know (1) the character of such studies, (2) by whom they were made, (3) the nature and extent of illness discovered among employees of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, (4) the relation of such illness to the habits of the employees and their working and home conditions, including illness among their dependents, and (5) the frequency, duration, and severity of illness among employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its affiliated agencies in comparison with illness among employees in other branches of the federal service. In the absence of such data, neither the Federal Home Loan Bank Board nor anyone else could or can determine the significance of the study said to have been made, or intelligently deduce from such studies the reasons why the Board, in seeking a remedy for the conditions found, should have ignored the United States Public Health Service and turned for aid to an untried, private, lay health insurance association.

Incorporation of Group Health Association.—The Code of the District of Columbia, 1929, Title 5, Chapter 7, Section 179, provides—

"Every corporation, joint-stock company, or association not exempt herein, transacting business in the District of Columbia, which collects premiums, dues, or assessments from its members or from holders of its certificates or policies, and which provides for the payment of indemnity on account of sickness or accident, or a benefit in case of death, shall be known as 'health, accident, and life insurance companies or associations'."

The Group Health Association comes clearly within the category described above, for the fact that it pays its members indemnity, not in cash, but in the form of medical and hospital service, is not material. The Association, however, was probably deterred from undertaking [to incorporate] operate under this section because it provides that—

"No such company or association shall transact business within the District of Columbia unless it shall have in assets or in capital stock fully paid up in cash, or in both together, not less than twenty-five thousand dollars as a capital or guarantee fund * * *"

Presumably, the Association, at the time of its organization, did not have in hand $25,000 wherewith to establish the required capital or guarantee fund.

It is true that this section of the District Code, regulating the business of insurance in the District of Columbia, provides—

"That nothing contained herein shall apply to any relief association, not conducted for profit, composed solely of officers and enlisted men of the United States Army or Navy, or solely of employees of any other branch of the United States Government service, or solely of employees of any individual, company, firm, or corporation."

But Group Health Association could not take advantage of this, for it is not a "relief association," but an insurance association, and, moreover, under what purport to be the by-laws of the Association, its membership is not to be made up solely of employees of the Federal Government. Members whose connections with the Federal Government have terminated are to have the right of continuous membership as long as they pay their dues and assessments. (By-Laws, Article 2, Section 6.) The Association is to give no "relief" within the legal meaning of that term; it is to do nothing more than discharge its legal obligations to its members under its membership agreement.

That an association organized and functioning as Group Health Association is, is carrying on the business of insurance and is subject to the laws of the District of Columbia regulating insurance and to the supervision of the Superintendent of Insurance for the District, was the conclusion reached by the Corporation Counsel of the District when called on to pass on the status of Group Hospitalization, Inc. Group Hospitalization, Inc.; the American Federation of Government Employees, Internal Revenue Lodge No. 47; and Women's Union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Local 105, the two organizations last named being composed exclusively of government employees, and two others similarly situated were held by the Corporation Counsel without equivocation to be subject to the same regulations of law as apply to any other form of insurance company. The applicability of the Corporation Counsel's ruling to Group Health Association is clear when it is remembered that that Association, like Group Hospitalization, Inc., agrees in return for periodic payments of money to furnish hospital service in event of illness.

Only by incorporation, however, could the promoters of Group Health Association avoid personal liability for the debts and torts of the Association. Unable to qualify as a corporation carrying on the insurance business, and perhaps unwilling to submit to the supervision and control to which the insurance business is subjected, the organizers of Group Health Association, while still proposing to carry on the insurance business as defined in the District of Columbia Code, sought refuge under a provision of that Code that has no relation to insurance. Group Health Association was therefore "incorporated" under the provisions of the District of Columbia Code, 1929, Title 5, Chapter 5, authorizing the incorporation of benevolent, charitable, educational, literary, musical, scientific, religious and missionary organizations, including societies formed for mutual improvement or for the promotion of the arts. Nothing in the certificate of incorporation of Group Health Association suggests that it has any educational, literary, musical, scientific, religious or missionary aspirations or is intended for the promotion of the arts. It is difficult to discover any activity named in the certificate of incorporation of Group Health Association that by any possibility brings the organization within any other of the categories named above. The Association is not a benevolent or charitable organization; the poorest charwoman or laborer is to pay for the indemnity offered by the Association against loss through illness exactly the same dues or premiums that are to be paid by even the most wealthy officials and employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and other government agencies, and nobody is to get anything whatever free under any circumstances. The Association cannot successfully claim the right to incorporate as a corporation for "mutual improvement" within the meaning of the Code, for any construction of the provisions of the Code that would permit such incorporation would leave the Code wide open for all manner of abuse; they could be used for the organization of morally and financially irresponsible finance, banking, insurance, business and professional corporations of all kinds, each organized for the "mutual improvement" of its members financially, through the exploitation of some other class or classes in the community, just as Group Health Association is. Such abuses would not be prevented by the fact that banking, insurance, and many other forms of business activity and the professions are strictly regulated by law; for the business of insurance and the practice of medicine in which Group Health Association proposes to engage are likewise strictly regulated by law, and if through incorporation as an organization "for mutual improvement" the Association could defeat the laws regulating insurance and the practice of medicine, other persons, differently incorporated, could defeat the laws relating to banking, insurance and other businesses and the laws relating to the professions other than medicine.

Aside from the obstacles in the way of the incorporation of Group Health Association pointed out above, there is a further obstacle. An organization cannot be lawfully incorporated to effect unlawful ends, and the certificate of incorporation filed by Group Health Association indicates clearly that one of its purposes, insurance, is unlawful if carried on under the provisions of the Code under which the Association professes to be incorporated, and its other purpose, the practice of medicine, is unlawful if carried on without a license such as the Association does not possess and cannot obtain either in the District of Columbia or in any State in which the Association proposes to practice.

That Group Health Association does propose to engage in the insurance business is apparent from an examination of the District Code, which provides that every corporation, joint stock company, or association not specifically exempted, which collects dues or assessments from its members and which provides for the payment of indemnity on account of sickness or accident shall be known as a health or accident insurance company or association and shall qualify accordingly. (District of Columbia Code, 1929, Title 5, Chapter 7, Section 179). Under its certificate of incorporation, Group Health Association is to collect dues or assessments from its members. In event of their illness or injury, or the illness or injury of any of their dependents, it is to pay indemnity in the form of medical, hospital and other services. The fact that indemnity is paid in the form of services and not in the form of cash, does not alter the situation. Without considering any of the legal principles by which this dictum may be supported, it must be clear even to any one that the payment of indemnity in services releases the insured member of the Association from what otherwise would be his own obligation to pay in cash for such services, and thus releases his own cash for whatever use he desires to make of it. The payment of indemnity in services is therefore the equivalent of cash payment. ~~This principle is fully supported by the opinion of the Corporation Counsel for the District of Columbia, already referred to, in which he held that Group Hospitalization, Inc., which provides indemnity in the form of hospital service and not in cash, was engaged in the business of insurance and subject to the laws regulating that business.~~

That Group Health Association proposes to practice medicine in the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, and possibly in other States, is shown by its certificate of incorporation and by its by-laws. Its certificate of incorporation is a feebly disguised attempt on the part of the organizers to obtain authority for the Association, without liability on the part of its members, to treat its members and their dependents through hired servants and agents of the Association, for any and all manner of disease and injury, and its so-called by-laws elaborate on that plan. This certainly constitutes the practice of medicine by the Association, notwithstanding the fact that the Association is not and cannot be licensed so to practice. The United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia and the Corporation Counsel for the District have both held that a corporation cannot lawfully engage in the District of Columbia in the practice of a profession that requires licensure or registration as a condition precedent to lawful practice, even though the corporation undertakes to practice through licensed or registered agents. (Opinion of Leslie C. Garnett, United States District Attorney, to Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, September 27, 1934 (LCG/jn M-2511); Opinion of E. Barrett Prettyman, Corporation Counsel, to Board of Commissioners for District of Columbia, August 30, 1934 (C. C. C. 3.007/1); enclosed in letter from Dr. William G. Morgan, Washington, D. C., February 11, 1937.) If and when Group Health Association begins to practice medicine as proposed in its certificate of incorporation and its by-laws, the United States District Attorney and the corporation counsel for the District, in pursuance of the duties of their respective offices that they have sworn to perform, will be bound to take action to enforce the law.

From what has been said it is to be assumed that the attempt of the organizers of Group Health Association to incorporate is ineffective and that the members of the organization constitute only a voluntary association. If so, the members of the Association will have a certain personal liability for its debts and torts, notwithstanding the disclaimer in the certificate of incorporation.

Financial Relations

The certificate filed by Group Health Association in the office of the Recorder of Deeds in the District of Columbia provides that the Association is to have no capital stock and is to render to its members and their dependents the services described therein, "without profit to the corporation" and without personal liability on the part of its members. The certificate is silent as to the sources from which the Association obtained the money necessary for its organization and establishment. It is silent also with respect to the sources from which it is to derive its operating income, except that it refers to members who have paid their "dues" and to members who have paid their "dues and assessments, if any." (Certificate, paragraphs Fourth and Seventh.) In the pamphlet containing what purports to be the by-laws of the Association, but which contains nothing to show that the members of the Association ever adopted them, provision is made for the payment of "dues" (By-Laws, Article 7, Section 1) and reference is made to the payment of "assessments" (By-Laws, Article 2, Section 6), but the formula for levying assessments and the limitations on them, if any, do not appear. These supposed by-laws provide, however, that they may be amended by the board of trustees at any time (By-Laws, Article 9, Section 1), and if this attempt to vest in the board of trustees supreme control over the affairs of the Association is effective, the board, at any "regular meeting or at any special meeting when the proposed amendment has been set out in the notice of said meeting," can amend the by-laws so as specifically to authorize assessments and can even at that same meeting levy on the members of the Association any assessment that it deems proper. Possibly, however, if Group Health Association is, in fact, a corporation organized, as it purports to be organized, under the provisions of the Code of the District of Columbia, 1929, Title 5, Chapter 5, the provisions that authorize the corporation itself, and not its trustees, to make by-laws may sufficiently protect the interests of the members of the Association against incontinent and unreasonable assessments. The right of a corporation as such to delegate to the board of trustees or to any other body the discretion that is vested by the statute in the corporation itself, with respect to the making of by-laws is at least questionable, and it is hardly conceivable that a corporation could in any case effect such a delegation without the affirmative vote of every member. If a corporation can even by a majority vote of its members vest in its board of trustees such authority as these alleged by-laws purport to vest in the board of trustees of Group Health Association, the rights of a minority, however large it may be, rest on a rather tenuous basis.

Federal Home Loan Bank Board.—The sources of the money necessary to promote the organization of Group Health Association in the first place, to organize it, to provide it with necessary quarters and equipment and to guarantee operating costs long enough to determine whether the Association can or cannot become self-supporting, are secrets carefully guarded by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Group Health Association. Whether this is because there are private interests behind the Association that are unwilling to have their connection with it disclosed, or because disclosure might uncover a precedent that would lead to embarrassing demands on the Federal Home Loan Bank Board by persons desirous of forming similar organizations in the field of medicine, dentistry, insurance, or social work, or simply because disclosure would subject the Board and the Association to annoying criticism, is not known. One prominent officer of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (John H. Fahey, Congressional Directory, page 719 and pages 360, 361, and 364), who is a member of Group Health Association and has given it his particular blessing (U. S. News, August 23, 1937, page 7), is listed also as one of the trustees of the Twentieth Century Fund, Inc., of which Edward A. Filene of Boston is listed as president and trustee. (American Foundations and Their Fields, Twentieth Century Fund, Inc., New York, 1935), but perhaps this has no significance.

No law has been found authorizing the Federal Home Loan Bank Board or any of its affiliated agencies to finance by government loans private organizations such as Group Health Association.] Even if there were such authority, good judgement would hardly justify the making of such a loan in the entire absence of any likelihood of repayment, and there would seem to be no likelihood of the repayment by Group Health Association of any loan made to it under its present set-up. The dues of members of the Association are so low that it is hardly likely that it will ever be able to pay even operating expenses—provided, of course, it undertakes to furnish its members and their dependents with really first class medical and hospital service. So far as any available record shows, no provision has been made by the Association for the amortization of the initial costs of plant and equipment.

Possibly the contract between the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and Group Health Association, made apparently without advertisement or competitive bidding and carefully concealed from the public, may provide for payments to the Association by the Board so greatly in excess of the cost of the service that the Association is to render as to enable the Association to repay such advances as have been made by private interests, to pay for necessary quarters and equipment, and to protect the Association against loss from medical and hospital services rendered officers and employees of the Board and its affiliated agencies, and the dependents of such officers and employees. In any event, it has been admitted that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation has already appropriated an initial sum to enable Group Health Association to render services of some kind, to somebody, somewhere (Minutes of Special Meeting, supra, Penniman, pages 5-6), and according to newspaper reports the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has guaranteed an advance up to $100,000 to get the Association under way (Washington Herald, August 25, 1937).

Dues and Assessments.—Under the by-laws of the Association "family membership" is available for "married or single members with dependents," as a cost of $39.60 per annum payable in equal monthly installments. No limit is placed on the number of dependents on whom a "family member" can confer all benefits of the Association under this class of membership. "Individual membership" available for "married or single members having no declared dependents," is now priced at $26.40 a year, payable monthly (By-Laws, Article 7, Section 1). The amount of the dues can be changed at any time by the board of trustees (By-Laws, Article 9, Section 1). A "dependent" is defined as a person "totally dependent upon the member of the corporation for a livelihood at the time of such person's disability and before need of medical service" (By-Laws, Article 10, Section 7).

Check-off on Government Payroll.—The form of application for membership provided by Group Health Association offers the member the option of paying his dues personally or of assigning to the Association so much of his government salary as may be necessary for that purpose and requesting his "employer," the Government of the United States, to deduct semi-monthly the amount assigned and remit it to Group Health Association, Inc. As this assignment form is also an application for membership, and obviously belongs to the files of the Association an additional assignment form has been provided, presumably to be filed with the paymaster of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board or the particular affiliate of the board by which the member of the Association is employed. This form specifically assigns, sets over, and directs the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation to pay Group Health Association the amount due to that Association, out of any salary or wages due or to become due to the member so long as membership continues. This establishes the check-off scheme commonly employed to hinder defections from the ranks of organizations that fear difficulty in maintaining membership and to impose on the employer the burden that properly belongs to the organization of providing a collection agency. Under the check-off system, a member who finds membership no longer advantageous cannot quietly and without explanation cause his membership to be terminated by the simple expedient of omitting payment of dues. He must take affirmative action and resign from the organization, with danger of loss of social standing among his fellows, and he must notify his employer that his membership has been terminated, with the possbile loss of esteem by his superior officers if the organization happens to be a pet scheme that they are promoting. [That such will be the effect, even if it is not the purpose, of the adoption of the check-off scheme by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its affiliates and Group Health Association seems probable.]

It is well established, however, even at common law, that the assignment of government salaries is contrary to public policy. In the United States, the assignment of any claim that has not yet been earned is forbidden by statute and even after a claim has matured, it can be legally assigned, if it can be assigned at all, only by conforming with the conditions laid down by statute. (United States Code, 1934 Ed., Title 31, Sec. 203) and the provisions of this statute have been held to apply to government salaries. (3 Dec. Controller of Treasury, 22 op. atty. gen'l 637; Bliss v. Lawrence, 58 N. Y. 442.) So positive are the express and implied inhibitions against the assignment of federal salaries that when it was deemed desirable that employees of the Department of Agriculture (United States Code, 1934 Ed., Title 5, Chap. 9, Sec. 529) and of the Department of Commerce (United States Code, 1934 Ed., Title 5, Chap. 10, Sec. 595) be permitted to assign their salaries, it was deemed necessary first to procure authority by act of Congress, and even then the authority granted for assignments by employees of the Department of Commerce was expressly limited to assignments made while absent from Washington and employed in the field.

The check-off scheme planned by Group Health Association, with the apparent approval of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its affiliates, gives the premiums or dues that are payable to the Association priority over every other claim, moral or legal, against the salary of every member of the Association. [What this means can be seen when it is called to mind that] the association does not undertake to indemnify its members in cash, which would help the member to provide himself and his dependents, in time of sickness and in time of health, with the necessaries of life, including medical service, but to indemnify him only in medical and hospital services, and then only to the extent that the board of trustees of the Association and its medical staff deem feasible in view of the resources of the Association at the moment and of the condition and location of the patient. Dues or premiums under the check-off system must be paid. The insured may use only the balance of his salary for such supplementary medical service as the Association does not provide, and for food, clothing, shelter, and drugs and other medical and surgical supplies, necessary for himself and his dependents. The hired physician of the Association is to be assured his wages through the check-off system, even though food, medical and surgical supplies, and sometimes essential services, such as the use of radium and deep x-ray therapy, may have to be omitted because of the inability of the employee to provide them. This is in marked contrast with ordinary medical practice where the essentials of life and treatment for the patient and his dependents are obtained first, while the physician waits for his fee—and does so gladly when the circumstances of the patient so indicate.

If Group Health Association succeeds in establishing the check-off system as a proper and lawful way of insuring the payment of the present and prospective debts of government employees it will undoubtedly prove a boon to labor unions, finance corporations, merchants who do business on the installment plan, landlords and others, who under the law cannot attach or garnishee the salary of an employee of the Federal Government but who will be able to protect themselves in advance by demanding assignments of federal salaries as securities for debts. If Group Health Association is going to have the check-off system adopted by the Federal Government for its benefit, there is no reason why any and every other person, whether individual or corporate, may not claim the same privilege.

Membership

The original certificate filed by Group Health Association in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia makes eligible for membership all "employees of any branch of the United States Government Service other than officers and enlisted men of the United States Army and Navy." It makes no discrimination on account of race or color. Such employees number 840,159 (Congressional Record, July 27, 1937, page 9939) and are scattered throughout the entire civilized world. With their dependents, these employees would probably number 2,500,000 and provide a rather extensive field of medical practice for Group Health Association. The organizers of the Association, however, in what they call its by-laws, seek to handicap the civil employees of the Federal Government who are not employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its affiliated agencies, by providing that—

"In case persons other than employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and agencies under its direction shall be designated as eligible for membership, such action shall first have approval of a majority of the board of trustees and a majority of the members of the corporation present in person or by proxy at a regular or special meeting." By-Laws, Article 2, Section 1.

This restriction, however, like all others contained in the by-laws, is of little moment; the board of trustees can remove or modify it in any way they see fit, at any time.

Membership will be restricted geographically by the by-law by which members and their dependents, to be entitled to avail themselves of the medical services to be performed by the Association, must be located in the District of Columbia or within ten miles of its boundaries or must come to the city of Washington for advice and treatment, although the medical director may provide for house calls at points not exceeding twenty miles distant. The potential membership of the Association, however, even as thus geographically restricted will be considerably more than 115,912 (Congressional Record, July 27, 1937, page 9939). To determine the total load to be carried, the dependents of members must be added to the foregoing numbers, possibly an average of two dependents for each member.

The figures stated above show only the potential membership and load of Group Health Association. What the actual membership and load will be, no one can foretell. If, as has been alleged, there is an undue prevalence of illness among employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board or of some of its affiliated agencies, a fair number of the physically inferior employees may be expected to join the association. Employees, too, who now are deterred from claiming sick leave because of the expense of employing a physician to vouch for the sickness and to furnish the necessary certificate may join the Association because it furnishes an easy way to obtain such certificates practically gratis. Illness among the dependents of employees, particularly among those with large families, will tend to swell the membership rolls. As affecting the size of the membership, the standards that Group Health Association adopts in determining who may and who may not be a member will be a determining factor. If persons suffering from all manner of chronic diseases and infirmities are readily accepted for membership, employees may postpone applying for membership until they or one or more of their dependents are manifestly in ill health. Only experience can determine the probable number of members of Group Health Association and of their dependents.

A circumstance that may hinder the growth of membership in Group Health Association is the absence of any obligation to secrecy on its part. A physician is bound by law and by the ethics of his profession to respect the confidences of his patient, and for that reason his patients trust him. The only limit on disclosure by Group Health Association, however, is the law of libel and slander. The fact that the agents of the Association are physicians and are primarily bound to secrecy by the same rules of law and principles of ethics as are other physicians will afford no protection to the patient, since the members of the Association do not employ those physicians to render medical services but employ the Association.

The physicians employed by Group Health Association are primarily the servants and agents of the Association. The records made by them as servants and agents of the Association belong to the Association. Their primary duty is to the Association, not to the patient. They must abide by the terms of their contracts of employment, and those contracts presumably require conformity and compliance with the by-laws and rules of the Association. The by-laws and rules of the Association expressly provide that—

"The Medical Director shall render such reports as the Board of Trustees shall require." (By-Laws, Article 5, Section 6.)

Obviously, under this provision of the by-laws, the board of trustees, which includes two representatives of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, can call for any disclosure whatever concerning the artivities of the medical director and physicians and nurses working under his direction, and use, free from any obligation to secrecy, the information thus obtained.

A member of Group Health Association, as one of the conditions of membership, seems to waive, in favor of the Association, his right to professional secrecy on the part of any physician-employee of the Association who attends him, and impliedly his dependents, in accepting the services of such physician-employee, likewise waive their right to secrecy.

Area to Be Served.

If it is difficult to determine the future membership of Group Health Association, it is not so difficult to determine the extent of the area over which it plans to extend even its initial activities. As we have seen, the certificate of incorporation contemplates apparently world-wide service. The by-laws, however, propose to limit the area covered by providing that—

"To be able to avail themselves of medical and surgical service, the members or dependents must be located in, or within ten miles of the District of Columbia line, or must come to the City of Washington, D. C., except that the Medical Director may provide for house calls not exceeding twenty miles. (By-Laws, Article 10, Section 6.)

This area covers the entire District and considerable areas in Maryland and Virginia and is bisected by the Potomac river.

The District of Columbia alone covers somewhat more than sixty square miles. An area including the District of Columbia and the territory within ten miles of its boundaries comprises approximately seven hundred and fifty square miles. The territory including the District of Columbia and the region within twenty miles of its boundaries covers approximately nineteen hundred and fifty square miles. It is obvious that to serve even the normal area, covering the District of Columbia and the territory within ten miles of its boundaries, about 750 square miles, will call for the establishment of clinical centers at various points and for liberal provisions for transportation of physicians and nurses and ambulance service. This is based on the announced plan of the Association of operating through salaried full-time physicians and not through local physicians paid on a fee basis. The increased difficulties of the situation if a serious effort is to be made to cover the District of Columbia and an area within twenty miles of its boundaries is apparent.

Benefits or Indemnity Offered.

Group Health Association proposes to provide its members and their dependents with medical and hospital service. This is to be done through a salaried full-time medical staff, supplemented by a few part-time specialists, through contracts with hospitals, and through nurses when circumstances so require. The medical staff is normally to make home and hospital visits over an area of about 750 square miles and, at the discretion of the medical director, over an area of 1950 square miles. Patients are to be encouraged, however, to present themselves at a central clinic for treatment. In such an ambitious, untried project, it is not surprising that the board of trustees should have reserved the right to itself and to its medical staff to limit the service rendered whenever either the board or the medical staff sees fit. The Association has been careful not to obligate itself to furnish service of any definite kind or quantity. The so-called by-laws of the Association expressly provide that—

"Section 4. The corporation will not assume responsibility for furnishing unlimited medical service to members but will do so only to the extent of its resources.

"Section 5. The Trustees shall have the right to determine and modify the extent of the service to be furnished to members at any time they may decide to do so upon written notice to the members to that effect given fifteen (15) days prior to any such change." By-Laws, Article 10, Sections 4 and 5.

To one familiar with the City of Washington and its environs, the question necessarily arises as to how Group Health Association has solved or proposes to solve the race question. Certainly government officers and employees and their dependents cannot be denied membership in the government-financed Group Health Association simply because they are of African descent. But Washington and vicinity are sufficiently far South to make the drawing of the color line in the service rendered and the refusal to draw such a line each likely to arouse bitter controversy. The solution of the problem will be watched with interest.

Before considering the service or indemnity that Group Health Association promises its members and their dependents—always subject to the will of the board of trustees and its medical staff—it will be well to consider definitely what it will not do or will do only conditionally. The Association will not treat members who suffer from industrial accidents, nor will it perform any surgery on the brain or nervous system. (By-Laws, Article 10, Section 2.) It will not treat venereal diseases, except at the personal expense of the patient, at the rate of 50 cents per treatment. (By-Laws, Article 10, Section 3.) The Association will not treat a member or any of his dependents if the medical director has recommended confinement to an institution for mental or tubercular disease or drug or alcohol addiction. (By-Laws, Article 10, Section 2.) It will not provide its members with (1) dental treatment; (2) medicines; (3) surgical appliances, orthopedic devices, crutches, or artificial limbs; (4) eyeglasses or eyes [sic]; (5) hearing devices; (6) radium or deep x-ray treatment; (7) oxygen tanks and tents and materials; (8) blood transfusions; (9) special nursing service, unless ordered by the medical director; (10) treatment, services, supplies, and items of any kind prescribed or ordered by a physician not in the service of the Association; nor (11) any expense of hospitalization in excess of that allowed by the Association. The Association will, however, endeavor to procure such merchandise and services for members and their dependents at reduced rates. (By-Laws, Article 10, Section 3.) Additional limitations on any and all services and merchandise furnished by the Association may be imposed by the board of trustees at any time on fifteen days notice (By-Laws, Article 10, Section 5), and in any individual case the medical director or his representative is authorized to determine and prescribe the extent of the medical service to be rendered.

Subject to all the limitations and qualifications stated above, and such further limitations and qualifications as the board of trustees and the medical director and his representatives may impose, the Association offers its members and their dependents in return for the fees paid—

"Medical and surgical examinations and treatments, including examinations in special departments, such as refractions of eyes; laboratory test, x-ray examinations, surgical operations, confinement cases and professional consultations, nursing and ambulance facilities, house calls, and hospitalization in a semi-private room (2 bed room) limited to a period not to exceed 21 days for any one illness. However, members desiring to occupy a private room may do so, in which case the corporation will contribute the sum of $4.00 per day toward the expense of such room for such period. In all hospital cases, the corporation will pay for semi-private room (2 bed room) service only, except in the case of infectious or contagious diseases, in which cases a maximum of $4.00 per day will be paid for said period, not exceeding 21 days." By-laws, Article 10, Section 1.

So far as can be learned from the certificate filed by Group Health Association and from its by-laws, no member of the Association and no dependent of a member is to have any freedom of choice of his physician. Obviously, this must be so, for with a limited, salaried, full-time medical staff, operating over an area of 750 square miles or more, it would be impossible for each staff member to cover the entire area daily, to satisfy the desires of members scattered over the entire area. It is understood that the Association will not object to a member or a dependent of a member being treated at his own expense, by a physician not in the service of the Association. Inasmuch as the members of the salaried staff of the Association are likely to be looked on by the profession generally in the community as on the outer verge of ethical practice, if not altogether beyond the pale, it is not clear how they are to obtain qualified consultants or procure hospital service for their patients.

The promoters of Group Health Association may or may not be identical with the anonymous proponents of "A Plan for a Cooperative Medical Service" who issued the unsigned prospectus that preceded the organization of the Association, but the views of those who issued that prospectus with respect to the relation of physician and patient are worthy of record—

"The pros and cons of provision of service by a staff of salaried physicians have been carefully considered. The disadvantage of salaried service is that it does not permit the patient to go to any physician he may select, but limits his choice to the physicians who are members of the staff. It is believed that this disadvantage is at a minimum in the case of the population of Federal employees, since many, being newcomers to the city, have not affiliations of long standing with physicians. In any case, the disadvantage is more apparent than real. Actually, the average layman generally chooses his physician on the basis of hearsay and is not qualified to judge competence. With a salaried staff, the patient receives care from a selected group of physicians, chosen by a chief of staff on the basis of their professional qualifications and competence. Furthermore, only in salaried, group practice is it possible to have a desirable degree of professional supervision of service and ready consultation of one physician with another. Finally, only on this basis can the economies flowing from organization be achieved." Prospectus, pages 7-8.

Obviously, the qualifications of "a selected group of physicians," even though "chosen by a chief of staff on the basis of their professional qualifications and competence," will depend on the salaries that the chief of staff can offer, on security and duration of tenure, and on the assurance of good professional standing in the community. Whether the medical director in Washington, even if the salaries offered and the terms of employment are such as to bring out really qualified applicants, will be able to choose a staff on the basis of professional qualification and competence alone and free from political and social influence and from the influence of the private financial supporters of the scheme, is doubtful.

No announcement has been made at present writing of the medical staff, beyond the appointment of Henry R. Brown, M. D., formerly of the Veterans' Administration, as medical director. No announcement has been made of the hospitals in which the Association proposes to provide accommodations for its members and their dependents. Quarters for a clinic or laboratory have been rented in the business district of Washington, but are not yet equipped. The date originally proposed for inaugurating active medical and hospital service, September 1, has been set ahead indefinitely.

Conclusions

There is no reason to believe that Group Health Association, even if it could lawfully engage in the insurance business and the practice of medicine as it proposes to do, could materially reduce the absence rate among officers and employees of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or its related agencies. Absences on account of illness might even be increased, for a medical certificate would cost nothing. A physician cannot always deny that a man has a disabling headache or a woman, a disabling menstrual period.

Since there is no evidence to show that government employees are unable to pay for medical services—there is no reason for believing that the cheapening of medical service will make him more likely to seek medical aid. There is no reason to believe that the character of medical service under the Group Health Association plan can be kept at the same average level of quality as that prevailing in private practice. Especially would quality be likely to fail in times of epidemics and of any unusual prevalence of disease, when the limited medical staff of the Association would be overworked and could find no relief. In any event, medical service under the Association would be likely to be handicapped by difficulty likely to be experienced in obtaining the best consultant service and hospital accommodations. Physicians who sell their services to an organization like Group Health Association for resale to patients are certain to lose professional caste [and therefore may be looked on askance when they seek consultants or the right to treat patients in reputable hospitals.] status

The probable results on the medical profession of the successful operation in the District of Columbia and vicinity even of a single organization such as Group Health Association cannot be estimated, because of the peculiar situation of the District. [The population of the District was 486,869 in 1930 (Chicago Daily News Almanac, 1937, page 130). The activities of Group Health Association, however, are to extend normally over all the area within ten miles of the boundaries of the District, and in some cases they may extend to a distance of twenty miles, and the population of the area thus to be served outside the District is not known. The number of physicians in the District of Columbia, as shown by the latest edition of the American Medical Directory, is 1,998, but of this number 439 are in the government services and many are not actively engaged in practice. On the other hand, in the areas in Maryland and Virginia to be served by the Association there is an unknown number of practitioners. Any effort toward a statistical presentation of the situation must take into consideration that a large number of persons are lawfully entitled, generally or under special circumstances, to medical treatment by government physicians and in hospitals owned and operated by the Government, such as officers and enlisted men of the Army, the Navy, and the Marine Corps, officers of the Public Health Service, veterans of the World War and other wars, all government employees injured or suffering from disease by reason of their duties, and the police and firemen of the District of Columbia.]

[Disregarding the disturbing factors set forth above, however, we find that] out of a total population of 486,869 in the District of Columbia, 115,912 are civil employees of the United States Government, and of these, 2,517 are employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its affiliated agencies. If to these persons, all of whom are eligible for membership in Group Health Association, we add their dependents, allowing an average of two dependents for each employee, we have a total of 347,736 persons out of a total population of 486,869 that the promoters of Group Health Association, according to their certificate of incorporation, seek to withdraw from the ordinary practice of medicine and to cover into a group health insurance contract-practice system and treat through physicians hired for that purposes. The effect of the withdrawal from private practice of even one-half that number of persons, all of whom are able to pay for medical services, would materially diminish the incomes of physicians in private practice in the District of Columbia and render it necessary for them to increase their charges or to sacrifice the practices they have built up and go elsewhere. Either event might easily react against public interest.

Under the scheme proposed by Group Health Association, far greater benefits will accrue to the richer and more liberally paid employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its affiliates and of such other government agencies as may identify themselves with the scheme than to employees of more meager resources. The scheme is so planned that the richer and more liberally paid employees are to obtain medical services at rates based on the incomes of the poorest employees. The courts have repeatedly held that the value of medical services rendered to a patient may be properly appraised in relation to his wealth, just as the value of legal services are commonly appraised in relation to the value of the interests that the lawyer is called on to protect, whether interests involving the life of his client or his client's property. Under the present scheme, fees that are charged for medical services to the richer and more liberally paid employees are to be identical with those charged employees of the lowest grade, doing part time work. The richer and more highly paid and influential employees are therefore to gain the most financially by this scheme, and nothing in the certificate of incorporation or by-laws assures to those lower in the ranks that they will receive the same quantity and class of medical service as that provided for their superiors.

Dr. W. A. Bloedorn, Medical Director, The George Washington University Hospital, 1339 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

DEAR DR. BLOEDORN:

Under date of November 15th I returned to you the application of D. Raymond E. Selders, Surgeon, attached to the staff of the Group Health Association, for permission to be placed on the courtesy staff of the George Washington University Hospital.

While we do not desire to appear impatient, the urgency of this matter prompts us to inquire whether or not the Committee on Hospital Privileges has as yet had an opportunity to render a decision on this application.

Your prompt reply will be very much appreciated.

Yours very truly, William F. Penniman, President.

Mr. William F. Penniman, President, Group Health Association, 1328 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. PENNIMAN:

Your letter of November 8, 1937 addressed to Sibley Memorial Hospital has been presented to the Local Board of Directors for consideration of the requests contained therein.

Inasmuch as the granting of these requests would necessitate a complete revision of the rules and regulations covering the admission and treatment of patients, the Local Board of Directors feels that the problem should be maturely studied before coming to a conclusion. Therefore by unanimous vote the Local Board of Directors instructed the Acting Chairman to appoint a special committee of three to thoroughly investigate and study the whole question. The entire matter with recommendations will then be referred back to the Local Board of Directors for such action as they may deem necessary or advisable and you will be informed of its decision.

Very sincerely yours, Lewis H. Taylor, President of Sibley Memorial Hospital.

Dr. W. A. Bloedorn, Medical Director, George Washington University Hospital, 1339 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR DOCTOR BLOEDORN:

In view of Justice Bailey's decision yesterday establishing the legality of Group Health Association, Inc., it is respectfully requested that Dr. Raymond E. Selders, a member of our staff, be admitted to the courtesy staff of George Washington University Hospital, and that he may attend members of this Association admitted as patients there.

We shall appreciate the courtesy of an early reply.

Very truly yours, W. C. Kirkpatrick, President.

MY DEAR MR. VICKERY:

Receipt is acknowledged of United States Postal Money Order No. 41046 in the sum of $15.35, payable to the order of Sibley Hospital, dated August 1, 1938, which has been received from you on account of your bill at Sibley Hospital. Receipt for said payment is forwarded to you herewith.

Together with said Postal Money Order we have received from you check No. 1087 of Group Health Association, Inc.

dated July 18, 1938, in the sum of $19, payable to the order of Howard F. Vickery and Sibley Memorial Hospital. At the present time we have no contractural relationship with Group Health Association, Inc. whereby that association assumes the hospital payments for its members who are admitted to this hospital, although application for such privilege is now under consideration by our Board of Directors. In your admission to the hospital you assumed personal responsibility for your account. In view of the fact that we have no contractural relationship with the Group Health Association, Inc., we are returning said check to you herewith and request that the balance of your account to this hospital in the sum of $19 be paid by you either by your personal check or United States Money Order.

Very truly yours, Lewis H. Taylor, M.D., President.

DEAR SIRS:

This is to advise you that Group Health Association, Inc. has been by me requested to make payment to you of the indebtedness due you of $19.00 arising out of your recent services to Howard F. Vickery.

If, for any reason you do not accept the tendered payment, you will kindly advise Group Health Association, Inc. the basis of your refusal as I expect to leave settlement of this indebtedness entirely with the Association, and have given it full authority to act for me in the premises.

This will refer to your letter of August 12, 1938, addressed to Mr. Howard F. Vickery, Apartment 401, Corcoran Courts, Washington, D. C., which letter has been referred to the writer for attention by Mr. Vickery.

Mr. Vickery has previously notified you that this Association is acting in his behalf with respect to the hospital bill amounting to $19.00 due you.

You will find enclosed our check #1087, which was previously forwarded to you and which was returned with your letter to Mr. Vickery, now duly certified by the Riggs National Bank.

If for any reason you do not see fit to accept this certified check, advice as to the basis of your refusing to do so will be appreciated.

You can readily understand the considerable trouble which would be involved in making a formal legal tender in cash to you of the amount in question. I feel certain that your attitude will not be such as to require us to resort to this extremity.

MY DEAR DR. TAYLOR:

I acknowledge with thanks your courteous letter of November 17th, relative to the request contained in my letter to you of November 8th.

I note that by unanimous vote the Local Board of Directors instructed the Acting Chairman to appoint a special committee of three to thoroughly investigate and study the whole question, and that the entire matter with recommendations will then be referred back to the Local Board of Directors for such action as they may deem necessary or advisable. In view of your statement that inasmuch as the granting of these requests will necessitate a complete revision of the rules and regulations covering the admission and treatment of patients, I cannot help by feel that the approach by the Local Board of Directors is both logical and sound.

In this connection, may I say that if the Officers, Trustees or Members of the Medical Staff of the Group Health Association can be of any assistance to the Special Committee, to the end that they may reach a proper conclusion after being informed of all of the facts and circumstances, we will be very happy to have you let us know. Furthermore, the Officers, Trustees and Members of the Medical Staff of the Group Health Association would be pleased to have the members of the Special Committee visit and inspect the Clinic, which is located at 1328 Eye Street, N.W., at any time convenient to them.

With very sincere regards, I am

Casualty Hospital. To Officers and Trustees of the Hospitals of Washington, D. C.

Dear Sirs:

There are approximately five thousand citizens of Washington representing 19 agencies of the United States Government who have joined together to obtain medical treatment and hospitalization through the facilities of Group

Health Association, Inc. A crisis has developed due to the fact that the members of this group are being denied treatment by licensed physicians and surgeons of their own choice in the hospitals of the District of Columbia.

Since the organization of Group Health Association, Inc., in November, 1937, sincere effort has been made to secure the cooperation of hospitals in Washington. To date, no action has been taken by this Association which might react unfavorably against the hospitals. Unfortunately however, these efforts have not met with success and it is the opinion of this group that it is being discriminated against unjustly.

It is hoped that a greater mutuality of understanding will result in a better spirit of cooperation. To this end you are invited to attend a meeting on Thursday night, March 3rd, to be held in Room A, Interstate Commerce Commission Building, at eight o'clock. Room A is on the first floor of the Interstate Commerce Commission Building on Constitution Avenue near the corner of Constitution Avenue and 12th Street, N. W.

This invitation is extended to the trustees, superintendents and heads of medical staffs of the Washington hospitals in a friendly effort to cooperate in the interests of citizens and their dependents who are members of this voluntary association.

Sincerely yours, (Signed) R. T. Berry, Secretary.

Resolution adopted by the Society, in session on the evening of December 1, 1937:

Resolved, That as a matter of educational policy the Medical Society of the District of Columbia strongly recommends that all hospitals engaged in the teaching and training of residents, interns, and nurses, where possible, follow the recommendation of the American Medical Association regarding the constitution of their entire Medical Staffs, namely, that each appointee be a member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia or a local medical society in this immediate neighborhood and a member of the American Medical Association.

Dear Doctor:

The Executive Staff of Georgetown University Hospital is anxious to have the opinion of the District of Columbia Medical Society on the following questions:

What stand shall the members of the Hospital Staff take toward Dr. Penhallow and his patients as regards to consultation?

Is or is not Dr. Penhallow a member of the American Medical Association?

What is the opinion of the Society concerning the members who are now engaged with the H. O. L. C. as regards to consultation by Hospital Staff members and the admission to the Hospital of their patients and those of Dr. Penhallow?

Very truly yours, V. J. Dardinski, M. D., Secretary of the Executive Staff.

Gov. Ex. 478

The Medical Society of the District of Columbia, 1718 M Street, N. W., Washington.

July 29, 1937.

To the Superintendent:

Pursuant to action of the Executive Committee, held on the evening of July 12, 1937, and in fulfilment of Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5 of the Constitution, your attention is hereby called to the list of organizations, groups and individuals herewith enclosed. The approved list is on file with the Secretary's Office. The amendment is now in force. Any violation thereof will make a member liable according to the provisions of the Constitution:

Chapter IX, Article IV, Sec. 5:

"No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group or individual, by whatever name called or however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, which has not been approved by the Society.

"The Executive Committee is authorized and directed to prepare an approved list of organizations, groups and individuals, by whatever name called and however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, and the same shall be kept in the office of the Secretary-Treasurer. Before any such organization, group or individual can be placed on the approved list of the Society, such organization, group or individual, or the member of the Society proposing professional relations therewith, shall submit to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee such evidence as the Committee or the Society may require showing the character, activities, financial condition and ethical standards of said organization, group or individual, and after considering the same, said committee shall make a report of its investigation and findings to the Executive Committee for such action as it may deem necessary."

Very truly yours, C. B. Conklin, M. D., Secretary.

Chief of Staff, Emergency Hospital, 1711 New York Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.

DEAR DOCTOR:

Pursuant to formal action of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, in session on the evening of December 1, 1937, the attached resolution is sent you.

Very truly yours, C. B. Conklin, M. D., Secretary.

CBC/dw Encl.

The Medical Society of the District of Columbia

1718 M Street

Washington

Resolution adopted by the Society, in session on the evening of December 1, 1937:

Resolved, That as a matter of educational policy the Medical Society of the District of Columbia strongly recommends that all hospitals engaged in the teaching and training of residents, interns, and nurses, where possible, follow the recommendation of the American Medical Association regarding the constitution of their entire Medical Staffs, namely, that each appointee be a member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia or a local medical society in this immediate neighborhood and a member of the American Medical Association.

July 29, 1937.

TO THE SUPERINTENDENT:

Pursuant to action of the Executive Committee, held on the evening of July 12, 1937, and in fulfilment of Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5 of the Constitution, your attention is hereby called to the list of organizations, groups and individuals herewith enclosed. The approved list is on file with the Secretary's Office. The amendment is now in force. Any violation thereof will make a member liable according to the provisions of the constitution:

Chapter IX, Article IV, Sec. 5:

"No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group or individual, by whatever name called or however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, which has not been approved by the Society.

"The Executive Committee is authorized and directed to prepare an approved list of organizations, groups and individuals, by whatever name called and however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, and the same shall be kept in the office of the Secretary-Treasurer. Before any such organization, group or individual can be placed on the approved list of the Society, such organization, group or individual, or the member of the Society proposing professional relations therewith, shall submit to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee such evidence as the Committee or the Society may require showing the character, activities, financial condition and ethical standards of said organization, group or individual, and after considering the same, said committee shall make a report of its investigation and findings to the Executive Committee for such action as it may deem necessary."

Very truly yours, C. B. Conklin, M.D., Secretary.

Minutes of the Meeting of the Medical Board of Columbia Hospital at 11:30 A. M. April 14, 1938

The Medical Board met at the Hospital at 11:30 A. M. this date.

Present: Drs. Sprigg, Silvester, Mundell, Copeland, Ashburn and McNitt.

The minutes of the meetings of March 10th and March 30th were read and approved. The secretary reported the occupancy for March 70.8% on the Gynecological side with 136 operations, one death and one autopsy; 88.3% on the Obstetrical side, with 179 births, including 4 stillbirths. There were eight post-natal deaths, with seven autopsies.

The following applications for courtesy privileges in Class 3 were approved for recommendation to the Board of Directors:

Dr. Cecil L. Fusfeld, Dr. Russell Edmonston, Dr. Herbert S. Gates, Dr. Richard B. Castell, Dr. Robert H. Harmon, Dr. Andrew J. Betz, Dr. W. S. Blakiston.

The application of Dr. George W. Reeves for privileges in classes 1 & 2 was approved with the usual cautionary provise extended to all of our recent residents.

The application of Dr. A. Stephen Hulbert for privileges in class 3 was tabled.

The application of Dr. Morton A. Kaufman for privileges in classes 1 & 2 was held over pending receipt of advice from the Washington Gynecological Society.

The Committee on Staff Conference recommended for the next program the following cases:

Gyn. 81693—Dr. Kelley. Cholecystitis and cholelithiasis, cholecystectomy, appendectomy, left perinephritic abscess, stitch abscess, anemia. Recovery.

Ob. 82500—Dr. Warren. Premature rupture of membranes, prepartum hemorrhage—bag induction, puerpural fever—mastitis. Death of the infant.

Ob. 82097—Dr. Titus. Caesarean section—Fracture of right femur of infant.

The committee also recommended that Dr. Kilmer read a statistical analysis of the Obstetric work of the Hospital for the year 1937, and that Dr. Cajigas report concerning recent important pathological findings in newborn infants. The program was approved.

The secretary reported that Dr. Kelley desires to have Dr. James P. Kane and Dr. Edwin McNamara as assistants in the clinic.

It was suggested, moved and carried that Dr. Cajigas be made a member of the committee on Staff Conference program:

The meeting adjourned at 12:30 P. M.

Signed, P. M. Ashburn, M. D., Secretary Medical Board.

The Children's Hospital

13th and W Streets, N. W.

Washington, D. C.

April 1, 1938.

MEMORANDUM

Children seeking admission to the hospital because of the emergency nature of their illness will be admitted upon the authority of the Chief or Assistant Resident Physician.

If such children present surgical conditions requiring immediate operation and are under the professional care of surgeons not members of the hospital or courtesy staff, such surgeons may be permitted to operate if assisted during the operation by the Chief or Assistant Resident Physician.

In every case of emergency nature thus admitted, the attending surgeon, or physician in case of medical illness, if not a member of the hospital or courtesy staff, must sign a statement setting forth the emergent necessity for the admission of the patient and for the immediate operation, if operation be required.

The above ruling is made in conformity with the intent and purpose of General Rule #7 of the By-laws and Rules of the Children's Hospital which states: "Emergency cases take precedence over all others and over all rules and first aid is to be immediately rendered by the House Officer most available".

Joseph S. Wall, M.D., Chairman Medical Staff.

. . . . . .

Form of statement referred to in Paragraph 3 in the memorandum above.

I hereby certify that Konrad Hooker is in need of immediate admission to the Children's Hospital, for emergency treatment.

(Signed) M. Scandiffio, M.D.

January 26, 1938.

Mr. President and Members of the Society:

The January meeting of the Board of Censors was held January 24, 1938.

We had before us three applications for membership in the society. Only two were approved. The other one we are holding over for further investigation.

We also received during the month a communication from two of our members appealing to the Board of Censors for relief of a judgment from the adjudication committee. After due consideration we answered this communication by the following letter. (Read letter, also read By-Law)

It has come to our attention that one of our members has joined the staff of a Group Health Association located in Washington, D. C. I wrote Dr. Conklin, Secretary of the District of Columbia Medical Society in reference to the ethical standing of this association and its staff. Here is his answer. (Read letter) It seems to me that this is a similar organization to our Hughes Tool Company's Welfare organization and other organizations we have with us at the time. If my interpretation of the code of ethics of the American Medical Association is correct, all such organizations are unethical. I think we should give this question more serious investigation and report at a later date.

We have sample copies from the American Medical Association of two booklets on Medical ethics and the Board of Censors would like to have permission from the society to buy 500 copies of one or both of these books so that we can give them to each of our members.

Respectfully submitted, Board of Censors, Harris County Medical Society.

Mr. President and Members of the Society:

The Board of Censors met today and we had before us, one application for membership in the Society—Dr. Hale—this application was passed on favorably.

It is also our unpleasant duty to prefer charges against one of the members of this Society.

Minutes Harris County Medical Society

Business meeting, September 14, 1938:

Meeting called to order at 8:00 P. M. by the President, Dr. John T. Moore. Seventy-four members present.

Minutes of previous business meeting read and approved.

Unfinished business:

The Secretary read a resolution adopted in 1934 regarding the use of the classified section of the Telephone Directory.

The Secretary read the decision of the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association regarding the Raymond E. Selders contract. Discussion by Dr. Talley, Dr. Cody, Dr. John T. Moore, Dr. J. E. Clarke, Dr. S. C. Red, Dr. J. C. Alexander and Dr. Carl Wilson.

Motion by Dr. Talley that the matter of Dr. R. E. Selders' trial be laid on the table until a later date and taken up at such time as deemed best by the Board of Censors. Seconded and carried.

Reports of committees:

The Treasurer's report was read by the Secretary, copy of which is attached to these minutes.

Dr. S. C. Red moved that the report be received and filed. Dr. Moore ruled the report received.

Dr. M. D. Levy suggested that the methods of securing money for the carrying on of the Society's business be considered at this meeting and suggested three ways in which this might be done: (1) The money might be borrowed from the Bureau, (2) it might be borrowed from the Houston Academy of Medicine, (3) an assessment might be made.

Motion by Dr. Levy that the needed funds be borrowed from the Medical and Dental Service Bureau. Motion died for want of a second.

Motion by Dr. E. L. Goar that the President and Secretary attempt to make a loan from the Medical and Dental Service Bureau and failing, that they attempt to make it from the Houston Academy of Medicine. Seconded.

Dr. Cody made a substitute motion that an assessment of one dollar ($1.00) per member be levied, due and payable on the first day of October to take care of this deficit and in the meantime, the officers be empowered to make a loan.

Gov. Ex. 562

Minutes Harris County Medical Society

Business Meeting, October 26, 1938:

Meeting called to order at 8:00 P. M. by the President, Dr. John T. Moore. Seventy members present.

Minutes of previous business meeting read and approved.

Unfinished Business:

Dr. A. T. Talley reported for the Board of Censors two matters concerning the placing of names of applicants for membership in the Society on the program card, and the status of the membership of Dr. Raymond E. Selders.

Motion by Dr. Hodges that names of applicants, that had been read at the previous business meeting and had passed the Board of Censors, be placed upon the program card prior to the business meeting at which time voting upon such applicants was to take place. Seconded and duly carried.

Motion by Dr. A. T. Talley, seconded by Dr. Toland, that the indictment against Dr. Raymond E. Selders, now lying on the table, be brought before the Society and dismissed and notification of the Society's action be sent to him by the Secretary.

Discussion by Dr. J. C. Alexander.

Amendment offered and accepted by Dr. Talley and Dr. Toland, as follows:

That the indictment against Dr. Raymond E. Selders, now lying on the table, be brought before the Society and dismissed due to the fact that the Society lacked jurisdiction, since he was not a member, and that notification of the Society's action be sent to him by the Secretary.

Substitute motion by Dr. C. C. Cody that the Society request the Board of Censors and Counsel for the accused to agree upon statement of facts and if not agreed upon that they report the disagreement at the next business meeting.

This motion was withdrawn by Dr. Cody.

Substitute motion by Dr. J. C. Alexander, seconded by Dr. Cody and duly carried, that the Society postpone the action until the next business meeting.

Motion made by Dr. Toland, seconded by Dr. Petersen, that the proposed assessment of one dollar ($1.00) per member be levied, due and payable on the first day of October, to take care of the deficit of the Society and in the meantime, that the officers be empowered to make a loan. Motion lost.

November 22, 1938.

Mr. President, and Members of The Harris County Medical Society:

The Board of Censors, Drs. A. T. Talley, John H. Foster, and Clyde M. Warner, met with your President, Dr. John T. Moore, the Secretary, Dr. Walter A. Coole, the District Counsel, Dr. Judson T. Taylor, and the legal representative of Dr. Raymond E. Selders, Dr. J. C. Alexander, November 21st, 1938.

The meeting was called to order and a very free and frank discussion was held regarding the Dr. Raymond E. Selders matter, which has been pending in our Society for some time.

The conclusion reached by the Board of Censors was agreed to by all those present, that due to the various legal questions involved in the case, the Board of Censors recommends to the Society:

First: That the charges of unethical practice against Dr. Raymond E. Selders, now lying on the table, be brought before the Society and dismissed without prejudice.

Action by the Society

Second: That the check of $24.00, tendered the Society by Dr. Raymond E. Selders, to pay his 1938 dues, be accepted.

Then transfer card application.

Respectfully submitted by The Board of Censors of the Harris County Medical Society, A. T. Talley, John H. Foster, Clyde M. Warner.

Dr. Walter A. Coole, Secretary, Harris County Medical Society, 818 Hathaway Street, Houston, Texas

DEAR DOCTOR COOLE:

I have before me a carbon copy of your communication addressed to the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association under date of May 1, which will be referred at once to the Chairman of the Judicial Council.

I infer from a letter which I have received from Doctor Follansbee, Chairman of the Judicial Council, that he has communicated with Dr. A. T. Talley, Chairman of the Board of Censors of Harris County Medical Society. Doctor Follansbee informs me that he asked Doctor Talley to send him a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the Harris County Medical Society and a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the State Medical Association of Texas but that this material has not been received by him. I shall appreciate it very much if you will be good enough to send the copies of the constitutions and by-laws of the Harris County Medical Society and the State Medical Association of Texas to Doctor Follansbee, whose address is Dr. George Edward Follansbee, 629 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. I shall also appreciate it, if it is not too much trouble, if you will send copies of such constitutions and by-laws to me so that I may have them available for the next meeting of the Judicial Council to be held about June 12.

Very sincerely yours, Olin West.

District of Columbia:

To Whom It May Concern

I have known Dr. G. B. Trible for a number of years. He has treated and operated upon members of my family and friends, and patients I referred during this time. When I left the Veterans Bureau and started organizing the G. H. A. I naturally asked his advice and assistance, thinking that it could be organized along lines compatible with organized medicine. He stated he could not have anything to do with it, or anything else unless it met the full approval of the District Medical Society. He therefore did not at any time have any relations with the G. H. A. and at no time was a member of their staff, either as a regular member or consultant.

Later, after I resigned from that organization, he advised me to make my application to the District of Columbia Medical Society, and was one of my sponsors.

(Signed) Henry Roy Brown.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 17th day of May, 1938. Elsie M. Freeman, Notary Public, D. C. My commission expires Feb. 14, 1943.

Instructions to Applicants

This form of application is for the use of all applicants. Indicate the class application for license is applied for by checking appropriate section on first page of application.

1. Write legibly, and with ink. Avoid alterations and interlineations as far as possible; if any be made, have them duly attested by the notary or other officer before whom this application is executed.

2. This application must be accompanied by—

(a) Proof of good moral character.

(b) A diploma conferring upon the applicant the degree of doctor of medicine, or other degree in the healing art.

(c) The required fee as indicated under the class designation on the first page of application. This fee, if sent by mail, should be in the form of a post office money order, draft, or certified check, payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., stating the purpose to which it is to be applied.

(d) Recent, unmounted photograph, post card size.

Note.—Applicants applying for license who are already licensed in the District of Columbia, under the Act of June 3, 1896, are not required to submit diploma of degree conferred.

The diploma will be returned to the applicant when he appears for examination; or returned to him by express or registered mail, at his risk and cost, upon request, as soon as his application has been formally acted upon by the Commission on Licensure.

3. This application, properly executed, must have been filed with the Secretary-Treasurer of the Commission on Licensure not less than two weeks prior to the commencement of the examination at which the applicant desires to appear. The regular examinations begin on the second Monday in January and July of each year.

4. A notice of the time and place of examination will be mailed to each applicant not less than seven days before the commencement of such examination.

5. The Commission on Licensure may require such additional information as it may deem necessary. Especial attention is invited to the fact that any application not properly executed, or for any other irregularity, may be rejected.

6. When properly filled out and sworn to, this application should be forwarded to the Secretary-Treasurer, Commission on Licensure, Healing Arts Practice Act, District of Columbia, Room 203, District Building, Washington, D. C.

The meeting of the Medical Staff of the Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital was held at the Hospital, June 14, 1938 at 1:15 p. m. Dr. J. Burr Piggott, Acting Chief of Staff, presided.

This meeting was devoted to the election of officers for the coming year, and to take action upon reports of the committees. Dr. J. Burr Piggott, Acting Chief of Staff, continued as president of the staff, and the following members were elected to represent the Staff on the Executive Committee: Dr. C. C. Caylor, Dr. William G. Young, and Dr. Tomas Cajigas. Dr. Tomas Cajigas formally presented his resignation as Secretary of the Medical Staff, stating that because of the pressure of his practice he would not be able to devote much time to the duties of this position. Dr. Cajigas offered the name of Dr. J. Rogers Young as secretary and treasurer of the Staff, and this was seconded by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald. Dr. Young was unanimously elected Secretary for the coming year.

The report of the Credentials Committee was read by the Chairman of the Committee as follows: "The following is a list of the applications considered by this Committee and it is recommended that they be approved for membership on the Courtesy Staff:

Dr. Charles Marbury, Internal Medicine.
Dr. J. Lloyd Collins, General Surgery.
Dr. W. Calhoun Stirling, Urology.

Dr. William H. Beard, Obstetrics and Gynecology.
Dr. Robert Sterling McGrath, Allergy.
Dr. Ashby Wade Smith, General Medicine.
Dr. J. C. Pyles, General Medicine.
Dr. C. Edwin McNamara, General Surgery.

The application of Dr. Raymond E. Selders has been duly considered and it is the opinion of this Committee that the qualifications and experience of the applicant at this time are such that disapproval of the application is recommended." Signed: J. Rogers Young, Chairman, A. Magruder MacDonald, C. C. Caylor. The report was then discussed by Dr. MacDonald and Dr. William G. Young; it was voted to accept the report as read. Motion was made by Dr. Tomas Cajigas and seconded by Dr. MacDonald that the application of Dr. Thomas F. Law for membership on the Courtesy Staff be referred to the Washington Gynecological Society for recommendation. The regulations governing the admission of patients to Garfield Memorial Hospital upon the application of physicians and surgeons not members of the Courtesy Staff was read by the Secretary as follows:

"The word 'Emergency' is defined, for the purpose of the use of the facilities of the hospital by physicians and surgeons not admitted to the Courtesy Staff of the hospital, as some condition in which the life or safety of the patient is endangered, except for some immediate intervention by the physician involved in the way of first aid, as in the case of hemorrhage, asphyxia, or the like. In cases in which there is time for the formal posting of an operation the hospital holds that there is also time to secure the services of a surgeon who has been granted the surgical privileges of the hospital; and that course of action will hereafter be required upon application for the admission of any patient by a physician or surgeon not on the Courtesy Staff. Under the conditions stipulated, members of Group Health Association will be admitted to the Hospital just as any other person is admitted, subject to available space and the suitability of the patient in other respects. In the case of physicians and surgeons not members of the Courtesy Staff of the Hospital, the above will govern the admission of the patients of these physicians and surgeons." Signed: Francis J. Eisenman, M. D., Superintendent. Upon motion of Dr. MacDonald, seconded by Dr. Cajigas, it was voted to recommend to the Governing Body that a similar regulation be put into effect in this Hospital.

July 28, 1938.

Mr. Samuel H. Rogers
President, Board of Trustees
Eastern Dispensary & Casualty Hospital
Massachusetts Avenue at Eighth Street, N.E.
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. ROGERS:

In view of Justice Bailey's decision yesterday establishing the legality of Group Health Association, Inc., it is respectfully requested that Dr. Raymond E. Selders, a member of our staff, be admitted to the courtesy staff of Eastern Dispensary & Casualty Hospital, and that he may attend members of this Association admitted as patients there.

We shall appreciate the courtesy of an early reply.

Very truly yours, W. C. Kirkpatrick, President.

The Journal of the American Medical Association Proceedings of House of Delegates, AMA, June 10-14, 1935.

(Page 7)

The increasing circulation of The Journal, the innumerable references to its columns in medical and lay periodicals and in newspapers throughout the world, and the great number of letters received from subscribers testify to the almost universal appreciation of this publication. Several series of special articles, notably those on glandular therapy and on the therapy of the Cook County Hospital, have attracted special attention. Arrangements are being made to republish the first series in several foreign languages. The department of questions and answers has gradually assumed increasing significance as a source of reference for the general practitioner. Many comments indicate that its practical value is generally realized. The Journal continues to serve as the voice of the organized medical profession of the United States, reflecting not only scientific advancement but also the interest of the profession in medical education and medical economics.

The average number of copies of The Journal printed weekly during the year 1935 was 88,843. The net paid circulation, Dec. 31, 1935, was 89,179, an increase of 4,344 over the net paid circulation on a similar date in the previous year.

Bureau of Medical Economics

The Bureau of Medical Economics has been under a constant stress during the past year investigating economic problems, preparing reports for distribution to the medical profession and advising physicians throughout the country concerning special medical economic problems in various states. This was especially true concerning sickness insurance. During the latter part of 1934 and the first half of 1935 approximately 182,000 reprints of the Bureau of Medical Economics pertaining to sickness insurance were circulated through medical societies and individual physicians and a considerable number were sent directly to lay persons throughout the United States; this circulation was in addition to the articles published in The Journal and the Bulletin. (23) (51) (52)

(Page 23)

Relation of Medical Ethics and Medical Economics

Practically all economic transactions involve an ethical implication, good or bad. Many of the principles of medical ethics carry some economic implication.

Since ethics and economics seem to have a definite relationship, an endeavor has been made to set forth these relations in a report entitled "Economics and the Ethics of Medicine."

This report begins with a discussion of the ethics and economics of industry, business and commerce. This chapter is followed by an analysis of the Oath of Hippocrates, with some reference to the similarity of the wording of the oath in Greek, Arabic, Latin and East Indian. The development of medical ethics is then traced in modern times. A chapter is devoted to the medical group and the influence which ethical principles have exercised in cementing and maintaining physicians in an organized group.

The remainder of the report is devoted to an examination of the economic implications in the Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association. (24) (51) (52)

Cooperation with Council on Medical Education and Hospitals

Certain recommendations made in the last annual report of the Judicial Council and approved by the 1935 House of Delegates to the end that closer cooperation between the Judicial Council and the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals be developed have been complied with. The chairman attended a meeting of the Council, explained the need for closer study between the councils, and was assured that the desire of the House of Delegates would receive sympathetic compliance. The Judicial Council believes that the way thus has been opened for classification of and assistance in some of the problems of the general medical profession which come before it for advice, assistance and decision. (47) (48)

(Page 37)

Group Hospitalization

Group hospitalization and individual hospital insurance plans have been rapidly spreading during the last few years as an effort on the part of hospitals to collect full payment for the hospitalization of people of low income groups who in the past have been and in the future will otherwise be unable to pay their hospital costs. This effort has been accentuated by the recent increase in the numbers of such cases combined with a great reduction in hospital income from endowment funds and public contributions. It is an effort at self preservation and secondarily to fix responsibility on a group that during the depression has been rapidly growing among those who have little sense of personal responsibility and rather expect government or charity to care for their needs. Hospital insurance as an economic device now exists almost nationally and is spreading. The American Hospital Association and various state hospital association are actively promulgating it.

Whether the scheme is or is not financially or economically sound is not the problem of our organization, but it is our business to see that the furnishing of medical service is not included in the sale of insured hospital accommodations. This can be done if a strong stand is taken and maintained by the organized medical profession, which must keep a watchful eye to see that medical care is not initially or later included when the usual sales efforts demand increased benefits to purchasers. It is well known that at the present time independently of the hospital insurance movement various hospitals are invading the field of the practice of medicine, sometimes at and sometimes against the desire of the members of our profession involved in such instances. It would seem that in this time of extensive changes in hospital economics the point had arrived at which further marriages between hospitals and staff physicians that make the doctor of medicine the servant of the hospital should be stopped and a series of attempts at divorce among marriages that have already taken place should be instituted. Our accepted ethical principles are adequate at the present time and the cooperation of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals would be of invaluable assistance. It is not an impossible task but will need a militant local and national ethical spirit behind it and a frowning on those individuals in the profession who on personal grounds do not object to the gradual subjugation of the medical profession in the growth of hospital domination. (47) (48)

Report of Council on Medical Education and Hospitals

General Merritte W. Ireland, Washington, D. C., presented the following report of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals, which was referred to the Reference Committee on Medical Education: (45) (46)

To the Members of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association:

I. Resolutions of the House of Delegates

1. The House of Delegates at the Cleveland session adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals should be limited to members in good standing of their local county medical societies and that the House of Delegates requests the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take this under advisement.

The Council has brought this resolution to the attention of all hospitals approved for intern training and it is planned to check staff memberships in connection with all the inspections of hospitals engaged in training interns. In this manner the Council will ascertain to what extent hospitals have complied with the foregoing resolution. (45)

2. In its report at Atlantic City last year the Judicial Council referred to the improved methods of administering the Principles of Medical Ethics. It was stated that while each member of the American Medical Association, whether in hospitals, in universities, in clinics or in private practice, is at all times subject to the ethics of the profession, the hospital, university or clinic as an entity is not and that by concerted action between the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals and the Judicial Council many harmful and obnoxious practices would cease and others, not now presenting any large problem, would be prevented.

For the purpose of carrying out the recommendation of the House of Delegates, the secretary of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals has appeared before the Judicial Council and the chairman of the Judicial Council has met with the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals and it has been agreed that the latter council, in connection with its regular inspections, will secure such additional information regarding certain phases of hospital practice as may be requested by the Judicial Council. (45)

(Page 45)

Report of Reference Committee on Medical Education

Dr. George Blumer, Chairman, presented the following report:

Report of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals

1. Your committee approves the general principle that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved for intern training should be limited to members in good standing of their local county medical societies. (38)

2. Your committee commends the activities of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals in its attempt to improve the methods of administering the Principles of Medical Ethics in connection with the Judicial Council, as discussed in section 2 of its report. (38)

Dr. Blumer moved that the portion of the report of the reference committee dealing with the report of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals be adopted, and the motion was seconded by Dr. Arthur C. Morgan, Pennsylvania.

(Page 46)

The motion of Dr. Blumer to adopt the portion of the report of the reference committee dealing with the report of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals was then carried. (38-39) (45)

(Page 47)

5. Relative to the report of the Judicial Council, your committee notes that the recommendation of the Judicial Council at the last annual session suggesting a closer alliance between the Judicial Council and the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals has been complied with and that satisfaction has resulted from this cooperation. (36) (48)

Your committee considers that the invasion by hospitals of the field of the practice of medicine should be condemned as a violation of the fundamental rights of physicians and that it demands militant opposition to the end that such activities cease. (37) (48)

(Page 48)

Dr. Cary moved that section 5 of the report of the reference committee, referring to the report of the Judicial Council, be adopted. The motion was seconded by Dr. Arthur J. Bedell, New York, and carried. (36-38) (47)

(Page 51)

12. "Relation of Medical Ethics and Medical Economics": It is unfortunate that this material is not completed and ready for distribution at this time. Your committee commends this effort on the part of the Bureau of Medical Economics to call attention to the economic implications in the Principles of Medical Ethics. Although it is not stated that the Judicial Council has officially construed the various rules referred to in this discussion of the Principles of Medical Ethics, the committee understands that great care has been taken and advice has been had from the Council in determining that the implications set forth are sound in basis. Your committee recommends that as soon as this material is available it shall have broad distribution and shall be given study in the various component county societies, where the responsibility for the enforcement of ethical principles must reside. It must be recognized that unfair economic practice reflects on all and should be just as much a matter of interest to the component society as is other unethical practice. (23) (24) (52)

(Page 60)

Membership in County and State Associations for Members of Staffs of Hospitals

Dr. G. Henry Mundt, Illinois, asked that Dr. W. D. Cutter, Secretary of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals, be requested to address the House of Delegates with respect to the progress made in carrying out the provisions of a resolution adopted at the Cleveland session, which declared that members of approved hospital staffs should be members of component county and constituent state associations.

Dr. Cutter addressed the House, declaring that progress had been made in carrying out the purposes expressed in the resolution and explaining the difficulties that had been encountered. He expressed the opinion that it would require a considerable time to accomplish the desired ends but stated that the Council was in sympathy with the purposes of the resolution and would continue its efforts to secure the accomplishment of those purposes.

TO THE SUPERINTENDENT:

Pursuant to action of the Executive Committee, held on the evening of July 12, 1937, and in fulfilment of Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5 of the Constitution, your attention is hereby called to the list of organizations, groups and individuals herewith enclosed. The approved list is on file with the Secretary's Office. The amendment is now in force. Any violation thereof will make a member liable according to the provisions of the Constitution:

Chapter IX, Article IV, Sec. 5:

"No member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization, group or individual, by whatever name called or however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, which has not been approved by the Society.

"The Executive Committee is authorized and directed to prepare an approved list of organizations, groups and individuals, by whatever name called and however organized, engaged in the practice of medicine within the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof, and the same shall be kept in the office of the Secretary-Treasurer. Before any such organization, group or individual can be placed on the approved list of the Society, such organization, group or individual, or the member of the Society proposing professional relations therewith, shall submit to the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee such evidence as the Committee or the Society may require showing the character, activities, financial condition and ethical standards of said organization, group or individual, and after considering the same, said committee shall make a report of its investigation and findings to the Executive Committee for such action as it may deem necessary."

Very truly yours, C. B. Conklin, M.D., Secretary.

Gov. Ex. 635

1774

To the Staff of Misericordia Hospital, Milwaukee:

Our Hospital may be withdrawn from the list of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals, one of the apparent reasons being that the staff has not as yet adopted the following resolution of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association:

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that physicians on the staff of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals should be limited to members in good standing of their local County Medical Societies and that the House of Delegates requests the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take this under advisement."

Insofar as I, as superintendent of the Hospital am authorized by the by-laws to appoint a new staff at the beginning of each fiscal year, it becomes necessary for me to inform you at this time that on September 6, 1937 when the new appointments are made, I will be unable to include any members of the present staff who are not members in good standing of their County Medical Society.

I wish to recommend to the staff at this time, their consideration of an amendment to the by-laws at their annual meeting, whereby Section I of Article II (membership) be changed to read

"The applicant for membership shall be a graduate of a recognized medical school, legally licensed to practice in the State of Wisconsin and a member in good standing in his County Medical Society."

Sister Saint Emile, S.M., Superintendent of Hospital.

May 11, 1937.

Gov. Ex. 636

1776

July 18, 1936.

Sister St. Emile, Supt., Misericordia Hospital, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

My dear Sister:

It has come to our attention, through correspondence with the Medical Society of Milwaukee County, that certain physicians have been expelled from that society through participation in an organization known as "Milwaukee Medical Center." It is also reported that certain of these same individuals continue as members of your attending staff with hospital privileges.

May we call your attention to the recent resolution passed by the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association, as follows:

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals should be limited to members in good standing of their local county medical societies and that the House of Delegates requests the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take this under advisement."

What possibility, if any exists for observance of the principle laid down in this resolution?

Very truly yours,

Miss Elizabeth Woolson, R.N., Supt., St. Luke's Hospital, 230 W. Madison Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

My dear Miss Woolson:

It has come to our attention, through correspondence with the Medical Society of Milwaukee County, that certain physicians have been expelled from that society through participation in an organization known as "Milwaukee Medical Center." It is also reported that certain of these same individuals continue as members of your attending staff with hospital privileges.

May we call your attention to the recent resolution passed by the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association, as follows:

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals should be limited to members in good standing of their local county medical societies and that the House of Delegates requests the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take this under advisement."

What possibility, if any, exists for observance of the principle laid down in this resolution?

Very truly yours,

MY DEAR MR. MCKAY:

The Council on Medical Education and Hospitals, meeting on February 11, voted to withdraw approval for the training of interns at the Tampa Municipal Hospital. As a result of the changes which have recently been made in the organization of the medical staff, the Council is convinced that the hospital is no longer capable of fulfilling the requirements fixed by this Council and ratified by our House of Delegates.

DEAR DOCTOR KNUDSON:

We appreciate very much your continued interest in the work of the Council and your offer to assist us in obtaining full compliance with the resolution of the House of Delegates pertaining to staff appointments in hospitals approved for intern training. We are sending under separate cover the staff lists recently submitted by approved hospitals in Seattle and shall be glad to receive your notification of the number of staff physicians who are not members of the county medical society. Some of the hospitals failed to submit on the last information blank the names of physicians having staff privileges. We are writing for up-to-date staff lists and shall send them on to you at the earliest opportunity.

The information regarding county medical society membership will be particularly useful to us at this time since we are now contemplating a survey of the Seattle hospitals shortly after the American Medical Association convention in San Francisco. So far, it has not been necessary to take drastic action against any hospital on the basis of the membership resolution of the House of Delegates since prompt results have usually been obtained by less formidable action on the part of the Council.

We feel certain that the cooperation of the Kings County Medical Society will be of great help to the Council in this matter.

Very truly yours, —— ——.

Dr. D. L. Sprinkle, Supt., Tampa Municipal Hospital, Tampa, Florida

DEAR DOCTOR SPRINKLE:

Thank you for your letter of June 29 in which you invite the Council to send a representative to assist you in the solution of certain problems now confronting the Tampa Municipal Hospital.

It is unlikely that we can release one of our staff men now or in the near future since the field work is necessarily planned well in advance. You may be assured, however, that the Council desires to be kept informed as to what developments may take place. If later it seems desirable, a visit may be arranged.

The Council is well aware of the situation existing in Tampa between the Hillsborough County Medical Society and the doctors serving the Latin population through the fraternal clubs on contract bases. The position of the hospital has also been under the purview of the Council. A reasonable amount of time has elapsed during which a solution might have been effected. It appears now that a more definite stand must be taken.

You realize that the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals is carrying out the edict of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association which is here reiterated:

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals should be limited to members in good standing of their local county medical societies and that the House of Delegates requests the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take this under advisement."

I do not see that it is your problem or the problem of the American Medical Association to decide whether these clubs are essential under present-day economic conditions or may be dispensed with. The principle involved is one of unethical contract practice by members of your hospital staff. This is in conflict with the resolution as well as with your own staff constitution and by-laws.

No action for removal of the hospital from the approved list will be taken immediately and I believe the Council can see its way clear to carry the name of the Tampa Municipal Hospital in the forthcoming list to be printed in the Educational Number of The Journal A. M. A., August 27, 1938. If a satisfactory settlement cannot be made during the current year, the recognition of the hospital by the Council may be jeopardized.

Very truly yours, William D. Cutter.

DEAR DOCTOR RANKIN:

I have just received your letter of July 18 and I wish to thank you for inviting us to send a member of the Council's staff to help you in dealing with the problems confronting the Tampa Municipal Hospital. I regret that we cannot release a man at present and probably not in the near future. If it seems expedient a little later, it may be arranged.

It may be of interest to you to know that the superintendent of the hospital, Dr. Sprinkle, has sent a similar request. The Council, as you know, has observed for several years the developments in Tampa with regard to the clubs providing medical care for the Latin population. It is well aware of the attitude of the Hillsborough County Medical Society and its consistent efforts in behalf of the organized medical profession.

We have restated to Dr. Sprinkle that the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals is carrying out the resolution adopted by the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association with which you are familiar, that is:

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals should be limited to members in good standing of their local county medical societies and that the House of Delegates requests the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take this under advisement."

The Council is in a position to carry the name of the Tampa Municipal Hospital on the approved list which will be printed in the Educational Number of The Journal A. M. A., August 27, 1938, but if a satisfactory settlement cannot be reached during the current year, it may become necessary for the staff to submit a recommendation that the approval be withdrawn from this institution.

We would appreciate having a report from you from time to time as to just what transpires. Thank you for your interest in this matter.

Very truly yours, William D. Cutter.

DR. CUTTER:

In April and May 1936, the Medical Society of Milwaukee County tried five of its members on the charge of running the Milwaukee Medical Center, an unethical clinic, and expelled them from the Society. These men were:

A. L. Curtin
H. C. Dallwig
J. E. Rueth
G. A. Sullivan
H. F. Wolters.

They appealed to the Council of the Wisconsin State Medical Society which handed down a decision on September 8, 1936, confirming the order expelling the appellants from membership.

On July 18, 1936, we wrote to the hospitals of Milwaukee to find out whether any of these men were on their staffs. Follow-up letters were sent October 27.

Five of the hospitals replied that the expelled members were not in any way connected with their hospitals. These were:

Evangelical Deaconess Hospital
Columbia Hospital
Milwaukee Hospital
St. Luke's Hospital
St. Mary's Hospital.

Two reported that the expelled members had been required to resign:

Misericoria Hospital
St. Joseph's Hospital.

One hospital reported that action was being held in abeyance for fear of legal complications "until this matter is adjudicated." This was Mount Sinai Hospital.

Appellants

This matter involves appeals to this Council by the above-named members of the Medical Society of Milwaukee County and of the State Medical Society of Wisconsin from decisions of the Board of Directors of the Medical Society of Milwaukee County ordering the expulsion from membership in that society of each of the appellants.

A hearing on these appeals was held by the Council on June 27, 1936. The appeal brought before this body the record of the proceedings before the Board of Directors of the Milwaukee Society, such record consisting of a stenotype transcript of the proceedings and testimony there taken, together with original exhibits. A true copy of the transcript was furnished each member of the Council. Appellants were represented by counsel, Gerald P. Hayes, Esq., of Milwaukee, who presented their cause by printed brief and oral argument.

Appellants' contentions on appeal were based upon the record with one exception—that being to the effect that this body was disqualified as an appellate body by reason of the fact that the State Society retained counsel to render assistance to the Board of Directors of the Milwaukee Society. There is incorporated in this decision, by reference, the statement made by Mr. Crownhart, on June 27, 1936, in regard to this matter and in explanation of why counsel was retained. It is sufficient answer to appellants' contention to state that employment of counsel is in the routine duty of the Secretary, a duty concerning which the Council neither participates nor has knowledge. The Council, and each individual member, had in no manner participated in the proceedings before the Board of Directors. For such reasons, this body must deny the validity of appellants' contention in this respect.

It is the judgment of this body that the record of proceedings and exhibits discloses facts sufficient to sustain the decision of the Board and Directors of the Medical Society of Milwaukee County in this matter. The record further discloses strict compliance with the procedure required.

This Council therefore affirms the order expelling appellants from membership.

Most of the approved internship hospitals in Milwaukee have expressed their intention to limit privileges to physicians who are in good standing with the Milwaukee County Medical Society. In one instance a decision awaits final disposition by the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association.

Assuming therefore that such a regulation is incorporated in the staff by-laws of this fraction of the hospitals, non-members of the County Society would naturally be expected to hospitalize their patients in those institutions in Milwaukee otherwise accredited but not engaged in intern instruction along approved lines.

DEAR DOCTOR:

I have recently received from the Committee on Medical Education and Hospitals, new regulations governing the requirements of staff membership of all recognized Hospitals.

The foremost requirement in this respect is membership in the local County Medical Society. This requirement is mandatory of all staff members—if the hospital is to maintain its rating and be eligible for intern training.

The by-laws of Miserlicordia Hospital (Milwaukee) require reappointment of staff members at the beginning of the fiscal year, which is Sept. 6, 1937. It is my imperative duty to inform you that I will make the new appointments in strict conformity with the A. M. A. regulations, and I earnestly request you to conform to the requirements as stated above.

Will you kindly reply to this request, stating your intentions, at your earliest convenience?

GENTLEMEN:

In view of certain questions which have arisen recently in the Milwaukee County Medical Society, I am writing to know what the Committee's action would be in the following case.

Suppose I felt that I should like to resign for various reasons from the Milwaukee County Medical Society would that automatically sever my connections with certain hospital staff appointments which I have, or if I did not voluntarily sever my connection would the hospitals be compelled to deny to me the use of the hospitals because I was no longer a member of the County Society?

I should appreciate an opinion from you.

MR. SANGER:

My reaction on the Milwaukee situation is as follows:

Would it not be best as a first step to determine whether any of the expelled members of the Milwaukee County Medical Society are at present connected in any capacity with approved internship hospitals, without incorporating any definite threat?

It has been my contention that if any action is taken against these hospitals it be not on the basis of membership in the county society but on the basis of unethical practitioners, a violation of the "Essentials in a Registered Hospital."

My reason is that if we invoke the resolution of the House of Delegates, and if we treated all Milwaukee hospitals alike, there would only be one approved internship hospital left in the city, namely, The Passavant.

MY DEAR SISTER:

The enclosure is a copy of Dr. F. H. Arestad's report on the present organization of your teaching program for interns. Kindly submit this statement to your intern committee and other staff members interested in and responsible for the training which your house officers receive.

The satisfactory character of statements made about the internship program indicates that full approval continues to be merited. We are somewhat more dubious about continuing the approval for a residency in medicine since, in our opinion, the present occupant is not entirely on an educational basis in view of his special administrative duties and the length of time he has served.

If it seems desirable to supplement this report in any way, please communicate with us. The next meeting of the Council for discussion of approved hospitals takes place in February.

May we also call your attention to a recent resolution passed by the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association:

RESOLVED, That it is the opinion of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals should be limited to members in good standing of their local county medical societies and that the House of Delegates requests the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take this under advisement.

On November 22, 1937, our Committee addressed a communication to you advising you of our investigation concerning Dr. Allan E. Lee and Dr. M. Our Committee is today in receipt of a letter from Dr. Allan E. Lee, advising us that he has resigned from the staff of Group Health Association. Inasmuch as our recommendation respecting Dr. Lee was based upon the fact that he had entered into a contract with Group Health Association and that contract has now been terminated by him, we feel that no further action should be taken with respect to Dr. Lee.

We, therefore, respectfully request that the charges and recommendations against Dr. Lee, embodied in our communication of November 22, 1937, be withdrawn and that appropriate action be taken by your committee thereon.

My acceptance of the opportunity to identify myself with this organization was made only after the most careful consideration on my part.

In response to your letter of the 10th instant, wherein I have been charged by your Committee with having violated the provisions of Sections 1 & 2 of Article III of Chapter IX and Section 5 of Article IV of Chapter IX of the Constitution of the Society, you are advised as follows:

1. Your letter or notice of November 4, 1937, was disregarded because of the fact that, prior to that date, I had sent to the Society my resignation from membership; consequently I considered further response unnecessary.

2. Since that time, however, I have withdrawn my said resignation, and, considering myself in good standing in the Society, I have intended and do intend to comply fully with the rules of the body. No formal contract has been entered into with the Group Health Association, but when the terms of the contract are finally agreed upon and reduced to writing, I fully intend to submit same for approval under the rules of the Medical Society.

While it is not my thought that I have, either in letter or spirit, violated any of the rules of the Society, and believing that charges thereof are premature, I hereby request a full and complete hearing, in accordance with your letter of November 10th, on the charges made, to the end that I may have ample opportunity, in person and by counsel, to defend against all charges so made. It is my request that said hearing be fixed at a date not earlier than fifteen (15) days hence in order that ample opportunity may be had for a full and complete presentation of the matter.

MY DEAR CUTTER:

The facts below just came to my knowledge and I am going to drop them on your desk. It may be old stuff to you people around headquarters.

The early part of the week a couple of men from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation (H.O.L.C.) visited the Surgeon General of the Army to say that they wanted to obtain the services of a doctor to look out for the health of their personnel, which incidently is quite large. After the consultation, the Surgeon General asked Colonel Glenn Jones, a retired medical officer, to visit these people. After this visit which lasted for a period of two or three hours, Jones telephoned to the Surgeon General to the effect that this was nothing but an entering wedge to the establishment of state medicine and so far as he could make out the Twentieth Century Finance Corporation of New York City was going to pay the expenses of this so-called medical care for the personnel of the H.O.L.C. Needless to say, Jones and the Surgeon General are dropping it like a hot cake.

Just treat this information as though it blew in your window as I don't want to be the person to embarrass the Surgeon General if there should be any embarrassment. Some of the prominent doctors in Washington are going to be wised up.

With best wishes,

Faithfully yours, (Signed) M. W. Ireland.

DEAR DR. WOODWARD:

I am writing this semi-officially, as chairman of the Economic Committee of the District of Columbia Medical Society to you, as chairman of the Legislative Council of the A. M. A. We are faced with a new problem which would seem to be more far-reaching than a purely local difficulty. Our immediate concern is local but two factors make it national a concern.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation has organized a Cooperative undertaking called Group Health Association, Inc. They propose to have their own set-up for medical care of themselves and families with full time personnel. A Doctor Brown, formerly of the Veterans Bureau, has been appointed medical director with a reputed salary of $8,000.00. He is at present trying to organize a staff.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation has about 2,000 employees here and a number of regional offices through the country. This is not a great deal in itself but we are informed that this undertaking is financed by a government loan, that the President has given his approbation and is so interested in it that if successful he plans to recommend similar organizations through all the Departments.

You, knowing conditions in Washington, will realize that if this movement should spread to the ultimate, the private practice of medicine would be practically destroyed and it is conceivable that the experiment started here would spread through the entire country as it is entirely in line with what the President is said to want.

We feel that two of the factors mentioned above bring this problem directly to the door of the A. M. A. I am asking if you can come here to confer with us and advise us as to best methods of approach. Coming as close to the meeting at Atlantic City it seems as if the present were a very opportune time.

With kindest regards, I am

Sincerely yours, J. Russell Verbrycke, Jr.

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia

Decided June 15, 1942

Messrs. Seth W. Richardson and William E. Leahy, with whom Messrs. Edward M. Burke, Charles S. Baker and Warren E. Magee were on the brief, for appellant in each case.

Messrs. John Henry Lewin and Grant W. Kelleher, Special Assistants to the Attorney General, with whom Assistant Attorney General Arnold and Messrs. E. Compton Timberlake and Walton S. Allen were on the brief, for appellee in each case.

Mr. Edward M. Curran, United States Attorney, also entered an appearance for appellee in each case.

Before MILLER, RUTLEDGE and MARTIN, Associate Justices.

MILLER, Associate Justice: In United States v. American Medical Association,[1] we held that the term "in restraint of trade" as used in Section 3 of the Sherman Act had its genesis in the common law; that the practice of medicine was recognized by the English cases as constituting trade; that a restraint imposed upon the practice of medicine may constitute a restraint of trade; that restraints imposed upon the operation of hospitals and upon Group Health Association, designed to prevent it from making available to and financing medical services on behalf of its members may constitute restraint of trade; that the indictment under which appellants were charged stated a case under Section 3 of the Sherman Act. Accordingly, we held that the indictment was sufficient as against a demurrer; we reversed a judgment of the District Court, which had sustained a demurrer, and remanded the case for trial. Upon the trial which followed and at the close of the Government's case the court directed verdicts of acquittal for two unincorporated associations and two individual defendants. Thereafter the jury convicted the appellants and acquitted all other defendants. Appeals from the judgment of the District Court, based upon these convictions, were consolidated for hearing in this court.

On this appeal it is suggested that the Supreme Court, in Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader,[2] repudiated the doctrine stated in our earlier decision; hence that we should reconsider and abandon the position which we there took. But we see no reason to adopt the suggestion which, apparently, grew out of appellants' failure to distinguish between trade and restraint of trade. Appellants' confusion is evidenced by the following statement from their brief: "The Apex case held in substance and effect that no activity could be in 'trade' unless it was a commercial activity and exercised and used in such a way as to affect the market either by fixing prices or suppressing competition in the market to the injury of the public." Of course the Court did not so hold, nor has any court ever so held. Most activities which are in trade serve, rather than injure, the public.

In the Apex case,[3] no question was involved as to whether the petitioner was engaged in trade or commerce. The opening sentence of the opinion states, as an undisputed fact: "Petitioner, a Pennsylvania corporation, is engaged in the manufacture, at its factory in Philadelphia, of hosiery, a substantial part of which is shipped in interstate commerce." Neither was the Court in doubt as to whether trade or commerce was affected by the actions complained of.[4] The question which was presented for its decision was whether the conduct of the labor union and its members constituted restraint of trade, within the meaning of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.[5]

In answering this question the Court, first, restated the familiar common law doctrines relating to contracts and combinations in restraint of trade and the equally familiar history of the taking over, by the Sherman Act, of the common law concept of illegal restraints.[6] It then concluded that (1) the Sherman Act does not condemn all combinations and conspiracies which interrupt interstate transporta-

[4] Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, 484: "Cessation of petitioner's manufacturing operations, which respondents compelled, indubitably meant the cessation of shipment interstate. The effect upon the commerce resulted naturally and inevitably from the cause. The occupancy of petitioner's factory by the strikers prevented the shipment of the substantial amount of merchandise on hand when the strike was called. In point of the immediacy of the effect of the strikers' acts upon the interstate transportation involved and of its volume, the case does not differ from many others in which we have sustained the Congressional exercise of the commerce power."

[5] Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, 487, 490: ". . . the question to which we must address ourselves is whether a conspiracy of strikers in a labor dispute to stop the operation of the employer's factory in order to enforce their demands against the employer is the kind of restraint of trade or commerce at which the Act is aimed * * *. Since in the present case, as we have seen, the natural and predictable consequence of the strike was the restraint of interstate transportation the precise question which we are called upon to decide is whether that restraint resulting from the strike maintained to enforce union demands by compelling a shutdown of petitioner's factory is the kind of 'restraint of trade or commerce' which the Act condemns." tion;[7] (2) labor unions are to some extent and in some circumstances subject to the Act;[8] but (3) it does not apply to all labor union activities affecting interstate commerce;[9] (4) the evil at which the Sherman Act was aimed was the control of the market "by suppression of competition in the marketing of goods and services . . .";[10] (5) the end sought was the prevention of "restraints to free competition in business and commercial transactions which tended to restrict production, raise prices or otherwise control the market to the detriment of purchasers or consumers of goods and services . . .";[11] and, finally (6) "Restraints on competition or on the course of trade in the merchandising of articles moving in interstate commerce is not enough, unless the restraint is shown to have or is intended to have an effect upon prices in the market or otherwise to deprive purchasers or consumers of the advantages which they derive from free competition."[12]

The trade or commerce which was involved in the present case was of three kinds: (1) The making available and financing of medical and hospital services; (2) medical service itself, i.e., service rendered by medical doctors; (3) hospital service, i.e., service rendered by hospital staffs and the use of hospital facilities. As we indicated in our earlier opinion the common law recognized the practice of medicine as being trade[13] and there is nothing in the Apex case to suggest the contrary. It may be regrettable that Congress chose to take over in the Sherman Act the common law concept of trade, at least to the extent of including therein the practice of medicine. Developments which have taken place during recent decades in the building up of standards of professional education and licensure, together with self-imposed standards of discipline and professional ethics, have, in the belief of many persons, resulted in substantial differences between professional practices and the generally accepted methods of trade and business. As we pointed out in our earlier decision,[14] the American Medical Association and other local medical associations have undoubtedly made a profound contribution to this development. However, our task is not to legislate or declare policy in such matters but, rather, to interpret and apply standards and policies which have been declared by the legislature. That Congress did use the common law test there is no doubt. That Congress was not otherwise advised was perhaps because of the failure of the professional groups to insist upon the distinction and to secure its legislative recognition. In any event, there is no doubt that Group Health Association was engaged in trade or commerce, within the meaning of the applicable section of the statute.[15] It is not necessary, in order to constitute trade or business, that it shall be carried on for profit.[16] Appellants protest that the District Court has said in Group Health Association v. Moor:[17] "The actions of the plaintiff [G.H.A.] in no way tend to commercialize the practice of medicine." They argue from this that the activities of Group Health Association were not commercial activities and hence not in trade within the meaning of the Sherman Act. But this argument misses the point. The activities of Group Health Association are commercial, but because the lay executives of Group Health Association do not in any way interfere with the professional work of the medical doctors, their commercial activities do not tend to commercialize the practice of medicine. Medical doctors have long conceded the propriety of medical services furnished by large industrial organizations, to their employees, by doctors also in their employ.[18] There is no greater incongruity in the making available of medical services by a cooperative association or a nonprofit mutual benefit association, in similar manner; nor any more reason for suggesting that such industrial organizations are not engaged in commercial activities. In each case the service is rendered in accordance with the standards Certain industrial situations arise wherein large employers of labor are compelled by law to provide medical services for their employees under certain conditions, and this at times can be secured only by some form of contract."; Laufer, Ethical and Legal Restrictions on Contract and Corporate Practice of Medicine, 6 LAW AND CONTEMP. of the profession and to that extent uncontrolled by the corporate employer.[19] But, at the same time, the salaries of such professional employees may undoubtedly be paid by the corporation and charged as an ordinary and necessary expense of business.[20] Although there is authority for the proposition that for some purposes charitable hospitals are not engaged in trade, business or industry,[21] we have no doubt that the hospitals described in the indictment were engaged in trade and commerce within the meaning of the common law and of the Sherman Act.[22]

So far as Group Health and the hospitals are concerned, therefore, their activities are properly described as business and commercial in character. There is also no question that commercial and business competition was not only the possible but the probable result of Group Health's activities. Consequently—entirely apart from any direct restraint upon the practice of medicine itself—if a conspiracy was shown, the purpose of which was to restrain competition, raise prices, or otherwise control the market to the detriment of purchasers or consumers of medical or hospital services, by destroying or injuring Group Health Association, it was sufficient to sustain the conviction.

The fact of commercial and business competition is the predominant note in the controversy which preceded the initiation of criminal prosecutions in this case.[23] One of the major purposes of Group Health

[22] In Jordan v. Tashiro, 278 U. Nissen, 173 N. C. 359, 364, 91 S. E. 1036, 1038: "The establishment and conduct of hospitals for pay is now a recognized and established business." In Armendares v. Hotel Dieu, Tex. Civ. App., 145 S. W. 1030, 1031, it was held that in so far as a hospital accepted paying patients for the purpose of obtaining revenue to carry on its charitable work, it was carrying on a business.

[23] The identification of "fair competition" with ethical principles is expressed in the Principles of Medical Ethics of the American Medical Association and in the Constitution of the District Medical Society.

Chapter III, Article VI of the Principles of Medical Ethics reads in part as follows:

"Conditions of Medical Practice. Section 2. It is unprofessional for a physician to dispose of his services under conditions that make it impossible to render adequate service to his patient or which interfere with reasonable competition among the physicians of a community. . . .

Association was to provide low-cost medical service, on a prepayment basis.[24] Appellants, in fact, recognize the existence of a controversy concerning this question. They requested an instruction in which

Chapter IX, Article III, Section 1 of the Constitution reads as follows: "It is unprofessional for a physician to dispose of his services under conditions that make it impossible to render adequate service to his patient or which interfere with reasonable competition among the physicians of a community." [Italics supplied]

These provisions were utilized for purposes of disciplinary action against members of the District Medical Society employed by Group Health. Thus, the expulsion of Dr. Scandiffio, a member of the Group Health staff, from the District Medical Society followed a finding of the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee that he was guilty of violating Sections 1 and 2, Article III, and Section 5, Article IV, all of Chapter IX of the Constitution of the Society. That this disciplinary action against members of the Society was intended to affect Group Health Association is shown by the letter of December 10, 1937, sent by the Chairman of the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee of the Society to its Executive Committee which reads as follows: "On November 22nd, 1937, our committee addressed a communication to you advising you of our investigation concerning Drs. Allan E. Lee and M. Scandiffio, and recommended that they be expelled as members of the Society because of their violation of Section 1, Article III, Chapter 9, and Section 5, Article IV, Chapter 9, of the Constitution of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia. Our committee is today in receipt of a letter from Dr. Allan E. Lee, advising us that he has resigned from the staff of Group Health Association. Inasmuch as our recommendation respecting Dr. Lee was based upon the fact that he had entered into a contract with Group Health Association and that contract has now been terminated by him, we feel that no further action should be taken with respect to Dr. Lee. We therefore, respectfully request that the charges and recommendations against Dr. Lee, embodied in our communication of November 22, 1937, be withdrawn and that appropriate action be taken by your committee thereon."

It is shown, also, by the letter of the same Chairman to Dr. Lee under date of December 21, 1937: "In acknowledgement of your letter of December 10, in which you enclose a copy of your resignation as a member of the medical staff of Group Health Association, Inc., may I say that upon receipt of same the Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee appeared before the Executive Committee and requested a withdrawal of its charges against you, which request was granted. Such action places your status as that of a member now in good standing."

The concern of the defendants Association and Society with the effect of Group Health on the economic status of the medical profession, and upon competition in financing and making available medical and hospital services, is abundantly illustrated by articles and statements of officers and members thereof. An article, appearing in the Journal of the American Medical Association for October 2, 1937, reads in part as follows: "Out of a total population of 486,869 in the District of Columbia, 115,912 are civil employees of the United States government, and, of these, 2,517 are employees of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its affiliated agencies. If to these persons, all of whom are eligible for membership in Group Health Association, their dependents are added, allowing an average of two dependents for each employee, a total of 347,736 persons is reached, out of a total population of 486,869 that the promoters of Group Health Association, according to their certificate of incorporation, seek to withdraw from the ordinary practice of medicine and to cover into a group health insurance contract practice system and treat through physicians hired for that purpose. The effect of the withdrawal from private practice of even one-half that number of persons, all of whom are able to pay for medical services, will materially disturb medical practice in the District of Columbia and react against public interest. * * * The scheme is so planned that the richer and more liberally paid employees are to obtain medical service at rates based on the incomes of the poorest employees. The courts have repeatedly held that the value of medical services rendered to a patient may be properly appraised in relation to his wealth, just as the value of legal services are commonly appraised in relation to the value of the interests that the lawyer is called on to protect, whether interests involving the life of his client or his client's property. Under the present scheme, fees that are charged for medical services to the richer and more liberally paid employees are to be identical with those charged employees of the lowest grade, doing part-time work."

The author of this article, who was one of the individual defendants, was Director of the Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation of the American Medical Association from 1922 to 1939, when he retired. He holds degrees both of law and of medicine. He was called as a witness by appellants and developed the theme of the article further as follows:

"If GHA expanded its activities to a point where it took over a substantial part of the people of the District of Columbia—rich and poor alike,—the United States Government subsidizing its services—it is quite obvious that the various doctors in the District of Columbia, with their plants, with their experience, and everything else, would not be able to compete on a fair, honest basis; and that is when medical practice would be broken down by the subsidized practice, tending to destroy the medical profession."

The record reveals other similar statements of which the following are examples: "I think it would be exceedingly unfortunate to stabilize the income of the medical profession, because there is just as much difference in the qualifications of doctors as there is in the qualifications of stenographers. Some of them can do it and some of them are rotten. * * * It would be unfortunate to stabilize the pay of doctors."

". . . let us . . . consider what would happen in the District of Columbia provided you were able to obtain the maximum of enrollment in this corporation. . . . you see what it would do here as an economic thing. * * * It would simply result in the necessary exodus of a large part of the medical profession of the District of Columbia, . . ."

". . . Quite naturally, however, the organized profession is insisting upon not being forced by misguided or unfair competition to give up any of its rightful prerogatives."

"The question has many implications. . . . About all the outside doctor would have to do would be to take care of the indigent and the riff-raff and the members who had been dropped by the club."

"Dr. McGovern said that he looked upon this Group Health Association movement as an organization coming in and interfering with his business. He added that he expected to be in practice for some 20 years and he did not propose, if it could be avoided at all, to have an organization such as was proposed to interfere with his work and income. 'Just what are you fellows going to do about it?' He cited the instance of the musicians who had succeeded in preventing the Marine Band from cutting in on their business in playing before assemblies without cost to the sponsors. . . . The lawyers as a group had prevented inroads in their business. 'It just doesn't seem that we are active in preventing the National Government from entering the practice of medicine and interfering with our business. It should be demanded from the American Medical Association that they send a man down here now and see just what could be done.'" [Italics supplied]

". . . corporation practice of medicine . . . in the District of Columbia threatens to have a far reaching and deleterious effect on the private practice of medicine."

". . . one is compelled to wonder what will become of the private practice of medicine in those centers if the government is to subsidize cut-rate medical schemes. . . ."

Maintenance of "free and fair competition" was the theme of defendants' request for instruction No. 31, refused by the trial court which read in part:

competition is revealed by the following statement in their Reply Brief.: "Appellants insist that the origin of GHA is traceable directly to the Twentieth Century Fund, its subsidiary corporations, and others whose purpose was to destroy the private practice of medicine in the District . . . and to establish corporate practice of medicine." If, as appellants thus contend, they believed that the purpose of the Twentieth Century Fund and the purpose of GHA was to destroy the private practice of medicine in the District, by establishing corporate practice of medicine, obviously, the bitterest kind of competition in making available medical and hospital service was under way. If the purpose of appellants was to prevent such competition by the destruction of GHA, obviously that purpose was to restrain trade.[26]

" . . . the defendants were entitled, both collectively and individually, to adopt and carry out reasonable regulations in professional practice for the purpose of maintaining free and fair competition in the District of Columbia and . . . any restraints caused thereby upon Group Health Association, Inc., its doctors, members or operations, without more, would not violate the Sherman Act."

[24] Group Health Association is described in the indictment as follows: "33. Group Health Association, Inc., was incorporated on February 19, 1937, and authorized to do business under and by virtue of the laws of Congress for the District of Columbia. Said corporation is a non-profit, cooperative association of employees of certain departments in the executive branch of the United States Government employed in the District of Columbia. Most members of Group Health Association, Inc., are embraced within the low income group, over 80% of them earning annual incomes of not more than $2,000. Said corporation is engaged in the District of Columbia in the business of arranging for the provision of medical care and hospitalization to its members and their dependents on a risk sharing prepayment basis. Said corporation collects monthly payments in the form of dues from its members. Medical care is provided by a medical staff consisting of salaried general practitioners and specialists engaged in group practice under the sole direction of a medical director. Said corporation pays adequate salaries to the doctors on its medical staff and provides the medical staff with a modern, well equipped clinic, which was opened on November 1, 1937. Said corporation also defrays, within limits, the expenses of hospitalization of its members and their dependents. The personal relationship ordinarily existing between doctor and patient obtains between the doctors on the medical staff of Group Health Association, Inc. and their Group Health Association, Inc. patients."

[25] "Evidence has been permitted in this case with respect to the public need or lack of need of so-called low-cost medicine. I charge you that any need, or lack of need, for a low-cost medicine plan, has nothing to do with the right of the defendants to exercise their lawful powers and duties in connection with the practice of the medical profession. The rights of Group Health Association, Inc. are no greater because of an alleged need for low-cost medicine, than if no such need existed. Group Health Association, Inc. had a lawful right to disapprove of what it may have thought was the attitude of the defendants toward low-cost medicine plans, just as the defendants had an equal right to disapprove of what the defendants thought was the attitude of Group Health Association, Inc. with respect to low-cost medicine plans. Each party to the controversy had the right to further and advance its own opinion in the controversy by all methods of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument whether applied to members of the medical profession, the Washington hospitals, or the public. Refused. J. M. P."

[26] That appellants' attack on Group Health was for the purpose of restraining competition is admitted, by implication, also in their opening brief: " . . . that a corporation known as the Twentieth Century Fund with assets of approximately $3,500,000, and whose main objective was to actively promote the organization of group payment agencies, i. e., organizations through which groups of people might obtain all-around medical and hospital care in return for some fixed periodic payments, was subsidizing GHA and enabling it to sell medical services

The important question is, therefore, whether the methods used constituted improper restraints of competition, within the meaning of the statute in the trade or commerce of financing and making available all or any of the three several services to which reference has been made. And, as the prosecution in the present case is under Section 3 of the Act no question of the interstate character of that trade or commerce is involved. Appellants urge a number of contentions to negate unlawful restraint. The first of these is that the controversy here involved is a labor dispute; hence that appellants are excluded from the operation of the Sherman Act, by virtue of provisions of the Clayton Act and of the Norris-LaGuardia Act.

Presumably appellants' contention casts medical doctors in the role of laborers; Group Health in the role of employer; and themselves in the role of labor organizations, or perhaps in a role comparable to that of the New Negro Alliance;[27] all this on the assumption that medical practice, the furnishing of medical services and the furnishing of hospital services, come within the common law definition of trade; with the consequence, they argue, that a controversy arising between these three groups, or any two of them, concerns "terms or conditions of employment, or . . . the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing, or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment, . . ."[28] That medical doctors, lawyers, teachers and other professional people can be and are employed there is no doubt. Some professional or pseudo-professional groups have organized themselves into unions. Medical societies and bar associations are sometimes referred to by laboring people as "doctors' unions" and "lawyers' unions." But after all it is a labor dispute which is the subject of definition and application in these Acts. Although, in the broader sense, all forms of mental and physical exertion may be called labor, even including attendance at a symphony concert or the labor of childbirth; and, although a dispute concerning any form of such labor might perhaps be called a labor dispute, the purpose of Congress seems to have been to describe a more limited range of activity.[29]

The Committee Reports on the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts indicate that the legislation was enacted in contemplation of disputes between workingmen,[30] or wage earners,[31], or laborers,[32] on the one hand, and aggregated capital, commonly in corporate form, on the other. A physician is not a workman[33] or a laborer,[34] as those words are known to the law, and his compensation is not wages.[35]

The matrix of the controversy must be the employer-employee relationship,[36] although the disputants need not stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee.[37] If physicians employed on the contract basis in industrial medicine should form associations for collective bargaining they might, perhaps, fairly be said to come within the operation of the Norris-LaGuardia and Clayton Acts.[38] Or if the laity were so dominantly organized into consumer cooperatives that it might properly be said of the physician, as of the individual unorganized worker, that he is "commonly helpless . . . to obtain acceptable terms and conditions of employment, . . ." or protection "from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, . . ."[39] then possibly the two Acts would be applicable.[40] But, under the actual facts of the present case, even the contracting physicians occupy no such position. For a fixed sum they assumed to render services when needed.[41] In the rendering of those services, when needed, they are not subject to supervision by the Association.[42] Originally independent contractors, they do not lose that status by contracting to perform unsupervised services.[43]

In our opinion, therefore, neither the Clayton Act nor the Norris-LaGuardia Act was intended to cover such a controversy as existed in the present case. The carefully chosen language of the Hutcheson case[44] seems particularly significant in this respect: "The Norris-LaGuardia Act reasserted the original purpose of the Clayton Act by infusing into it the immunized trade union activities as redefined by the later Act. In this light § 20 removes all such allowable conduct from the taint of being a 'violation of any law of the United States,' including the Sherman Law. * * * It was precisely in order to minimize the difficulties to which the general language of the Sherman Law in its application to workers had given rise, that Congress cut through all the tangled verbalisms and enumerated concretely the types of activities which had become familiar incidents of union procedure."[45] [Italics supplied] In the Hutcheson case the Court expressly distinguished the situation in which a union acts, not in its own self-interest, but in combination for other purposes, with nonlabor groups.[46] It cited as an example United States v. Brims.[47] In the latter case it was held that a conspiracy of manufacturers of millwork, building contractors a[illegible] union carpenters, to check competition from nonunion made m[illegible] work was a violation of the Sherman Act; the conspiracy agreement being that the manufacturers and contractors would employ only union carpenters, who in turn would refuse to install the nonunion millwork. And, in contrast, the Court, in the Hutcheson case, also said: "Clearly, then, the facts here charged constitute lawful conduct under the Clayton Act unless the defendants cannot invoke that Act because outsiders to the immediate dispute also shared in the conduct."[48] [Italics supplied] This, it would seem, was also the situation in the New Negro Alliance case.[49] Assuming a bona fide labor dispute, the participation of a non-labor organization therein should not, without more, deprive it of its character as a labor dispute; give it the character of criminal conduct; or authorize judicial restraint except in compliance with the limitations of the Norris-LaGuardia Act.

But, under the circumstances of the present case, appellants cannot escape the proscriptions of the Sherman Act even if we assume that the controversy was a labor dispute. As we have already noticed, the

S. C. § 1, is the question. * * * The Norris-LaGuardia Act removed the fetters upon trade union activities, which according to judicial construction § 20 of the Clayton Act had left untouched, by still further narrowing the circumstances under which the federal courts could grant injunctions in labor disputes. More especially, the Act explicitly formulated the 'public policy of the United States' in regard to the industrial conflict, and by its light established that the allowable area of union activity was not to be restricted, as it had been in the Duplex case, to an immediate employer-employee relation. Therefore, whether trade union conduct constitutes a violation of the Sherman Law is to be determined only by reading the Sherman Law and § 20 of the Clayton Act and the Norris-LaGuardia Act as a harmonizing text of outlawry of labor conduct." Supreme Court plainly indicated in the Apex case[50] that some phases of labor disputes may come under the condemnation of the Sherman Act; if, for example, they involve a combination or conspiracy which has as its purpose restraint upon competition, or if the labor organization is used by combinations of those engaged in an industry as the means or instrument for suppressing competition or fixing prices.[51] In the Apex case the Sherman Act was held to be inapplicable because it did not appear that the strikers' acts were intended to restrain competition or that they had any effect on market prices of goods or services.[52] But that was not the situation of the present case.

Appellants reassert—in support of their contention that their conduct was not in restraint of trade—a proposition urged on the earlier appeal, that their conduct was no more than a reasonable regulation of the practice of medicine; and they rely upon the language of our earlier opinion: "If there is any justification for the restraint, so as to make it reasonable as a regulation of professional practice, it must be shown in evidence as a defense . . . ."[53] But in that same opinion—after recognizing the large and beneficent part which appellants have played in raising the standards of medical practice, and in contributing to the relief of the unfortunate and destitute—we also said: "Notwithstanding these important considerations, it cannot be admitted that the medical profession may through its great medical societies, either by rule or disciplinary proceedings, legally effectuate restraints as far reaching as those now charged."[54] And we did not, by any means, declare the law to be—as appellants now assert—that a conspiracy "entered into with the object of properly and fairly regulating the practice of medicine, . . ." was not a violation of the Sherman Act. The prayer for instruction which appellants requested upon this point was contradictory on its face and was properly refused. Under no circumstances could the commission of crime be justified as a reasonable regulation of professional practice.[55]

[55] In Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 615-616, upon which appellants rely, the law was stated in the following terms: "Where the subject-matter of the agreement does not directly relate to and act upon and embrace interstate commerce, and where the undisputed facts clearly show that the purpose of the agreement was not to regulate, obstruct or restrain that commerce, but that it was entered into with the object of properly and fairly regulating the transaction of the business in which the parties to the agreement were engaged, such agreement will be upheld as not within the statute, where it can be seen that the character and terms of the agreement are well calculated to attain the purpose for which it was formed, and where the effect of its formation and enforcement upon interstate trade or commerce is in any event but indirect and incidental, and not its purpose or object."

The wide scope of appellants' contention concerning their power to effect a reasonable regulation of the practice of medicine is revealed by proposed instructions and by their arguments on brief which seem to assume for them powers of a state legislature to enact and enforce laws to require improvement of standards of professional practice. Thus they rely upon such cases as Semler v. Oregon State Board of Dental Examiners[56] and Graves v. Minnesota,[57] which involved the constitutionality of state statutes and in each of which the statute was upheld on the ground that it constituted a reasonable exercise of the police power of the state. Needless to say, appellants have no such power.

The situation which confronts appellants, and which they have sought to control, is not confined to the medical profession alone. Profound changes in social and economic conditions have forced members of all professional groups to make readjustments. The fact that these changes may result even in depriving professional people of opportunities formerly open to them does not justify or excuse their use of criminal methods to prevent changes or to destroy new institutions. Lawyers, too, have seen, during recent decades, large scale changes in their professional work.[58] There was a time when lawyers worked entirely on fee or retainer in particular cases and controversies; now many of them are salaried employees on the staffs of large corporate industrial and financial organizations. Many of the simpler functions of business which once required the assistance of lawyers are now the routine work of better educated and more highly skilled business men; some of them law school graduates. Recent legislation has had the effect of removing from the field of judicial controversy and determination, a large percentage of cases which at an earlier time constituted the mainstay of lawyers' practice.[59] A good example is found in connection with accidents occurring in industrial employment. In some of this new legislation representation by lawyers is expressly discouraged.[60] In some of it, formal rules of pleading, practice and evidence—the lawyers' tools—are dispensed with.[61]

There are some who regret and some who resent these changes. Over the years, as individuals and as members of professional associations, they have labored to prevent or minimize them. But they would not suggest that criminal conduct, as individuals or as associations, would be proper for such a purpose.

Professions exist because the people believe they will be better served by licensing especially prepared experts to minister to their needs.[62] The licensed monopolies which professions enjoy constitute, in themselves, severe restraints upon competition. But they are restraints which depend upon capacity and training, not special privilege. Neither do they justify concerted criminal action to prevent the people from developing new methods of serving their needs. There is sufficient historical evidence of professional inadequacy to justify occasional popular protests.[63] The better educated laity of today questions the adequacy of present-day medicine.[64] Their challenge finds support, as indicated in the margin, from substantial portions of the medical profession itself.[65] The people give the privilege of

[63] SHRYOCK, THE DEVELOPMENT OF MODERN MEDICINE (1936) 2: "When Rush died, in 1813, he was widely acclaimed the greatest physician his country had known. Three short decades passed, and an outstanding American physician of the next generation found himself revaluing Rush's medical essays. The results were rather startling. 'It may be safely said,' observed Elisha Bartlett in 1843, 'that in the whole vast compass of medical literature, there cannot be found an equal number of pages containing a greater amount and variety of utter nonsense and unqualified absurdity.' A more sudden and extreme revision of scientific opinion could hardly be imagined. Here was Rush lauded by one generation and repudiated by the next."

[64] SHRYOCK, id. at 371-372: "Hence there gradually evolved, in educated minds, a syllogism of some such form as this: Medical science can now prevent or cure certain major diseases. Many people continue to suffer from these very diseases. Ergo, medical science does not serve the people as it should. The most obvious explanation was to be found in the mounting costs of service. Here, again, it is to be noted that it was the very progress which physicians had made in science, which involved them in new difficulties in the practice of their art. Technical improvement led to simultaneous increase in the demand for medical services and in the price that must be paid for them. And so the more that people trusted medical aid, the less they could afford it. Here was a serious and unexpected impasse in the public relations of the profession."

[65] SHRYOCK, id. at 399-400: "In 1926 some fifteen leaders in medicine, public health, and the social sciences had inaugurated a series of conferences which led to the creation of a national Committee on the Costs of Medical Care. This body consisted of fifty members drawn from various interested groups ranging from private practitioners to economists. Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior in President Hoover's cabinet, served as Chairman. . . . The Committee carried out a nation-wide survey of sickness and medical service among nearly nine thousand white families. Their reports revealed, by 1932, a direct correlation between income and all types of medical service; and tended in general to substantiate the claims made by the advocates of health insurance more than a professional monopoly and the people may take it away. A highly regimented military profession under strict governmental control; a ministerial or religious profession, without uniform standards or licensure; a large group of highly trained persons who serve the people as experts in news collection and dissemination but who have never had professional standing, licensure or monopoly;[66] these are all examples of alternative methods which the people have used to develop and control their professional groups.

In some instances professional groups have been charged by legislative fiat with powers and duties concerning professional education, licensure, discipline, removal of licensees from practice, and other related subjects.[67] In such cases they act as agencies of government.

decade before. The lowest income group (under $1,200 per year) received more of certain types of care—presumably due to charity services—than did the next two higher groups ($1,200 to $3,000); but in general these classes all received much less service than those whose incomes were above the last-named amount. Thus the group with the lowest amount of service received only 50 per cent as many days of hospitalization, and only 41 per cent as many medical calls as did the group with the highest amount of service. In every case, the latter was the highest income group. The highest group itself received less medical service than the standard which the majority of the Committee considered essential to good care."

The American Medical Association, it is true, disagrees with the conclusions of these eminent professionals. SHRYOCK, id. at 401: "Taking quite another view of the situation, the Bureau of Economics of the American Medical Association conducted an investigation which '. . . revealed the fact that there are few, if any, people in the United States really suffering from lack of medical care: . . .'"

[66] It is perhaps significant that in the latest professional development—radio broadcasting—increased emphasis has been placed on ruthless competition (Federal Communications Commission v. Although some similar delegations of power have been made to the organized medical profession,[68] there is no evidence of delegation of power to appellants, sufficient to authorize the conduct for which they have been convicted. In the absence thereof professional groups must abide by the general laws just as scrupulously as any private citizen or private corporation. It is in this setting that appellants were permitted to organize, to establish standards of professional conduct, to effect agreements for self-discipline and control. There is a very real difference between the use of such self-disciplines and an effort upon the part of such associations to destroy competing professional or business groups or organizations. Again, to use the analogy of the legal profession, the activities of the American Medical Association in the present case more nearly resemble the situation which would exist if the American Bar Association or one of the state associations should undertake to destroy, by methods of criminal conspiracy, business organizations which employ lawyers, such as automobile associations, collection agencies, bankers' associations and title and trust companies. It is true that they have attempted, by means of actions to forbid unlawful practice of the law and by efforts to secure legislation, thus to prevent activities which they regarded as encroachments upon the practice of law. Such actions at law and such efforts to secure enactment of legislation are equally available to appellants. But there is a clearly defined line of demarcation here which must be observed if the penalties of the Sherman Act are to be avoided. As we suggested in our earlier opinion, appellants have open to them always the safer and more kindly weapons of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument,[69] as a means of preserving professional esprit de corps, winning public sentiment to their point of view or securing legislation.[70] But they have no license to commit crime. When they go so far as to impose unreasonable restraints, they become subject to the prohibition of the Sherman Act.[71] This, then, represents a limit to professional group activities. If it is desired to extend them beyond this point, legislation is required for that purpose. It may be desirable that this professional group shall be given such enlarged powers, but if so it will be necessary for the legislature to speak upon the subject rather than for the courts to recognize a privilege based upon preemption or usurpation.

[68] E.g., in Maryland the examination of applicants for licenses to practice is entrusted to a Board of Medical Examiners elected by the state medical society, the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty. Md. Code (1939) art. 43, § 117. The same general misconception seems to underlie appellants' effort to show absence of restraint by contending that Group Health Association is an illegal organization or that it is engaged in illegal activities. It is elementary that a person is not privileged to kill another simply because the latter is a bad man.[72] Neither can justification for the commission of a crime be found in the fact that its commission benefited the community; and evidence offered for such a purpose is properly excluded.[73] Nor is the fact that a crime was committed with the intent to accomplish some ultimate good, an excuse for its commission;[74] even if it was for the purpose of enforcing the law.[75]

The same rule applies in conspiracy cases as in criminal cases generally. Thus it was no defense to a charge of conspiracy to dynamite a man's house that the house was a disreputable resort, a place where moonshine whisky was sold and where lewd women congregated for unlawful purposes.[76] And the same rule applies in cases of conspiracy under the Sherman Act.[77] Neither the fact that the conspiracy may be intended to promote the public welfare,[78] or that of the industry,[79] nor the fact that it is designed to eliminate unfair, fraudulent and unlawful practices,[80] is sufficient to avoid the penalties of the Sherman Act.

Appellants are not law enforcement agencies; they are charged with no duties of investigating or prosecuting, to say nothing of convicting and punishing. They have been given no power to require their members, or Group Health Association, to reveal the intimate details of their affairs, as was attempted in the present case.[81] Except for their size, their prestige and their otherwise commendable activities, their conduct in the present case differs not at all from that of any other extra-governmental agency which assumes power to challenge alleged wrongdoing by taking the law into its own hands.[82] Although extreme situations may seem sometimes to have required vigilante action where effective law enforcement by duly constituted officers had broken down or never been established,[83] and although persons who reason superficially concerning such matters may find justification for extra-legal action to secure what seems to them desirable ends; this is not the American way of life.[84] If Group Health Association is illegal, or is engaged in illegal activities, there is a method provided by law to determine the facts and to secure appropriate action.[85] If further controls are needed in addition to those now available, the legislative method is the appropriate one to secure the desired end.

The Government offered evidence that in various instances, over a period of years preceding the indictment, the American Medical Association induced various hospitals to exclude physicians from their staffs because of the physicians' connection with various low-cost, risk-sharing or prepayment plans for medical services. Appellants contend that this evidence was not the type of background evidence approved by our decision in United States v. American Medical Association.[86] Specifically, they object that the Government did not present in detail the nature of the various plans which the Association thus allegedly sought to thwart and that the action of the Association is equivocal, hence as consistent with the enforcement of legitimate ethical standards as with a policy of discouragement of low-cost or risk-sharing or prepayment plans. It is true that in each instance

These groups compete in the market place, in the forums of public opinion, in popular elections, and in our legislative halls, but they have no place in the halls of judicial administration. The lamps of justice are dimmed or have wholly gone out in many parts of the earth, but these lights are still shining brightly here. We are engaged in harnessing our national power for the defense of our way of life. But that way is worthwhile only because it is the pathway of the just. the nature of the plan was not greatly detailed, though the Government's first witness gave a description of prepayment plans in general and described several then in operation, including at least two which were objects of opposition by the Association. We think it was sufficiently shown that these various plans all involved the common element of low cost, and that the attitude of the Association toward each was hostile.[87] This evidence was admissible as bearing on the intent of the Association in respect of the actions which are the subject matter of the indictment.[88] Even assuming that this evidence may have

[87] For example, in 1936, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin disapproved a plan proposed for the care of employees of the International Harvester Company. The proponents of this plan, who were members of the State Society, refused to resign, and were subsequently tried, found guilty and expelled from the Society on the ground of violations of the By-Laws of the Society and the Principles of Medical Ethics. The expelled members appealed to the Judicial Council of the American Medical Association, which affirmed the action of the State Society. As appears from the opinion of the Judicial Council, the features of the plan were as follows: "1. Unlimited medical and surgical service for $1.00 per month for a single man; $2.00 per month for man and wife; $3.00 per month for man, wife and family. 2. Only diseases excluded from the plan—mental and contagious. Hospitalization not included. 3. There would be no solicitation of patients. 4. All physicians who joined the clinic would benefit from any profits. 5. Patients may select any physician on the staff. 6. Preventive treatment not included in the plan. 7. No written contract between patient and clinic. Participants in plan restricted to those with income of $200.00 or less per month."

The opinion of the Judicial Council also stated that: "The Judicial Council is distinctly of the opinion that practice under the terms and conditions to which these appellants have agreed with the employees of the International Harvester Company constitutes a violation of Chapter III, Art. VI, (Revised) Sec. 3, of the Principles of Medical Ethics (contract practice contrary to sound public policy)."

In the meantime and following the action of the State Society, Dr. Cutter, Secretary of the Association, had written the Superintendent of Mount Sinai Hospital, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in the following language: "It has come to our attention, through correspondence with the Medical Society of Milwaukee County, that certain physicians have been expelled from that society through participation in an organization known as 'Milwaukee Medical Center.' It is also reported that certain of these same individuals continue as members of your attending staff with hospital privileges. May we call your attention to the recent resolution passed by the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association, as follows: 'Resolved, That it is the opinion of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals should be limited to members in good standing of their local county medical societies and that the House of Delegates requests the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take this under advisement.' What possibility, if any, exists for observance of the principle laid down in this resolution?"

After a series of temporizing correspondence, Dr. Cutter again addressed the Superintendent of Mount Sinai Hospital as follows: "In view of the fact that we have received no reply to our letter of May 5 and no notification of any action taken with respect to the employment of physicians expelled from the county medical society, we wish to inform you that we are recommending to the Council that Mount Sinai Hospital be removed from the approved intern list and also from the the Register of the American Medical Association."

One week later the Superintendent of Mount Sinai Hospital wrote Dr. Cutter that the objectionable physicians had been denied further staff and courtesy privileges at Mount Sinai Hospital by vote of the Executive Committee.

been relevant only in respect of the American Medical Association and that it was introduced for that purpose by the Government, nevertheless, as appellants sought only to exclude it entirely, rather than merely to limit its probative force, there was, consequently, no error in admitting it,[89] in any event.

Appellants contend further, in this connection, that: "A misdemeanor such as described in Section 3 of the Sherman Act is not a violation of the law in Texas, Wisconsin, or any other state of the United States. A restraint of intrastate trade in Texas or Wisconsin is not a violation of any law of the United States, and so far as this record discloses, of any state law. Every man has a right to do it, and no finger of scorn is to be pointed at him for doing it. To permit the Government to prove in a case pending in the District of Columbia lawful acts that were performed by the defendant AMA in Texas and Wisconsin is error." But as applied to the present case the premise is incorrect and the conclusion does not follow. In the first place, it is elementary that if the object of a conspiracy is criminal, then evidence of conduct—otherwise lawful—but which is intended to achieve that criminal objective may properly be received to prove the conspiracy.[90] In the second place, whether the particular conduct was criminal at the time and place where it occurred is beside the point. Evidence has been admitted to prove background, even though it concerned conduct which occurred prior to adoption of the act under which the indictment was found;[91] as well as concerning conduct which occurred before the date in the indictment when it was alleged that the accused persons conspired.[92] The disputed evidence in the present case was not offered to prove the commission of crimes in Texas, Wisconsin, or other states, but to prove the commission of a crime in the District of Columbia, by proving the background of appellant's conduct in the District of Columbia. What it did in the District was part of a larger plan. Evidence of conduct in other states—which may have been perfectly lawful according to the laws in force in those states—was nevertheless proof of appellant's intent and purpose in acting as it did in the District.[93] The cases relied upon by appellants require no other conclusion. One of them is not in point and in both of the others all the acts complained of were committed outside the United States.[94] In Eastern States Petroleum Co., Inc. v. Asiatic Petroleum Corp., Judge Chase, speaking for the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, put the case in a nutshell when he said: "Likewise, what was done wholly abroad unaided by acts in this country must be counted out."[95] [Italics supplied]

Appellants contend that the verdict of the jury acquitting all the defendants except the American Medical Association and the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, and convicting the two latter associations, constitutes such inconsistency as to require that the verdicts of guilty be set aside. It has been held many times that inconsistency in verdicts does not require the result contended for by appellants.[96] And this is true even though the inconsistency can be explained by no rational considerations.[97] The question for us is whether the conviction is consistent with the evidence.[98]. Complete identity of participation in the conspiracy was not necessary upon the part of the participants, either in fact or in law. While such complete identity is not necessary in order to sustain a verdict when several persons jointly tried are convicted,[99] lack of it may be enough to explain away a supposed inconsistency when some are acquitted and others convicted. Thus in American Socialist Soc. v. United States, the court said: "The last objection is that the judgment should be reversed, because, if the author of the pamphlet was not guilty, the publishers could not be guilty. It is said that Nearing must have been acquitted on one of two grounds, viz. either that the pamphlet itself was innocuous or that he had no intent to obstruct the recruiting and enlistment service of the United States. If the acquittal of Nearing was on the first ground, the society ought also to have been acquitted. We are therefore justified in finding that the acquittal was on the second ground. The statute, in defining the offense, imposes the additional condition that the act shall be done with the specific intent of obstructing the recruiting and enlistment service of the United States. The jury might believe that Nearing did not write these harmful views with the intent of obstructing the recruiting and enlistment service of the United States, and at the same time believe that the Society did print and distribute them with that intent. Such findings would not be inconsistent. This is a matter of fact, of which the jury are the sole judges, and with it we have no concern."[100]

Appellants' contention confuses the concepts of corporate and individual criminal liability. When a corporation is guilty of crime it is because of a corporate act, a corporate intent; in short, corporate commission of crime.[101] The fact that a corporation can act only by human agents is immaterial.[102] How separate is the identity of the corporate person and the individual person, where criminal liability is concerned, is shown by the fact that a corporation may be found guilty of a crime, the essential element of which is a specific criminal intent.[103] This has been often held in conspiracy cases.[104] In at least one state it has been held that the corporation and its agents may be separately counted in order to find the two or more persons necessary for the commission of a conspiracy.[105] In the present case a large number of individuals were named as defendants; some of whom were agents of appellants, others who were not. Moreover, as the two corporations were convicted, the requirement of two persons is satisfied in any event. Consequently, for both reasons, the conviction of appellants does not depend upon the guilt or conviction of their agents.

We have carefully examined appellants' other contentions and find them to be without merit. As we read the record the case was tried carefully and fairly; the jury was properly instructed; and the evidence was adequate to support the verdicts.

Affirmed.

Argument	29
I. The practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services are not "commercial" and not "trade" under Section 3 of the Sherman Act	29
II. "Restraint of trade" under Section 3 of the Sherman Act is not established in this case because it is neither alleged nor proven that the claimed restraints affected the market, either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices were substantially affected, to the injury of the public	30
III. A dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment under the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts was involved in this case, in which petitioners were interested. The case is therefore not within the Sherman Act	33
IV. The activities of GHA, charged to have been restrained, were illegal in that GHA was engaged in the corporate practice of medicine and in an insurance operation contrary to law. These facts were a complete defense as a matter of law, or at least admissible in evidence for the consideration of the jury	35
V. The motion of the petitioners for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative for a new trial, should have been granted	40
VI. The court erred in receiving certain evidence on behalf of the United States	45
VII. The court erred in refusing evidence offered by petitioners	47
VIII. The court erred in refusing instructions requested by petitioners and in charging the jury	51

PETITION FOR WRITS OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

American Medical Association,[1] a corporation, and The Medical Society of the District of Columbia,[2] a corporation, petitioners, respectfully pray for writs of certiorari to review the decision and judgments of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, entered June 15, 1942 (R. 1886, 1908, 1909), affirming the judgments of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, entered May 29, 1941, on the verdict of a jury finding petitioners guilty on an indictment charging a conspiracy for the purpose of restraining trade in the District of Columbia in violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Act.[3]

SUMMARY STATEMENT.

The record in this case presents the basis for at least half a dozen ordinary cases, each presenting novel propositions of the utmost importance. We have made every effort to limit the length of this petition and brief consistent with giving the Court an understanding of the numerous issues involved and the law applicable thereto.

The indictment charges (R. 14, 15) petitioners with engaging in a conspiracy to restrain Group Health Association, Inc.,[4] a corporation, in furnishing through monthly salaried full-time employee-doctors, medical care to its members and their dependents; to restrain members of GHA in obtaining such medical care; to restrain GHA doctors; to restrain other doctors in the pursuit of their callings; and to restrain the Washington hospitals.

Petitioners contend that the indictment did not charge nor the proof show an offense under the Sherman Act for three basic reasons, any one of which is fatal to this prosecution.

First: because the activities alleged to have been restrained were not commercial, and hence not trade just as this Court held in Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States, 286 U. S. 427, 436, Federal Club v. National League,

[4] Hereinafter referred to as GHA.

259 U. S. 200, 209, and Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, 493 (footnote 15), and the cases following it.

Second: because the indictment does not charge (despite the inference to the contrary in the decision below), nor the proof show that the alleged restraints affected the market, either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices were substantially affected, to the injury of the public. Such allegations and proof were necessary under the Apex case and the cases following it.

Third: because the alleged restraint arose out of a controversy concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors, which, if doctors are tradesmen, was within the excluding purview of the Clayton[5] and Norris-LaGuardia[6] Acts as construed in United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219, and the cases following it.

Petitioners also contend that GHA was practicing medicine illegally and otherwise violating Federal statutes, hence the alleged restraints against such activities would not violate the Act; that there was no evidence to support the charge; that when the verdict of the jury found all of the individual defendants not guilty, who could have been agents of or co-conspirators with corporate petitioners, there was no evidence left to support the verdict; that the court admitted improper evidence against both petitioners, including so-called "background evidence" of the actions of AMA only, at various places outside the District of Columbia long prior to the beginning of the alleged conspiracy to show that the purpose and intent of petitioners was as charged, and rejected the same kind of evidence offered by petitioners as to activities of GHA within the District during the period of the alleged conspiracy to show that the purpose and intent of petitioners was not as charged. The court also incorrectly instructed the jury.

The Court of Appeals in its second opinion affirmed its first opinion and held that the word "trade" as used in the Sherman Act included the practice of medicine, its availability and financing, on the erroneous premise that the practice of medicine was recognized by the English cases as a trade, and therefore it was immaterial under the Sherman Act whether the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services was or was not a commercial activity.

The Court of Appeals ignored the fact that the indictment did not allege nor the evidence prove that the activities of petitioners were exercised or used in such a way as to affect the market either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices were substantially affected, to the injury of the public, and held, regardless of the limitations of the indictment, that if a conspira[illegible] was shown, the purpose of which was to restrain competition by injuring GHA, it was sufficient to support the conviction. The error of this holding is two-fold. First, there was no such charge in the indictment but on the contrary the indictment proceeded upon the theory that the Sherman Act was a broad, remedial statute protecting every person individually in his occupation from any restraint. Second, even if such a charge were contained in the indictment, under the Apex case and the concurring opinion of Stone, C. J., in the Hutcheson case (pp. 241, 242), it would not charge a violation of the Act.

The court below held that physicians are in trade but that their associations, even though involved in a dispute over employment, are not within the protection of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts because, the court asserted, physicians are not laborers who work for wages. The Court seems to have overlooked the fact that the cases which it cited to support this premise, hold that professional activities are not commercial and not in trade.

The court below in its first opinion, based on the allegations of the indictment, held that GHA was not practicing medicine illegally or otherwise violating Federal statutes and in its second opinion held those facts were immaterial and inadmissible in evidence.

The court below held that there was evidence to support the charge and that the verdict finding the corporate petitioners guilty is sufficiently supported even though all the individual defendants were found "not guilty" and there was no evidence tending to show that any person other than the individual defendants was an agent of corporate petitioners or a co-conspirator, and held that a corporation can have a specific criminal intent without the intervention of any human person (R. 1907).

The court below held that the so-called "background" evidence offered by the Government pertaining to the activities of AMA outside the District long before the beginning of the alleged conspiracy was admissible against both petitioners on the theory that it was evidence of intent or purpose of petitioners, but rejected similar evidence offered by petitioners pertaining to the activities of GHA within the District and during the period of the alleged conspiracy to show that the intent or purpose of petitioners was not to restrain GHA but to defend their medical societies and their lawful principles of ethics, rules and regulations. The court held that even if petitioners' intent and purpose was a reasonable regulation of their members in the practice of medicine, that fact was no defense, if their actions adversely affected GHA.

The Court of Appeals without discussion as to what evidence tended to support the verdict, or what petitioners did that constituted conspiracy to violate the Sherman Act, repeatedly stated that petitioners' acts were criminal and held that the evidence was adequate to support the verdict, and, without stating the substance of any of the instructions complained of, held that the jury was properly instructed.

This case presents a controversy relating to and growing out of the terms and conditions of employment of doctors in the medical profession.[7] AMA, the national organization, DMS, the local organization, and the doctors who are members of these organizations have long observed and followed a code of professional ethics and this code has been supplemented by association rules and regulations initiated by and agreed to by the members themselves and made, by them, a necessary condition of membership in their medical organizations.

GHA, incorporated under a non-commercial District statute,[8] sought to engage in the practice of medicine by the device of opening a clinic, including offices for a staff of doctors, whom it employed by the month, on a full-time salary basis. This arrangement, it was generally believed by petitioners, as well as by the law enforcement authorities of the District, was illegal.

Although many doctors who were not members of petitioners were available to GHA, that corporation, despite full knowledge of the principles of ethics and the rules and regulations governing the professional activities of petitioners' members, willfully sought to induce certain doctors who were members of petitioners, to ignore and violate their medical society obligations and accept employment on the GHA hired staff.

Apprehensive of impending controversy, members of DMS immediately sought both by individual and group conferences, to persuade GHA, in its employment of doctors who were medical society members, to make some effort to conform to the principles of ethics, and the employment rules and regulations of DMS. These overtures were flatly rejected by GHA and it persisted in endeavoring to proselyte petitioners' members, to induce them to ignore medical association rules, and to create controversies between such members and petitioners. The controversy here involved followed. To acquaint its members with the facts, the AMA published in its Journal an article that was critical of GHA. Two of the doctors employed by GHA were members of DMS. DMS had a provision in its constitution that any of its members accepting contracts of employment must submit such contracts for approval to a committee of DMS. The two doctors, under the urging of GHA, refused to do so, and after a full hearing, one of them was expelled from DMS.

The Government contended that petitioners intended to restrain GHA and its employee-doctors and members; whereas petitioners asserted they intended only to preserve, protect, and to defend their medical societies, their principles of ethics, rules and regulations, from impairment and destruction.

The petitioners were also charged with restraining the Washington hospitals. In 1934, AMA adopted the Mundt Resolution [9] which was thereafter transmitted to intern and resident hospitals. Several of the local hospitals already had such a rule. No hospital was ever required as a condition of approval, to confine its staffs to society members. An inspection of local hospitals, had in the summer of 1937, far from being a part of an aim to restrain GHA, was, under the uncontradicted evidence, solicited by the hospitals and carried out on behalf of AMA by persons who had no knowledge of the existence of GHA.

Obviously, membership in the medical societies aided and advanced the general professional welfare of members, and, as conceded in the indictment, became of importance and value to conforming members. GHA, while insisting upon the right of its employed doctors to retain society membership, nevertheless proposed that observance of society codes, rules and regulations could be ignored, at the will of a particular member, without loss of society membership and that any attempt on the part of the society to require conformance with such rules operated as an illegal restraint of the member as well as of his employer, GHA.

Obviously, such a controversy threatened the continued welfare and existence of petitioners and made everything relating to GHA's terms and conditions of employing petitioners' members, of interest to petitioners, particularly in so far as petitioners' codes, rules and regulations might be violated. If GHA was operating in violation of Federal statutes and its activities presented an illegal, unethical, or unprofessional operation, if it was engaged in questionable practices which appeared to be inimicable to the best interests of either the public, the medical profession, or the petitioners or their members, then petitioners owed its members, to say nothing of the public, the duty of opposing, avoiding and preventing the injury to petitioners, and their members, through the proselyting tactics of GHA. The court below said physicians may organize, establish standards of professional conduct and effect agreements for self-discipline and control, but in the same breath said that if such standards and agreements are enforced and some other professional or business group are injured the Sherman Act is violated.

As the hospitals might well be considered the workshop of physicians, legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument might lawfully be directed toward the hospitals, recommending preference to organization members whose codes, rules and regulations were known and established, as against others not so well recommended. That could not possibly amount to criminal restraint of GHA under the Sherman Act. The court below said petitioners might use legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument as a means of winning public sentiment to their point of view but in the same breath said that when they so persuade and argue with the hospitals or when petitioners' members persuade and argue among themselves, they violate the Sherman Act.

Out of this controversy came the indictment wherein 21 doctors [10] and four medical associations [11] were indicted.

[10] Dr. Olin West was Secretary and General Manager of AMA. Dr. Morris Fishbein was Editor of the Journal of the AMA. Dr. William Creighton Woodward was Director of the Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation of the AMA. Dr. William Dick Cutter was Secretary of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the AMA. Dr. Roscoe Genung Leland was Director of the Bureau of Economics of AMA. Dr. Thomas Edwin Neill was President of the DMS. Dr. Coursen Baxter Conklin was Secretary-Treasurer of the DMS. All the other individual defendants were physicians and members of the DMS or members of some committee thereof, or were on the regular staff of some of the Washington hospitals during all or part of the period of the alleged conspiracy.

[11] American Medical Association, Medical Society of the District of Columbia, Washington Academy of Surgery, and Harris County (Texas) Medical Society.

A demurrer to the indictment, particularly upon the ground of inapplicability of the Sherman Act, was sustained by the District Court (28 F. Supp. 752). The Court of Appeals reversed, holding that the Act was a broad remedial statute, intended to protect all individuals in all occupations, professional or commercial, and any restraint upon an individual is prohibited by the Act. The opinion did not even contend the indictment charged that competition was suppressed to the extent that market prices were affected. The case thereafter was tried upon the law laid down by the Court of Appeals. Upon the trial, two individual defendants and two defendant associations were discharged by directed verdict. Motions to direct verdicts for each defendant, at the close of all the evidence, were denied. Of the remaining defendants, all the individual defendants were acquitted, and only the corporate petitioners were convicted. After verdict petitioners moved the court to disregard all the evidence pertaining to the acts and doings of the individual defendants found "not guilty" and to enter a judgment for the corporate petitioners notwithstanding the verdict, and also moved the court in arrest of judgment and for a new trial. These motions were denied.

Furthermore, the indictment itself, a calculated, colored, argumentative appeal to passion and prejudice, and so characterized by the District Court upon demurrer (28 F. Supp. 752), was permitted to go to the jury in spite of timely objections by petitioners.

The court admitted in evidence, over objections, so-called "background" evidence offered by the prosecution against both petitioners which concerned many acts of AMA, long antedating the conspiracy here alleged, neither involving nor relating to nor within the knowledge of DMS. Nor did such acts occur in the District nor were they involved in the conspiracy here pleaded. Nor did they have reference to other plans and types of medical service shown to be the same as or analogous to that followed by GHA. Nor were the objections urged against GHA, shown to be present elsewhere. This evidence was offered upon the theory that since the Government alleged that AMA had opposed all medical service plans, ipso facto, it was probable that it had opposed GHA in the present controversy. Obviously, such proof was exceedingly prejudicial to both petitioners and particularly to the local society, but it was admitted upon the authority of the Court of Appeals' first opinion which, in turn, was based upon Chicago Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U. S. 231, 238, which clearly, upon examination seems wholly irrelevant.[12] The conviction of petitioners might well have resulted from the admission of this irrelevant evidence alone.

Notwithstanding the fact that the court admitted the aforesaid "background" evidence against both petitioners to show purpose and intent, it rejected similar evidence offered by petitioners to show the activities of GHA within the District during the indictment period for the purpose of showing that the acts of petitioners were not for the purpose or intent of restraining GHA but to protect their medical societies, their principles of medical ethics, rules and regulations, and to reasonably regulate their own members. The indictment, in innumerable instances, charged that the acts done by the petitioners were done "for the purpose of" restraining GHA, etc., and the Government continually so asserted throughout the trial and the argument. Upon the trial the petitioners claimed, and offered to prove, that the acts of the petitioners were wholly defensive, and were based upon the known, or believed, unfit, unethical and illegal nature and conduct of GHA. The petitioners offered to prove such acts and conduct and what the public authorities specifically publicly charged concerning GHA's illegal activities, for the purpose of showing that petitioners were protecting themselves and their members against attacks being made on them by GHA, and that the purpose of all of the acts of the petitioners was to preserve, protect and defend petitioners and their codes and rules, relating to, and adopted in the interest of the profession, the public and their own members. This proof, vital though it was to the establishment of the defense, and in direct refutation of the charge of purpose in the indictment, and despite the decision of this Court in the Chicago Board of Trade case, was rejected by the court as irrelevant and immaterial. This on the theory that if GHA was injured as a result of the acts of the petitioners, then the intent and purpose behind the acts was immaterial, despite the charge of purpose in the indictment. The crippling effect of such ruling is at once apparent. It practically foreclosed the defense of petitioners. The court ruled and charged, over petitioners' objections, in full accord with the theory of the Government, as detailed above, and such rulings were assigned as error.

Petitioners, being corporations, could be criminally liable on a charge of conspiracy only through imputation to the corporation of the wrongful acts of agents. All of the agents of petitioner corporations, who were in any way involved in the controversy, were found "not guilty." The indictment did refer to "others unknown" but that is immaterial, since the record contains no evidence sufficient to support any conviction purporting to come from or relating to any "unknown" person. Such evidence as there was, was confined to the individual defendants indicted and acquitted.[13] The question here is not one of inconsistency between verdicts [14] but of an utter failure of proof to support the verdict against petitioners.[15]

After verdict, petitioner moved the court to disregard all the evidence pertaining to the acts and doings of the individual defendants found "not guilty" and to enter judgment for petitioners notwithstanding the verdict. This upon the ground, among others, that, since the evidence related, as original evidence, to the acts of the individual defendants, and since all of this evidence was received on the theory that such individual defendants were co-conspirators, the acquittal of the individual defendants necessarily destroyed the co-conspirator basis. Therefore, as the individual defendants were acquitted, no criminal act, intent, or element remains from which guilt could be imputed to petitioners.

The situation is analogous to that of two conspirators, where one is acquitted,[16] and to cases arising under the rule of respondent superior, where the agent or servant doing the act, is acquitted.[17] Under such circumstances, evidence relating to the acquitted party cannot remain to build up a case against the party held. In these respects the law is clear and there is no conflict.

Moreover, much of the evidence relating to the acts and doings of the individual defendants was highly prejudicial in its nature, and the petitioners contended that the very presence of such evidence in the record, in view of the ultimate acquittal of the individual defendants, inevitably and unavoidably tainted the verdict against petitioners, and thus prevented them from having a separate and unbiased consideration of the case against them, and denied them a fair trial.[18]

[14] We have here no multiple counts, as were controlling in Dunn v. United States, 284 U. S. 390, but a single count, wholly depending for its substance on the guilt of the individual defendants, found "not guilty."

But whether the so-called co-conspirator testimony or the respondeat superior rule is considered or not, petitioners assert that there has been a complete failure of proof to establish the charge. This is so because the charge and the acts involved are outside the purview of the Sherman Act. Moreover, petitioners, if doctors be tradesmen, are entitled under the circumstances of this case to the protection of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts. The second opinion of the Court of Appeals concedes that petitioners would be within the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts if those Acts cover "tradesmen" such as doctors, but construes those Acts to cover only laborers who work for wages. Furthermore, GHA was engaged in illegal activities and was violating Federal statutes, and restraints against such illegal activities, even if established, are not and cannot be restraints forbidden and punishable under the Sherman Act. Since physicians have the right to form associations, to establish standards of professional conduct and to effect agreements for self discipline and control, the discussions by petitioners' members pro and con at meetings do not support the charge of conspiracy here involved against petitioners. Otherwise, no society could ever meet without, ipso facto, conspiring. The official actions of DMS or AMA were within their lawful powers and related to matters properly within the interest of their organizations, and do not support the charge against them. The hospitals were individual corporations bound only by the action of their proper officials, and with a right to omit or exclude from the medical staffs of such hospitals, doctors whose qualifications, abilities or ethics were in dispute. The exercise of such right by the hospitals against GHA doctors, even if through persuasion by others, is insufficient to support the charge that the hospitals were "conspiring with petitioners." Moreover the Court of Appeals held that the defendants had the right of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument, and no act shown in the record went beyond that. Indeed, when compared with analogous actions by labor, trade, and other associations in support of what they may have believed to have been for the best interest of such organizations, the acts charged or proven to petitioners are innocuous in the extreme.

There is not a scintilla of evidence tending to show that the market was affected either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices were substantially affected, to the injury of the public. No such proof was attempted because no such charge appears in the indictment.[19]

[19] The charging part of the indictment alleged petitioners conspired for the purpose of restraining trade in the District of Columbia as follows (R. 14, 15):

(1) for the purpose of restraining Group Health Association, Inc., in its business of arranging for the provision of medical care and hospitalization to its members and their dependents on a risk sharing prepayment basis;

(2) for the purpose of restraining the members of Group Health Association, Inc., in obtaining, by cooperative efforts, adequate medical care for themselves and their dependents from doctors engaged in group medical practice on a risk sharing prepayment basis;

(3) for the purpose of restraining the doctors serving on the medical staff of said Group Health Association, Inc., in the pursuit of their callings;

(4) for the purpose of restraining doctors (not on the medical staff of Group Health Association, Inc.) practicing in the District of Columbia, including the doctors so practicing who are made defendants herein, in the pursuit of their callings;

(5) for the purpose of restraining the Washington hospitals in the business of operating such hospitals.

The results accomplished by the alleged conspiracy are stated in the indictment, as follows (R. 20):

"The • • • conspiracy • • • has, as intended by defendants, prevented doctors from becoming or remaining members of the medical staff of Group Health Association, Inc., and has prevented

Other serious errors were committed in the reception of evidence, such as that contained in and attached to the minutes of DMS, the hearsay evidence pertaining to the hospitals and other hearsay evidence, in the rejection of petitioners' written and oral offers of proof, in refusing instructions requested by petitioners, and in the charge of the court to the jury. These errors are identified in the supporting brief.

JURISDICTION.

The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Sec. 240 of the Judicial Code as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925 (43 Stat. 938), 28 U. S. C. 347.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED [20]

1. Whether the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services as described in the indictment are "trade" under Section 3 of the Sherman Act.

2. Whether the indictment charged or the evidence proved "restraints of trade" under Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act.

3. Whether a dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment under the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts was involved, and, if so, whether petitioners were interested therein, and therefore immune from prosecution under the Sherman Act.

other doctors from consulting with the doctors on the medical staff of Group Health Association, Inc., and has prevented doctors on the medical staff of Group Health Association, Inc., from treating and operating on their patients in any of the hospitals in or near the District of Columbia."

As there is no charge, there could be no proof that the market was affected either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices of any commodity or service were substantially affected, to the injury of the public, as required by the Apex case.

[20] The errors to be urged are in the supporting brief, pp. 28, 29, infra.

4. Whether (a) GHA was a corporation engaged in the corporate practice of medicine contrary to law; and (b) engaged in an insurance operation contrary to law, and if so (c) whether those facts were a complete defense as a matter of law or were relevant to any issue in the case and admissible in evidence for the consideration of the jury.

5(a). Whether, considering all the evidence in the record, petitioners' motions to direct a verdict or for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or for a new trial should have been granted.

5(b). As the jury by its verdict found all of the individual defendants not guilty and found two corporations guilty, whether the evidence pertaining to the acts and doings of the individual defendants found not guilty should have been disregarded, and petitioners' motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or motion for a new trial should have been granted.

6. Whether petitioners' motion in arrest of judgment should have been granted.

7. Whether petitioners' motion at the beginning of the trial to expunge specified portions of the indictment because they contained prejudicial matter and improper argument should have been granted, and whether petitioners' objection at the conclusion of the trial to sending the indictment with the jury in its deliberations for the foregoing reasons should have been sustained.

8. Whether it was error to receive in evidence against both petitioners (a) occurrences involving AMA only, antedating the alleged conspiracy and outside of the District of Columbia, as "background"; (b) statements contained in and letters and documents attached to the Minutes of DMS and of the Executive Committee and other committees of DMS; (c) hearsay and otherwise incompetent evidence pertaining to the Washington hospitals; (d) hearsay evidence in general.

9. Whether it was error to refuse evidence offered by petitioners tending to show that petitioners did not have a purpose or intent to restrain trade, but on the contrary, their purpose or intent was to advance the interests of their members, and to enforce their admittedly valid rules and regulations and principles of medical ethics; and that the restraints, if any, were indirect and reasonable.

10. Whether the court erred in refusing instructions requested by petitioners and in charging the jury.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT.

Nearly all of the reasons usually advanced for the allowance of a writ of certiorari are present in this case.[21] The Court of Appeals has not given proper effect to applicable decisions of this Court; has decided questions of general importance, and questions of substance relating to the construction or application of the Constitution and statutes of the United States, which have not been but should be settled by this Court; has decided important questions of Federal

[21] The United States previously petitioned this Court for certiorari (No. 377, October Term, 1939) to remove this case from the Court of Appeals for a decision here on the action of the District Court in sustaining a demurrer to the indictment, for the reasons that the questions involved are "so important" that they should be decided by this Court, and that the "questions of substance relating to the construction and application of" the Sherman Act "have not been, but should be, settled by this Court," and irrespective of how the Court of Appeals decided the questions involved "in view of the nature of the issues, it is probable that this Court would then see fit to grant * * * certiorari."

After the Court of Appeals reversed the action of the District Court sustaining the demurrer, these petitioners petitioned this Court for certiorari (No. 959, October Term, 1939) and the United States in its brief in opposition agreed that the question of the application of the Sherman Act to the charge is "a novel one of importance sufficient for this Court to settle" but contended that certiorari should be denied because the decision was "interlocutory" and "not final".

law which have not, but should be, settled by this Court; has decided Federal questions in a way in conflict with applicable decisions of this Court and has decided important questions of general law in conflict with decisions of this Court, of other Circuit Courts of Appeal and of the majority of the highest courts of the states.

1. The Court of Appeals did not give proper effect to applicable decisions of this Court when it held that the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services described in the indictment were "trade" within the meaning of the Sherman Act. Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States, 286 U. S. 427, 436, held that the liberal arts and the learned professions were not in "trade" within the meaning of Section 3 of the Sherman Act. Federal Club v. National League, 259 U. S. 200, 209, held that baseball, and by way of example, the practice of law, is not "trade" under the Sherman Act. Other decisions of this Court have held that the learned professions are not "trade."[22] Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, 493 (footnote 15), held that no activity could be "trade" within the meaning of the Sherman Act unless it was commercial. The Apex case pointed out the legislative history of the Sherman Act and decided that the Act did not cover all activities held to be trade at common law but only those that were "commercial."[23] In this respect the Apex case followed the reasoning of the aforesaid previous decisions of this Court.

Decisions to the same effect in Federal Courts of Appeal and state courts appear in the supporting brief, p. 30, infra.

[23] The court below says the practice of medicine was recognized by the English cases as constituting trade (R. 1886). Those cases do not hold the practice of medicine to be trade, and that specific issue was not raised or decided in those cases. The English cases dealt with the validity of ancillary covenants incident to the sales of professional practices. While

2. The Court of Appeals did not give proper effect to applicable decisions of this Court when it held that if a conspiracy was shown, the purpose of which was to injure GHA, it was sufficient to sustain the conviction. The Apex case held that the Sherman Act did not take over the entire doctrine of restraint of trade at common law but only took over and included restraint which had been exercised or used in such a way as to affect the market, either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices were substantially affected, to the injury of the public. The indictment was drawn before the decision in the Apex case and the charge did not even purport to meet the requirements of the Apex case and there was not a scintilla of evidence offered or received pertaining to market prices.

The decision of the Court of Appeals also conflicts with decisions of other Circuit Courts of Appeal,[24] and decides questions of substance relating to the construction and application of the Commerce Clause of the Constitution of the United States and of the Sherman Act.

a few of those cases, in determining the validity of covenants not to practice medicine in a given locality or during a given time, apply the rule announced in "restraint of trade" cases, "restraint of trade" was not the basis for decision and the overwhelming majority of those cases are based upon principles of public policy, the law of contracts or local statutes and do not even mention "restraint of trade." The Apex case considered the English cases and concluded that only "commercial" activities are within the meaning of the word "trade" as used in the Sherman Act.

S. —, and in the affirmance opinion, footnote 1 shows that the United States abandoned the convictions obtained in the District Court under the Sherman Act and did not seek a review of the decision of the Court of Appeals setting aside the convictions because that court construed the Apex case to hold that the evidence must show price fixing or that the acts of the accused had in fact affected prices.

3. The Court of Appeals did not give proper effect to applicable decisions of this Court when it held that the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts cover only disputes between wage earners or laborers on the one hand and aggregated capital on the other, and when it held "that some phases of labor disputes may come under the condemnation of the Sherman Act, if, for example, they involve a combination or conspiracy which has as its purpose restraint upon competition." Such holdings conflict with New Negro Alliance v. Sanitary Grocery Co., 303 U. S. 552, 559, 560; United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219; and Drivers Union v. Lake Valley Co., 311 U. S. 91.

The decision of the Court of Appeals also conflicts with another decision of the court below and two decisions in the Eighth Circuit,[25] and decided questions of substance relating to the construction and application of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts which have not been, but should be, settled by this Court when it limited the protection of such Acts to laborers and wage earners. The plain language of Section 13 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act protects all persons and associations involved in a dispute over employment who are engaged in the same industry, trade, craft or occupation.

4. The Court of Appeals has decided questions of general importance and questions of substance relating to the construction and application of the Healing Arts Practice Act and the Health, Accident and Life Insurance Companies' Act of the District of Columbia, which have not been, but should be, settled by this Court, and has decided important questions of general law in conflict with decisions of the majority of the highest courts of the states [26] when it held that a corporation formed under the Act for the incorporation of charitable, educational and religious associations, such as GHA, could lawfully establish and maintain a medical clinic, including doctors' offices, and employ therein full-time doctors on monthly salaries to render medical services to its members in return for dues paid by them. The Court of Appeals decided questions of substance relating to the construction and application of the Sherman Act when it held that even if GHA was violating Federal statutes and operating illegally, those facts were immaterial, not a defense and could not be shown in evidence nor argued to the jury.

5. The Court of Appeals did not give proper effect to applicable decisions of this Court when it held that the trial court did not err in overruling petitioners' motions to direct a verdict and in overruling petitioners' several motions after verdict. The Apex and Hutcheson cases were decided after the first opinion of the Court of Appeals, and when it appeared at the time of trial that, considering the law as laid down by those cases, the indictment did not charge an offense, petitioners' motion in arrest of judgment should have been granted. The proof, of course, went to the indictment as drawn, hence petitioners' motions to direct a verdict and to enter judgment notwithstanding the verdict should have been granted.

The Court of Appeals did not give proper effect to applicable decisions of this Court, decided important questions of general law in conflict with decisions of this Court, of other Circuit Courts of Appeal and of the majority of the highest courts of the states, when it held that the trial court did not err in overruling petitioners' motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. The situation presented by the verdict finding all of the individual defendants "not guilty" made applicable that long line of cases which, without dispute, hold that when a servant is discharged the master cannot be convicted if the conviction must rest on the activities of the servant,[27] and those cases which hold that if all co-conspirators except one are found "not guilty" there can be no conviction of a remaining co-conspirator,[28] and other cases which hold that corporations cannot be guilty of crimes or misdemeanors except through the action of individual agents or servants.[29] This is because the evidence against the agent or co-conspirator found "not guilty" must be disregarded and eliminated.[30]

After disregarding the evidence pertaining to the activities of the individual defendants found "not guilty", if it be thought that there was still evidence in the record to support the verdict, nevertheless it was clear that, with the great mass of evidence in the record pertaining to the activities of the individual defendants found "not guilty", petitioners did not have an adequate separate consideration of their defense,[31] and the petitioners' motion for a new trial should have been granted.

6. The Court of Appeals decided important questions of general law in conflict with other Circuit Courts of Appeal when it held that the trial court was correct in refusing the motion of petitioners at the beginning of the trial to expunge specified portions of the indictment and to exclude evidence pertaining thereto, because it contained prejudicial matter, argument and passionate appeals to the jury (R. 30, 33, 87), and in overruling the objection of the petitioners at the conclusion of the charge to the jury to sending the indictment with the jury for the same reasons (R. 1513). Johnson v. United States, 59 F. 2d 42, 44; Beck v. United States, 33 F. 2d 107, 110.

7. The Court of Appeals did not give proper effect to the applicable decisions of this Court and decided important questions of general law in conflict with other Circuit Courts of Appeal when it approved the action of the trial court in receiving in evidence so-called "background" evidence of occurrences, events and correspondence all over the United States on dates long antedating the beginning of alleged conspiracy and in refusing the motion of petitioners at the close of all the evidence to strike such evidence and in receiving in evidence so-called "hospital" evidence when there was no prima facie showing that the hospitals were co-conspirators, and in refusing the motion of the petitioners at the close of all the evidence to strike such "hospital" evidence. The decision as to the "background" evidence is in conflict with American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co., 213 U. S. 347, 357; Wilson v. United States, 109 F. 2d 895, 896, and Eastern States Petroleum Co. v. Asiatic P. Corp., 103 F. 2d 315, 319, and as to the hearsay hospital evidence is in conflict with Tri-State Broadcasting Co. v. Federal C. Commission, 68 App. D. C. 292, 294, 295; 96 F. 2d 564-567; Stager v. United States, 233 F. 510, 513, and Pope v. United States, 289 F. 312, 315.

8. If the so-called "background evidence" was admissible against petitioners on the theory that it tended to show intent and purpose, then the Court of Appeals did not give proper effect to the applicable decisions of this Court when it held the evidence offered by petitioners, tending to show that GHA was violating Federal statutes and otherwise operating illegally and improperly, was not admissible as tending to show that the intent and purpose of petitioners was not to restrain GHA but to uphold their established standards of professional conduct for their members and their agreements for self-discipline and control.[32] Chicago Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U. S. 231, 238. The proffered evidence was not a reason or excuse for what was done but was evidence tending to show intent and purpose. If any of the proffered proof formed a link in the evidence on any issue in the case, its refusal is a sufficient basis for the allowance of certiorari. McCandless v. United States, 298 U. S. 342, 346.

9. The Court of Appeals did not give proper effect to the applicable decisions of this Court and decided important questions of general law in conflict with other Circuit Courts of Appeal and decided questions of substance relating to the construction and application of the Commerce Clause of the Constitution of the United States, the Sherman Act, the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts, the Healing Arts Practice Act, and the Health, Accident and Life Insurance Companies' Act of the District of Columbia, when it upheld the action of the District Court in refusing instructions requested by petitioners and in the giving of instructions to the jury.[33]

BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRITS OF CERTIORARI.

THE OPINIONS BELOW.

Petitioners' demurrer to the indictment was sustained in United States v. American Medical Association, et al., 28 F. Supp. 752. This decision was reversed by the Court of Appeals in its first opinion, United States v. American Medical Association, et al., 72 App. D. C. 12, 110 F. 2d 703. The second opinion of the Court of Appeals, filed June 15, 1942, affirming the judgments of conviction against petitioners, is not yet reported and is at R. 1886.

A statement of the case appears in the petition.

SPECIFICATION OF ERRORS TO BE URGED.

The court below erred: (1) In reversing the judgment of the District Court sustaining petitioners' demurrer to the indictment. (2) In holding the indictment charged a conspiracy in violation of Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act. (3) In holding the indictment was not insufficient and not prejudicial. (4) In affirming (on the second appeal) petitioners' convictions. (5) In construing Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act as applying to and forbidding the activities charged in the indictment or proven in the evidence. (6) In construing the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts as not applying to the activities charged in the indictment or proven in the evidence. (7) In construing the Healing Arts Practice Act and the Insurance Code of the District as permitting GHA, a corporation, to practice medicine without a license, and to engage in an insurance operation, without complying with the Insurance Code. (8) In holding that a restraint on an activity which was violative of Federal statutes and otherwise illegal and criminal is, nevertheless, a violation of the Sherman Act. (9) In affirming the following: (a) the denial of petitioners' motion to strike portions of the indictment and to exclude evidence pertaining thereto; (b) the overruling of petitioners' objections to sending the indictment with the jury; (c) the admission of evidence offered by respondent; (d) denial of petitioners' motion to strike evidence erroneously received; (e) the denial of petitioners' written and oral offers of proof; (f) the denial of petitioners' motions for a directed verdict at the close of all the evidence; (g) the giving of respondent's instructions to the jury; (h) the refusal of or modification of petitioners' requested instructions; (i) the charge to the jury; (j) the denial of petitioners' motion to set aside the verdict and to enter judgment for the petitioners; (k) the denial of petitioners' motion in arrest of judgment; (l) the denial of petitioners' motion for a new trial; and (m) the entry of judgments on the verdict and the assessment of fines against petitioners.

ARGUMENT.

I.

The practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services[1] are not "commercial" and not "trade" under Section 3 of the Sherman Act.

The decisions below holding that the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services are trade under the Sherman Act, disregard as "casual" and "not a proper guide" the definition of trade this Court undertook to give in Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States, 286 U. S. 427, 436, that the liberal arts and the learned professions were not in "trade" under Section 3 of the Sherman Act. Federal Club v. National League, 259 U. S. 200, 209, held that personal effort, not related to production, such as baseball and the practice of law, is not "trade" under the Sherman Act. Other decisions of this Court, of Circuit Courts of Appeal, and of State Courts without dissent, have held that the learned professions and similar occupations are not "trade."[2] Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, 493 (footnote 15), considered the legislative history of the Sherman Act, construed the Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers case quite differently than the court below, and held that no activity could be "trade" within the meaning of the Act unless it was "commercial." If the professions be "trades," all statutes regulating professional conduct are subject to attack on constitutional grounds. Semler v. Dental Examiners, et al., 294 U. S. 608, 610-612, Graves v. Minnesota, 272 U. S. 425, 429.

[1] The Court of Appeals concedes (R. 1890), that there is authority for the proposition that private hospitals supported by appropriations and charity are not engaged in trade, business or industry, but concludes, without any support in the evidence, that it has no doubt that the hospitals described in the indictment were engaged in trade within the meaning of the Sherman Act, citing Jordan v. Tashiro, 278 U. S. 123, 127-129. In the Jordan case the articles of incorporation provided for "a business corporation with a share capital of $100,000.00" and the issue was decided under the provisions of a treaty which required the broadest interpretation of the word "trade." Such proof as there was in the record in this case tends to show that the Washington hospitals are non-profit institutions for the care of the sick and their funds are used for that purpose (R. 591, 1338).

II

"Restraint of trade" under Section 3 of the Sherman Act is not established in this case because it is neither alleged nor proven that the claimed restraints affected the market, either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices were substantially affected, to the injury of the public.

The Apex case involved an admitted conspiracy on the part of employees and others and their organizations to seize and shut down the manufacturing plant of an employer, Apex Hosiery Co., with a sit-down strike, destruction of property, stoppage of manufacturing and of interstate shipments, and force and violence of the most brutal and wanton character, but this Court held (p. 481) "that the effect" of such acts would "bring the acts of respondents by which the restriction was effected within the reach of the commerce power if Congress had seen fit to exercise it," and then held that the term "restraint of trade" as used in the Sherman Act meant only such activities which had been exercised or used in such a way as to affect the market, either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices were substantially affected, to the injury of the public. The Court then held that there was no evidence that prices had been affected and hence no violation of the Sherman Act. The Court also held that the Sherman Act did not take over the doctrine of restraint of trade at common law in its entirety but only as aforesaid.[3]

In the case at bar, even if the indictment charged and the evidence showed (which is denied) a restraint that tended to impair or destroy GHA, that would not spell out a violation of the Sherman Act, under the Apex case and the Hutcheson case.[4]

The decisions below, holding that the indictment and the evidence show a violation of the Sherman Act, also con-

---

[3] This Court made its holding on this important point emphatic, when it said (p. 500) contracts, combinations or conspiracies are to be condemned under the Sherman Act "only when their purpose or effect was to raise or fix the market price. It is in this sense that the restraints, actual or intended, prohibited by the Sherman Act are only those which are so substantial as to affect market prices."

[4] The respondent has conceded that such a charge does not make out a case under the Sherman Act. In the Hutcheson case, respondent conceded to this Court that the "closing down of a factory" engaged in an interstate business is not enough to show a violation of the Sherman Act, 312 U. S. 222.

flict with several decisions in the Circuit Courts of Appeal which have examined the scope of the Apex decision [5] and with two other Federal decisions.[6] Those cases all squarely hold only such restraints are within the act that restrain commercial activities, the effect of which is to affect the market, either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices are substantially affected to the injury of the public. Those elements are neither pleaded nor proved in this record. There was not a scintilla of evidence to that effect.

In the Apex case the Court pointed out that the remedy for wrongs existing outside the proper purview of the Sherman Act must be found in other applicable statutes or laws. Such remedies have been sought under varying types of complaints.[7]

[7] The prosecution in this case was conceived in the opinion of a judge of a trial court in England, Pratt v. British Medical Association, 1 K. B. (1919) 244. That opinion arose out of an action in tort for damages on the theory that defendants maliciously conspired to injure plaintiff doctors. Actual malice and social persecution were involved. The judgment for plaintiffs was not appealed. Three years later the Appellate Division of the Kings Bench in the case of Ware and DeFreville v. Motor Trade Association, 3 K. B. (1921) 40, severally criticized the Pratt opinion, stating it was "quite impossible to harmonize" it with other decisions. Our American courts without dissent have held in private actions, both legal and equitable, based upon alleged torts asserted to have been committed in the enforcement of rules and regulations of medical societies and hospitals, that such cases do not present a basis for relief. Bryant v. District of Columbia Dental Society, 26 App. D. III

A dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment under Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts was involved in this case, in which petitioners were interested. The case is therefore not within the Sherman Act.

If petitioners' doctor-members be "tradesmen", the record shows a dispute or controversy concerning terms and conditions of employment in which petitioners were interested.

When a subcommittee of the Executive Committee of DMS and representatives of GHA conferred for the first time (R. 290-309) a controversy arose, the matrix of which was the terms and conditions of employment by GHA of members of DMS to perform GHA's corporate medical work. GHA rejected an offered basis of employment of members of DMS, insisted upon dictating the terms, conditions, and method of payment of compensation and of employing members of DMS, regardless of whether GHA's plans were illegal or in conflict with the constitution and employment rules of DMS. This controversy over terms and conditions of employment continued throughout the indictment period and was involved in all of the activities charged or proven; hence because of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts this case is not within the Sherman Act. United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219; United States v. Carrozzo, 37 Fed. Supp. 191, affirmed 313 U. S. 508; New Negro Alliance v. Sanitary Grocery Co., 303 U. S. 552; Drivers Union v. Lake Valley Co., 311 U. the plain language of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts.

If doctors be in trade, it necessarily follows that Secs. 6 and 20 of the Clayton Act are applicable. Sec. 6 provides that the labor of a human being is not a commodity of commerce. Sec. 20 of the Act covers all employers and employees including corporations and associations and, as expanded by Sec. 13 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, includes all persons and associations involved in a dispute over terms or conditions of employment who are engaged in the same industry, trade, craft or occupation, or have direct or indirect interests therein. The Acts cover any third party, even though that party be a corporation not in trade [9] and employers and their associations [10] even if only indirectly interested in the controversy. The Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts cannot logically be confined exclusively to the laborer who works for wages.[11]

As GHA's wilful employment of doctor-members of DMS (and AMA) and the terms and conditions of such employment was the matrix of this controversy,[12] it follows that the acts charged or proven to petitioners are not within the Sherman Act. The holding below that petitioners are not within the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts conflicts with another decision of the court below and two decisions of the Eighth Circuit.[13]

IV

The activities of GHA, charged to have been restrained, were illegal in that GHA was engaged in the corporate practice of medicine and in an insurance operation contrary to law. These facts were a complete defense as a matter of law, or at least admissible in evidence for the consideration of the jury.

On February 24, 1937, three lay persons filed a certificate of incorporation for the purpose of incorporating GHA.[14] Its activities were to be managed and controlled by a board of trustees (R. 1224).[15]

The by-laws provided for the employing and hiring of "corporation doctors" as GHA planned to render medical services to members and their dependents (R. 1232, 1341-1343, 1245-1247, 1249, 1251-1255). The evidence showed without conflict or dispute that GHA employed full-time doctors by the month, who were not permitted to have private practice (R. 293), to work in its clinic and render medical services to its members, who paid monthly dues therefor to GHA. The statement of the Court of Appeals that GHA's salaried, employee, full-time doctors were independent contractors or were called when needed has no support in the evidence.

While the Court of Appeals placed much reliance on the theory that GHA was not practicing medicine because it was a non-profit corporation, we insist that that is beside the point. (On the first appeal the Government argued that GHA was a profit-making corporation. Brief pp. 26, 46). If a corporation is rendering medical services and illegally practicing medicine, it is wholly immaterial whether it was organized for profit or not for profit. Corporations not for profit can no more obtain a license to practice medicine than a corporation for profit. Congress made no distinction between the types of corporations involved and under the Healing Arts Practice Act confined the practice of medicine to licensed qualified physicians.[16]

Moreover, membership corporations, like GHA, organized not for profit, illegally practice medicine or law when they employ doctors or lawyers on a salary basis to render medical or legal services to their members.[17]

Nor is it material that the corporation is formed along cooperative or association lines with members or subscribers; and such corporations, when they employ doctors or lawyers on a salary basis to render medical or legal services to their members or subscribers, are illegally engaged in the practice of medicine or law.[18]

The decision of the Court of Appeals conflicts with every respectable authority in this country, as the fundamental test seems to be that if a corporation hires or employs a doctor or a lawyer to render medical or legal services to members, customers, or to any person or party other than the corporate entity itself, it is illegally practicing medicine or law.[19] ticing medicine wholesale (R. 950, 951), the decision below is unsound and conflicts with earlier decisions of that court.[20] As the restraints charged primarily concerned the activities of GHA in the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services, the illegality of GHA's practice should be a complete defense. In Citizens' Who. Gro. Co. v. Snyder, 201 F. 907, it was held that a restraint under an ordinance believed to be valid, but subsequently held invalid, would not support a suit under the Sherman Act.

The Court of Appeals held that GHA could lawfully maintain a medical clinic and render medical services through employed, full-time, salaried doctors without violating Federal statutes or illegally practicing medicine, and also held that even if GHA was illegally practicing medicine, that fact was immaterial, not admissible in evidence and not arguable to the jury. This on the theory that a restraint on an illegal activity violates the Sherman Act. The Court of Appeals cites as an example that it is a crime to conspire to dynamite a house of ill repute, but we submit that does not amount to saying that it would be restraint of the trade of a house of ill repute if a medical association expelled its members who frequented such a place or accepted employment from it for the purpose of furthering its illegal activities. Moral turpitude and criminal activities have always been grounds for expulsion from medical and legal societies.

The opinion is not sound when it holds that the illegality of GHA is immaterial and inadmissible and hence a medical association restrains trade when it expels a member for accepting employment from an activity in which both the member and his employer violate Federal statutes.[21]

GHA was engaged also in an insurance operation contrary to law. It was incorporated to furnish and pay for medical services and hospitalization (R. 1241-1244). Upon the happening of a contingency, in exchange for dues, GHA paid for (or furnished) medical services and hospitalization (R. 298, 305).[22]

Thus GHA made contracts with its members (R. 298, 305) for the payment of an indemnity on account of sickness or accident, on the happening of certain contingencies, in exchange for dues. That was engaging illegally in an insurance operation.[23]

[21] Fashion Guild v. Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457, is not an authority to the contrary. The remark of the court as to torts was obiter, as no tort existed. The persons restrained were engaged in lawful business, and the claimed evil was only one element therein. Morover, a tort, under state law, is not the same as violations of Federal statutes. Here all parties are under Federal statutes, and the complete activity of GHA was inherently illegal. The Sherman Law should not be construed to protect, against restraints, activities that are in violation of Federal statutes. See Sec. 8 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, Appendix p. 58 infra, to the effect that injunctive relief cannot be granted to any complainant who has failed to comply with any obligation imposed by law if complainant is involved in a dispute within that Act.

[22] Insurance operations in the District are defined by the Act of March 3, 1901, as amended (D. C. Code 1940, Title 35, Sec. 35-202) which provides:

"Every corporation . . . transacting business in the District of Columbia, which collects premiums, dues, or assessments from its members, or from holders of its certificates or policies, and which provides for the payment of indemnity on account of sickness or accident, or a benefit in case of death, shall be known as 'health, accident, and life insurance companies or associations'."

Concededly GHA had not qualified under this Act.

GHA, on the present record, cannot be within any of the exemptions provided for by law as it is not a relief association, and its membership included employees in more than forty different agencies and bureaus.[24]

V

The motion of the petitioners for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative for a new trial, should have been granted.

The jury brought in an anomalous verdict, acquitting all twenty-one individual defendants and convicting AMA and DMS despite the fact that all acts done, which had any tendency to support the indictment, were committed by the individual defendants. Any responsibility so far as AMA and DMS are concerned must rest upon the doctrine of imputation. There is therefore no evidence to support the verdict.

After verdict petitioners filed suitable motions which presented the following propositions.

1. In determining whether there is competent evidence in the record sufficient to sustain the conviction of petitioners, all testimony relating to the acquitted individual defendants must be disregarded. All of the testimony as to the individual defendants was received in evidence under the co-conspirator rule and was not otherwise admissible. Obviously, the verdict of not guilty was a definite finding that such individual defendants were not co-conspirators, and, therefore, there was no basis left upon which the evidence submitted was competent. If a new trial were had, none of the evidence as to the acts of the individual defend-

[24] To be exempt from the Insurance Code, GHA would have to be a relief association composed solely of employees of a single branch of the United States Government service or solely of employees of any individual, company, firm, or corporation (D. C. Code 1940, Title 35, Section 35-202).

ants would be admissible, and AMA and DMS would have to answer only for their own acts. Under such circumstances the testimony of acquitted defendants should not be available in support of the conviction of the AMA and DMS, and the decisions so hold.[25] By analogy, where two persons are charged with conspiracy and one is acquitted, the evidence against such acquitted defendant is no longer available to convict the remaining defendant, and hence the other defendant must be released.[26]

Likewise in respondeat superior cases where the agent or servant who performed the act has been released, evidence pertaining to his acts and doings cannot be used to establish a liability against the master, and the case against the master must be dismissed.[27] The point is that the verdict of the jury has destroyed the basis under which the testimony was admissible; therefore it must be ignored in passing on the guilt or innocence of another defendant.

2. Any corporate liability for crime must rest on the doctrine of imputed guilt. [29] The Court of Appeals is in error when it holds that a corporation can be guilty of crime without the intervention of any human being. It may be that if a statute requires a corporation to do some affirmative act under penalty and the corporation does not comply with the statute, it could be guilty of a crime. But in no other respect could a corporation be guilty of crime without a human act being involved. Especially is this true under a charge of conspiracy which is essentially a crime of intent.

ing remains to be imputed to the corporation. It is true the indictment names "unknown" defendants, but the record is wholly barren with reference to any person or persons other than the individual defendants to substantiate any claim of conspiracy.[30]

Consequently, eliminating the testimony of the acquitted defendants, as we must, we are faced here with a total failure of proof to establish any offense on the part of AMA or DMS.

3. Ignoring, arguendo, the propositions just considered, we submit that the presence in the record of highly controversial testimony relating to and coming from the individual defendants was in itself so prejudicial as to require the setting aside of the judgment against petitioners and granting a new trial.[31] Much of the testimony as to

---

[30] This differentiates this case from United States v. General Motors Corporation, 121 F. 2d 376, in which case the court pointed out that there was sufficient additional testimony, not coming from the acquitted defendants, to sustain the verdict. Nor is this situation one involving the rule as to inconsistent verdicts announced in Dunn v. United States, 284 U. S. 390, and the cases following it. Each of those cases was specifically based upon the theory of multiple counts in an indictment wherein each count amounted to a separate offense, and because of that fact inconsistency of verdicts between counts was held to be immaterial. Here there is but a single count, and obviously the rule in the Dunn case is not applicable. The decision in United States v. Austin-Bagley Corp., 31 F. 2d 229, is also not in point because in that case it appears clearly that the acquittal of the two Government agents had no necessary factual connection with the conviction of the other defendants. The inconsistency of verdict there was only argumentative.

[31] United States v. Standard Oil Co., 23 F. Supp. 937, 939, which seems to have approval on this point in United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U. S. 150, 243; Wilson v. United States, 109 F. 2d 895, 896; Collenger v. United States, 50 F. 2d 345, 347-351.

If there ever was a case where the evidence pertaining to the acts and doings of the alleged co-conspirators found "not guilty" was of such volume and of such a prejudicial nature as to deprive the defendants found "guilty" of an adequate separate consideration of their defense, this is it. The mass of statements made by members of DMS and by committee members of the acts of the individual defendants offered by the Government to prove that they were engaged in a criminal conspiracy was exceedingly prejudicial in its nature. Such a prejudicial record departs from the American conception of a fair and impartial trial. We think it patently impossible to believe that any jury which had received and heard such prejudicial testimony could possibly have weighed and determined the guilt of AMA and DMS separate and apart from and without reference to the effect on their minds of the prejudicial testimony relating to the individual defendants. We think societies of the reputation and standing of AMA and DMS are fairly entitled to have had the jury pass upon the question of their guilt or innocence under circumstances where their responsibility received a fair separable consideration by the jury, upon the evidence competent and relevant as to them. Such a result was here humanly impossible for the reasons stated, hence a new trial should have been granted.

4. Besides the questions arising out of the verdict, petitioners contend that the evidence is generally insufficient, even if considered as a whole, to sustain any verdict of guilty for the reasons heretofore set forth in the petition. The case is without substance under the Sherman Act and equally without substance, in fact, as showing that the defendants committed any act other than peaceful argument and persuasion. The whole theory of the Government was that if anyone was antagonistic to GHA, disapproved or said anything critical about it, such fact raised a jury question as to resulting restraints, and if the members of petitioners in their meetings expressed objections

DMS as set forth in the minutes of DMS and its committees which was admitted against all the defendants in this case is amply sufficient to entitle these petitioners to a new trial. Other examples of prejudice are the great mass of background evidence, and the letters, statements, and other activities of the individual defendants.

to or disapproval of GHA then the concert of minds at such meetings was insisted by the Government to be sufficient proof to establish conspiracy against petitioners. The Court of Appeals in its first opinion specifically stated that the defendants were entitled to show that their acts were reasonable regulations of professional practice, and yet the very discussion of what the defendants thought it necessary to do in their own protection is charged as sufficient basis from which a jury can find a criminal conspiracy. Likewise the Court of Appeals holds in its first and second opinions that petitioners had full rights of argument and persuasion, yet when they attempt to exercise either right they are met with the contention that they were restraining GHA in violation of the Sherman Act. The doctrine contended for by the Government would destroy the efficiency of every voluntary organization formed for the protection of the interests of its members, and would prohibit any criticism of GHA.

Obviously, we cannot here set forth at length, detail upon detail, the evidence contained in the very lengthy record in this case. But we desire to make it perfectly clear that we are contending to the Court here that the entire record is utterly insufficient to sustain the charge.

VI.

The court erred in receiving certain evidence on behalf of the United States.

(a) There was received in evidence so-called "background" evidence concerning various actions taken by the AMA throughout the United States, antedating by many years the alleged conspiracy described in the indictment, without any effort being made whatever to prove the nature and kind of the plans involved in the actions at the faraway places or whether such plans were good or evil or bore any resemblance to GHA. Moreover, such acts were unknown to DMS. Such evidence did not pertain to acts which were unlawful where done. The rulings below conflict with American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co., 213 U. S. 347, 358; Wilson v. United States, 109 F. 2d 895, 896, and Eastern States Petroleum Co. v. Asiatic P. Corp., 103 F. 2d 315, 319. The conviction of petitioners might well be the definite result of the admission of this evidence. The Chicago Board of Trade case cited to support the decision below is obviously not in point. The "background" there was in the same jurisdiction, was immediate in point of time, concerned the sole defendant, and related to the precise acts presently involved in the action of the Board. The same is true of the other cases cited by the Court of Appeals on this point. After petitioners' motion to strike such evidence was denied, their requested instructions (R. 1485, 1486, 1492) limiting the probative force of such evidence were refused.

(b) The minutes of DMS, made up by the secretary, who was a defendant, from recollection, contained summaries of alleged statements made by individual defendants, and letters, statements and memoranda were attached thereto. On the theory that the secretary was a co-conspirator, the minutes were accepted as evidence to show that the recorded statements of members were, in fact, made and thereby constituted such members also co-conspirators. The statements made by such members were the discussions, arguments, and statements commonly and usually made in society meetings when discussing matters in which those present were interested. Such evidence was hearsay and should have been rejected on petitioners' objection.

(c) Petitioners objected to the statements, letters, and memoranda of the subordinate employees of the hospitals and of the doctors and interns on the staffs of the hospitals who were not even employees of said hospitals, which were offered for the purpose of showing that the hospitals were prima facie parties to the alleged conspiracy or for the purpose of showing what the hospitals did, if and when there was a prima facie showing that the hospital was a party to the conspiracy. This evidence was not admissible because such persons were not agents of the hospitals and had no authority to bind the hospitals, and the evidence had no tendency to prove prima facie that the hospitals were parties to the alleged conspiracy. All of such evidence was pure hearsay. Because the hospitals refused privileges to GHA doctors, that fact was asserted sufficient to show a conspiracy between petitioners and the hospitals, although the hospitals were independent corporations and specifically denied any such connection. There is no evidence in the record to support a finding of conspiracy between petitioners and the hospitals.

(d) In a similar way a great mass of evidence was admitted relating to Harris County Medical Society, Washington Academy of Surgery, and Drs. Martel and Young, all of whom were found "not guilty" by directed verdict. Much of this evidence was "hospital" evidence. Damaging evidence pertaining to the activities of these discharged defendants was admitted over objection in the first instance, and then after the record had been permanently poisoned by the admission of such evidence the court directed a verdict in their favor at the close of the Government's case. But the damage had already been accomplished. The evidence of their activities could not have been prima facie evidence that they were co-conspirators, or the court could not have directed a verdict in their favor. Petitioners' motion to strike the "hospital" evidence was denied.

The court erred in refusing evidence offered by petitioners.

The indictment in more than a score of instances charged that the petitioners did the acts complained of "for the purpose of" restraining GHA. Petitioners denied they had any such purpose, but asserted that on the contrary their purpose was simply to enforce their agreements for self discipline of their members and to protect and defend their own organizations against the proselyting efforts of GHA. In pointing out the purpose actuating petitioners, it, therefore, was essential to show what kind of an organization GHA was and what its acts were which might definitely characterize it. One of the charges made against petitioners was that GHA was refused "approval" and thereby prevented, under society laws, from business engagements or professional consultations with society members and that this approval was withheld in order to restrain GHA. Petitioners took sharp issue and insisted that it was the illegal, improper, and unethical status of GHA which was the reason for the non-approval of employment by GHA of petitioners' members and that the question of approval had reference only to the enforcement of agreed rules and regulations consented to by those members. If GHA's activities were illegal and petitioners' members accepted employment from it for the purpose of furthering such activities, they would be equally guilty with GHA of violating the law.[32]

The Government objected to the receipt of evidence intended to show the character and illegality of GHA, asserting petitioners' purpose was immaterial if GHA was restrained. The court sustained the position of the Government in its entirety and refused to permit petitioners to introduce the desired evidence or to argue such questions to the jury. During the trial, for the purpose of clarifying the issue, petitioners presented to the court written and [32] The proffered evidence was also admissible to show that GHA ran afoul of Sec. 8 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, appendix, p. 58 infra, which is to the effect that injunctive relief cannot be granted to any complainant who has failed to comply with any obligation imposed by law, if complainant is involved in a dispute within the Act.

oral offers of proof,[33] which tended to prove the following ultimate facts:

(a) that GHA was engaged in the corporate practice of medicine contrary to law, and was engaged in an insurance operation contrary to law, and was otherwise violating Federal statutes, and that it had been so held by public officials and private legal opinion, and petitioners so believed;

(b) that GHA was subsidized by public funds contrary to law and by private funds; was an instrumentality of a plan to destroy the private practice of medicine; was economically and financially unsound; sold medical services below cost; and was in unfair competition with the doctors who were members of the petitioning medical societies;

(c) that GHA was receiving and expending money of Home Owners Loan Corporation[34] and using Federal purchasing discounts contrary to law; and that a committee of the House of Representatives of Congress (R. 1420) and the Comptroller General of the United States had so held (R. 918-920), and petitioners so believed;

(d) that GHA was conspiring with HOLC to violate a Federal statute[35] pertaining to the assignment of wages of Federal employees, and conspiring with HOLC to defraud the United States in taking money of HOLC for the purpose of its operations; and that the Comptroller General of the United States had so held, and petitioners so believed;

(e) that coercion was used on behalf of GHA to cause employees of HOLC, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, and Federal Home Loan Bank Board, to become members of GHA;

---

[33] R. 910-920, 940-945, 961, 1011, 1013-1025, 1355, 1356, 1363, 1420, 1429-1435, 1438, and 1440.

[34] Hereinafter referred to as HOLC.

[35] The assignments of the wages and salaries of employees of HOLC to GHA were invalid. R. S. Sec. 3477, May 27, 1908, c. 406 (35 Stat. 411), 31 U. S. C. 203. The Comptroller General so held (R. 919, 920).

(f) that GHA and others on its behalf solicited employees of HOLC and other departments of the United States Government to become members of GHA;

(g) that GHA advertised for members;

(h) that GHA violated the Constitution, By-Laws, Rules, and Principles of Medical Ethics of DMS, and the Principles of Medical Ethics of the AMA and of the medical profession;

(i) that GHA could not, as set up, render good medical services and was not rendering good medical services, and was not rendering the medical services which it agreed to render;

(j) that the intent and purpose of the petitioners were not as charged in the indictment, but on the contrary were to protect their members, their societies, and their constitutions, by-laws, rules and principles of medical ethics; and

(k) that the alleged contemplated restraints were not unreasonable restraints and not direct restraints.

The court denied the proffered evidence and refused to permit any argument to the jury thereon.

We think the refusal by the trial court of petitioners' proffered evidence was obviously erroneous. The decision in Chicago Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U. S. 231, reversed a similar ruling made on behalf of the Government and said (p. 238):

> "The history of restraint, the evil believed to exist, the reason for adopting the particular remedy, the purpose or end sought to be attained, are all relevant facts. This is not because a good intention will save an otherwise objectionable regulation or the reverse; but because knowledge of intent may help the court to interpret facts and to predict consequences. The District Court erred, therefore, in striking from the answer allegations concerning the history and purpose of the Call rule and later in excluding evidence on the subject."

The proffered evidence was not merely reasons or excuses for what was done. It went to the very heart of the intent and purpose of petitioners and also to the reasonableness and directness of the alleged restraint. The intention and purpose of petitioners were to protect their societies, their constitution, by-laws, rules, and principles of medical ethics, and the illegality of the practices of GHA, if true, struck at the very heart of these things. From a great mass of evidence, all of which was perfectly legal in and of itself, the Government insisted upon an ulterior evil intent and purpose. Since legality is to be presumed, the evidence offered should have been admitted in order to establish that such lawful acts were done for lawful purposes.

The proffered evidence also went to the question whether the alleged restraints affected the market either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that prices were substantially affected, to the injury of the public.

VIII

The court erred in refusing instructions requested by petitioners and in charging the jury.

Many of the petitioners' requests for instructions to the jury were refused, and many requests of the Government were, over objection, granted. The charge followed the Government's theory of the case. The discussion between court and counsel pertaining to the requested instructions (R. 1456-1496) disclosed the theories of the prosecution and the defense.

The Court of Appeals erroneously affirmed the action of the trial court in refusing to charge at petitioners' request as follows: that a conspiracy to be a violation of the Act must, by reason of purpose or intent prejudice the public interests by unduly restricting competition or unduly obstructing trade (R. 1471, 1472, 1494); that where a combination or conspiracy was entered into with the object of properly and fairly regulating the practice of medicine, that would not violate the Act; that if the jury found that the alleged conspiracy was a reasonable regulation of the practice of medicine and that its effect on trade is but indirect, that would not violate the Act (R. 1472, 1476); that if the jury found that petitioners did not intend to enter into a conspiracy or further any unlawful purpose, a conviction would not be warranted (R. 1480); that if GHA was engaged illegally in the practice of medicine, petitioners could enforce their rules and regulations forbidding members from aiding and abetting the illegal practice of medicine (R. 1474); that petitioners might oppose and criticize GHA and that, without more, would not violate the Act (R. 1484, 1485); that petitioners had the right to approve and disapprove all types of medical practice and make known their conclusions (R. 1477, 1478); that petitioners had the right of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument to support what they believed was fair competition in the medical profession (R. 1477, 1492); that acts done by AMA prior to January 1, 1937, were only admissible as furnishing a background for a connection by AMA with the alleged conspiracy and cannot be used for the purpose of establishing the existence of the conspiracy (R. 1485, 1486); that the Milwaukee situation could only be considered as background to explain other testimony in the case (R. 1492); that if petitioners acted in self-interest, that is, protecting themselves from attack and opposition, that would not be a conspiracy to violate the Act (R. 1486); that DMS could adopt a constitutional provision forbidding members to have professional relationships with organizations engaged in the practice of medicine until such organizations had been approved by DMS and that membership in DMS is conditional upon compliance with the constitution (R. 1491); that Washington hospitals have the right to pass upon applicants for privileges as the hospitals deem desirable, proper and necessary (R. 1491); that if the jury found that in the GHA arrangement the proper doctor and patient relationship was destroyed and the doctors rendered the hired servants of GHA, then GHA was practicing medicine illegally (R. 1475) and that petitioners, if appropriate facts were found, were under the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts and therefore, not guilty (R. 1493).

The Court of Appeals erroneously overruled petitioners' contentions that the charge to the jury was incorrect in the following particulars:

Gov. Instruction 13, given, charged in part (R. 1459, 1499) "* * * every person, who knowing of a conspiracy does any act or makes any statement intended to further the objects thereof, does thereby become a party to the unlawful conspiracy."

Gov. Instruction 14, given, (R. 1459, 1460, 1508) omitted one of the purposes of restraint charged in the indictment, i. e., restraining members of GHA, and the charge (R. 1508) stated that petitioners could be convicted if they were guilty of at least one of the purposes of restraint charged. (There was only one count; conspiracy is an agreement and must be proved as laid).

Gov. Instruction 22, given, (R. 1460, 1461, 1497, 1498) charged that if the jury found that petitioners were engaged in a conspiracy as charged, it was unnecessary for them to decide whether GHA violated the Principles of Medical Ethics, and it was immaterial that members of GHA may not have had freedom of choice of physicians or that GHA solicited Government employees to join it and that none of these matters should be considered by the jury in reaching their verdict.

Gov. Instructions 23 and 24, given, (R. 1464, 1467, 1468) charge that the quality of medical care rendered by GHA, its financial condition and its subsidies are irrelevant.

The charge stated (R. 1507) "one may also be liable for an overt act, though actually performed by another, if he knowingly instigates or supports the same by advising, encouraging, or abetting it"; and (R. 1507) "* * * acts and declarations of each party, shown to be a conspirator, in furtherance of the conspiracy, may be considered by the jury, in determining the guilt of others who are accused"; and (R. 1510) "as to corporate defendants they will be responsible if authorized officers acting for the corporation or in the name of the corporation, did acts within the apparent scope of the corporate powers, in forming or furthering the alleged conspiracy"; and (R. 1510) "* * * rules and regulatory actions cannot be justified where the real purpose or the natural results, are to interfere with free competition", and throughout the charge the court stated that the different methods and quality of medical care (R. 1498, 1512), the legality of GHA, its financial unsoundness, source of financial support or the fact that it was subsidized, petitioners' belief of illegality of GHA, and whether GHA violated medical ethics (R. 1497, 1498) were all irrelevant and immaterial. The denial of petitioners' instructions and the charge, as given, amounted to a directed verdict against petitioners.

CONCLUSION.

It is respectfully submitted that the petition should be granted and the judgments below reversed.

APPENDIX.

Sec. 2 of the Sherman Act of July 2, 1890, c. 647 (26 Stat. 209), 15 U. S. C. Sec. 3, reads in part:

"Every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce * * * of the District of Columbia, or in restraint of trade or commerce between * * * the District of Columbia and any state or states or foreign nations, is declared illegal."

Sec. 1 of the Clayton Act of October 15, 1914, c. 323 (38 Stat. 730), 29 U. S. C. 53, reads:

"The word 'person' or 'persons' wherever used in section 52 of this title shall be deemed to include corporations and associations existing under or authorized by the laws of either the United States, the laws of any of the Territories, the laws of any State, or the laws of any foreign country."

Sec. 6 of the Clayton Act of October 15, 1914, c. 323 (38 Stat. 731), 15 U. S. C. 17, reads in part:

"The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce."

Sec. 20 of the Clayton Act of October 15, 1914, c. 323 (38 Stat. 738), 29 U. S. C. 52, reads:

"No restraining order or injunction shall be granted by any court of the United States, or a judge or the judges thereof, in any case between an employer and employees, or between employers and employees, or between employees, or between persons employed and persons seeking employment, involving, or growing out of, a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment, unless necessary to prevent irreparable injury to property, or to a property right, of the party making the application, for which injury there is no adequate remedy at law, and such property or property right must be described with particularity in the application, which must be in writing and sworn to by the applicant or by his agent or attorney.

"And no such restraining order or injunction shall prohibit any person or persons, whether singly or in concert, from terminating any relation of employment, or from ceasing to perform any work or labor, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful means so to do; or from attending at any place where any such person or persons may lawfully be, for the purpose of peacefully obtaining or communicating information, or from peacefully persuading any person to work or to abstain from working; or from ceasing to patronize or to employ any party to such dispute, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful and lawful means so to do; or from paying or giving to, or withholding from, any person engaged in such dispute, any strike benefits or other moneys or things of value; or from peaceably assembling in a lawful manner, and for lawful purposes; or from doing any act or thing which might lawfully be done in the absence of such dispute by any party thereto; nor shall any of the acts specified in this paragraph be considered or held to be violations of any law of the United States."

Sec. 4 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 70), 29 U. S. C. 104, reads:

"No court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to issue any restraining order or temporary or permanent injunction in any case involving or growing out of any labor dispute to prohibit any person or persons participating or interested in such dispute (as these terms are herein defined) from doing, whether singly or in concert, any of the following acts:

(a) Ceasing or refusing to perform any work or to remain in any relation of employment;

(b) Becoming or remaining a member of any labor organization or of any employer organization, regardless of any such undertaking or promise as is described in section 103 of this title;

(c) Paying or giving to, or withholding from, any person participating or interested in such labor dispute, any strike or unemployment benefits or insurance, or other moneys or things of value;

(d) By all lawful means aiding any person participating or interested in any labor dispute who is being proceeded against in, or is prosecuting, any action or suit in any court of the United States or of any State;

(e) Giving publicity to the existence of, or the facts involved in, any labor dispute, whether by advertising, speaking, patrolling, or by any other method not involving fraud or violence;

(f) Assembling peaceably to act or to organize to act in promotion of their interest in a labor dispute;

(g) Advising or notifying any person of an intention to do any of the acts heretofore specified;

(h) Agreeing with other persons to do or not to do any of the acts heretofore specified; and

(i) Advising, urging, or otherwise causing or inducing without fraud or violence the acts heretofore specified; regardless of any such undertaking or promise as is described in section 103 of this title."

Sec. 5 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 71), 29 U. S. C. 105, reads:

"No court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to issue a restraining order or temporary or permanent injunction upon the ground that any of the persons participating or interested in a labor dispute constitute or are engaged in an unlawful combination or conspiracy because of the doing in concert of the acts enumerated in section 104 of this title."

Sec. 6 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 71), 29 U. S. C. 106, reads:

"No officer or member of any association or organization, and no association or organization participating or interested in a labor dispute, shall be held responsible or liable in any court of the United States for the unlawful acts of individual officers, members, or agents, except upon clear proof of actual participation in, or actual authorization of, such acts, or of ratification of such acts after actual knowledge thereof."

Sec. 8 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 72), 29 U. S. C. 108, reads:

"No restraining order or injunctive relief shall be granted to any complainant who has failed to comply with any obligation imposed by law which is involved in the labor dispute in question, or who has failed to make every reasonable effort to settle such dispute either by negotiation or with the aid of any available governmental machinery of mediation or voluntary arbitration."

Sec. 13 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 73), 29 U. S. C. 113, reads:

"When used in sections 101-115 of this title, and for the purposes of such sections—(a) A case shall be held to involve or to grow out of a labor dispute when the case involves persons who are engaged in the same industry, trade, craft, or occupation; or have direct or indirect interests therein; or who are employees of the same employer; or who are members of the same or an affiliated organization of employers or employees; whether such dispute is (1) between one or more employers or associations of employers and one or more employees or associations of employees; (2) between one or more employers or associations of employers and one or more employers or associations of employers; or (3) between one or more employees or associations of employees and one or more employees or association of employees; or when the case involves any conflicting or competing interests in a 'labor dispute' (as defined in this section) of 'persons' participating or interested' therein (as defined in this section).

(b) A person or association shall be held to be a person participating or interested in a labor dispute if relief is sought against him or it, and if he or it is engaged in the same industry, trade, craft, or occupation in which such dispute occurs, or has a direct or indirect interest therein, or is a member, officer, or agent of any association composed in whole or in part of employers or employees engaged in such industry, trade, craft or occupation.

(c) The term 'labor dispute' includes any controversy concerning terms or conditions of employment, or concerning the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing, or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment, regardless of whether or not the disputants stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee.

(d) The term 'court of the United States' means any court of the United States whose jurisdiction has been or may be conferred or defined or limited by Act of Congress, including the courts of the District of Columbia.".

The Act of Feb. 27, 1929, c. 352 (45 Stat. 1326), known as the "Healing Arts Practice Act" (D. C. Code, 1940, Title 2, sections 2-101 to 2-130) is all inclusive and comprehends every kind and character of medical treatment.

Sec. 2-101 (a) defines "disease."

Sec. 2-101 (b) defines "The Healing Art" to mean:

"the art of detecting or attempting to detect the presence of any disease; of determining or attempting to determine the nature and state of any disease, if present; of preventing, relieving, correcting or curing, or of attempting to prevent, relieve, correct or cure any disease; of safeguarding or attempting to safeguard the life of any woman and infant through pregnancy and parturition; and of doing or attempting to do any of the acts enumerated above;"

Sec. 2-101 (c) provides:

" 'To practice' means to do or attempt to do, or to hold oneself out or to allow oneself to be held out as ready to do, any act enumerated in subsection (b) of this section as constituting a part of the healing art, for a fee, gift, or reward, or in anticipation of any fee, gift, or reward, whether tangible or intangible."

Sec. 2-102 forbids the practice of the healing art without a license.

Sec. 2-103 establishes a commission of licensure, prescribes for professional education, minimum educational or training requirements, the taking of examinations for fitness to practice by applicants, and the procedure for issuing licenses. The section renders it impossible for other than a natural person to practice the healing art legally.

REPLY BRIEF FOR PETITIONERS.

Under "Questions Presented" respondent boldly states, as though it were definitely established and not in issue, that petitioners were engaged in a combination to hinder and obstruct by means of boycotts the operation of Group Health Association, Inc.,[1] and then states that the principal question presented is whether the combination was "in restraint of trade" within the meaning of Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act. Respondent's method of thus stating the "Questions Presented" is wholly unwarranted. Petitioners insist there is no lawful evidence in the record tending to show that they or either of them were engaged in such a combination or conspiracy. Respondent boldly and arbitrarily assumes the existence of the very facts which petitioners seek, by this petition, to refute.

[1] Hereinafter referred to as GHA.

REPLY TO RESPONDENT'S STATEMENT.

Respondent states (Br. 11) "When two members of" the Medical Society of the District of Columbia [2] "joined the staff of GHA, the DMS instituted proceedings to expel them". That statement is misleading. After a full hearing, wherein Dr. Scandiffio was represented by the General Counsel of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and four of his legal assistants, the Executive Committee made findings of fact to the effect that Dr. Scandiffio had violated the Constitution of DMS as charged and recommended to the membership of DMS that he be expelled from DMS. The membership of DMS voted the expulsion of Dr. Scandiffio for the violation of its Constitution as charged. He appealed to the American Medical Association[3] and that appeal is pending (R. 1067).

Respondent quotes (Br. 12) the November 3, 1937 resolution of DMS. That resolution was submitted to DMS by Dr Willson on his sole initiative. It was not the result of any combination or conspiracy. (R. 1270) Its resolving part directs the Hospital Committee to give "study and consideration to all phases of this subject and report back to the society * * * its recommendations * * *." Dr. Willson testified, and his testimony was undisputed,

---

[2] Hereinafter referred to as DMS.
[3] Hereinafter referred to as AMA.

that his sole purpose in submitting the resolution was to kill the "Sprigg letter" (the contents of which are not of record), which it succeeded in doing (R. 1269-1272, 1285-1299).

The resolutions of DMS of December 1, 1937 (Gov. Ex. 37, Br. 13) and March 28, 1938 (Gov. Ex. 324, Br. 13, 14) go no further than recommendation. Nothing was ever done by DMS or anyone else concerning those resolutions. The hospitals, through their officers and staff members, testified they considered the December 1 resolution a mere recommendation and did not consider it either coercion or a threat (R. 1115, 1161, 1318, 1320, 1321, 1323, 1336). Nothing ever was done concerning the hospitals that ignored it.

Respondent states (Br. 14, 15) that the action of DMS "was undertaken with the knowledge and approval of the AMA" and that "the AMA was in a large measure responsible for shaping the hostile policy of its local affiliate toward GHA * * *," and that "AMA was directly instrumental in obtaining the exclusion of the GHA doctors from the Washington hospitals." Petitioners insist there is no competent evidence in the record to support any such conclusions. The references cited by respondent do not warrant any such statements.

RESPONDENT'S ATTITUDE ON THE PETITION FOR CERTIORARI.

I.

Respondent refers to a previous petition by it for certiorari in this case (No. 377, October Term, 1939, den. 308 U. S. 599) and a previous petition by these petitioners for certiorari (No. 959, October Term, 1939, den. 310 U. S. 644), both of which petitions pertained to the demurrer of petitioners to the indictment. In those petitions for certiorari respondent took an entirely different position in this Court than it now takes. Respondent now argues in opposition to certiorari that "the decision is probably limited in effect to the District of Columbia, that the question has received comprehensive treatment by the Court of Appeals and that the decision appears to be clearly correct." Such an argument is a curious method of emasculating the rules of this Court concerning certiorari. The two opinions of the Court of Appeals, United States v. American Medical Association, et al., 72 App. D. C. 12, 110 F. 2d 703, and American Medical Association, et al v. United States (R. 1886), are not limited in effect to the District of Columbia, as everyone knows, but even if they were, the granting of certiorari is not dependent upon either the "local" effect of a decision, a prior certiorari ruling on interlocutory orders, the claimed comprehensive treatment by a Court of Appeals, or the assertion of a respondent that the decision below is correct.

The argument now made by respondent in opposition to certiorari is interesting in view of the fact that it has previously taken exactly the contrary position. In contending that this case involves national effects and policies, and was not local in scope, respondent in its petition for certiorari stated (No. 377, October Term, 1939, p. 9, den. 308 U. S. 599):

> "The public interest will be promoted by prompt settlement in this Court of the questions involved. The legal status of policies and practices of a controlling group of a most important and respected profession is in issue. Although the specific issues here involved relate immediately to the District of Columbia, their significance is nation-wide. A pronouncement by this Court upon the legality here of the activities for which defendants have been indicted will affect the conditions of medical practice throughout the United States."

> "The question is so important to the Government and the public on the one hand, and to the defendants and the dominant elements controlling organized medicine on the other, that neither side can be expected to accept as final an adverse decision by the Court of Appeals." (Italics supplied).

In arguing that it made no difference how the Court of Appeals treated the question involved in this case that this Court should finally pass upon them, respondent stated (pp. 9, 10):

> "• • • However that court (Court of Appeals) might decide the question, application would be made to this Court for an authoritative answer. In view of the nature of the issues, it is probable that this Court would then see fit to grant the petition for a writ of certiorari. • • •"
> "Until the decisions of the lower courts have been reviewed by this Court they will doubtless be factors in shaping policies for the future. If eventually the indictment is to be upheld, it would be unfortunate for both sides in this controversy if the period before final determination should be so extended as to permit policies to be formed and executed in reliance on decisions which are not final."

In arguing that the questions here involved have not been, but should be, settled by this Court, regardless of what decisions the "lower courts" rendered, respondent stated (p. 12):

> "The court below has decided questions of substance relating to the construction and application of a statute of the United States, which have not been, but should be, settled by this Court. The case presents for the first time the question of the application of Section 3 of the Sherman Anti-trust Act to restraints upon the business of an organization engaged in arranging for the medical care of members, to restraints on the business of hospitals, and to restraints upon medical practice."

Respondent in its brief in opposition to petitioners' previous petition for certiorari to this Court stated (No. 959, October Term, 1939, pp. 13, 14, den. 310 U. S. 644):

> "Petitioners contend that the court below decided an important question involving the construction of the Sherman Act which has not been, but should be, settled by this Court. This is whether under Section 3 a combination to prevent, by boycott and coercion, competent doctors from freely pursuing their chosen occupation in the District of Columbia constitutes a forbidden combination in restraint of trade. It may be assumed that this question of statutory interpretation is a novel one of importance sufficient for this Court to settle, but, for the reasons heretofore given, review should not be granted at this preliminary stage of the proceedings. In addition, it is desirable that the legal question presented be decided against a full factual background. Trial of the issues will develop the detailed facts as to the purposes, operation, and effect of petitioners' combination, which may well be essential to proper decision."

Thus respondent, where the issue was the correctness of the judgment of the District Court on the demurrer to the indictment insisted that the issues involved were of sufficient importance for decision by this Court. Where the issue involved was the correctness of the judgment of the Court of Appeals on the demurrer to the indictment, respondent conceded that the issues involved were of sufficient importance for decision by this Court, but argued certiorari should await the time when the issues could be decided with a full factual background.

So we are compelled to the conclusion that respondent's present opposition to certiorari comes with poor grace. If the issues presented by the previous petitions for certiorari were important then, they are just as important now.

In addition other exceedingly important questions that go to the heart of the convictions, and involving the usual reasons for granting the writ of certiorari, are presented.

1. Respondent attempts (Br. 19) to inject "commercial competition" and "the market" into this case. The attempt comes a little late. No such elements were involved in either the indictment or the evidence. Those phrases are a belated attempt to bring this case within the law as declared in Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469. The indictment was drawn and the case was tried on an entirely different theory, i.e., that restraint on any individual in earning a livelihood violates the Sherman Act. In fact, respondent conceded on the first appeal (United States v. American Medical Association, et al., 72 App. D. C. 12, 110 F. 2d 703, Br. 24) that:

> "The present case, like other Sherman Act cases, has to do with restraints in a field of economic activity. Broadly speaking, it differs from previous cases only in that some of these restraints are, not upon commercial and industrial activities, but upon the marketing of a professional service. On analysis it will be found that the case involves considerations of public interest and individual freedom that are common to all Sherman Act cases". (Italics supplied.)

Such a concession is fatal to this prosecution if the opinion in the Apex case is followed. Fashion Guild v. Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457, 466, is not to the contrary.

2. Respondent says (Br. 20, 21) "* * * the question * * * of substance relating to the construction" of the Sherman Act "relates to activities wholly within the District of Columbia" and is "the equivalent of the construction of a statute limited * * * to the District * * *." Respondent then argues that the construction of Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act is "unlikely" to "influence the enforcement of the Sherman Act beyond the District * * *", arguing the practice of medicine elsewhere is an intrastate activity. Respondent cites Del Vecchio v. Bowers, 296 U. S. 280, 285, but that decision holds that construction of a portion of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act by the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia warrants certiorari because, while conceding that the Act is a "Compensation Act" for the District of Columbia, it is also in effect elsewhere in the country. "Restraint of trade" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act must mean the same as it does in Section 1, and Sec. 1 is effective elsewhere in the country. Hence this citation really supports the petition for certiorari.

Respondent's earlier positions that the issues involved are "novel", of "such importance", have "nation-wide application", will shape future policies throughout the nation, and no matter how decided by the court below, ought to be settled finally by this Court, should be contrasted with its present position of opposition to certiorari.

Moreover, respondent's premise is unsound for several reasons: First, Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act (15 U. S. C. 3) covers not only the District of Columbia but > "trade or commerce in any Territory of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or * * * between any such Territory and another, or between any such Territory or Territories and any State or States or the District of Columbia, or with foreign nations, or between the District of Columbia and any State or States or foreign nations".

Thus the decisions below can control and influence policies in enforcing the Sherman Act outside the District as respondent has previously conceded. Furthermore "restraint of trade" in one section of the Sherman Act undoubtedly means the same as "restraint of trade" in another section thereof. Second, the construction placed upon the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts by the decisions below is not confined to the District. Third, subdivisions (b) and (c) of Sec. 5 of Rule 38 of this Court make "local decisions" where a conflict exists, or they decide questions of "general importance", or where they do not give proper effect to decisions of this Court, or where they relate to the construction of a statute of the United States, proper grounds for certiorari.

Respondent's attempt to have this Court confine the writs of certiorari to a consideration of the construction of Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act alone, indicates it is sensitive to the inconsistent positions it has taken in this case. We submit that this Court cannot decide the issues satisfactorily to itself by limiting the scope of the writs.

II.

Respondent asserts in substance (Br. 22):

First, That even if there is no evidence in the record to support the verdict this Court will not concern itself with that fact. We do not believe that this Court will permit the conviction of these petitioners to stand unless it is of the opinion that there is substantial evidence in the record to support the verdict.

Second, That the rulings of the trial court concerning admissibility of evidence and on the instructions to the jury, and the petitioners' claim that the indictment contains prejudicial and irrelevant matter do not require any discussion beyond the comments made in the margin (Footnote 37, Br. 22). In that footnote respondent incorrectly states that "The evidence (of conduct of the AMA outside the District and long antedating the alleged conspiracy) was received only to show the plan and purpose of the American Medical Association in the commission of the illegal acts charged * * *." The fact is that such evidence was offered against both AMA and DMS and was received against both AMA and DMS, and there was no evidence tending to show that DMS had knowledge of any of the activities antedating the alleged conspiracy. The evidence complained of was admitted over timely objections of both AMA and DMS, and the motion of both AMA and DMS to strike such evidence was denied. Furthermore petitioners' requested instructions (R. 1485, 1486, 1492) limiting the probative force of that evidence to background, plan or purpose, were refused. Fashion Guild v. Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457, 468, does not sustain the action of the trial court in admitting the evidence of which petitioners complain.

1. Respondent states (Br. 23) that the cases cited by petitioners to show that Sec. 20 of the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts preclude this prosecution "are not in point," on the issue posed by petitioners, because it says the issue involved here is the way in which doctors shall provide medical care in a community. It goes without saying that is not the issue involved here. The charge is that petitioners restrained GHA in its employment of doctors to render medical services to the members of GHA. There is no charge in the indictment pertaining to the way doctors shall provide medical care. Respondent's real position necessarily is that a dispute over the employment of a doctor by a corporation like GHA is not the kind of a dispute and does not involve an employee "which the Act was intended to protect". How, if doctors are in "trade" under the Sherman Act, and are in a dispute over employment, they are not within the words "trade" or "occupation," as those words are used in the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, is difficult for us to understand. It seems to us that it must be conceded by all reasonable men that if a doctor is included within the meaning of the word "trade" in the Sherman Act he should also be within the meaning of the words "trade" or "occupation" in the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts. If that is true, the question presented is whether there was a dispute in this case concerning terms and conditions of employment in which petitioners were both directly and indirectly interested. Respondent seems to concede that there was such a dispute and that petitioners were interested therein, but that the Acts do not apply under the circumstances of this case.

2. Respondent attempts (Br. 25) to belittle the importance of the questions whether GHA was illegally practicing medicine and insurance. The two decisions below are far-reaching and open the door to corporate practice of medicine heretofore unanimously declared illegal by practically all the decisions of the federal and state courts of this country. Whether or not a corporation for profit, or not for profit, can employ doctors on a full time basis to render medical services to members of the corporation at the offices of the corporation, is of sufficient importance to be settled by this Court. Whether a corporation like GHA can evade the insurance laws of the District of Columbia and conduct an insurance business without complying with the statutes pertaining thereto is also of sufficient importance to be settled by this Court.

Respondent (Footnote 42, Br. 27) argues that the requirement of two animate conspirators concededly necessary to sustain a charge of conspiracy, is satisfied because two defendants were convicted. The fallacy of that argument is plain. Conspiracy is a crime of intent and must involve two human minds. Where no human agents are convicted or involved by the evidence, the crime cannot exist. Hence, saying that two corporations are left is an affront to logic and reason. Respondent's further statement (Footnote 42, Br. 27) that the principal and agent, master and servant cases cited by petitioners (Petition, p. 41, Footnote 27) are confined to cases where the act of the servant is "unauthorized" is flatly incorrect. None of the 38 cases cited, including decisions of this Court and of courts of review of twenty-five states, involved the unauthorized act of a servant. Each case cited is in point and all of them hold that verdicts against the master, principal or corporation must be set aside where all of the agents or servants through whom the master, principal or corporation could have acted in committing the "tort" or "crime" in question, are acquitted. Eliminating from the record the evidence pertaining to the acts and doings of the individual defendants found "not guilty" there is not a scintilla of evidence to support the verdict.

The concession in respondent's brief (p. 21) that "the decision below may have persuasive effect outside the District and involves important interests," is something of an understatement in view of the publicly expressed intention of the Department of Justice to apply the decision to situations arising outside the District. Respondent, apparently sensitive about its inconsistent position, indicated a possible acquiescence in certiorari (Br. 21) if the same is limited to the construction of the Sherman Act alone. We assume such a construction would necessarily involve a construction of the applicable sections of the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts. Acquiescence gives no right to certiorari. We have some doubt whether it is even in aid of a petition, but we are earnestly exercised lest the Court, in the proper protection of the scope of its certiorari power, should accept respondent's suggestion that certiorari be confined to questions involved in the interpretation of the Sherman Act alone, which would necessarily involve the interpretation of the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts.

The decision of the Court of Appeals as to the other important questions referred to by respondent (Br. 22-27) should never be permitted by this Court to stand, unless and until it has examined those questions and investigated this record, and is, therefore, able to reach a reasoned conclusion with respect to the soundness of the decisions below.

Concretely, we do not think it has yet been held by this Court:

1. That a restraint on activities forbidden by federal statutes is a basis for prosecution under the Sherman Act.

2. That under an indictment for conspiracy to violate Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act, evidence is admissible against all the defendants, of the activities of one of the defendants throughout the United States antedating by many years the beginning of the alleged conspiracy.

3. That petitioners, charged with acts "for the purpose of causing unlawful restraints," may not offer evidence to show an entirely different purpose, under the ruling announced by this Court in Chicago Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U. S. 231, 238.

4. That the rule as to inconsistent verdicts, as announced in Dunn v. United States, 284 U. S. 390, based solely on the fact that the indictment involved presented multiple counts, is an authority for holding that a legally impossible verdict is good, where the indictment contains only a single count.

5. That despite the acquittal of all of the individual defendants who actually did the acts which it is asserted were unlawful, without other evidence in the record sufficient to sustain the charge in the indictment, the evidence of the acts and doings of the acquitted individual defendants may still be used to support a verdict of guilty against corporate defendants, against whom no other evidence existed. This is why we cited in the petition the conspiracy and respondeat superior cases. Respondent cites (Br. 8-10) some of this very evidence relating to the defendants who were acquitted, notwithstanding such acquittal, as tending to show the guilt of the petitioners here, regardless of the fact that such liability can only be predicated upon the theory of guilt, by imputation. The General Motors case referred to by respondent [4] specifically found that evidence, other than that concerning the acquitted defendants, existed, sufficient to sustain the verdict. But here the Court of Appeals held that petitioner corporations might be guilty, whether or not there was any other evidence whatsoever relating to the charge in the indictment.

We do not think such fundamentally important positions can be "whistled down the wind" with the casual statement that they are local and unimportant. One of the petitioners is the professional organization of the many physicians in the District of Columbia, the seat of the Nation's Capitol, and the other petitioner is the principal professional organization of the great majority of physicians practicing throughout the United States. The important points presented by our petition, we submit, require a more candid and impartial treatment than has been afforded by respondent's brief.

CONCLUSION.

It is respectfully submitted that the Petition herein should be granted and the judgments below reversed.

Argument	12
I. The word "trade" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act does not include the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services as described in the indictment, because they are not "commercial" in nature	12
1. The natural meaning of the word "trade" excludes the professions	13
2. Judicial decisions of the word trade" exclude the professions	13
3. The legislative history of the Sherman Act requires a definition of "trade" that excludes the professions	28
None of the five activities alleged to have been restrained were "trade" under the Sherman Act	29
II. The word "restraint" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act does include any restraint that does not fix prices or suppress competition to the extent that market prices are substantially affected to the injury of the public	32

The activities of the petitioners shown by the evidence were within their lawful rights, and the purposes charged to petitioners should be interpreted in the light of those rights 44

None of the five activities alleged to have been restrained were "restrained" in violation of the Sherman Act 47

III. A dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors, which was within the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, was involved in which petitioers were interested. The case is therefore not within the Sherman Act 48

ON WRITS OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

BRIEF FOR PETITIONERS

OPINIONS BELOW.

The District Court sustained a demurrer to the indictment, United States v. American Medical Ass'n, 28 F. Supp. 752. The Court of Appeals reversed, United States v. American Medical Ass'n, 72 App. D. C. 12, 110, F. 2d 703.

A trial was had in the District Court and all of the defendants, except American Medical Association [1] and Medical Society of the District of Columbia [2] were found not guilty. The jury found the petitioners guilty, and there were judgments on the verdict. The Court of Appeals affirmed, American Medical Ass'n. v. United States, — App. D. C. —, 130 F. 2d 233.

JURISDICTION.

The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Sec. 240 of the Judicial Code as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925 (43 Stat. 938), 28 U. S. C. 347.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED [3]

1. Whether the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services as described in the indictment are "trade" under Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act.

2. Whether the indictment charged or the evidence proved "restraints of trade" under Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act.

3. Whether a dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment under the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts was involved, and, if so, whether petitioners were interested therein, and therefore immune from prosecution under the Sherman Act.

STATUTES INVOLVED.

The statutes involved are Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act, Secs. 1, 6 and 20 of the Clayton Act, and Secs. 4, 5, 6, 8 and 13 of the Norris-La Guardia Act.[4]

---

[1] Hereinafter referred to as AMA.

[2] Hereinafter referred to as DMS.

[3] The "questions presented" were limited by the writs of certiorari.

[4] The statutes involved are contained in the appendix hereto, pp. 62-66, infra.

STATEMENT.

The indictment charges (R. 14, 15) petitioners with engaging in a conspiracy:

> (1) To restrain Group Health Association, Inc.,[5] a corporation, in furnishing through monthly salaried full-time employee-doctors, medical care to its members and their dependents;
>
> (2) To restrain members of GHA in obtaining such medical care;
>
> (3) To restrain GHA doctors;
>
> (4) To restrain other doctors in the pursuit of their callings; and
> (5) To restrain the Washington hospitals.

Petitioners contend that the indictment did not charge nor the proof show an offense under the Sherman Act for three basic reasons, any one of which is fatal to this prosecution.

First: because the activities alleged to have been restrained were not commercial, and hence not trade and commerce within the meaning of Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act.

Second: because the indictment does not charge, nor the proof show, that the alleged restraints fixed prices or suppressed competition to the extent that market prices were substantially affected, to the injury of the public.

Third: because the alleged restraints arose out of a controversy or dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors, which, if doctors are tradesmen, was within the excluding purview of the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts.

This case presents a controversy concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors in the medical profession. AMA, the national organization, DMS, the local organization, and the doctors who are members of those organizations have long observed and followed a code of professional ethics (R. 1108). That code has been supplemented by association rules and regulations (R. 1108) initiated by and agreed to by the members themselves and made, by them, a necessary condition of membership in their medical organizations.

GHA sought to engage in the practice of medicine by the device of opening a clinic, including offices for a staff of doctors (R. 368), whom it employed by the month, on a full-time salary basis. That arrangement, it was generally believed by petitioners (R. 340, 373), as well as by the law enforcement authorities of the District (R. 373), was illegal.

GHA was incorporated on February 24, 1937, under a non-commercial statute of the District of Columbia.[6] GHA opened its clinic on November 1, 1937. It immediately ran afoul of the law-enforcement officers of the United States and the District of Columbia and Congress.

The respondent, acting through the United States Attorney, after inquiring into GHA's scheme, on January 15, 1938, notified GHA that unless it ceased operations immediately and wound up its affairs, respondent would enjoin GHA and cause its involuntary dissolution, because GHA was illegally engaged in the practice of medicine and illegally engaged in an insurance business (Petitioners' offer of proof, R. 1424).

The District of Columbia, acting through its Corporation Counsel and Insurance Commissioner, after inquiring into GHA's scheme, on January 15, 1938, notified GHA that it was improperly incorporated and was illegally engaged in the insurance business, and unless GHA complied with the law, injunctive and other legal proceedings would be brought to end GHA's illegal operations (Petitioners' offer of proof, R. 1424).

GHA received $40,000 from Home Owners Loan Corporation [6a] ostensibly for medical services to be rendered to it (R. 375, 467; Petitioners' offer of proof, R. 1387-1388). When news of this arrangement "leaked out", a Congressional investigation started (R. 467). Senator McCarran requested that the Comptroller General investigate this unauthorized use of federal funds (Petitioners' offer of proof, R. 911).

The Comptroller General investigated GHA and was furnished the facts concerning GHA and its acquisition of $40,000 of public money and other Government property. The Comptroller General rendered to the Senate his formal opinion, which was made public, showing that GHA was using Government property and discounts, had received $37,357.65 from funds of the United States without complying with its contract and without providing the services agreed upon, that GHA also had set up at HOLC an unlawful assignment of wages or "check-off" system (R. 376-378) whereunder dues were deducted from the salaries of HOLC employees (R. 918, 919) and that the payments of federal funds by HOLC to GHA were made and incurred without authority of law (Petitioners' offer of proof, R. 915-920).

Congress itself investigated GHA's activities and its contract with HOLC (R. 467, 468) and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives reported to Congress that it was unanimously of the opinion that the $40,000 contribution of HOLC to GHA was not authorized by law (Petitioners' offer of proof, R. 1420).

GHA was subsidized by the Twentieth Century Fund (R. 375) and other private funds (Petitioners' offer of proof, R. 1011, 1013-1025) and was advertising for and soliciting members and coercing federal employees to become members (Petitioners' offer of proof. R. 940).

[6a] Hereinafter referred to as HOLC.

All of the foregoing facts were known to petitioners and their members, and entered into and were parts of the controversy over employment existing between GHA, petitioners, their members and the hospitals.

Although many doctors who were not members of the petitioners were available to GHA, that corporation, despite full knowledge of the principles of ethics and rules and regulations governing the professional activities of petitioners' members, willfully sought to induce certain doctors who were members of petitioners, to ignore and violate their medical society obligations and accept employment on the GHA hired staff.

Apprehensive of impending controversy, members of DMS immediately sought both by individual and group conferences (R. 290-309, 176-199) to persuade GHA, in its employment of doctors who were medical society members, to make some effort to conform to the principles of ethics, and the employment rules and regulations of DMS (R. 160, 174). These overtures were flatly rejected by GHA (R. 201) and it persisted in endeavoring to proselyte petitioners' members, to induce them to ignore medical association rules, and to create controversies between such members and petitioners. The controversy here involved followed. To acquaint its members with the facts, the AMA published in its Journal an article that was critical of GHA (R. 368-386). GHA employed two doctors who were members of DMS (R. 197). DMS had a provision in its constitution that any of its members accepting contracts of employment must submit such contracts for approval to a committee of DMS (R. 1265, 1266). The two doctors hired by GHA, under the urging of GHA, refused to do so (R. 197), and after a full hearing (R. 165, 197), one of them was expelled from DMS (R. 561).

The Government contended that petitioners intended to restrain GHA and its employee-doctors and members. Petitioners assert that they intended only to preserve, protect, and defend their medical societies, their principles of ethics, rules and regulations, from impairment and destruction, and to perpetuate free and fair competition between their members as required by their principles of ethics (R. 860).

Petitioners were also charged with restraining the Washington hospitals. In 1934, AMA adopted the Mundt Resolution [7] (R. 779) which was thereafter transmitted to intern and resident hospitals. Several of the local hospitals already had such a rule (R. 638, 639, 1338). No hospital was ever required as a condition of approval, to confine its staff to society members (R. 1336, 1337). An inspection of local hospitals, had in the summer of 1937, far from being a part of an aim to restrain GHA, was, under the uncontradicted evidence, solicited by the hospitals (R. 781, 782, 869) and carried out on behalf of AMA by persons who had no knowledge (R. 785, 787, 870, 881) of the existence of GHA.

Obviously, membership in the medical societies aided and advanced the general professional welfare of members, and, as conceded in the indictment, became of importance and value to conforming members. GHA, while insisting upon the right of its employed doctors to retain medical society membership, nevertheless proposed that observance of medical society codes, rules and regulations could be ignored, at the will of a particular member, without loss of society membership and that any attempt on the part of the society to require conformance with such rules operated as an illegal restraint of the medical society member as well as of his employer, GHA and its lay members.

[7] Resolved that it is the opinion of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved for intern training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals be limited to members in good standing of their local county medical societies and that the House of Delegates requests the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take this under advisement.

The controversy threatened the continued welfare and existence of petitioners and made everything relating to GHA's terms and conditions of employing petitioners' members, of interest to petitioners, particularly insofar as petitioners' codes, rules and regulations might be violated. If GHA was operating in violation of Federal statutes and its activities presented an illegal, unethical, or unprofessional operation, if it was engaged in questionable practices inimicable to the best interests of either the public, the medical profession, the petitioners or their members, then petitioners owed its members, to say nothing of the public, the duty of opposing, avoiding and preventing injury to petitioners, and their members, through the proselyting tactics of GHA. The court below said physicians may organize, establish standards of professional conduct and effect agreements for self-discipline and control, but in the same breath said that if such standards and agreements are enforced and some other professional or business group is injured the Sherman Act is violated.

As the hospitals might well be considered the workshop of physicians, legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument might lawfully be directed toward the hospitals, recommending preference to organization members whose codes, rules and regulations were known and established, as against others not so well recommended. That could not possibly amount to criminal restraint of GHA under the Sherman Act. The court below said petitioners might use legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument as a means of winning public sentiment to their point of view but in the same breath said that when they so persuade and argue with the hospitals or when petitioners' members persuade and argue among themselves, they violate the Sherman Act.

Out of this controversy came the indictment wherein 21 doctors and four medical associations were indicted (R. 1-21). A demurrer to the indictment (R. 21-24), particularly upon the ground of inapplicability of the Sherman Act, was sustained by the District Court (R. 24, 25). The Court of Appeals reversed, holding that the Act was a broad remedial statute, intended to protect all individuals in all occupations, professional or commercial, and any restraint upon an individual is prohibited by the Act. The opinion did not even contend the indictment charged that prices were fixed or that competition was suppressed to the extent that market prices were substantially affected. The case thereafter was tried upon the law laid down by the Court of Appeals. Upon the trial, two individual defendants and two defendant associations were discharged by directed verdict (R. 38). At the close of all the evidence, motions to direct verdicts for each defendant as to the charge of restraint of each of the five activities described in the indictment, were made and denied (R. 1453-1455) and defendants excepted. The court instructed the jury that defendants could be convicted if a conspiracy did in fact exist to restrain trade in the District in at least one of the several ways alleged (R. 1508) i. e., any one of the five activities alleged in the indictment to have been restrained. Of the remaining defendants, all the individual defendants were acquitted, and only the corporate petitioners were convicted. After verdict petitioners moved the court to disregard all the evidence pertaining to the acts and doings of the individual defendants found "not guilty" and to enter a judgment for the corporate petitioners notwithstanding the verdict (R. 1517), and also moved the court in arrest of judgment (R. 1518) and for a new trial (R. 1519). These motions were denied (R. 1525), judgments were entered on the verdict (R. 1525, 1526), and fines imposed (R. 1525, 1526). On appeal the Court of Appeals affirmed. This Court granted certiorari limiting the writs to the "questions presented" herein.

The evidence is voluminous, but on the questions presented here certain statements of ultimate fact can fairly be made.

1. The evidence showed that the activities claimed to have been restrained were the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services.

2. The evidence which the Government contends showed that petitioners conspired to "restrain" trade was as follows:[8]

Evidence that petitioners thought that the plan of GHA was in violation of law and of the Principles of Medical Ethics of AMA and DMS and therefore "unlawful" and "unethical."

Evidence which the Government says tended to show that petitioners were opposed to GHA and that such opposition was inspired by a fear that GHA would attract a substantial number of Government employees who were actual or potential patients of petitioners' members with a resulting reduction in the income of petitioners' members.

Evidence which the Government says shows a plan to force GHA out of business. The Government says the plan consisted of:

> (a) Action by DMS forbidding its members to join the medical staff of GHA or to consult with members of the staff. (It is important to observe that DMS, long before the incorporation of GHA, had a provision in its Constitution that required its members to submit for approval any contract which they might contemplate entering into, for the rendering of medical services, other than the usual patient and doctor relationship) (R. 1265, 1266).

(b) The institution by a committee of DMS, before the Executive Committee of DMS, of disciplinary proceedings, against two members of DMS who violated the provisions of the DMS Constitution. (The two members of DMS, at the instigation of GHA, declined to submit to DMS, for approval their contract of employment by GHA. DMS had no alternative but to institute such disciplinary proceedings unless they were to abandon their Constitution.)

(c) The coercion of the Washington hospitals to exclude GHA doctors from the staffs of the hospitals and thus to prevent these doctors from treating their GHA patients in the hospitals. (This contention is based on the resolution of December 1, 1937, of DMS [9] which was sent to the hospitals.)

3. The evidence showed a dispute was involved between petitioners and GHA, its officers, agents and doctors, concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors by GHA.

SPECIFICATION OF ERRORS TO BE URGED.

ARGUMENT

I.

The Word "Trade" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act Does Not Include the Practice of Medicine and the Rendering of Medical Services as Described in the Indictment, Because They Are Not "Commercial" in Nature.

What is the meaning of the word "trade" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act? The meaning of the words or phrases or language generally of a statute may be determined by consideration of:

(1) The natural meaning of the words or phrases used, both singly and in combination;

(2) The meaning which the courts have given to the words or phrases used;

(3) The legislative history of the statute;

(a) As to the evils the legislators were considering and attempting to reach and prevent;

(b) As to the field intended to be covered by the statute.

1. THE NATURAL MEANING OF THE WORD "TRADE" EXCLUDES THE PROFESSIONS.

What is the natural and ordinary meaning of the word "trade"? All of the dictionaries agree that in the broadest meaning ever ascribed to "trade" to date it has never been understood to include the arts or the learned professions. Professors, students and ordinary laymen in the United States would not understand the word "trade" to include the learned professions. Hence if the meaning of the word "trade" in the Act includes the learned professions it is for some reason other than the natural meaning of the word.

2. JUDICIAL DEFINITIONS OF THE WORD "TRADE" EXCLUDE THE PROFESSIONS.

As to the meaning which the courts have given to the word "trade" we submit that beginning in 1829 and continuing to date, except for the decisions of the court below in this case, it has been consistently held, both in the federal and state courts, that the word "trade" did not include the learned professions. Three of these cases were decisions of this Court under the Sherman Act, one a decision of this Court under the Federal Trade Commission Act, two state court decisions construing the Sherman Act, and numerous decisions of this Court, of United States Courts of Appeal and of state courts construing the word "trade" under various federal and state statutes. We propose to discuss first the decisions of this Court under the Sherman Act and Federal Trade Commission Act in chronological order, then the decisions of the state courts that pertain to the Sherman Act, and then the other decisions of this Court, the federal courts and the state courts pertaining to the meaning of the word "trade."

Federal Club v. National League (1922) 259 U. S. 200, was decided on a writ of error to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. This Court held, Holmes, J., that the business of playing professional baseball was not "trade or commerce" within the meaning of Sec. 1 of the Sherman Act. The language of the opinion is just as applicable to Sec. 3 as it is to Sec. 1, because this Court said (p. 209):

> "The exhibition (playing baseball), although made for money would not be called trade or commerce in the commonly accepted use of those words. * * * personal effort, not related to production, is not a subject of commerce. That which in its consummation is not commerce does not become commerce among the States because the transportion that we have mentioned takes place. * * * a firm of lawyers sending out a member to argue a case, * * * does not engage in such commerce because the lawyer * * * goes to another State." (Italics supplied.)

In the foregoing the thought is clear and the meaning plain that personal effort not related to production is not trade or commerce in the District of Columbia and also that the practice of law is not trade or commerce in the District of Columbia, because this Court held (p. 209):

> "That which in its consummation is not commerce does not become commerce among the States because the transportation that we have mentioned takes place." (Italics supplied.)

In Federal Trade Commission v. Raladam Co., (1931) 283 U. S. 643, the Federal Trade Commission issued a complaint charging the respondent with using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce. It was charged that the respondent manufactures, advertises, and sells a preparation for internal use denominated an "obesity cure." The complaint alleged that the acts and practices of the Raladam Company are all to the prejudice of the public and of competitiors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition. The Commission issued a cease and desist order. The Court of Appeals reversed the order. This Court affirmed the decision of the Court of Appeals. It was contended that the business injured by the advertising and other activities of the Raladam Company was the business of doctors, because they prescribed for obesity. The question was presented whether the activities of Raladam Company were unfair competition to doctors. This Court held that the Federal Trade Act and the Sherman Act concern the same subject matter and then ruled squarely that doctors were not in competition with the Raladam Company because "they follow a profession and not a trade" and there being no evidence in the record that Raladam Company had any competitors, there was no evidence of unfair competition and no violation of the Act. If the practice of medicine be "trade" under the Federal Trade Commission or Sherman Acts, then the Raladam Company would have had competitors and a different result might have been reached in the Raladam case.

In Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States (1932) 286 U. S. 427, the question before this Court was whether the business of cleaning and dyeing clothes in the District of Columbia was "trade" within the meaning of Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act. The case was decided on the pleadings, and it was held that such business was "trade." That decision was in accord with the doctrine laid down in Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, because there is little doubt that the business of cleaning and dyeing clothes is a "commercial" and "business" activity. While it is true that members of the learned professions were not parties to the case, nevertheless the issue before this Court called for a definition of "trade" within the meaning of Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act, and this Court in giving that definition necessarily stated what was excluded from as well as what was included in, the definition of the word "trade" and held that the professions were not within Sec. 3.

The opinion in the Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers case made certain statements with reference to the fact that Sec. 1 of the Sherman Act pertained to interstate commerce, and Sec. 3, in part, pertained to commerce within the District of Columbia. This Court recognized that Sec. 3 is not confined to commerce within the District but by its specific terms covers interstate commerce into and out of the District. The opinion, properly analyzed, said that the word "trade" had a broad and a narrow meaning, and under the rules of statutory construction the Court was at liberty to give the word the broader meaning. This Court then held that even under the broader meaning, the liberal arts and the learned professions were not included within the meaning of the word "trade," but that the word did include local "commercial" and "business" activities.

This Court then adopted the following definition of "trade" given by Mr. Justice Story (p. 436):

> "Whenever any occupation, employment, or business is carried on for the purpose of profit, or gain, or a livelihood, not in the liberal arts or in the learned professions, it is constantly called a trade."

This Court then said (p. 437):

> "We think the word 'trade' was used in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act in the general sense attributed to it by > Justice Story, and at least, is broad enough to include the acts of which the Government complains."

Any ambiguity in that opinion was cleared up by Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, wherein this Court held, with reference to both Secs. 1 and 3, as follows (p. 495):

> "It was in this sense of preventing restraints on commercial competition that Congress exercised 'all the power it possessed.' Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States, supra, 435." (Italics supplied.)

Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, supra, held in substance and effect that no activity could be in "trade" within the meaning of either Secs. 1 or 3 of the Sherman Act unless it was a "commercial" activity. It is clear from the Apex case that this Court was of the opinion that Congress in enacting Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act intended that the word "trade" therein should have the same meaning as in Sec. 1 thereof, except that the trade and commerce within the district did not have to be interstate trade and commerce.

In United States v. American Medical Ass'n, 72 App. D. C. 12, 110 F. 2d 703, hereinafter called the first American Medical Ass'n case, the Government contended and the court below agreed that the Sherman Act was a broad, remedial statute covering all activities of every individual. In that case the court said (p. 711), "the common law governing restraints of trade has not been confined, as defendants insist, to the field of commercial activity ordinarily defined as 'trade,' but embraces as well the field of the medical profession." The subsequent opinion in the Apex case overruled that proposition of law. The United States in its brief filed in United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219, 222, conceded to this Court that "The test laid down in that case (Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader) is whether the restraint is upon commercial competition * * *."

In the first American Medical Ass'n case, relying on Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States, 286 U. S. 427, the court held that Congress had exercised its full power in enacting Sec. 3 and that, therefore, Sec. 3 was broader than Sec. 1, and that the word "trade" in Sec. 3 was intended (p. 710) "to cover all occupations in which men are engaged for a livelihood." The court below did not correctly analyze the opinion in the Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers case. The Apex case correctly analyzed that opinion and said that Congress exercised its full power in a more limited sense in enacting both Secs. 1 and 3, and held (p. 495):

> "Because many forms of restraint upon commercial competition extended across state lines so as to make regulation by state action difficult or impossible, Congress enacted the Sherman Act. 21 Cong. Rec. 2456. It was in this sense of preventing restraints on commercial competition that Congress exercised 'all the power it possessed.' Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States, supra, 435." (Italics supplied.)

We understand from the Apex case that, in enacting Secs. 1 and 3, Congress exercised all the power it possessed in the District of Columbia and elsewhere only (p. 495) "in this sense of preventing restraints on commercial competition." (Italics supplied.)

In the first American Medical Ass'n case the court held (p. 712) every person individually has the right under the Sherman Act to be free in his trade, business or profession, and held (p. 712) that the talents of any and every person are "trade" under Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act, but the Apex case held that the word "trade" in the Sherman Act applies only to commercial transactions.

In the Apex case this Court reviewed the legislative history of the Sherman Act, repudiated the theory of the first American Medical Ass'n case that the Sherman Act covers every individual in the employment of his skill or capital and held (p. 490) the act was not a "policing" act and said (pp. 491-492):

> "It was another and quite a different evil at which the Sherman Act was aimed. It was enacted in the era of 'trusts' and of 'combinations' of businesses and of capital, organized and directed to control of the market by suppression of competition in the marketing of goods and services, the monopolistic tendency of which had become a matter of public concern. The end sought was the prevention of restraints to free competition in business and commercial transactions . . . ." (Italics supplied.)

In footnote 15 (p. 493) this Court said:

> "The history of the Sherman Act as contained in the legislative proceedings is emphatic in its support for the conclusion that 'business competition' was the problem considered and that the act was designed to prevent restraints of trade which had a significant effect on such competition." (Italics supplied.)

The legislative history, of which this Court spoke applied to Sec. 3 as well as Sec. 1. Those sections had no separate legislative history. The Apex case, we submit, overruled the holding in the first American Medical Ass'n case that Sec. 3 is not confined to "business and commercial" transactions.

The meaning to be given the word "trade" as used in the Act and the "full power" exercised in enacting Secs. 1 and 3 of the Act are construed by this Court as follows (pp. 494-497):

> "For that reason the phrase 'restraint of trade' which, as will presently appear, had a well-understood meaning at common law, was made the means of defining the activities prohibited. The addition of the words 'or commerce among the several states' was not an additional kind of restraint to be prohibited by the Sherman Act but was the means used to relate the prohibited restraint of trade to interstate commerce for constitutional purposes, Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States, 286 U. S. 427, 434, so that Congress, through its commerce power, might suppress and penalize restraints on the competitive system which involved or affected interstate commerce. Because many forms of restraint upon commercial competition extended across state lines so as to make regulation by state action difficult or impossible, Congress enacted the Sherman Act, 21 Cong. Rec. 2456. It was in this sense of preventing restraints on commercial competition that Congress exercised 'all the power it possessed.' Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers v. United States, supra, 435.' (Italics supplied.)

"A second significant circumstance is that this Court has never applied the Sherman Act in any case, whether or not involving labor organizations or activities, unless the Court was of opinion that there was some form of restraint upon commercial competition in the marketing of goods or services and finally this court has refused to apply the Sherman Act in cases like the present in which local strikes conducted by illegal means in a production industry prevented interstate shipment of substantial amounts of the product but in which it was not shown that the restrictions on shipments had operated to restrain commercial competition in some substantial way." (Italics supplied.)

This Court clearly pointed out that the common law doctrine of restraints of trade was well understood long before the enactment of the Sherman Law, and was taken over into the law and applied to "commercial competition" only when their purpose or effect was (p. 500, 501) "to the prejudice of the public interests by unduly restricting competition or unduly obstructing the due course of trade • • • or injuriously restrained trade."

Thus the Apex case differs with the holding in the first American Medical Ass'n case that the Sherman Act is a "chart" covering all activities of the citizen, whether commercial or not, and the public injury is measured by the injury to the individual. As the Apex case points out, that is erroneous, as the Sherman Act is not a policing statute, is not predicated upon individual injury, and is limited to commercial activities.

Respondent in its brief filed in the Court of Appeals in the first American Medical Ass'n case (p. 24), conceded, with reference to the charge in the indictment, that "these restraints are not upon commercial and industrial activities, but upon the marketing of a professional service."

In the first American Medical Ass'n case it was held (p. 714) that the actions of GHA in no way tend to commercialize the practice of medicine and that (p. 714) "the practice of medicine in the District of Columbia is subject to licensing and regulation and we think may not be lawfully subjected 'to commercialization or exploitation'."

American Medical Ass'n v. United States — App. D. C. —, 130 F. 2d 233, hereinafter called the second American Medical Ass'n case, was decided after the Apex case. In the second American Medical Ass'n case the court erroneously said (p. 235): "the practice of medicine was recognized by the English cases as constituting trade." and that a restraint on the practice of medicine may constitute a restraint of trade.[10] In direct contradiction of that holding,

[10] Those cases do not hold the practice of medicine to be trade, and that specific issue was not raised or decided in those cases. The English cases dealt with the validity of ancillary covenants incident to the sales of professional practices. While a few of those cases, in determining the validity of covenants not to practice medicine in a given locality or during a given time, apply the rule announced in "restraint of trade" cases, "restraint of trade" was not the basis for decision and the overwhelming majority of those cases are based upon principles of public policy, the law of contracts or local statutes and do not even mention "restraint of later in the same opinion, the court below held (p. 237) that the activities of GHA's doctors were not commercialized and, as we understand the opinion, not "trade". Notwithstanding the court below held the activities of GHA's doctors were not commercialized it held that the activities of GHA were commercial. The sole activity of GHA is the rendering or providing of medical services to its members, and we are unable to understand the reasoning of the Court of Appeals in holding the activities of GHA to be commercial and the activities of its doctors, not commercialized. In making that, to us, impossible distinction the court did not appear to consider that GHA was organized under the District of Columbia Code (1940) Title 29, Secs. 29-601 to 29-605, which provides for the incorporation of charitable, educational, and religious associations. We submit that the activities of a corporation so organized could hardly be "commercial".

The court said (p. 236) the trade or commerce involved was of three kinds; "(1) the making available and financing of medical and hospital services; (2) medical service itself, i.e., service rendered by medical doctors; (3) hospital services, i.e., service rendered by hospital staffs and the use of hospital facilities."

We insist that such activities are but the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services and that such activities are not "commercial", and hence not "trade".

Other decisions construing the Sherman Act also support our contention that the word "trade" does not include the professions.

In Metropolitan Opera Co. v. Hammerstein (1924, N. Y.) 162 App. Div. 691, it was held that the production of grand trade." The Apex case considered the English cases and concluded that only "commercial" activities are within the meaning of the word "trade" as used in the Sherman Act.

opera was not within the meaning of the word "trade" as used in the Sherman Act. It would seem that the court was also of the opinion that the practice of medicine or law were likewise not within the meaning of the word "trade" in the Sherman Act because it said, (p. 695): "If the production of opera is trade or commerce, it would seem to follow that every museum which exhibits pictures, every university which gives courses of instruction or lectures, every lawyer who prepares a brief, every surgeon who performs an operation * * * is engaged in commerce." (Italics supplied). That opinion was affirmed by the Court of Appeals (Cardozo, J., concurring) 221 N. Y. 507, 116 N. E. 1061.

In Werth v. Fire Companies' Adj. Bureau (1933) 160 Va. 845, 171 S. E. 255, the court in construing a state anti-trust law and the phrase "trade and commerce" as used in the Sherman Act held, under that state act and the Sherman Act, that insurance with its attendant and incident activities is not comprehended within the term "commerce" or its synonym "trade."

We turn now to the consideration of the cases from 1829 to date which have held, though not under the Sherman Act, that the practice of the learned professions is not trade or commerce.

In Dandridge v. Washington, (1829) 27 U. S. 369, on an appeal from the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia, in an opinion by Marshall, C. J., in defining "trade," this Court said (p. 377):

> "The distinction between a profession and a trade is well understood; and they are seldom, if ever, confounded with each other, in ordinary language. If the testatrix had contemplated what, in the common intercourse of society, is denominated a profession, she would scarcely have used a term which is generally received as denoting one of the mechanical arts."

So, at the time of the passage of the Sherman Act it was settled law in the District of Columbia, certainly since 1829, that the word "trade" in its ordinary meaning did not include the professions, and that is presumed to have been known to Congress.

In The Schooner Nymph, (1834) 18 Fed. Cas. 506, No. 10388, 1 Sumn. 516 (C. C., D. Maine) in construing a Coasting and Fishery Act, which declared that any licensed ship, employed in any other "trade" than that for which it was licensed, should be forfeited, Mr. Justice Story said (517, 518):

> "Wherever any occupation, employment, or business is carried on for the purpose of profit, or gain, or a livelihood, not in the liberal arts or in the learned professions, it is constantly called a trade."

The Nymph case was decided prior to the enactment of the Sherman Act, and Congress would be presumed to know that it had been decided in the federal courts that the word "trade" did not include the liberal arts or the learned professions.

In May v. Sloan, (1879) 101 U. S. 231, this Court held (p. 237):

> "The word 'trade,' in its broadest signification, includes not only the business of exchanging commodities by barter, but the business of buying and selling for money, or commerce and traffic generally."

Thus this Court defined "trade" in what was said to be its broadest signification, and, yet, did not extend the meaning beyond the business of buying and selling for money, or commerce and traffic generally. This definition of "trade" is presumed to have been known to Congress when it enacted the Sherman Act.[11]

---

[11] The Sherman Act became law on July 2, 1890. Sec. 6 of the Clayton Act was enacted October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 731) 15 U. S. C. Sec. 17. The first sentence thereof provided, "The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce."

Graves v. Minnesota (1926) 272 U. S. 425, involved a prosecution for violating a statute of Minnesota by practicing dentistry without a license. The specific contention of the defendant was that the requirement of the statute that an applicant for a license must present a diploma from an approved dental college before he can be examined by the board was unreasonable, arbitrary, and discriminatory and violates the Federal Constitution. The defendant relied on decisions which struck down similar statutes, placing like requirements on the employments or trades of locomotive engineers and barbers. This Court held the dental statute in question did not violate the Federal Constitution and said that statutes pertaining to employments or trades of locomotive engineers and barbers manifestly involved very different considerations from those relating to such professions as dentistry, requiring a high degree of scientific learning.

If this Court in the Graves case thought the practice of medicine or dentistry was trade, and on a par with other trades, which follows from the decisions in the court below, then the Graves case might have been decided differently, and the statute in question there held unconstitutional under the "trade" cases cited by Graves.

Semler v. Dental Examiners, (1935) 294 U. S. 608, involved the validity of an Oregon statute relating to dentists, providing for the revocation of licenses for unprofessional conduct, including advertising. Plaintiff brought suit to enjoin the enforcement of the statute alleging that it violated the Federal Constitution. A demurrer was sustained to the complaint, and the suit was dismissed by the trial court. The supreme court of the state affirmed. The complaint alleged that complainant had habitually advertised and that his advertisements were truthful and that he had made contracts for display signs and for advertising in newspapers and had entered into other engagements of which he would be unable to take advantage if the legislation was sustained, and that in that event his business would be destroyed or materially impaired. This Court held that the state could deal with the different professions according to the needs of the public in relation to each, and that the legislation in question did not violate the Federal Constitution. This Court said (p. 612):

> "The legislature was not dealing with traders in commodities, but with the vital interest of public health, and with a profession treating bodily ills and demanding different standards of conduct from those which are traditional in the competition of the marketplace. The community is concerned with the maintenance of professional standards which will insure not only competency in individual practitioners, but protection against those who would prey upon a public peculiarly susceptible to imposition through alluring promises of physical relief. And the community is concerned in providing safeguards not only against deception, but against practices which would tend to demoralize the profession by forcing its members into an unseemly rivalry which would enlarge the opportunities of the least scrupulous. What is generally called the 'ethics' of the profession is but the consensus of expert opinion as to the necessity of such standards."

While the construction of Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act was not involved yet the Semler case clearly held that the members of a profession, such as dentists or doctors, are not engaged in the competition of the market place and if that be true then under the Apex case they would not be in "trade" within Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act.

If the practice of medicine be "trade" and on a par with other trades, then the Semler case might have been decided differently and the statute in question held unconstitutional. If the professions be "trade," then all statutes pertaining to the professions are subject to attack on constitutional grounds.

The court below asserted in the second American Medical Ass'n case (p. 245) that the Graves and Semler cases were not in point because they pertained to the police power of the states. Such an assertion is beside the point. Those cases were definite holdings by this Court that the word "trade" does not include the learned professions. They also serve to point out the chaos that will be created in the law of the various states, if the word "trade" in the Sherman Act is held to include the learned professions.

In re United States Hotel Co., (1904), 134 Fed. 225 and Toxaway Hotel Co. v. Smathers, (1910) 216 U. S. 439, it was held that the operations of hotels and the incidental activities connected therewith were not "trade" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act.

In Jeu Jo Wan v. Nagle, (1925) 9 F. 2d 309, it was held (p. 310) even under a treaty of commerce, which would involve the broadest construction of the word "trade," that:

> "The word 'trade,' in its broadest signification, * * * is not broad enough to include a mere teacher, especially when the term 'trade' is used in connection with commerce * * *." (Italics supplied.)

The following state decisions hold that the word "trade" does not include the learned professions: Yocum v. Feld, 129 Fla. 764, 176 So. 753 (doctor); Slocum v. City of Fredonia, 134 Kans. 853, 8 P. 2d 332 (doctor); Whitcomb v. Reid, 31 Miss. 567, 569 (dentistry); People v. Kelly, 255 N. Y. 396, 175 N. E. 108 (music teaching); Iselin v. Flynn, 154 N. Y. S. 133 (doctor).

There is, therefore, no judicial authority for defining "trade" as including activities in the professions. There remains for attention the legislative history of the Sherman Act.

3. THE LEGISLATIVE HISTORY OF THE SHERMAN ACT REQUIRES A DEFINITION OF "TRADE" THAT EXCLUDES THE PROFESSIONS.

As to the legislative history of the Sherman Act pertaining to the meaning of the word "trade" therein, this Court in the Apex case exhaustively commented on the evils the legislators were considering and attempting to reach and prevent, and also the field the legislators intended to cover by the Act.

This Court held (p. 490):

> "The legislative history of the Sherman Act as well as the decisions of this Court interpreting it, show that it was not aimed at policing interstate transportation or movement of goods and property. The legislative history and the voluminous literature which was generated in the course of the enactment and during fifty years of litigation of the Sherman Act give no hint that such was its purpose." (Italics supplied.)

This Court continued (p. 491-492):

> "It was another and quite a different evil at which the Sherman Act was aimed. It was enacted in the era of 'trusts' and of 'combinations' of businesses and of capital organized and directed to control of the market by suppression of competition in the marketing of goods and services, the monopolistic tendency of which had become a matter of public concern. The end sought was the prevention of restraints to free competition in business and commercial transactions * * *." (Italics supplied.)

In footnote 15 (p. 493) this Court said:

> "The history of the Sherman Act as contained in the legislative proceedings is emphatic in its support for the conclusion that 'business competition' was the problem considered and that the Act was designed to prevent restraints of trade which had a significant effect on such competition." (Italics supplied.)

In view of the foregoing language of this Court it is idle to contend that Congress intended to include non-commercial activities within the meaning of the word "trade" as used in the Sherman Act.

Thus whether we turn to the natural meaning of the word "trade," or the judicial definitions of the word "trade" or the legislative history of the Sherman Act we reach the inescapable conclusion that the word "trade" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act concerns only "commercial" activities and excludes the learned professions.

NONE OF THE FIVE ACTIVITIES ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN RESTRAINED WERE "TRADE" UNDER THE SHERMAN ACT.

Let us consider the five activities alleged to have been restrained and see if they or any of them are "trade" under the Sherman Act.

1. Is GHA a "commercial" or "business" activity? It was organized under the District of Columbia Code (1940) Title 29, Secs. 29-601 to 29-605, which provides for the incorporation of charitable, educational, and religious associations. Its sole activities are to collect dues from its members, pay rent for and maintain a suite of doctors' offices, with the usual appurtenances thereto, employ doctors to render medical services, within limits, to its members and to pay, within limits, the hospital bills of its members. We insist that such activities are not "commercial" or "business" activities.

2. Are the members of GHA engaged in a "commercial" or "business" activity? We think even the Government has abandoned any contention that the Government employees are engaged in a "commercial" or "business" activity.

3. Is the activity of the doctors employed by GHA a "commercial" or "business" activity? In the second American Medical Ass'n case the court said that activities of the doctors employed by GHA are not commercialized, and we understand therefore, not engaged in a "commercial" or "business" activity.

4. Is the practice of medicine by the medical profession generally a "commercial" or "business" activity? It would seem to follow as a matter of course, if the GHA doctors are not engaged in a "commercial" or "business" activity, that doctors generally are not.

5. Are the Washington hospitals, or that part of their activities here involved, "commercial" or "business" activities? We insist that the activities of the Washington hospitals here involved are not "commercial" or "business" activities. In the second American Medical Ass'n case the court concedes (p. 238) that there is authority for the proposition that private hospitals supported by appropriations and charity are not engaged in trade, business, or industry,[12] but concludes, without any support in the evidence, that it has no doubt that the hospitals described in the indictment were engaged in trade within the meaning of the Sherman Act, citing Jordan v. Tashiro, 278 U. S. 123, 127-129. In the Jordan case the articles of incorporation provided for "a business corporation with a share capital of $100,000.00," and the facts there showed that such a "business" was within the provisions of the treaty involved. Such proof as there was in the record in this case tends to show that the Washington hospitals are non-profit institutions for the care of the sick, and their funds are used for that purpose (R. 591, 1338).

Moreover, under the evidence herein the only way the hospitals were involved in this case was in the matter of the appointment or refusal to appoint GHA doctors to the hospital staffs. Such appointment or non-appointment clearly does not pertain to a "commercial" or "business" activity. With reference to this point the District Court in its opinion in this case (28 F. Supp. 752, 757) very properly said:

> "Finally, when the indictment is carefully studied in all its parts, each in relation to the others, it is difficult to escape the conclusion that in its substantial realities the scheme set forth directly centered upon various forms of restraint to be exerted against physicians in rendering treatment and care to their patients, and that all else is incidental to that design. If restraint upon doctors was the only real direct and immediate effect, any indirect effects upon the Association (GHA) or hospitals would not suffice to support the charges as to them."

We think it is perfectly clear that under the indictment, and certainly from the evidence, the "trade" claimed to have been restrained was the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services. The District court so held on demurrer to the indictment. The court below in its first and second opinions seems to hold under the indictment and the evidence that the alleged restraints concerned "medical care and hospitalization" and "medical services." We insist that medical care, medical services and hospitalization are all part and parcel of the practice of medicine. If any one of the five activities alleged to have been restrained is not "trade" under Sec. 3 of the Sherman

Act, then petitioners are entitled to a reversal of the judgments below. This is so because petitioners moved for a directed verdict as to each (R. 1454-1455) and all (R. 1454) of the five activities charged to have been restrained. The trial court denied those motions and over petitioners' objections and exceptions charged the jury that petitioners could be convicted if any one of those five activities was restrained. After verdict petitioners moved for judgment n.o.v. (R. 1517, 1518), for a new trial (R. 1519-1524) and in arrest of the judgments (R. 1518, 1519). If any one of the five activities was not "trade" under Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act, then no one is able to determine whether or not the jury returned its verdict based on a restraint of an activity that was not "trade" under Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act. Stromberg v. California, 283 U. S. 359, 367-370; Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U. S. 88, 96; Garland v. Davis, 45 U. S. (4 How.) 131; Baltimore and O. R. Co. v. Reeves, 10 F. 2d 329,330, 331; Patton v. Wells, 121 F. 337, 340; St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Needham, 63 F. 107, 113, 114; Mauderville v. Cookenderfer, 3 Cranch, C. C. (3 D. C.) 257, Fed. Cas. No. 9,009. Furthermore, if any one of the five activities alleged to have been restrained was not "trade" under Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act the court erroneously charged the jury that restraint on any one of the five classes alleged to have been restrained was sufficient to convict (R. 1508). Stromberg v. Californit, supra; Maryland v. Baldwin, 112 U. S. 490, 493.

II.

The Word "Restraint" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act Does Not Include Any Restraint That Does Not Fix Prices or Suppress Competition to the Extent That Market Prices Are Substantially Affected to the Injury of the Public.

The question presented under this point is whether the indictment charged or the evidence proved "restraints" of trade under Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act.

What is the meaning of the word "restraint" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act?

Apex Hosiery Company v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469 is now the law on the meaning of the word "restraint" in the Sherman Act. Little, if anything, is to be gained by a consideration of previous cases on this point. The Apex case considered all the previous cases which the Court thought had any material bearing on the question and also considered the legislative history of the Act and whether the Sherman Act took over the entire doctrine of restraint of trade at common law[13] or only part thereof. The Court decided that the word "restraint" in the Sherman Act, both in Secs. 1 and 3, does not include any restraint that does not fix prices or suppress competition to the extent that market prices are substantially affected to the injury of the public. Whatever the previous interpretations of the Sherman Act may have been or whatever the common law doctrine of restraint of trade may have been, we must look to the Apex case to determine the law today. The first American Medical Ass'n case was decided before the decision in the Apex case. In that case the Court of Appeals said (page 711):

> "The charge, stated in condensed form, is that the medical societies combined and conspired to prevent the successful operation of Group Health's plan, and the steps by which this was to be effectuated were as follows:
> "(1) to impose restraints on physicians affiliated with Group Health by threat of expulsion or actual expulsion from the societies;

[13] This court made its holding on this important point emphatic, when it said (page 500) contracts, combinations or conspiracies are to be condemned under the Sherman Act "only when their purpose or effect was to raise or fix the market price. It is in this sense that the restraints, actual or intended, prohibited by the Sherman Act are only those which are so substantial as to affect market prices."

"(2) to deny them the essential professional contacts with other physicians, and

"(3) to use the coercive power of the societies to deprive them of hospital facilities for their patients."

The court said (p. 712), that the restraint charged would restrict the common liberties of Group Health, the doctors and the hospitals from engaging in the pursuit of their respective functions. As to the meaning of the word "restraint" in the act the court said (p. 713):

"It certainly cannot be doubted that Congress intended to exert its full power, in the public interest, to set free from unreasonable obstruction the exercise of those rights and privileges which are a part of our constitutional inheritance, and these include immunity from compulsory work at the will of another, the right to choose an occupation, the right to engage in any lawful calling for which one has the requisite capacity, skill, material, or capital, and thereafter the free enjoyment of the fruits of one's labors. Congress undoubtedly legislated on the common law principle that every person has individually, and that the public has collectively, a right to require the course of all legitimate occupations in the District of Columbia to be free from unreasonable obstructions; and likewise in recognition of the fact that all trades, businesses and professions, which prevent idleness and exercise men in labor and employment for the benefit of themselves and their families and for the increase of their substance, are desirable in the public good and any undue restraint upon them is wrong and is immediate and unreasonable and, therefore, within the purview of the Sherman Act."

It is thus clear that the court in the first American Medical Ass'n case held that the word "restraint" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act meant any restraint upon the freedom of any individual in his pursuit of any lawful calling. It must be conceded by all that since the Apex case that is not the meaning of the word "restraint" in the Sherman Act.

On the trial of this case the judge applied the law as laid down in the Court of Appeals in its first opinion and which now clearly appears to have been erroneous.

In the second American Medical Ass'n case decided after the Apex case, the court below, in describing the intended restraints, departed from its opinion in the first American Medical Ass'n case and held (p. 238) that the indictment charges and the proof shows a suppression of competition in the matter of the activities of GHA and seems to hold that is sufficient to show a violation of the Sherman Act. The court says nothing as to whether the indictment charges or the proof shows that market prices of the activities of GHA were substantially affected to the injury of the public. The court seems to have overlooked that essential part of the definition of "restraint" as laid down in the Apex case.

The difficulty is that the indictment was drawn before the decision in the Apex case and did not charge a fixing of prices or a suppression of competition in the matter of the activities of GHA and did not charge that market prices for the activities of GHA were substantially affected to the injury of the public. It was based solely upon the theory of an injury to an individual or individuals. And, of course, there was no proof that meets the requirements of the Apex case.

In the case at bar, even if the indictment charged and the evidence showed (which is denied) acts that tended to restrain GHA, that fact alone would not spell out a violation of the Sherman Act, under the Apex case and the con-curring opinion of Stone, C. J., in United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219, 241, 242.[14]

The decisions below, holding that the indictment and the evidence show a violation of the Sherman Act, conflict with the Apex case, the cases following it [15] and two other Federal decisions.[16] Those cases all squarely hold only such restraints are within the act that restrain commercial activities, the effect of which is to affect the market, either by fixing prices or suppressing competition to the extent that market prices are substantially affected to the injury of the public. Those elements are neither pleaded nor proved in this record. There was not a scintilla of evidence to that effect.

In its brief in opposition to certiorari herein respondent attempted (p. 19) to inject "commercial competition" and "the market" into this case. The attempt comes a little late. No such elements were involved in either the indictment or the evidence. Those phrases are a belated attempt to bring this case within the law as declared in Apex Hosiery Company v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469. The indictment was drawn and the case was tried on an entirely different theory, i.e., that any restraint on any individual in earning a livelihood violates the Sherman Act. In fact, respondent conceded in its brief (p. 24) in the first American Medical Ass'n case that:

> "The present case, like other Sherman Act cases, has to do with restraints in a field of economic activity. Broadly speaking, it differs from previous cases only in that some of these restraints are, not upon commercial and industrial activities, but upon the marketing of a professional service. On analysis it will be found that the case involves considerations of public interest and individual freedom that are common to all Sherman Act cases." (Italics supplied.)

Such a concession is fatal to this prosecution under the Apex case.

It is suggested in the second American Medical Ass'n case (p. 238) that if GHA was "injured" that fact deprived the public of the advantages of a free, competitive market, and is sufficient to show a violation of the Sherman Act. The opinion intimates that the Apex case so held. The Apex case did not so hold. In the Apex case the strikers took the Apex Company completely out of the market.

This Court said in the Apex case (p. 490) three circumstances were of significance in interpreting the Sherman Act: 1 (p. 490) the legislative history; (2) (p. 495) that this Court has never applied the Act in any case unless it was of opinion that there was some form of restraint upon commercial competition; 3 (p. 497) the common law doctrines relating to restraint of trade.

In discussing the first circumstance that must be taken into account, i.e., the legislative history of the Sherman Act, this Court held (p. 490-495) that history disclosed that the Sherman Act was enacted to prevent restraints on "commercial" or "business" activities which had been exercised or used in such a way as to affect the market either by fixing prices or suppressing competition in the market to the extent that market prices are affected (p. 500), to the injury of the public.

In discussing the second circumstance (pp. 495-497) that must be taken into account, i. e., previous opinions of this Court, this Court stated that the Sherman Act had never been applied in any case unless it involved commercial competition in the market.

In discussing the third circumstance (p. 497) this Court referred to the common-law doctrine of restraint of trade, which this Court described as:

> "• • • contracts for the restriction or suppression of competition in the market, agreements to fix prices, divide marketing territories, apportion customers, restrict production and the like practices, which tend to raise prices or otherwise take from buyers or consumers the advantages which accrue to them from free competition in the market."[17] (Italics supplied.)

and held (page 497):

> "Such contracts were deemed illegal and were unenforcible at common law. But the resulting restraints of trade were not penalized and gave rise to no actionable wrong. Certain classes of restraints were not outlawed when deemed reasonable, usually because they served to preserve or protect legitimate interests, previously existing, of one or more parties to the contract." (Italics supplied.)

And (page 500):

> "• • • this Court has not departed from the conception of the Sherman Act as affording a remedy, public and private, for the public wrongs which flow from restraints of trade in the common law sense of restriction or suppression of commercial competition. In the cases considered by this Court since the Standard Oil case in 1911 some form of restraint of commercial competition has been the sine qua non to the condemnation of contracts, combinations or conspiracies under [17] This Court's description of the common-law doctrines relating to restraint of trade is quite different from the description in the first American Medical Ass'n case wherein the court below said (p. 708): "The common-law rule was applied principally to contracts whereby a man promised not to engage in his occupation, • • •."

> the Sherman Act, and in general restraints upon competition have been condemned only when their purpose or effect was to raise or fix the market price. It is in this sense that it is said that the restraints, actual or intended, prohibited by the Sherman Act are only those which are so substantial as to affect market prices." (Italics supplied.)

And (p. 503):

> "Since, in order to render a labor combination effective it must eliminate the competition from non-union made goods * * * an elimination of price competition based on differences in labor standards is the objective of any national labor organization. But this effect on competition has not been considered to be the kind of curtailment of price competition prohibited by the Sherman Act."

Thus it is clear that the acts charged against petitioners are not within the Sherman Act as construed by this Court in the Apex case. The Apex case held that no restraint could be a violation of the Sherman Act unless it was exercised and used in such a way as to fix prices or suppress competition to the extent that market prices are substantially affected to the injury of the public.

The indictment herein did not attempt to charge price fixing or suppression of competition that affected market prices to the injury of the public. No such contention ever appeared until after the opinion in the Apex case. The indictment charged that the restraints were intended to prevent doctors from serving on the GHA staff, to prevent consultations between doctors on the staff of GHA and medical society members, and to prevent such staff doctors from operating in the hospitals. Not one word is said in the charging clauses of the indictment (R. 14, 15) about prices, price fixing or suppression of competition.

The concurring opinion of Stone, C. J., in United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219, 241, 242, points out that a prosecution under the Sherman Act must fail if the indictment fails to charge price fixing or that competition has been suppressed to the extent that market prices have been substantially affected. As no such charge appears in this indictment and as no evidence thereon could be or was received this prosecution must fail.

The Government contended and the first American Medical Ass'n case held that the restraints complained of, obstructed citizens in the pursuit of their occupations, whether commercial or not, and that the Sherman Act was a general remedial statute intended to protect against such restraints. Then came this Court's decision in the Apex case, pointing out that the Sherman Act was not a general remedial statute, and was not intended to supersede local police laws, but was confined to price fixing or suppression of competition affecting market prices to the injury of the public. In the second American Medical Ass'n case the court sought to ignore the general remedial theory, established in its first opinion, by stating that GHA and petitioners were in "the bitterest kind of competition," and that a restraint visited upon GHA would prevent such competition, and therefore the troublesome Apex rule was complied with. But the court below failed to note that no such charge was pleaded in the indictment, was considered in the first American Medical Ass'n case, or presented upon the trial. Substituting an essential charge of price fixing or suppression of competition to that end now, is obviously an effort to avoid the effect of the Apex case and the concurring opinion of Stone, C. J., in the Hutcheson case, and comes a little late.

The indictment fails to charge and the proof fails to show any restraints on the Washington hospitals that violate the Sherman Act.

In that regard the indictment charges (R. 15): "for the purpose of restraining the Washington hospitals in the business of operating such hospitals."

Manifestly the thought which one would receive from such a charge was that any restraint on the Washington hospitals would violate the Sherman Act. There is no charge as to what activities of the hospitals were "restrained"; there is no charge that prices of hospital services were fixed or that competition between hospitals was suppressed to the extent that market value of hospital services were substantially affected to the injury of the public. There being no allegation of that nature in the indictment, there could have been no proof on those indispensable elements.

Such evidence as there was that related to the hospitals concerned the matter of some of GHA's hired doctors obtaining staff privileges at such hospitals. Thus respondent stated in its brief in opposition to certiorari (p. 11) that the hospital evidence concerned the denial by the hospitals of staff privileges to GHA's staff and (p. 12) the sending of DMS of a recommendation to the hospitals that they appoint members of their staffs from members of DMS and AMA.

No evidence was offered to prove any "restraints" whatsoever upon the hospitals. Certainly there was no evidence showing that prices at any hospital were fixed or that the competition between any hospitals or the hospitals and anyone else was affected in any way, much less so suppressed that the prices of hospital services were affected substantially to the injury of the public.

We submit that respondent, in effect, has conceded, that its theory of the charge and the evidence is that they involve (Brief in Opposition, p. 19) "restraints" against GHA in "competing with doctors engaged in private practice." Nowhere in its brief in opposition does the respondent describe the business of a single hospital, much less attempt to show a "restraint" on the business of any hospital.

In the Apex case the Court (p. 499, 500) stated that the restraints which were condemned by the Sherman Act were those found "unreasonable or undue" and the effect "substantial". The court said that the restraints prohibited are those which are so substantial as to affect market prices and deprive purchasers or consumers of the advantages of free competition. But the advantages of free competition were not thought to be unduly affected unless market prices were fixed or there was a suppression of competition to the extent that market prices are substantially affected to the injury of the public. The court points out that a combination of employees causes restraint, but such restraint is not the restraint contemplated by the Act, and such restraint is not thought to be a violation of the Act and is not thought to be unreasonable, principally because it did not affect market prices. The effect on competition by efforts to make a labor combination effective was also not thought to be within the prohibition of the Sherman Act.

Thus the Apex case does seem to imply a consideration of the amount and extent of restraint and the intention involved. The government insists that petitioners did three things: (1) prevented their members from accepting employment from GHA; (2) prevented their members from consulting with GHA doctors; and (3) sought hospital preferences for their members. If the evidence in the Apex case failed as a matter of law to show an intent to unreasonably restrain trade, we submit that the evidence here fails likewise to establish the requisite intent to unreasonably restrain trade.

The rules and regulations of DMS came into play only when GHA sought to proselyte petitioners' members. In the application of the rules to the employment controversy GHA's scheme brought into existence all of the known facts concerning that scheme, and they must necessarily be considered. That is so in order to ascertain whether the evidence shows the necessary intent and intended restraints that are direct and unreasonable.

The evidence showed that GHA was incorporated to hire doctors to do its medical work (R. 295-298, 306). GHA sought "to hire" members of DMS to do its corporate medical work (R. 306). Such contracts of hire brought into the controversy, insofar as members of DMS were involved, the employment rules of DMS and the provision in the constitution of DMS that members' contracts of employment be approved by DMS (R. 1266, 1272).

The question of whether approval by DMS to the employment of its members by GHA be given or withheld, made all the facts concerning GHA's scheme of importance.

In the ensuing controversy, which was discussed by members of DMS and officers and trustees of GHA (R. 176-199), the employment rules of DMS preserving, among other things, free competition, were made known to GHA and it was questioned concerning its ability as set up to furnish good medical care, whether GHA's financing was sound, whether its plan of employing doctors on a full-time salary basis to the exclusion of the general profession might not conflict with the employment rules and constitution of DMS because the plan destroyed competition and tended to destroy the private practice of medicine.

A basis of employment of all members of DMS, who wished to participate, to furnish medical services to members of GHA, was suggested to GHA (R. 181, 185, 304).

GHA refused to divulge its plans of financing, stated it was going ahead with its plans even if they violated the employment rules of DMS and that the basis of employment suggested was not acceptable to GHA (R. 201).

As GHA employed members of DMS, its plan and its practices were important in the controversy that followed between such employed members and the other members of DMS. In that dispute over employment entered the facts that respondents' United States Attorney and the law-enforcement officers of the District of Columbia had held GHA to be illegal and had ordered GHA to cease operating in violation of law (R. 373); that counsel advised petitioners that GHA's practices were illegal; that GHA was wrongfully using Government property, discount rates and $40,000 of public money, and an illegal "check-off" system to enforce the payment of dues (R. 376-378), and that the Comptroller General and a Committee of Congress had so held publicly; that GHA was subsidized, coerced members, solicited and advertised; and that GHA was not rendering and could not render good medical services. All such facts appear throughout the evidence and are also detailed in petitioners' offer of proof (R. 940-945) and are involved in all of the activities attempted to be proven to petitioners. Such facts negate any intent to unreasonably and directly restrain trade, and merely showed an effort to protect petitioners, their organizations and their members.

Therefore we insist that the alleged restraints in this case are not within the limits of the rule of the Apex case as to "unreasonable" restraint and "substantial" effect.

THE ACTIVITIES OF THE PETITIONERS SHOWN BY THE EVIDENCE WERE WITHIN THEIR LAWFUL RIGHTS, AND THE PURPOSES CHARGED TO PETITIONERS SHOULD BE INTERPRETED IN THE LIGHT OF THOSE RIGHTS.

While medical societies and member doctors have not heretofore been subjected to prosecution under the Sherman Act,[18] they have been the subject of many private civil

[18] The prosecution in this case was conceived in the opinion of a judge of a trial court in England, Pratt v. British Medical Association, 1 K. B. (1919) 244. That opinion arose out of an action in tort for damages on suits quite similar, in allegation, to the facts alleged in this indictment. In such cases, instead of the interested parties seeking to persuade the United States to assume the burden of the case, the complainants themselves, have brought actions of various kinds. Practically every question of law and fact which is involved in this proceeding, has been fully considered and decided in those decisions.

The following decisions uniformly support the contentions which petitioners are urging in this case, and we ask particular attention of the Court to them.

In Harris v. Thomas, (Tex. Civ. App.) 217 S.W. 1068 it was said (pp. 1076, 1077):

> "It seems to be appellant's contention that his exclusion from the organization and appellees' refusal to affiliate with him * * * influenced others against him and deprived him of the fruits of his preparation as a practitioner. If appellees were acting to further their legitimate purpose or to advance the practice of their profession, this, we think, would be justified even if it had the result claimed by appellant. Unless the organization was itself illegal or the methods used by it were wrongful, appellant has no just complaint."
> "A voluntary association has the power to enact laws governing the admission of members and to prescribe the necessary qualifications for membership * * * Membership therein is a privilege which the society may accord or withhold at its pleasure, with which a court of equity will not interfere, even though the arbitrary rejection of a candidate may prejudice his material interest. * * * We think such a society as the Potter County Medical Association is legitimate and lawful. If it is an organization which is largely the theory that defendants maliciously conspired to injure plaintiff doctors. Actual malice and social persecution were involved. The judgment for plaintiffs was not appealed. Three years later the Appellate Division of the Kings Bench in the case of Ware and DeFreville v. Motor Trade Association, 3 K. B. (1921) 40, severely criticized the Pratt opinion, stating it was "quite impossible to harmonize" it with other decisions.

composed by the appellee doctors, and if it does directly or indirectly affect the material interest of appellant, or in some degree affect him as a nonmember, this would not justify the courts in denouncing it as an illegal or unlawful consiracy. The association has the right to advance its purpose or interest, and that of its members by all legitimate means. * * *"

In Porter v. King County Medical Society, 186 Wash. 410, 58 P. 2d 367, it was said (pp. 370, 372):

"That is to say, Doctors Sweet and MacKinnon, under this contract with the medical society, were required to obey the by-laws of the society or by breach thereof subject themselves to the penalty of suspension or expulsion from the society. It is not at all material how selfish or unselfish the objects of the medical society are if same are legitimate. It cannot be successfully contended that the medical society did not have the right to adopt the by-law in question. Whether such by-law or rule was just, reasonable, or wise is a question of policy which concerns only the medical society and its members. The medical society, in the enforcement of its by-laws for the direct purpose of benefit to itself and to its members is not answerable for damage incidentally resulting to a third person. So long as one remains a member of the medical society, such member can be compelled under his contract with the society to obey the laws, rules and regulations of the society or suffer the penalty of fine, suspension, or expulsion.

"* * * No right of appellants, who were nonmembers, was invaded by respondent medical society when it established its code of ethics and insisted upon compliance therewith through threat of expulsion of an offending member."

To the same effect see:

Bryant v. District of Columbia Dental Society, 26 App. D. C. 461; Newton v. Board of Commissioners, 86 Colo. 446, 282 P. 1068; Olander v. Johnson, 258 Ill. App. 89;

Irwin v. Lorio, 169 La. 1090, 126 So. 669; McDonald v. Massachusetts General Hospital, 120 Mass. 432; Weyrens v. Scotts Bluff County Medical Society, 133 Neb. 814, 277 N. W. 378; Branagan v. Buckman, 67 Misc. 242, 122 N. Y. S. 610, aff'd. 130 N. Y. S. 1106 and Strauss v. Marlboro County General Hospital, 185 S. C. 425, 194 S. E. 65.

Those decisions leave little to be said concerning the theory of the Government that members who refuse to abide by the rules and regulations, may still secure or retain the benefits and advantages of such membership, without any right on the part of the medical society to pursue proper disciplinary measures. While those cases did not involve the Sherman Act, they establish that petitioners had the lawful right to do every act which they did do. That being so, the intent and purpose here involved should be interpreted in the light of those rights.

NONE OF THE FIVE ACTIVITIES ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN RESTRAINED WERE "RESTRAINED" IN VIOLATION OF THE SHERMAN ACT.

The evidence did not show a restraint as required by the Apex case on any one of the five activities alleged to have been restrained.

1. Was GHA restrained? We insist that the prices of GHA's activities were not fixed and competition therein was not suppressed to the extent that market prices were substantially affected to the injury of the public.

2. Were the members of GHA restrained? We insist that the prices of the activities of GHA's members were not fixed nor competition in the activities of GHA's members suppressed to the extent that market prices of their activities were substantially affected to the injury of the public.

3. Were the doctors employed by GHA restrained? We insist that the prices of the activities of GHA's doctors were not fixed, nor competition in the activities of GHA's doctors suppressed to the extent that market prices of their activities were substantially affected to the injury of the public.

Was the medical profession generally restrained? We insist that the prices of the activities of the medical profession generally were not fixed, nor competition in the activities of the medical profession generally suppressed to the extent that market prices of their activities were substantially affected to the injury of the public.

5. Were the Washington hospitals restrained? We insist that the prices of hospital activities were not fixed nor competition in the hospital activities suppressed to the extent that market prices of their activities were substantially affected to the injury of the public.

As to the denial by the trial court of petitioners' motions to direct a verdict as to each and all of the five charges of restraint, and as to the instructions of the court that the jury might find petitioners guilty if any one of the five activities were restrained, our argument at the end of Point I in this brief is applicable here. If there is an insufficient charge or insufficient evidence as to any one of the five charges of restraint here involved, prejudicial error was committed against petitioners and the judgments below should be reversed.

III.

A Dispute Concerning Terms and Conditions of Employment of Doctors, Which Was Within the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, Was Involved, in Which Petitioners Were Interested. The Case is Therefore Not Within the Sherman Act.

In the second American Medical Ass'n case the court below seemed to concede (p. 242) that a dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors was involved in this case, in which petitioners were interested, but held that the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia acts were not applicable for two reasons: (1) that the Acts do not include doctors working for a monthly salary or lawyers, chemists, teachers, or actors, but are limited to disputes between working men, wage-earners, or laborers, on the one hand, and aggregated capital on the other; and (2) even though petitioners were interested in a labor dispute within the meaning of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia acts, if their activities involved a restraint upon competition, they are nevertheless within and subject to the Sherman Act (p. 244). We respectfully submit that such an interpretation of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia acts is erroneous. The court below has held that the liberal arts and learned professions are "trade" within the meaning of the Sherman Act and then held they are not "trade" within the meaning of the word "trade" and other similar words as used in the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia acts. Such a holding is not logical. We insist that if the practice of medicine is "trade" or even if the doctors employed on a monthly salary by GHA are in "trade" or even if GHA is in "trade" and employs doctors on monthly salaries to carry on that "trade" the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia acts are applicable here.

The dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors arose in the following manner: When a committee of the executive committee of DMS and representatives of GHA conferred for the first time (R. 290-309), a controversy arose, the matrix of which was the terms and conditions of employment by GHA of members of DMS to perform GHA's corporate medical work. GHA rejected an offered basis of employment of members of DMS (R. 181, 185, 304), insisted upon dictating the terms, conditions, and method of payment of compensation and of employing members of DMS, regardless of whether GHA's plans were illegal or in conflict with the constitution and employment rules of DMS (R. 201). This controversy over terms and conditions of employment continued throughout the indictment period and was involved in all of the activities charged or proven; hence because of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts this case is not within the Sherman Act. United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219; United States v. Carrozzo, 37 F. Supp. 191, affirmed 313 U. S. 508; New Negro Alliance v. Sanitary Grocery Co., 303 U. S. 552; Drivers Union v. Lake Valley Co., 311 U. S. 91; Gundersheimer's, Inc., v. Bakery, etc., I Union, 73 App. D. C. 352, 353, 119 F. 2d 205, 206; International Ladies G. W. Union v. Donnelly G. Co., 119 F. 2d 892, 898; International Assn. v. Pauly Jail Bldg. Co., 118 F. 2d 615, 621; United States v. American Federation of Musicians, — F. Supp. — (D. C. Ill., No. 4541, decided Oct. 14, 1942);[19] and the plain language of the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts.

If doctors be in trade, it necessarily follows that Secs.

---

[19] The Musicians case involved a bill in equity by United States to enjoin the American Federation of Musicians, comprising 140,000 musicians, which were virtually all the musicians in the nation who make music for hire, from violating the Sherman Act by restraining commerce in phonograph records, transcriptions and radio broadcasts. The bill alleged "that a purpose of the conspiracy is to eliminate from the market the manufacture, sale and use of musical compositions mechanically recorded on phonograph records and electrical transcriptions unless the persons engaged in such businesses enter into agreements with the defendant union to hire such useless and unnecessary labor as the defendant union may demand; that a further purpose of said conspiracy is to exclude from the market the competition of anyone who does not exclusively employ members of the defendant union." The court held the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts were applicable and held that "the acts complained of may not be considered or held to be violations of any law of the United States" and granted defendants' motion to dismiss the bill.

And compare "labor dispute" immunity conferred by Anti-Racketeering Act as interpreted in United States v. Local 807 of I. Brotherhood, etc., 118 F. 2d 684, 686, 689, affirmed 315 U. S. 521.

6 and 20 of the Clayton Act are applicable. Sec. 6 provides that the labor of a human being is not a commodity of commerce. Sec. 20 covers all employers and employees including corporations and associations and, as expanded by Sec. 13 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, includes all persons and associations involved in a dispute over terms or conditions of employment who are engaged in the same industry, trade, craft, or occupation, or have direct or indirect interests therein. The Acts cover any third party, even though that party be a corporation not in trade [20] and employers and their associations [21] even if only indirectly interested in the controversy. The Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts cannot logically be confined exclusively to the laborer who works for wages. Their plain terms require that they be applied to all "who are engaged in the same industry, trade, craft, or occupation."

As GHA's willful employment (R. 173, 174) of doctor-members of DMS (and AMA) and the terms and conditions of such employment was the matrix of this controversy,[22] it follows that the acts charged or proven to petitioners are not within the Sherman Act.

The charge is that petitioners restrained GHA in its employment of doctors to render medical services to the members of GHA. How, if doctors are in "trade" under the Sherman Act, and are in a dispute over employment, they are not within the words "trade" or "occupation," as those words are used in the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, is difficult for us to understand.

The record in this case shows that petitioners, GHA, its members and doctors, other Washington doctors, and Washington hospitals were all directly (and certainly indirectly) interested in a controversy concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors by GHA within the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts.

If doctors are "tradesmen" any controversy or dispute that may arise between themselves or between them and any other person concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors is lifted bodily out of the Sherman Act by the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts.

In United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219, the conceded facts showed an admitted conspiracy on the part of the labor unions and their officers to restrain interstate trade and commerce, to engage in primary and secondary boycotts, to circulate black lists, to induce and coerce breaches of contracts, and like oppressive purposes, with force and violence, for the purpose of restraining trade. This Court held that the legality of such conduct is to be determined only by reading the Sherman Act, the Clayton Act, and the Norris La-Guardia Act as a harmonizing text. In the light of the three Acts this Court measured the conduct described in the indictment in the Hutcheson case and concluded that the defendant labor unions and their officers were engaged in a "dispute" or "labor dispute" as defined in the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, and therefore they were lifted bodily out of the Sherman Act.

In the first American Medical Ass'n case the court below held (p. 712) that when labor unions go so far as to impose unreasonable restraints on the operations of their field, they become subject to the prohibition of the Sherman Act, and referred to and relied on such cases as Duplex Printing Press Co. v. Deering, 254 U. S. 443, and Bedford Cut Stone Company v. Stone Cutters' Assn., 274 U. S. 37. The court below also held in that opinion (p. 711) that Congress did not provide that one class, any more than another, might impose restraints or that one class, any more than another, might be subjected to restraint. That theory of the meaning of the Sherman, Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts was all changed by the Hutcheson case. In fact, the United States in its brief in the Supreme Court in the Hutcheson case relied on the first American Medical Ass'n case, the Duplex Printing Press Co. case, the Bedford Cut Stone Company case, and Pratt v. British Medical Association, 1 K. B. (1919) 244, but this Court abandoned those cases and similar cases and decided henceforth the Sherman Act would be construed in the light of the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, and certain classes of persons—who were engaged in the same industry, trade, craft, or occupation, or had direct or indirect interest therein, if and when engaged in a dispute or controversy concerning terms or conditions of employment or concerning the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing, or seeking to arrange terms and conditions of employment, regardless of whether or not the disputants stand in proximate relation of employer and employee—would be lifted bodily out of the Sherman Act, and it would no longer apply to them.

The Hutcheson case held (p. 231) that the Norris-La Guardia Act removed the fetters of such decisions as the Duplex case and said (p. 236):

> "The Norris-La Guardia Act was a disapproval of Duplex Printing Press Co. v. Deering, supra, and Bedford Cut Stone Co. v. Journeymen Stone Cutters Assn., 274 U. S. 37 as the authoritative interpretation of Section 20 of the Clayton Act, for Congress now placed its own meaning upon that section. • • • In this light Section 20 removes all such allowable conduct from the taint of being a 'violation of any law of the United States,' including the Sherman Law."

In the Hutcheson case, in answer to the reliance placed by the United States upon such cases as the Duplex case, the Pratt case, and the first American Medical Ass'n case, this Court said (p. 236):

> "There is no profit in discussing those cases under the Clayton Act which were decided before the courts were furnished the light shed by the Norris-La Guardia Act on the nature of the industrial conflict. And since the facts in the indictment are made lawful by the Clayton Act in so far as 'any law of the United States' is concerned, it would be idle to consider the Sherman Law apart from the Clayton Act as interpreted by Congress. Cf. Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469."

This Court further said (p. 232):

> "So long as a union acts in its self-interest and does not combine with non-labor groups, the licit and the illicit under Sec. 20 are not to be distinguished by any judgment regarding the wisdom or unwisdom, the rightness or wrongness, the selfishness or unselfishness of the end of which the particular union activities are the means."

It cannot be said that the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts apply or were intended to apply only to labor unions and their activities, because the case of New Negro Alliance v. Sanitary Grocery Co., 303 U. S. 552, has settled that contention. In that case the defendants charged with a violation of the Sherman Act were not labor unions. On the contrary, the New Negro Alliance was a corporation composed of colored persons, organized for the mutual improvement of its members and the promotion of civic, educational, benevolent, and charitable enterprises. Some of the defendants were officers of New Negro Allianee, a corporation. The relationship of employer and employee did not exist between the New Negro Alliance, its officers, and the Sanitary Grocery Co., which the Alliance and its officers undertook to picket and boycott, accompanied with the circulation and publication of black lists, intimidation, coercion, and disorderly conduct. This Court held that the Norris-La Guardia Act applied to and protected the New Negro Alliance and its officers. In United States v. American Federation of Musicians, supra, it was held that musicians and their national association were within the Acts, and that the Sherman Act did not apply to them.

To the same effect as the Hutcheson case are United States v. Carrozzo, 37 F. Sup. 191, affirmed 313 U. S. 508, and Drivers Union v. Lake Valley Co., 311 U. S. 91, and see A. F. of L. v. Swing, 312 U. S. 321, 326.

The result of those cases is, that if petitioners and their members were engaged in the same industry, trade craft, or occupation as GHA, its members, its doctors, other Washington doctors and the Washington hospitals, or had direct or indirect interests therein, and were engaged in a dispute or controversy concerning terms or conditions of employment or concerning associations or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing, or seeking to arrange terms and conditions of employment, their activities would not violate the Sherman Act.

Petitioners insist that the evidence clearly discloses that the parties alleged to have been restrained and petitioners were engaged in a "dispute" as defined by the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts. Indeed, the indictment alleged and the Government insisted that the acts of the defendants were all done in the selfish, self-interest of the defendants themselves, and that the controversy covered by the indictment was between rival methods of rendering medical services. The United States in its brief in the court below conceded (p. 25): "Thus it appears that this case is the outgrowth of conflict between rival systems for the distribution of medical care."

Bodies of men organized and associated together for the purpose of engaging, or who are engaged, in some legitimate negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing, or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment, regardless of whether or not the disputants stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee, the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts operate to lift them bodily out of the Sherman Act.

The conference between a special committee of the executive committee of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and Mr. Penniman, president of GHA, Dr. Brown, medical director of GHA, and Mr. Zimmerman on June 24, 1937 (R. 290) and the conference between a special committee of the executive committee of DMS and the board of trustees and medical director of GHA on July 26, 1937 (R. 176-197), and much of the other evidence in the record clearly and plainly show that petitioners became engaged in a controversy or dispute with persons who were engaged in the same occupation, or who had direct or indirect interests therein, concerning terms or conditions of employment, or concerning the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing, or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment, and therefore petitioners were entitled to the protection of the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts and were not within the Sherman Act.

From the indictment and the record it is clear that petitioners were engaged in a "dispute" with others in the same occupation within the meaning of the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, and consequently they were not within nor subject to Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act.

Certainly, under the evidence, petitioners' sixty-fifth instruction (R. 1493) correctly charged the law applicable. It charged that if the jury found a dispute or controversy over employment existed between GHA and all others involved, including petitioners and the Washington hospitals, and all involved were directly or indirectly interested in the same trade or occupation, and further found the defendants acted in self-interest peacefully and without violence then they should have been acquitted. It was reversible error to deny this instruction as it was not covered in the charge.

Respondent necessarily contends that no dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment is involved in this case in which petitioners were even indirectly interested. Petitioners insist otherwise. There are many instances to so show.[24] The situation is exactly the same as if [24] 1. The constitution of DMS required its members to submit to the proper Committees of DMS any contract of employment which they might enter into with an employer (R. 1265, 1266). GHA and its doctors declined to submit the contract of employment of GHA doctors by GHA (R. 173). This violation of the constitution was one of the charges against Dr. Scandiffio and one of the reasons for his expulsion from DMS (R. 1272).

---

2. The question whether doctors should work for a monthly salary for an organization which sold their services to the public or whether such an organization should pay the doctors on a fee-for-service basis was also involved (R. 179, 304).

3. The question whether GHA, a corporation, was violating federal statutes and unlawfully practicing medicine or insurance and consequently whether the doctors in the employee relationship to GHA would be violating the law (R. 180, 187).

4. The principles of medical ethics forbade a doctor to solicit patients or advertise for them, and there was a question whether these principles could be evaded if GHA, the doctors' employer, did the advertising and soliciting. There was also involved in this point coercing the Government employees to join GHA, the doctors' employer (R. 179, 180).

5. The question whether GHA by virtue of its right to employ and discharge a doctor and in other respects dominated and directed the quality and extent of medical services rendered by doctor employees of GHA to the patients of GHA, in violation of the employment rules of DMS (R. 303).

6. The question of the sale of medical services by GHA to HOLC and how it affected the terms and conditions of employment of other doctors in the District (R. 184, 186, 196).

7. The question of the subsidies to GHA and whether they affected the terms and conditions of employment of other doctors in the vicinity (R. 295, 300-302).

8. The question whether the kind and quality of medical services rendered by GHA brought the doctors generally, and hence the members of petia corporation, a carpenter contractor, sought to employ union carpenters on a monthly salary instead of paying them the hourly rate required by the union. Does anyone suppose that under such circumstances a dispute between the carpenter contractor and the carpenter union, would not be one concerning terms and conditions of employment?

Many statements in respondent's brief in the second American Medical Ass'n case show that there was a dispute or controversy concerning terms or conditions of employment in which the petitioners had, at least, an indirect interest.[25] tioners, into disrepute, and thereby affected the terms and conditions of the employment of petitioners' members in the vicinity (R. 179, 182, 189).

9. At the conference of July 26, 1937, between a sub-committee of the Executive Committee of DMS and the trustees of GHA, the doctor members of said subcommittee, while they complained of a corporation practicing medicine (R. 178), also asked whether GHA could not continue to collect monthly dues from its members and employ the doctor members of DMS to render medical services to GHA members (R. 181, 185, 304), but as respondent said in its brief in the second American Medical Association case (p. 22): "GHA, desiring to obtain the advantages of group practice, was not receptive to the suggestion."

10. The question of whether GHA's plan of employment did not disrupt free competition, free choice of physicians, and tend to destroy the private practice of medicine (R. 195).

---

[25] 1. Respondent stated (B. 3) GHA was engaged in rendering medical care and interested in employing qualified doctors.

2. Respondent stated (B. 3, 4) a controversy arose over the refusal of members of DMS to serve (be employed on) on GHA's staff or consult (work) with GHA's employee-doctors.

3. Respondent stated (B. 7) that petitioners have principles and rules concerning compensation, practice in a community, reasonable competition and medical care on a salary basis.

4. Respondent stated (B. 18, 19, 22) GHA was "hiring • • • salaried full time physicians," a fact known to petitioners "in violation of (petitioners') Principles of Medical Ethics," and sought to hire members of DMS; that a subcommittee of the Executive Committee of DMS suggested a basis under which GHA "would use the members of the Society to provide medical care of GHA members"; that GHA was "not receptive to the suggestion" and that GHA knew the members of DMS "were forbidden by the constitution • • • from accepting employment or consulting

We therefore submit that the word "trade" in Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act does not include the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services as described in the indictment, because they are not "commercial" in nature; and even if such activities are "trade", they were not "restrained" because prices of such activities were not fixed or competition in such activities was not suppressed to the extent that market prices thereof were substantially affected to the injury of the public; and even if such activities were "trade" and were "restrained" any such restraints grew out of a dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors, which was within the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, and in which petitioners were interested and therefore this case is not within the Sherman Act.

The attempt should never have been made to stretch an old statute (the Sherman Act) to new uses, to which it is not adapted, and for which it was not intended. United States v. Gradwell, 243 U. S. 476, 489; Fasulo v. United States, 272 U. S. 620, 628, 629. In the Apex case (p. 513) this Court pointed out that the remedy for alleged wrongs existing outside the proper purview of the Sherman Act must be found in other applicable statutes and laws.

(working) with the members of its staff unless GHA was approved by the Society."

5. Respondent stated (B. 27) that GHA's action in refusing to employ members of DMS in conformity with the rules and regulations of DMS (terms and conditions of employing doctors) brought GHA in "automatic" conflict with the constitution and regulations of DMS.

6. Respondent's statements (B. 28-31) concern a dispute pertaining to the employment of doctors and the rendition of medical care to GHA members.

7. Respondent agrees (B. 69) that the record discloses a controversy between petitioners and the GHA doctors concerning terms and conditions of their employment, but argues that this controversy was but an element of and subsidiary to petitioners' controversy with GHA.

APPENDIX.

Sec. 3 of the Sherman Act of July 2, 1890, c. 647 (26 Stat. 209), 15 U. S. C. Sec. 3, reads in part:

"Every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce * * * of the District of Columbia, or in restraint of trade or commerce between * * * the District of Columbia and any state or states or foreign nations, is declared illegal."

Sec. 1 of the Clayton Act of October 15, 1914, c. 323 (38 Stat. 730), 29 U. S. C. 53, reads:

"The word 'person' or 'persons' wherever used in section 52 of this title shall be deemed to include corporations and associations existing under or authorized by the laws of either the United States, the laws of any of the Territories, the laws of any State, or the laws of any foreign country."

Sec. 6 of the Clayton Act of October 15, 1914, c. 323 (38 Stat. 731), 15 U. S. C. 17, reads in part:

"The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce."

Sec. 20 of the Clayton Act of October 15, 1914, c. 323 (38 Stat. 738), 29 U. S. C. 52, reads:

"No restraining order or injunction shall be granted by any court of the United States, or a judge or the judges thereof, in any case between an employer and employees, or between employers and employees, or between employees, or between persons employed and persons seeking employment, involving, or growing out of, a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment, unless necessary to prevent irreparable injury to property, or to a property right, of the party making the application, for which injury there is no adequate remedy at law, and such property or property right must be described with particularity in the application, which must be in writing and sworn to by the applicant or by his agent or attorney.

"And no such restraining order or injunction shall prohibit any person or persons, whether singly or in concert, from terminating any relation of employment, or from ceasing to perform any work or labor, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful means so to do; or from attending at any place where any such person or persons may lawfully be, for the purpose of peacefully obtaining or communicating information, or from peacefully persuading any person to work or to abstain from working; or from ceasing to patronize or to employ any party to such dispute, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful and lawful means so to do; or from paying or giving to, or withholding from, any person engaged in such dispute, any strike benefits or other moneys or things of value; or from peaceably assembling in a lawful manner, and for lawful purposes; or from doing any act or thing which might lawfully be done in the absence of such dispute by any party thereto; nor shall any of the acts specified in this paragraph be considered or held to be violations of any law of the United States."

Sec. 4 of the Norris-La Guardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 70), 29 U. S. C. 104, reads:

"No court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to issue any restraining order or temporary or permanent injunction in any case involving or growing out of any labor dispute to prohibit any person or persons participating or interested in such dispute (as these terms are herein defined) from doing, whether singly or in concert, any of the following acts:

(a) Ceasing or refusing to perform any work or to remain in any relation of employment;

(b) Becoming or remaining a member of any labor organization or of any employer organization, regardless of any such undertaking or promise as is described in section 103 of this title;

(c) Paying or giving to, or withholding from, any person participating or interested in such labor dispute, any strike or unemployment benefits or insurance, or other moneys or things of value;

(d) By all lawful means aiding any person participating or interested in any labor dispute who is being proceeded against in, or is prosecuting, any action or suit in any court of the United States or of any State;

(e) Giving publicity to the existence of, or the facts involved in, any labor dispute, whether by advertising, speaking, patrolling, or by any other method not involving fraud or violence;

(f) Assembling peaceably to act or to organize to act in promotion of their interest in a labor dispute;

(g) Advising or notifying any person of an intention to do any of the acts heretofore specified;

(h) Agreeing with other persons to do or not to do any of the acts heretofore specified; and

(i) Advising, urging, or otherwise causing or inducing without fraud or violence the acts heretofore specified, regardless of any such undertaking or promise as is described in section 103 of this title."

Sec. 5 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 71), 29 U. S. C. 105, reads:

"No court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to issue a restraining order or temporary or permanent injunction upon the ground that any of the persons participating or interested in a labor dispute constitute or are engaged in an unlawful combination or conspiracy because of the doing in concert of the acts enumerated in section 104 of this title."

Sec. 6 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 71), 29 U. S. C. 106, reads:

"No officer or member of any association or organization, and no association or organization participating or interested in a labor dispute, shall be held responsible or liable in any court of the United States for the unlawful acts of individual officers, members, or agents, except upon clear proof of actual participation in, or actual authorization of, such acts, or of ratification of such acts after actual knowledge thereof."

Sec. 8 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 72), 29 U. S. C. 108, reads:

"No restraining order or injunctive relief shall be granted to any complainant who has failed to comply with any obligation imposed by law which is involved in the labor dispute in question, or who has failed to make every reasonable effort to settle such dispute either by negotiation or with the aid of any available governmental machinery of mediation or voluntary arbitration."

Sec. 13 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act of March 23, 1932, c. 90 (47 Stat. 73), 29 U. S. C. 113, reads:

"When used in sections 101-115 of this title, and for the purposes of such sections—(a) A case shall be held to involve or to grow out of a labor dispute when the case involves persons who are engaged in the same industry, trade, craft, or occupation; or have direct or indirect interests therein; or who are employees of the same employer; or who are members of the same or an affiliated organization of employers or employees; whether such dispute is (1) between one or more employers or associations of employers and one or more employees or associations of employees; (2) between one or more employers or associations of employers and one or more employers or associations of employers; or (3) between one or more employees or associations of employees and one or more employees or association of employees; or when the case involves any conflicting or competing interests in a 'labor dispute' (as defined in this section) of 'persons participating or interested' therein (as defined in this section).

(b) A person or association shall be held to be a person participating or interested in a labor dispute if relief is sought against him or it, and if he or it is engaged in the same industry, trade, craft, or occupation in which such dispute occurs, or has a direct or indirect interest therein, or is a member, officer, or agent of any association composed in whole or in part of employers or employees engaged in such industry, trade, craft or occupation.

(c) The term 'labor dispute' includes any controversy concerning terms or conditions of employment, or concerning the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing, or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment, regardless of whether or not the disputants stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee.

(d) The term 'court of the United States' means any court of the United States whose jurisdiction has been or may be conferred or defined or limited by Act of Congress, including the courts of the District of Columbia."

REPLY BRIEF FOR PETITIONERS

Reply to Respondent's Statement.

Respondent in its statement (Br. 5) summarizes what it says are the facts set forth in the indictment. That summary merely serves to emphasize the complete absence of ultimate facts necessary to support the charge. The indictment does not charge a fixing of prices or a suppression of competition to the extent that prices were substantially affected to the injury of the public, concerning any one or all of the five activities alleged to have been restrained. Paragraphs 34 through 39 of the indictment (R. 14-21), which are the charging part, setting forth the conspiracy and its purposes, do not mention price fixing or suppression of competition.

Respondent says (Br. 14) that the selection of doctors for the staff of Group Health Association, Inc.[1] is in the hands of a medical director, but neglects to state that such employment must be approved by the lay board of trustees (R. 173). Respondent says that the board of trustees of GHA does not exercise any supervision over the professional relation between staff doctors and member patients, but neglects to state that the board of trustees can stop payment of an employee-doctor's salary at any time if they are not satisfied that the doctor sees a sufficient number of patients each day to satisfy them or for any other reason (R. 173).

Formation of the Conspiracy.

Respondent states (Br. 14) that American Medical Association[2] had for many years pursued a policy of opposition to all plans involving group practice on a risk-sharing basis. That this statement is not correct is immediately shown by the footnote on that page which says "at the same session (1934) AMA adopted certain principles to govern the conduct of medical service plans for families with limited means, one principle being that any such plan should (respondent inadvertently uses "must") include all legally qualified doctors in the locality, who wish to give service under the conditions established" (R. 1087).

[1] Sometimes hereinafter referred to as GHA.

[2] Sometimes hereinafter referred to as AMA.

Respondent says that this meant that no plan providing for medical care by a salaried staff could obtain the approval of AMA, but petitioners insist that this principle did not purport to deal with or refer to doctors working on salary. Dr. West testified that in applying this principle each case must be decided on the facts presented (R. 1088). The fact is that there were in excess of 4,000 prepayment and postpayment plans operating throughout the country without the existence of any dispute or controversy with petitioners. The AMA analyzed all types of medical plans in existence in order to help persons to obtain medical service through such plans or with the assistance obtained from Government agencies (R. 224).

Respondent then says (Br. 14) that "the policy (of opposition) was established by its (AMA) House of Delegates". The Principles of Medical Ethics of AMA are a complete answer to those contentions. The Principles provide that "contract practice per se is not unethical" and then specifies certain features and conditions, which, if present, make a contract unethical (R. 860). There is nothing in those features or conditions that shows a policy of opposition as claimed by respondent. They show the contrary.

Respondent says (Br. 15) that this alleged policy of opposition to all plans involving group practice on a risk-sharing basis was actively enforced by the Judicial Council of AMA. Petitioners insist that could not be true because the jurisdiction of the Judicial Council is limited to appellate jurisdiction and then only concerns questions of law and procedure (R. 1034). Respondent says (Br. 16) that the Judicial Council repeatedly affirmed the expulsion of doctors because of their participation in such plans. The record shows only three instances from the years 1932 to 1938 and none of them bore the slightest resemblance to GHA. In two of them expulsion was affirmed by the Judicial Council and in one (The Ross-Loos Case) the expulsion was reversed for errors in procedure (R. 1034). The record does not show that the reason for the expulsion in 1932 of certain doctors by the Dallas County (Texas) Medical Society was group practice on a risk-sharing basis. The provisions of the contract of employment in that case are not stated (R. 1031-1032). The basis of the expulsion of certain doctors from the Milwaukee County (Wisconsin) Medical Society in 1936 (R. 255) was stated (R. 256) to be solicitation of patients, advertising and contract practice contrary to sound public policy. But the terms of the contract of employment of doctors which is stated to be contrary to sound public policy is not contained in the record, so it is impossible to determine whether, even in this one isolated instance, the expulsion was because of a policy of opposition to all plans involving group practice on a risk-sharing basis. In fact, Dr. West, Secretary and General Manager of AMA, testified that AMA did not have a policy of opposition to plans involving group practice on a risk-sharing basis (R. 1034).

Respondent says (Br. 15) that much of the critical evidence of the conspiracy of which petitioners were convicted is found in minutes of meetings of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia [3] and its Executive Committee. It must be remembered that much of this hearsay evidence was admitted on the theory that Dr. Conklin, Secretary of DMS, and other persons making statements appearing in those minutes were co-conspirators, but they were found "not guilty", which destroys the basis for the admission of this evidence. Respondent then proceeds to use any and every statement made by a member of DMS or a member or ex-member of any committee of DMS as though such statement had been made by and was binding on DMS. Petitioners insist that statements made by members of DMS and by members or ex-members of committees, or even by committees, are not binding on DMS. DMS is only bound by resolutions duly passed by a vote of its members or by resolutions passed by committees on subjects that have been duly and finally delegated to them by DMS. The only way voluntary societies like DMS can function is by meetings of its members who should be free to express their views pro and con. To use the statements made by members at such meetings as the basis for charging the Society with a criminal conspiracy is to destroy all society functions and to invade the constitutional right of free speech of the Society and its members.

Respondent (Br. 17) states "The report of this sub-committee, presented at the meeting of the Executive Committee on July 12, 1937 (R. 319-320) stated in part (R. 321):" Then follows excerpts from a letter dated July 12, 1937, from Dr. Verbrycke to Dr. McGovern. Respondent does not specifically state, but it leaves the inference that this letter was adopted by the Executive Committee. The fact is that it was rejected by the Executive Committee and ordered laid on the table (R. 336). Certainly respondent does not state, as we think it should, that the Executive Committee rejected this report and ordered it laid on the table.

Respondent states (B. 22) that in the October 2, 1937, issue of the AMA Journal, an article prepared by Dr. Woodward "denounced" the Group Health plan, and that the article embodies "suggestions" to the District Society of a course of action which might cripple Group Health. The words "denounced" and "suggestions" are unwarranted characterizations. The article truthfully and plainly stated the facts as they existed and performed the proper function of notifying members of the facts concerning GHA.

Respondent says (Br. 23) that on October 6, 1937, DMS adopted a resolution that it cause a copy of the Dr. Woodward article to be sent to each of its members as an indication of its future policies with respect to combatting the activities of GHA. Petitioners point out that the Woodward article does not advocate any combat with GHA. It merely stated the admitted facts and made fair comments thereon.

The publication and circulation of the Dr. Woodward article were but "an exercise of the right of free speech guaranteed by the First Amendment which cannot be made unlawful by act of Congress." United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219, 243 (concurring opinion of Stone, J.)

Operation of the Conspiracy.

A. Boycott of Group Health and Its Staff by District Society and Its Members.

Respondent attempts (Br. 26) to leave the inference that DMS insisted on preferring charges against two members of DMS who were employed by GHA, after they submitted their resignations as members to DMS. The fact is that those two doctors, on November 11, 1937, at the insistence of GHA (R. 197) wrote a letter to the president of DMS (R. 454) withdrawing their resignations. It was not until long after the withdrawal of the resignations, and on November 22, 1937 (R. 455-456-457), that the CC&IM Committee referred the charges of violations of Section 5 of Article IV, and Sections 1 and 2 of Article III of Chapter IX of the Constitution to the Executive Committee for trial, and at the same time so advised the two doctors (R. 457). A full hearing, consisting of several sessions, was had before the Executive Committee, at which the two doctors were represented by the legal staff of Home Owners' Loan Corporation (R. 558-559), and the Executive Committee on March 2, 1938, recommended to the full Society that Dr. Scandiffio be expelled (R. 560-561) and on March 16, 1938, the Society expelled him (R. 561-563) for the stated violations of its constitution.

B. Boycott of Group Health and Its Staff by the Washington Hospitals.

Respondent states (Br. 29) that both AMA and DMS proceeded to bring pressure to bear upon the Washington hospitals to exclude GHA doctors. Petitioners insist there is no such evidence.

Respondent says (Br. 24) that the AMA's action took the form of forcing the hospitals to comply with the "Mundt resolution" of 1934 suggesting that hospitals approved for intern training should be limited in their staffs only to doctors who are AMA affiliates. Petitioners insist that the Mundt resolution merely expressed an opinion by the House of Delegates of the AMA and referred the opinion to the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals to take under advisement (R. 779). Furthermore the uncontradicted evidence is that the AMA had received the request for inspection from Georgetown and Providence Hospitals February 3, 1937, at which time GHA had not even been incorporated, and the uncontradicted evidence is that at the time of the inspection of the hospitals in the summer of 1937 Dr. Peterson, who actually conducted the inspections, had not even heard of GHA (R. 870) and neither had his superior, Dr. Cutter (R. 785).

Respondent states (Br. 31) that one group (of DMS) favored sending a letter to the hospitals informing them of the particular sections of the constitution relating to approval of contracts and warning them that "if they failed to cooperate in every way that they might not be on the approved list" (R. 402) and that a letter giving effect to this proposal was drafted and approved by the Executive Committee (ibid.). Petitioners insist that there is no warrant in the record for this statement. Dr. Hooe (not a group) made a motion before the Executive Committee as to the first letter mentioned (R. 402) and Dr. Sprigg read a prepared letter (R. 402) but Dr. Sprigg's letter is not in the record and whether or not it proposed giving effect to Dr. Hooe's motion does not appear. At any rate neither Dr. Hooe's motion nor Dr. Sprigg's letter was ever approved by the Executive Committee or the Society. Dr. Willson's resolution of November 3, 1937, eliminated both of them.

Respondent (Br. 32) sets out in full Dr. Willson's resolution of November 3, 1937. Far from being part of a conspiracy, the uncontradicted evidence is that this resolution was conceived entirely by Dr. Willson and was submitted by him as a parliamentary procedure to prevent the sending of a letter proposed by Dr. Sprigg, and to have the matter referred to the Hospital Committee, where he believed the matter would end (R. 1270-1271).

Respondent states (Br. 34) that the DMS resolution of December 1, 1937, recommending as a matter of educational policy that, where possible, appointees to the staff of teaching hospitals be a member of DMS or a local medical society in his immediate neighborhood, would, if complied with, bring about the desired boycott of Group Health by the Washington hospitals. Petitioners insist that the recommendation or request contained in the resolution of December 1, 1937, was not evidence of boycott or restraint. A voluntary membership organization has the right to request, peacefully and without violence, exclusive employment rights for its members.

Respondent states (Br. 35) that the chairman of the Hospital Committee of DMS also sent to each hospital a questionnaire requesting information concerning its correspondence with GHA and other information (R. 244, 595-596). That is an incorrect statement. At R. 244 Betty Logsdon testified that those questionnaires were sent to the hospitals but at R. 1360 she corrected her testimony in that regard and said the questionnaires were mailed to the members of the Hospital Committee of DMS and not to the hospitals.

Respondent states (Br. 37) that all of the local hospitals excluded all of GHA doctors because of their connection with that organization. It must be remembered that from January 27, 1938, to July 27, 1938, the petition of GHA for declaratory judgment (R. 640, 1424) against the United States District Attorney and the Superintendent of Insurance was pending in the District Court in which it was alleged that the United States District Attorney and the Superintendent of Insurance contend that GHA was illegally practicing medicine and illegally engaged in the business of insurance. The request of Dr. Selders, GHA surgeon, for hospital privileges was principally involved. The hospitals failed to act on his request or denied it because of the illegality of GHA (R. 496, 601, 602, 603, 619, 636, 640, 1162, 1163, 1205, 1275, 1340, 1347-1348) or because Dr. Selders was not qualified for the broad surgical privileges which he requested (R. 515, 529, 619, 1112, 1162, 1164-1165-1166, 1205, 1273, 1274, 1279, 1302, 1303-1305, 1309-1311, 1316-1318, 1323, 1327-1328, 1332, 1352, 1361-1363). Dr. Selders was from Houston, Texas, and had just completed his residency on July 1, 1937, in a hospital in Worcester, Massachusetts (R. 1277). No doctor in the District had ever been granted the broad surgical privileges requested for Dr. Selders (R. 1273, 1274, 1360-1363). Furthermore, GHA's president testified that a number of GHA's doctors had courtesy privileges at various hospitals during the indictment period (R. 641, 643-645).

Reply to Respondent's Argument.

I.

Respondent says the indictment charged and the proof showed a violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Act. Petitioners say they did not.

Petitioners in their brief logically considered first the question whether any of the activities alleged to have restrained were "trade" and second, whether if "trade", they were restrained. Respondent desires to argue first whether or not they were "restrained" and second, whether or not they were "trade". We will follow respondent's order of argument in this reply.

A. Respondent says any suppression of competition, by means of boycott or otherwise, violates the Sherman Act, irrespective of whether or not market prices are affected. Petitioners say that in order to establish restraint of trade under the Sherman Act it must be charged and proven that the restraint either fixed prices or suppressed competition to the extent that market prices were substantially affected to the injury of the public or competition substantially suppressed.

Respondent states (Br. 12) that petitioners conspired to boycott Group Health in order to prevent it from marketing medical services in competition with petitioner's members, and then argues that that is sufficient to show a violation of the Act. Petitioners insist that the indictment contains no charge whatever concerning, and there is no evidence of, price fixing or suppression of competition. Respondent contends that a combination to exclude a competitor from the market, irrespective of a charge or proof that prices were fixed or competition substantially suppressed to the injury of the public, is sufficient to violate the Act. Respondent insists this Court so held in Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, and Fashion Guild

v. Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457. Petitioners insist that this Court did not so hold. Respondent argues that the Apex case held that any "suppression" of "competition" violates the Sherman Act. Petitioners say the Apex case did not so hold. The conspirators in the Apex case took the Apex Company completely out of the market and completely destroyed all competitive efforts of the Apex Company. Yet in reversing the judgment (based on a jury verdict) against the conspirators this Court held (pp. 500, 501) that contracts, combinations or conspiracies are to be condemned under the Sherman Act only when their purpose or effect was to raise or fix the market price or substantially suppress competition to the injury of the public. Fashion Guild v. Trade Commission, supra, does not support respondent's argument. In that case the Fashion Originators' Guild directly sought to suppress competition of others who copied their designs (of women's garments and the textiles from which they were made) and sold the copies at lower prices than the original designs (p. 461). Thus competition was suppressed to the extent that market prices were substantially affected to the injury of the public.

B. Respondent asserts that but one restraint was submitted to the jury, i.e., restraint upon GHA in providing medical care to its members and that was a "restraint of trade." Petitioners say that activity was not trade, and further, four other alleged "restraints," none of which was trade, were submitted to the jury.

Respondent asserts that the activity of GHA in furnishing medical services to its members, which is one of the activities alleged to have been restrained, is commercial in nature and therefore "trade" under the Sherman Act. Petitioners submit that it is nothing of the sort. The furnishing by a corporation through hired employees, of medical services, when the charges for such services go, not to the doctor employees, but into the corporation treasury, is just as much the practice of medicine as the furnishing of medical services by a doctor to a patient for a fee. Both are the practice of medicine. Both are activities in the learned professions and are therefore outside of the scope of the words "trade and commerce" under the Sherman Act. Respondent refers to Group Health's business of providing medical care in return for the payment of dues. But a doctor in private practice also provides medical care in return for fees, and a doctor who hires other doctors to assist him also provides medical care in return for fees. Could it be said that the doctor who hires doctors to assist him is in "trade" whereas the doctors who assist him are not?

Respondent, apparently realizing and conceding that four of the activities alleged to have been restrained are not "trade" and further that there was no evidence to show they were "restrained" in the sense required by law, undertakes to argue that the issues as to the restraints alleged against members of GHA, GHA's doctors, other doctors and the hospitals are not in issue and that the instructions of the court were really confined to the alleged restraint of the activities of GHA alone. Respondent strains mightily in an attempt to confine the indictment and the charge to conspiracy for the purpose of restraining GHA. But there are five purposes of restraint in the indictment and four of them cannot be blotted out. Even if respondent were not faced with the instructions that restraint on any one of the five activities was sufficient to convict (R. 1505-1508, 1515), it could not avoid the five specific motions of petitioners at the close of the Government's case (R. 728-729) and again at the close of all the evidence (R. 1453-1456) to direct a verdict for petitioners as to each of the five purposes of restraint alleged in the indictment. The court overruled those motions, thus holding that there was some evidence for the consideration of the jury on each of the five alleged purposes to restrain five specific activities. Petitioners excepted to the denial of those motions (R. 1456) and preserved the points for review (R. 68, 76). But even if that were not so, the court in the instructions which it gave to the jury specifically instructed the jury that each of the five activities, alleged to have been restrained, was "trade" (R. 1505-1508, 1510) and petitioners excepted thereto (R. 1514, 1515), specifically pointing out that such activities were not "trade" (R. 1514, 1515), and preserved such exceptions for review (R. 69, 79). And finally, the court over objection of petitioners (R. 1513) sent the indictment with the jury in its deliberations (R. 1515), and petitioners preserved that for review. So respondent can get no solace from an attempted distortion of the instructions. If any one of the five activities alleged to have been restrained were not "trade" or if there is no evidence tending to show a restraint on any one of those activities "the conviction cannot be upheld". Stromberg v. California, 283 U. S. 359, 368, Maryland v. Baldwin, 112 U. S. 490, 493. In the Stromberg case, as here, it was impossible to determine whether or not the jury convicted for acts which did not constitute a crime.

Moreover the present contention that the charge concerns the activities of GHA alone is pure afterthought. Petitioners in demurring to the indictment contended that none of the five activities alleged to have been restrained was trade. Respondent contended they were trade. In the District Court and in the court below and in this Court (previous petitions for certiorari) respondent heretofore has contended that the indictment charged a conspiracy to restrain not one, but five activities. The District Court held none of those activities was trade. The Court of Appeals in reversing for a trial held all five activities were trade. The case was tried on that theory. The Court of Appeals affirmed the convictions on that theory. Hence we submit respondent's present contention comes a little late and is an attempt to avoid the decisions cited in our brief (p. 32).

Respondent argues (Br. 58) that a non-profit corporation may be engaged in trade. Petitioners agree that a non-profit corporation organized under a statute authorizing incorporation for commercial purposes and engaged in commercial business activities may be in "trade". GHA was organized under a statute providing for the incorporation of charitable, educational and religious associations,[4] was not engaged in commercial activities and petitioners insist a corporation so organized and operating cannot be in "trade".

Respondent insists that this Court did not mean what it said in the Apex case when it limited the field of the Sherman Act to commercial activities. It seems significant that in every instance in that opinion, where the nature of field covered by the Sherman Act was discussed, this Court carefully used the clarifying word "commercial". In so holding this Court but followed the many cases which carefully distinguish between "trade" and non-commercial pursuits and activities.

II.

Respondent says petitioners are not within any immunity conferred by Section 20 of the Clayton Act. Petitioners say a dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors, which was within the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, was involved, in which petitioners were interested.

It will be noted that respondent avoids reference to the [4] Act of March 3, 1901, c. 854 (31 Stat. 1283) D. C. Code 1940, Title 29, Sections 29-601 to 29-605 (for the incorporation of charitable, educational and religious associations).

Norris-La Guardia Act. Respondent suggests (Br. 65) that Section 20 of the Clayton Act is confined to any case "between an employer and employees". Of course that is not correct, but if it were, it would be immaterial, considering the Norris-La Guardia Act and United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219. In Columbia River Co. v. Hinton, 315 U. S. 143, at p. 146 this Court said:

> "We recognize that by the terms of the Statute (Norris-La Guardia Act) there may be a 'labor dispute' where the disputants do not stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee."

Respondent does not seem to argue that no dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors is involved in this case, or to argue that petitioners were not interested in such a dispute, but ignores that situation and argues that petitioners objected to Group Health's plan of providing medical care. In view of the ten record references in petitioners' brief after certiorari granted (Br. 58, 59, footnote 24) and the seven admissions of respondent in that regard pointed out in that brief (Br. 59, 60, footnote 25) it cannot be successfully denied that a dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors, which was within the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts, was involved, in which petitioners were directly or indirectly interested. A mere indirect interest is sufficient under Section 13(a) of the Norris-La Guardia Act, 29 U. S. C. 113a.

Respondent makes an ingenious argument that petitioners are a trade association but petitioners insist that, if the practice of medicine be "trade," they are not one whit different so far as their rights under the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts are concerned than a carpenters' union which becomes involved in a dispute with a corporation, a carpenter contractor, which insisted on employing members of the carpenters' union on a monthly salary basis as distinguished from their established hourly rate. Carpenters sell their services at their established hourly rate on a case-to-case or job-to-job basis. Respondent's theory that petitioners are trade associations is not tenable. Suppose a corporation was formed, with members who required the services of carpenters from time to time, and the corporation hired union carpenters on a monthly salary, who rendered carpenters' services to the members, and the carpenters' union objected and expelled the corporation's carpenters from the union, is it conceivable that the carpenters' union would not be protected by the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts?

In Columbia River Co. v. Hinton, 315 U. S. 143, cited by respondent, no question concerning terms and conditions of employment was involved. But this Court made it clear in that case that if the dispute involved wages or hours, or terms or conditions of employment, the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia Acts would apply. As heretofore pointed out, it is clear that a dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment of doctors is involved in this case, in which petitioners were interested.

GHA doctors neither charge nor receive fees for their services. The fees (dues) paid by the patient (GHA member) go into the treasury of the corporation. The doctor remains on a salary basis, in the same manner as any other employee of GHA. There is no difference between the corporate device of GHA here involved, and the multitude of cases which have denied corporations the right to sell medical services through a staff of hired doctors.

Notwithstanding the undisputed employment situation, respondent now argues (Br. 72, 73) that the doctors employed by GHA are independent contractors and not employees of GHA. This case was not tried on that theory and petitioners insist that this contention is frivolous in view of the record here which shows that GHA employed members of petitioners on a salary, full time, to perform GHA's corporate medical work, that such employees had no private practice of their own, worked in offices supplied and furnished by GHA, all under the direction of an employee of GHA (Medical Director) (R. 152, 154, 157, 160, 173, 237, 293, 295, 306, 361, 380-381, 499, 500, 619, 629, 631, 647, 649, 700, 701, 1359). It was the dispute over the terms and conditions of such employment by GHA of members of petitioners that was the matrix of this controversy (R. 290-309, 176-197).

Conclusion.

It is respectfully submitted that the judgments below should be reversed.

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia (R. 1886) is not yet reported. The opinion of the Court of Appeals reversing a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the indictment is reported in 110 F. (2d) 703. The opinion of the District Court sustaining the demurrer is reported in 28 F. Supp. 752.

JURISDICTION

The judgments of the Court of Appeals were entered on June 15, 1942 (R. 1908–09). The petition for writs of certiorari was filed on July 3, 1942. Jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under section 240 (a) of the Judicial Code, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925, and as modified by Rule XI of the Rules of Practice and Procedure in Criminal Cases.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

Petitioners, two medical societies, were engaged in a combination to hinder and obstruct by means of boycotts the operation of Group Health Association, Inc., a non-profit cooperative association of government employees formed in the District of Columbia to provide for the rendition of medical care and hospitalization to its members. The boycotts induced by petitioners consisted of concerted refusals by petitioners' members to serve upon the cooperative's medical staff or to consult with the doctors comprising that staff and concerted refusals by the Washington hospitals to permit the cooperative's doctors to treat its members in those institutions; the boycotts resulted in restraints upon the operation of the cooperative, upon doctors in the pursuit of their callings, and upon the hospitals in the operation of their business. The principal question presented is whether the combination was "in restraint of trade" within the meaning of section 3 of the Sherman Act.

Other subordinate questions presented are (1) whether the conduct for which petitioners were convicted arose from a dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment within the meaning of section 20 of the Clayton Act so that petitioners were immune from prosecution for such conduct; (2) whether Group Health Association was operating in violation of District of Columbia statutes relating to the practice of medicine and the business of insurance and, if so, whether the violation of these statutes by the cooperative is a material consideration in appraising the lawfulness of petitioners' combination; (3) whether the acquittal of the individual defendants by the jury requires that the verdict against petitioners be set aside; (4) whether certain allegations of the indictment were irrelevant and prejudicial; (5) whether the District Court erred in the admission of evidence; (6) whether the District Court erred in the exclusion of evidence; and, (7) whether the District Court erred in its instructions to the jury.

STATUTES INVOLVED

Section 3 of the Act of July 2, 1890, c. 647, 26 Stat. 209 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 3), known as the Sherman Act, provides:

> Every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce in any Territory of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or in restraint of trade or commerce between any such Territory and another, or between any such Territory or Territories and any State or States or the District of Columbia, or with foreign nations, or between the District of Columbia and any State or States or foreign nations, is declared illegal. * * *

Section 20 of the Act of October 15, 1914, c. 323, 38 Stat. 738, as amended (U. S. C., title 29, sec. 52), known as the Clayton Act, provides:

No restraining order or injunction shall be granted by any court of the United States, or a judge or the judges thereof, in any case between an employer and employees, or between employers and employees, or between employees, or between persons employed and persons seeking employment, involving, or growing out of, a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment, * * *

And no such restraining order or injunction shall prohibit any person or persons, whether singly or in concert, from terminating any relation of employment, or from ceasing to perform any work or labor, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful means so to do; or from attending at any place where any such person or persons may lawfully be, for the purpose of peacefully obtaining or communicating information, or from peacefully persuading any person to work or to abstain from working; or from ceasing to patronize or to employ any party to such dispute, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful and lawful means so to do; or from paying or giving to, or withholding from, any person engaged in such dispute, any strike benefits or other moneys or things of value; or from peaceably assembling in a lawful manner, and for lawful purposes; or from doing any act or thing which might lawfully be done in the absence of such dispute by any party thereto; nor shall any of the acts specified in this paragraph be considered or held to be violations of any law of the United States.

STATEMENT

Petitioners, the American Medical Association and the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, are two incorporated medical associations which, with 21 of their individual officers and members, were tried upon an indictment charging a violation of section 3 of the Sherman Act (R. 1–21, 29–30). The jury convicted the petitioners and acquitted the individual defendants (R. 44–45).

Prior to trial, the District Court sustained a demurrer to the indictment and dismissed it (R. 21–25). United States v. American Medical Association, 28 F. Supp. 752. The Government appealed to the Court of Appeals and, before the appeal was heard, petitioned this Court for certiorari. The writ was denied. 308 U. S. 599. Thereafter, the Court of Appeals reversed the judgment of the District Court and remanded the case for trial (R. 26–28). 110 F. (2d) 703. A petition by the defendants for certiorari was denied. 310 U. S. 644.

The indictment (R. 1–21) charged the petitioners with engaging in a combination and conspiracy to hinder and obstruct the operation of a non-profit cooperative association of government employees formed in the District of Columbia to provide for its members medical care through a salaried medical staff and hospital accommodations in the District of Columbia hospitals. It alleged that the combination sought to achieve its object by inducing petitioners' members and the Washington hospitals to boycott the cooperative and the members of its medical staff. The indictment charged that these boycotts resulted in restraints upon the operation of the cooperative, upon doctors in the pursuit of their callings, and upon the hospitals in the operation of their business. When the case was first before the court below, it held that these restraints upon the rendition of medical and hospital services, if proved, were restraints of trade in violation of section 3 of the Sherman Act. United States v. American Medical Association, 110 F. (2d) 703.

The evidence in the case is voluminous and supports every essential allegation of the indictment. The facts which the jury might have found from the evidence may be summarized as follows:

The American Medical Association [1] is the largest and most influential association in the medical profession, embracing within its membership almost 65 per cent of the doctors in the United States.[2] Affiliated with it are county and state medical associations located throughout the country.[3] The Medical Society of the District of Columbia,[4] with 825 members, is the District of Columbia affiliate of the AMA.[5]

On February 24, 1937, a non-profit cooperative association, called Group Health Association, Inc.,[6] was incorporated in the District of Columbia to provide for the rendition of medical care and hospitalization to members of the Association and their dependents in return for monthly dues from the members.[7] Membership in GHA is limited to civil employees of the executive branches of the United States Government.[8] The medical care which it offers is provided by a group of doctors engaged by GHA and compensated by salary.[9]

The plan of GHA to provide medical care on a pre-payment basis through a salaried staff of doctors was condemned by petitioners as being in violation of the Principles of Medical Ethics of the AMA and, therefore, "unethical".[10] Although there is conflict in the record as to the reason for petitioners' opposition, there is abundant evidence to show, and the court below concluded,[11] that it was inspired by a fear that GHA would attract a substantial number of government employees who were actual or potential patients of doctors in private practice in Washington with a resulting reduction in the income of those doctors. A few illustrations of the evidence of this competitive aspect of the case are set forth in the margin.[12]

[11] R. 1890–91.

[12] Among the Principles of Medical Ethics is a provision which condemns as "un-professional" the rendition by a physician of services under conditions "which interfere with reasonable competition among the physicians of a community" (R. 860). The DMS declared GHA "unethical" because it violated this provision (Ex. 37, R. 287–88). Another provision condemns "contract practice"—that is, the rendition of medical care to a group of individuals by a doctor on a salary basis—"when there is interference with reasonable competition in a community" (R. 860). The DMS expelled a member on the ground that his contract with GHA violated this provision. (Ex. 37, R. 559–61.)

Frequent warnings were voiced by the individual defendants and others concerning the competitive threat to the

The condemnation of GHA as "unethical" led to the formulation by the petitioners of the plan to force the cooperative out of business for which petitioners were convicted. The plan consisted of (1) action by the DMS forbidding its members to join the medical staff of GHA or to consult with members of the staff, (2) the institution of disciplinary proceedings against DMS members who violated these prohibitions, and (3) the coercion of the Washington hospitals to exclude GHA doctors from the staffs of the hospitals and thus to prevent private practice of medicine which GHA offered. The defendant Woodward, in an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association discussing GHA, called attention to the fact that GHA might include approximately three-fourths of the Washington population and stated (Ex. 293, R. 385):

> The effect of the withdrawal from private practice of even one-half that number of persons, all of whom are able to pay for medical services, will materially disturb medical practice in the District of Columbia and react against public interest.

A spokesman for the DMS at a meeting with GHA pointed out that membership in GHA was open to substantially all government employees and said (Ex. 10, R. 194):

> * * * But let us get down to cases and consider what would happen in the District of Columbia provided you were able to obtain the maximum of enrollment in this corporation. As I pointed out a while ago, it would involve about one-third of the population of the District of Columbia. Well, one-sixth anyhow, of actual subscriptions, because there are about 100,000 employees. Multiply that by 3.3, you see what it would do here as an economic thing. * * * It would simply result in the necessary exodus of a these doctors from treating their GHA patients in the hospitals.

(1) The constitution of the DMS prohibits professional relations by members with any organization not approved by the DMS.[13] On July 12, 1937, shortly after GHA was incorporated, the executive committee of the DMS adopted and circulated among its members a list of approved organizations from which GHA was omitted.[14] There was substantial evidence to show that the list was in fact a "white list" intended to warn petitioners' members against joining the staff of GHA or consulting with the members of its medical staff.[15] Four members of the DMS declined positions on the staff of GHA because of this action large part of the medical profession of the District of Columbia. * * *

The defendant McGovern is quoted as follows in the minutes of one of the DMS meetings (Ex. 37, R. 358):

> Dr. McGovern said that he looked upon this Group Health Association movement as an organization coming in and interfering with his business. He added that he expected to be in practice for some 20 years and he did not propose, if it could be avoided at all, to have an organization such as was proposed to interfere with his work and income. "Just what are you fellows going to do about it?"

Other similar excerpts from the record are quoted in the opinion of the court below (R. 1890–93, fn. 23).

of the DMS;[16] another declined for the same reason to consult with a GHA doctor concerning patients seriously ill with heart disease.[17]

(2) When two members of the DMS joined the staff of GHA, the DMS instituted proceedings to expel them from the DMS and the AMA.[18] The proceedings resulted in the resignation of one of the doctors from the staff of GHA, with a consequent dismissal of the proceedings, and the expulsion of the other doctor from the DMS.[19] Disciplinary proceedings were also instituted by the DMS against a member because of an alleged consultation with a GHA doctor, and the proceedings were dismissed only upon assurances from the member that he would avoid such consultations in the future.[20]

(3) While the greater part of the Government's evidence in the case concerns the action of the petitioners to induce the Washington hospitals to boycott GHA by denying hospital privileges to its staff, the formal proceedings of the DMS sufficiently reveal the action taken and the results achieved in this respect.

On November 3, 1937 the DMS adopted the resolution quoted in the margin,[21] instructing its hospital committee to recommend a plan for preventing patients of GHA from being received in the Washington hospitals.[22] Upon the recommendation of the hospital committee the DMS adopted and sent to all of the hospitals a resolution recommending to the hospitals that they require that all members of their staffs be members of the DMS

The Hospital Committee urges that the Medical Society continue their full cooperation and avoid conflict with any of the local private hospitals.

The action of the DMS described in the foregoing discussion was undertaken with the knowledge and approval of the AMA. The AMA was in a large measure responsible for shaping the hostile policy of its local affiliate toward GHA which led to the boycotts;[25] through its Journal it warned the profession that doctors associated with GHA were "certain to lose professional status" which would handicap the organization in obtaining "consultant service and hospital accommodations";[26] and it was kept fully advised of the steps taken by the DMS to prevent professional relations between petitioners' members and GHA and to exclude GHA doctors from the Washington hospitals.[27]

There was also substantial evidence warranting the inference that the AMA was directly instrumental in obtaining the exclusion of the GHA doctors from the Washington hospitals.[28]

Upon the facts recited above, the District Court charged the jury that it might convict the defendants if it found that they had engaged in the combination charged by the indictment (R. 1507–08). On appeal, the Court of Appeals reaffirmed its first holding that the combination was "in restraint of trade" (R. 1886–93) and held that no error was committed either in the trial of petitioners or in the rulings upon their post-verdict motions (R. 1894–1907).

ARGUMENT

I

The Government appealed from the decision sustaining the demurrer to the indictment, and prior to argument in the Court of Appeals petitioned for certiorari on the ground that the importance of the question whether the combination alleged was in restraint of trade warranted direct review by this Court similar to that which would have been available as a matter of right under the Criminal Appeals Act had the case originated outside the District of Columbia. United States v. American Medical Association, October Term, 1939, No. 377, Pet. pp. 9–12. Certiorari was denied. 308 U. S. 599. After the Court of Appeals reversed the decision of the District Court, the defendants petitioned for certiorari and the Government opposed on the grounds both that the judgment was not final and that the holding of the Court of Appeals did no more than give application to settled doctrines. American Medical Association v. United States, October Term, 1939, No. 959, Brief for the United States in Opposition, pp. 11–15. Again certiorari was denied. 310 U. S. 644. In view of these two denials of certiorari, together with the fact that the decision is probably limited in effect to the District of Columbia, that the question has received comprehensive treatment by the Court of Appeals, and that the decision appears to be clearly correct, the Government does not feel warranted in acquiescing in the granting of the writ.

1. Petitioners contend (Pet. 19) that the Court of Appeals did not give proper effect to applicable decisions of this Court in holding that the phrase "restraint of trade" in section 3 of the Sherman Act embraces restraints upon the rendition of medical services. The Government submits that the cases cited by petitioners do not lend any support to this contention. Only Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers, Inc. v. United States, 286 U. S. 427, and Apex

Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, seem sufficiently relevant to require comment.[29]

The Cleaners & Dyers case held that the "restraint of trade" forbidden by section 3 of the Sherman Act is not, so far as it relates to activities in the District of Columbia, confined to restraints upon the buying and selling of commodities, but includes restraints upon the performance of services, such as dyeing, cleaning, or renovating wearing apparel. The Court supported this conclusion by a quotation from the opinion in The Schooner Nymph, 18 Fed. Cas. 506, rendered by Mr. Justice Story while sitting as a circuit justice. Petitioners rely upon the portion of one sentence in this quotation in which Mr. Justice Story intimated that the practice of the learned professions was not a "trade". This statement was not pertinent to any question considered in the Cleaners & Dyers case, and it was dictum only in The Schooner Nymph.

Petitioners' assertion (Pet. 20) that the decision of the Court of Appeals is inconsistent with Apex

---

[29] The other cases cited (aside from Federal Baseball Club v. National League, 259 U. S. 200) did not arise under the Sherman Act. They construed the terms of other federal statutes, state legislation, or private contract. The Baseball case turned on the meaning of the term "commerce" as used in sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act. The scope of section 3 of the act is not governed by the scope of sections 1 and 2; this Court has held that section 3 is to be interpreted "as though it were a separate and independent act", disassociated from the prior sections. Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers, Inc. v. United States, 286 U. S. 427, 435.

Hosiery Co. v. Leader, supra,[30] is based on the argument that the Court in that case construed the Sherman Act as applying only to combinations which are intended to or in fact do affect market prices. Substantially the same argument was made in General Motors Corporation v. United States, No. 352, October Term, 1941, Petition, pp. 16–22. Certiorari was denied. 314 U. S. 618. The argument does violence to the opinion of the Court in the Apex case,[31] ignores the holding in the later case of Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457, 466, that the regulating of prices and the limiting of production do "not exhaust the types of conduct banned by the Sherman and Clayton Acts", and seeks to give an interpretation to the Apex case in conflict with the [30] In that case, plaintiff, a hosiery manufacturer, charged that the defendant union and its officers had violated the Sherman Act by engaging in a sit-down strike for the purpose of enforcing a demand for a closed shop and by preventing the interstate shipment of goods already manufactured. Upon these facts, the Court held that the unlawful interference by combination and conspiracy with the movement of goods across state lines was not without more a violation of the statute.

[31] The Court expressly stated that the act applies to "restraints * * * which tended to restrict production, raise prices or otherwise control the market to the detriment of purchasers or consumers of goods and services." [310 U. S. at 493.] The opinion further stated that the Act is applicable where the "restraint is shown to have or is intended to have an effect upon prices in the market or otherwise to deprive purchasers or consumers of the advantages which they derive from free competition." [310 U. S. at 501.]

line of cases in which the Court has held, without consideration of the effect upon the price structure, that combinations to boycott competitors are in violation of the Sherman Act.[32]

The Government submits that the element of "commercial competition" which the Court found lacking in the Apex case is plainly present in the case at bar. In the Apex case the Court concluded that the combination "did not have as its purpose restraint upon competition in the market for petitioner's product", that its object was solely to compel the company to accede to the union demands for a closed shop (310 U. S. at 501). Here, as the Statement has indicated (supra, pages 8–10), the dominating purpose of petitioners was to suppress the competition of GHA in the market for medical services. And the verdict of the jury necessarily constitutes a finding to this effect, since the Court instructed the jury that to convict the defendants it must find that they "intended to prevent Group Health Association from competing with doctors engaged in private practice on a fee-for-service basis * * *": (R. 1498, R. 1509).[33]

The holding below, even though not directly governed by any prior decision of this Court, does no more than give application to doctrines now settled. Those doctrines are: (1) Section 3 of the Sherman Act is not to be given a narrow construction; Congress in enacting this section "meant to deal comprehensively and effectively with the evils resulting from contracts, combinations and conspiracies in restraint of trade."[34] (2) The phrase "restraint of trade," as used in the Sherman Act, had its genesis in the common law, and its use at common law is the general measure of its scope.[35] (3) The courts both of this country and of England have held, for almost a century and a half, that restraints upon the rendition of medical services are embraced within the restraints of trade condemned by the common law.[36]

2. Petitioners also urge (Pet. 20) that the question decided by the Court of Appeals is one of substance relating to the construction of a statute of the United States. But the court has construed only section 3 of the Sherman Act and only in so far as that section relates to activities wholly within the District of Columbia. See Ex parte Bakelite Corp., 279 U. S. 438, 450. The decision below is therefore the equivalent of the construction of a statute limited in its operation to the District of Columbia, which this Court will not ordinarily review. Del Vecchio v. Bowers, 296 U. S. 280, 285.

It is unlikely that the holding of the Court of Appeals that restraints upon the practice of medicine fall within the meaning of the words "restraint of trade" in section 3 will influence the enforcement of the Sherman Act beyond the District of Columbia. Section 1, which also prohibits combinations "in restraint of trade", is limited in its application to restraints affecting interstate trade and commerce. Since the practice of medicine is usually an intrastate activity, it is not likely that section 1 could be invoked against restraints upon the practice of medicine in the states.

The Government recognizes, however, that the decision below may have persuasive effect outside of the District of Columbia and involves important interests. If certiorari should be granted, it is respectfully urged that the grant be limited to the question whether the conspiracy of which petitioners were convicted constitutes a conspiracy in restraint of trade within the meaning of section 3 of the Sherman Act.

II

None of the subordinate questions raised by petitioners appears to be an appropriate subject for review by this Court. They involve rulings of the District Court which either are in accord with settled principles or are unlikely to have general application; their correctness depends largely upon an appraisal of the evidence, which this Court will not ordinarily undertake. Houston Oil Co. v. Goodrich, 245 U. S. 441. In any event, the opinion of the Court of Appeals clearly shows that the rulings were correct.

We do not believe that petitioners' attack on the rulings concerning admissibility of evidence and on the instructions to the jury and petitioners' claim that the indictment contains prejudicial and irrelevant matter require any discussion beyond the comments made in the margin.[37] Discussion of the other subordinate questions follows:

1. Petitioners contend (Pet. 21) that the holding of the court below that section 20 of the Clayton [37] The only objection to the admission of evidence which the court below considered worthy of comment is that addressed to the evidence of conduct by the AMA in other parts of the country similar to that in the District of Columbia. This evidence was received only to show the plan and purpose of the AMA in the commission of the illegal acts charged by the indictment. The opinion of the Court of Appeals (R. 1903–06) and the numerous authorities upon which the court relies seem to leave no doubt about the soundness of the District Court's ruling admitting this evidence. The exclusion of evidence offered by petitioners (intended to show the illegal-

Act is inapplicable here conflicts with New Negro Alliance v. Sanitary Grocery Co., 303 U. S. 552; Milk Wagon Drivers' Union, Local No. 753 v. Lake Valley Farm Products, Inc., 311 U. S. 91; and United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219. These cases are obviously not in point on the issue posed by petitioners. That issue is whether section 20 applies to disputes over the way in which doctors shall provide medical care in a community as well as to disputes concerning the terms and conditions of employment of laborers. None of the cases cited sheds any light on this issue since the Court had before it in each case a dispute arising out of the relations between employers and laborers, and neither the questions decided [38] nor the language ity of GHA's activities and the reasonableness of petitioners' combination) is directly sustained by the decision of this Court in Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457, 468. Petitioners' objections to the court's charge to the jury upon the major issues in the case are answered by the discussion of these issues in the text of this brief in opposition (see pages 16–20, 22–26). Petitioners' other objections to the charge are, we submit, frivolous. The opinion of the court below sustaining the validity of the indictment plainly shows that the claim that the indictment contains prejudicial and irrelevant matter is without merit. United States v. American Medical Association, 110 F. (2d) 703, 715–716.

[38] New Negro Alliance v. Sanitary Grocery Co., supra, held that discrimination in employment by reason of race or color concerned "terms or conditions of employment" within the meaning of the Norris-LaGuardia Act. In Milk Wagon Drivers' Union v. Lake Valley Co., supra, the Court held that picketing by a union to compel so-called "vendors", who pur-of the opinions indicates that section 20 has application to any other kind of dispute.[39]

The decision below is clearly correct and does not call for further review by this Court. Both the language of section 20 and its legislative history (portions of which are set forth in the opinion of the court below, R. 1894-95) show that it was intended to permit collective action of certain kinds by employees in order to offset the superior bargaining position of employers. Doctors, even though engaged by cooperatives on a salary basis, are not employees of the kind which the act was intended to protect; their independence of judgment and their freedom from supervision by those whom they serve cast them more in the role of independent contractors. Accordingly, the application of section 20 does not extend to disputes such as that giving rise to the present case. Cf. Columbia River Packers Association v. Hinton, 315 U. S.

chase milk from dairies and sell and deliver it to retailers and others, to join the union fell within the protection of the Norris-LaGuardia Act. United States v. Hutcheson, supra, held that the parties to the dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment need not stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee.

[39] For the same reasons the decision of the court below is not in conflict with Gundersheimer's, Inc. v. Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union, supra, p. 206; International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union v. Donnelly Garment Co., supra, p. 898; or International Association of Bridge, Structural & Ornamental Iron Workers v. Pauly Jail Bldg. Co., 118 F. (2d) 615, 620 (C. C. A. 8).

143. Further, there is no reason of policy in favor of extending the provisions of section 20 to the present case, where there are absent the circumstances of inequality of bargaining power which underlay the Clayton Act's passage.

2. In Jordan v. Group Health Association, 107 F. (2d) 239, the Court of Appeals held that GHA was not operating in violation of District of Columbia insurance laws.[40] In United States v. American Medical Association, 110 F. (2d) 703, 714, the Court of Appeals, in passing upon the sufficiency of the indictment, held that GHA was not engaged in the practice of medicine in violation of the Healing Arts Practice Act of the District of Columbia.[41] Petitioners urge (Pet. 21-22) this Court in the present case to consider the correctness of these holdings, with a view to deciding that the activities of GHA were illegal, and that this is a material consideration in appraising the unlawfulness of petitioners' combination.

The statutes involved are obviously limited in their operation to the District of Columbia. Accordingly, the present case is not one for certiorari on the issue of violations of law by GHA, where the review would be only of correctness of the construction given the District of Columbia medical practice and insurance statutes by the Court of Appeals. Del Vecchio v. Bowers, supra, at 285.

[40] D. C. Code, 1940, Title 35, sec. 202.

[41] D. C. Code, 1940, Title 2, sec. 102.

In any event, the holding of the court below that the combination was in violation of the Sherman Act irrespective of the legality of the operations of GHA is in full accord with decisions of this Court. The combination had for its object the suppression of the competition of GHA through the instrumentality of boycotts employed against the organization and its medical staff. This Court has consistently held that such a combination cannot be justified by a showing that it was intended to eliminate unfair or fraudulent practices, or that the competition which it sought to suppress was the product of unlawful conduct. Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457, 468; United States v. First National Pictures, Inc., 282 U. S. 44; Eastern States Lumber Dealers' Association v. United States, 234 U. S. 600.

3. Contrary to petitioners' claim (Pet. 22–23), the decision of the Court of Appeals that the verdict against petitioners might stand despite the acquittal of the individual defendants is in agreement with the only relevant decisions of circuit courts of appeals. The Seventh Circuit reached the same conclusion as the court below upon facts identical with those here involved. General Motors Corp. v. United States, 121 F. (2d) 376, 411, certiorari denied, 314 U. S 618. In United States v. Austin-Bagley Corp., 31 F. (2d) 229, 233, the Second Circuit sustained a verdict convicting certain defendants which was inconsistent with a verdict acquitting other defendants. Certiorari was denied. 279 U. S. 863. See Petition, Austin-Bagley Corp v. United States, No. 820, October Term, 1928, pp. 6–7.[42]

The ruling of the court below is also in harmony with the applicable decisions of this Court. Dunn v. United States, 284 U. S. 390, and Borum v. United States, 284 U. S. 596, hold that a verdict of conviction upon one count of an indictment may stand although it is inconsistent with a verdict of acquittal upon another count. We submit that no distinction should be made between inconsistent verdicts upon one count of an indictment and inconsistent verdicts upon two counts of the same indictment. The holding of the Court of Appeals, therefore, accords with the principle of the Dunn case that "consistency in the verdict is not necessary." Dunn v. United States, supra, at 393.

---

[42] The line of cases in the federal courts relied upon by petitioners here (Pet. 41, fn. 26) holding or intimating that the acquittal of one of two defendants indicted and tried for conspiracy requires that the conviction of the other be set aside is inapplicable in the present case since two of the defendants were convicted. The state cases cited (Pet. 41, fn. 27), holding that a verdict returned against a principal for a tort committed by his agent must be set aside if the agent is acquitted, recognize that this principle is confined to cases where the act of the agent is unauthorized by the principal and the latter's liability is predicated only upon the doctrine of respondeat superior. In this case, as the Statement shows (supra, pages 8–15), the combination was formed and carried out pursuant to formal corporate action of the petitioners.

CONCLUSION

The decision below is correct and presents no conflict with decisions of this Court or of circuit courts of appeals. It is therefore respectfully submitted that the petition for writs of certiorari should be denied.

ON WRITS OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the district court sustaining a demurrer to the indictment is reported in 28 F. Supp. 752 and the opinion of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia reversing the judgment sustaining the demurrer is reported in 110 F. (2d) 703. The opinion of the court of appeals (R. 1886–1907) affirming the judgments of conviction entered against petitioners after jury trial is reported in 130 F. (2d) 233.

JURISDICTION

The judgments of the court of appeals were entered on June 15, 1942 (R. 1908–9). Petition for writs of certiorari was filed on July 3, 1942, and was granted on October 12, 1942. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Section 240 (a) of the Judicial Code, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925, and as modified by Rule XI of the Rules of Practice and Procedure in Criminal Cases.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

This Court granted certiorari limited to the first three questions presented in the petition for writs of certiorari. Since the second question thus presented includes and comprehends the first, the questions presented may be stated as follows:

(1) Whether the indictment charged and the evidence proved a conspiracy in "restraint of trade" within the meaning of Section 3 of the Sherman Act.

(2) Whether the acts for which petitioners were convicted are given immunity by Section 20 of the Clayton Act.

STATUTES INVOLVED

Section 3 of the Act of July 2, 1890, c. 647, 26 Stat. 209, 15 U. S. C. Sec. 3, known as the Sherman Act, provides in part:

> Every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce in any Territory of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or in restraint of trade or commerce between any such Territory and another, or between any such Territory or Territories and any State or States or the District of Columbia, or with foreign nations, or between the District of Columbia and any State or States or foreign nations, is declared illegal. * * *

Section 20 of the Act of October 15, 1914, c. 323, 38 Stat. 738, 29 U. S. C. Sec. 52, known as the Clayton Act, provides:

> No restraining order or injunction shall be granted by any court of the United States, or a judge or the judges thereof, in any case between an employer and employees, or between employers and employees, or between employees, or between persons employed and persons seeking employment, involving, or growing out of, a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment, unless necessary to prevent irreparable injury to property, or to a property right, of the party making the application, for which injury there is no adequate remedy at law, and such property or property right must be described with particularity in the application, which must be in writing and sworn to by the applicant or by his agent or attorney.

And no such restraining order or injunction shall prohibit any person or persons, whether singly or in concert, from terminating any relation of employment, or from ceasing to perform any work or labor, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful means so to do; or from attending at any place where any such person or persons may lawfully be, for the purpose of peacefully obtaining or communicating information, or from peacefully persuading any person to work or to abstain from working; or from ceasing to patronize or to employ any party to such dispute, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful and lawful means so to do; or from paying or giving to, or withholding from, any person engaged in such dispute, any strike benefits or other moneys or things of value; or from peaceably assembling in a lawful manner, and for lawful purposes; or from doing any act or thing which might lawfully be done in the absence of such dispute by any party thereto; nor shall any of the acts specified in this paragraph be considered or held to be violations of any law of the United States.

STATEMENT

The indictment in this case was returned in December 1938 (R. 1). The district court sustained a demurrer to the indictment and, on appeal, the court of appeals reversed this judgment (R. 24–25, 27).[1] The two petitioners and 22 other defendants were then brought to trial (R. 29–30). Directed verdicts of acquittal were entered in favor of four of the defendants (R. 38), and at the close of the trial the jury convicted petitioner American Medical Association (sometimes referred to herein as AMA) and petitioner The Medical Society of the District of Columbia (sometimes referred to herein as the Society or as the District Society) and acquitted the remaining 18 individual defendants (R. 44–45).[2] The Court of Appeals affirmed the judgments of conviction (R. 1908–9).

THE INDICTMENT

The indictment under which petitioners were convicted charges a combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade in the District of Columbia, in violation of Section 3 of the Sherman Act. The facts set forth in the indictment may be summarized as follows:

Group Health Association, Inc., was incorporated in the District of Columbia in February 1937

[1] The Government, prior to hearing on its appeal, petitioned this Court for certiorari. Certiorari was denied. 308 U. S. 529. After decision by the court of appeals, the defendants filed a petition for writ of certiorari. Certiorari was again denied. 310 U. S. 644.

[2] The district court imposed a fine of $2,500 on AMA and a fine of $1,500 on the District Society (R. 54–55).

as a nonprofit cooperative association of employees of the Federal Government. This organization (hereinafter referred to as Group Health) provides medical care and hospitalization for its members and their dependents in return for monthly dues from the members. The medical care which it offers is furnished by a staff of doctors who are under the direction of a medical director and are compensated by salary. Group Health has a modern clinic and it defrays, within limits, expenses of hospitalization of members and their dependents (R. 14):

The defendants, during the years 1937 and 1938, have combined and conspired to restrain Group Health in its business of providing medical care and hospitalization, to restrain the doctors on its staff, as well as other doctors, in the pursuit of their callings, and to restrain Washington hospitals in the operation of their business (R. 14–15). The plan and purpose of the defendants were to prevent Group Health from procuring qualified doctors for its staff and to prevent it from obtaining hospital facilities for its members, and to prevent Group Health doctors from consulting with other doctors and from treating their patients in Washington hospitals (R. 16–18). To achieve these objectives, the District Society and AMA induced and coerced their members to boycott Group Health by refusing to serve on its staff or to consult with doctors on its staff, and induced and coerced all the hospitals in the District of Columbia not operated by the Government to boycott Group Health by denying hospital privileges to doctors serving on its staff (R. 17–19).

By way of "background," the indictment alleges that AMA has long been opposed to the group practice of medicine on a risk-sharing, prepayment basis—the basis upon which Group Health provided medical care—and that this opposition has been principally for economic reasons and because AMA fears the competition which this kind of practice offers to its doctor members, who practice on the customary fee-for-service basis (R. 5, 7). It is further alleged that such group practice has developed in an effort to meet the problem created by the increasing cost of medical care and by the fact that persons of low income have not been able to obtain adequate care under the traditional methods of medical practice (R. 5–6).

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

AMA, an Illinois corporation, is a federacy of "constituent" state and territorial medical associations (Gov. Ex. 1,[2] R. 1581). Its membership

[2] Exhibit 1 is a stipulation as to certain facts, to which are attached, among other things, the constitution and bylaws of AMA (R. 1535, 1581–98).

A large part of the evidence in this case consists of exhibits which were read to the jury and these exhibits appear in Volumes I and II of the record at the respective points in the trial proceedings at which they were read to the jury. Exhibits admitted in evidence but not read to the jury are included in Volume III.

In this brief, when referring to evidence introduced in the form of an exhibit, we shall, as a matter of convehconsists of the members of the constituent associations (R. 1583). A doctor, to be a member of AMA, must therefore be a member of a constituent association.[4]

AMA is the largest and most influential medical association in this country (R. 112). On April 1, 1938, AMA had 109,435 members out of a total of 169,628 doctors in the United States (R. 1536) and many of the doctors who were not members of AMA were not in active practice (R. 180).[5] It publishes a weekly journal called the Journal of the American Medical Association which has a circulation of over 100,000 (R. 1102–3).

The governing body of AMA is the House of Delegates, composed of delegates elected by the constituent associations (R. 1028, 1582). The House elects a board of trustees and also elects certain councils or bureaus which carry on a great deal of the important work of AMA (R. 113). Among these are the Judicial Council, the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals, and the Bureau of Medical Economics (R. 113, 1589).

AMA has adopted certain Principles of Medical Ethics which embody AMA's rules governing the [4] County medical societies chartered by constituent associations are known as component societies and membership in a constituent association can ordinarily be obtained only through a component society (R. 1537, 1581).

[5] In each of the years 1936 and 1937 its gross income was over $1,500,000 (R. 114).

relationship between the doctor and his patients, the profession and the public.[6] Every constituent association, with one exception, has adopted these Principles and they are therefore binding upon practically every AMA member (R. 1073–4).

Article VI of Chapter III of the Principles deals with the subject of "Compensation." Under Section 2 of this article it is "unprofessional" for a physician to dispose of his services under conditions "which interfere with reasonable competition among the physicians of a community." Section 3, which defines "contract practice" as meaning an agreement to furnish medical services to a group of individuals on the basis of a fee schedule, or for a salary, states that while contract practice is not "per se" unethical, it becomes "unethical," inter alia, when there is "solicitation" of patients, when there is "underbidding" to secure the contract, when the compensation is "inadequate" to assure good medical service, when "there is interference with reasonable competition in a community," and when "the contract because of any of its provisions or practical results is contrary to sound public policy" (R. 860).[7] [6] The Principles were read in full to the jury (R. 851–863).

[7] The above rules are clearly not related to ethics in the true sense of that word but are primarily concerned with the competitive aspects of medical practice. The House of Delegates has itself recognized the economic implications of many of the Principles (Gov. Ex. 607, R. 1821, 1823, 1827). In addition, the indefiniteness of these rules gives to the Judicial Council, which passes upon controversies growing

The Council on Medical Education and Hospitals inspects and approves hospitals for interne training (R. 776–777). The standards formulated by the Council are known as "essentials" and hospitals are examined to see whether they conform to them (ibid.). To be on AMA's approved list is "extremely important to a hospital"; this enhances the hospital's prestige and enables it to obtain internes whom it otherwise ordinarily could not procure (R. 214).

One of the "essentials" established by AMA for approval of a hospital is that the staff be composed of "ethical" physicians (Def. Ex. 12, R. 777).* The power of AMA to exercise influence over the composition of the staffs of hospitals was implemented and increased by the "Mundt resolution," adopted by the House of Delegates in 1934, which expresses the "opinion" that physicians on the staffs of hospitals approved by AMA for interne training "should be limited to members in good out of alleged violations (R. 1530–1), wide latitude to apply the Principles. AMA has never defined what is meant by the phrase "contrary to sound public policy" and it took no action when a definition was requested (R. 866). The Judicial Council has ruled that it is a fundamental of medical ethics that "anything which in effect is opposed to the ultimate good of the people at large is against sound public policy and therefore unethical" (R. 1032).

* Petitioners did not print this exhibit but, by stipulation, either party may refer in brief or argument to any exhibit which was received in evidence (R. 1882). The requirement that staff members be "ethical" appears in Par. 1, Sec. 2, of Def. Ex. 12.

standing of their local county medical societies" (R. 250). It follows, therefore, that AMA may withhold approval of a hospital solely because some members of its staff are not, in AMA's opinion, "ethical" or because they are not members in good standing of their local medical society.

The Bureau of Medical Economics prepares for publication and distributes "data pertaining to the economics of the practice of medicine"; it also furnishes "critical and constructive information and opinions" on this subject (R. 120–121). The bureau has investigated and reported upon numerous plans involving contract or group practice and it has carried on extensive correspondence with members of AMA and others concerning such plans (R. 224–225). Articles written by the Bureau are published in the Journal of the American Medical Association in a section entitled "Organization Section" (R. 117).

THE MEDICAL SOCIETY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The District Society is a constituent association of AMA and the Principles of Medical Ethics of AMA are, by the terms of its constitution, "binding upon" its members (R. 1547, 1557).[9] An Executive Committee exercises "general oversight" over the affairs of the Society (R. 1552); this committee passes upon any charge of unethical conduct preferred against a member and recommends disciplinary action to the Society (R. 1560).

Section 5 of Article IV, Chapter IX of the Society's constitution provides that no member shall be professionally associated with "any" organization or individual engaged in medical practice in the District of Columbia or within 10 miles thereof "which has not been approved by the Society" (R. 1559). Under an amendment adopted in March 1937 the Executive Committee is authorized and directed to prepare a list of "approved" organizations and individuals (R. 1129–30, 1560).

A Compensation, Contract and Industrial Medicine Committee (referred to herein as the CC&IM Committee) has the duty of investigating all charges of unethical conduct relating to "contract practice" brought against any member and the constitution requires every member, before entering into an agreement for rendering professional service, to submit a copy thereof to this committee "for approval" (R. 1553, 1558).[10]

A Hospital Committee of 11 members is required to investigate the "ethical relations" between hospitals in the District of Columbia and physicians, to recommend "a list of hospitals to be approved by the Society," and to inform the Society of the names of members who are associated in any way with hospitals not on the "approved list" (R. 1554). The constitution provides that members shall not serve upon the medical staff of any hospital "which is not approved by the Society" (R. 1559).

[10] The Society's constitution declares that it is "unprofessional" for a physician to dispose of his services under conditions "which interfere with reasonable competition among the physicians" of the community and members are prohibited from entering into any contract, the terms of which are "in violation of" this principle (R. 1558).

GROUP HEALTH ASSOCIATION, INC.

In 1936 Raymond R. Zimmerman, director of personnel of Home Owners' Loan Corporation (referred to herein as HOLC) became interested in providing a medical service plan for its employees.[11] After studying the cost of the sick leave of employees and familiarizing himself with the operation of various plans for group medical care, he recommended the adoption of such a plan for HOLC employees (R. 149–151). The result was the incorporation of Group Health in February 1937.

When Group Health began operations by opening its clinic on November 1, 1937, it had approximately 900 members,[12] all HOLC employees, but later, after its membership had been thrown open to civil employees of other Government agencies, [11] Home Owners' Loan Corporation is an independent instrumentality of the United States created to refinance home loans (R. 150). The Act of June 13, 1933, c. 64, 48 Stat. 128, 12 U. S. C. Sec. 1461, et seq., authorized the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to create the Corporation, which was to be operated under the direction of the Board.

[12] 84% of these members earned less than $4,000 a year, 58% less than $2,000 a year (R. 153).

the number of members increased to about 2,600 (R. 153, 500). A board of trustees elected by the members manages the business affairs of Group Health and elects its officers, but selection of doctors for its staff is in the hands of a Medical Director and the board of trustees does not exercise any supervision over the professional relation between staff doctors and member patients (R. 1224, 1228, 1232–3). The doctors on its staff are compensated by salary and serve full time (R. 293). In return for monthly dues, the member and his dependents, if any, are entitled to obtain medical examinations and treatments, laboratory tests, X-ray examinations, surgical operations, confinement care, nursing and ambulance facilities, house calls, and hospitalization not in excess of 21 days for any one illness (R. 1242).

FORMATION OF THE CONSPIRACY

AMA had for many years pursued a policy of opposition to all plans involving group practice on a risk-sharing basis. The policy was established by its House of Delegates [13] and was actively enforced

[13] In 1933 the House of Delegates formally disapproved the recommendation, made by the majority of the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care, that medical care for low-income families should be provided on a prepayment basis through doctors engaged in group practice (R. 219, 221–222). In 1934 the House adopted a resolution condemning a report of the American College of Surgeons in which the College indorsed prepayment plans (R. 138–143, 147–149). At the same session AMA adopted certain principles to govern the conduct of medical service plans for families with limited both by its Council on Medical Education and Hospitals (infra, pp. 29–30) and by the Judicial Council, which repeatedly affirmed the expulsion of doctors from AMA because of their participation in such plans (R. 253–257, 1031–2). In addition, AMA had, through numerous official communications, condemned and attacked such plans.[14] The same policy was fully applied in this case.

Much of the critical evidence of the conspiracy of which petitioners were convicted is found in minutes of meetings of the District Society and of its Executive Committee[15] during the period between June 1 and October 6, 1937. The minutes of these meetings and other contemporaneous documentary evidence establish that the purpose of the conspiracy was to protect the economic interests of the doctor members of the District Society (who ipso facto were members of AMA, R. 1537) by preventing Group Health and its doctors from competing with the Society members in rendering medical service.

means, one principle being that any such plan must include "all legally qualified doctors of medicine in the locality covered by its operation" (R. 1086–7). Adoption of this restriction meant that no plan providing for medical care by a salaried staff could obtain the approval of AMA.

[14] R. 966, 968–977, 979–980, 983–984, 1032–3, 1035–8, 1042–3.

[15] These minutes appear in Gov. Exs. 36 and 37. The former covers minutes of the meetings of the Executive Committee on June 1, 1937, and June 21, 1937 (R. 276, 283). The latter covers the minutes of the Society and of all other meetings of the Executive Committee. The index to the record (Index viii–ix) shows the pages of the record where the minutes of each meeting appear.

A special meeting of the Society's Executive Committee was called on June 1, 1937, to discuss the reported plan to provide medical care for HOLC employees (R. 276).[16] The chairman stated that plans of this kind "threaten the coming generation of physicians and their income" and a member pointed out that the medical profession had two "weapons" at hand, one, "to forbid consultation with the physicians doing this type of work," and the other, "to withhold approval of any hospital that would take any cases or assist in the movement in any way" (R. 277). Similar views were expressed at another special meeting on June 21 when a subcommittee, appointed to study the matter, made its report (R. 283–284, 320).[17]

[16] A few days earlier, a District Society member had written Woodward, director of AMA's Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation (R. 1538), that since the questions raised by the Group Health plan were of national interest, the AMA should take the initiative and Woodward should come to Washington to advise as to the "best methods of approach" (R. 889–890). Woodward then called upon Zimmerman, the sponsor of the Group Health plan (R. 890–891), told Zimmerman that as an AMA representative, he was "particularly disturbed" by Group Health's articles of incorporation, and predicted that after the plan was "given a going over" at the annual AMA meeting, this "would be the end of it" (R. 152, 891).

[17] The chairman of this meeting asserted that one of his sons had just completed his medical course and that another was just entering medical school and that this represented "a tremendous personal investment, the usefulness of which would be greatly curtailed by" the adoption of any plan such as that proposed by Group Health (R. 284). Another committee member said that two ways were available in "com-

The Executive Committee met again on June 24, 1937, and authorized the appointment of a new subcommittee to ascertain all of the facts concerning the Group Health plan (R. 290, 314). The report of this subcommittee, presented at a meeting of the Executive Committee on July 12, 1937 (R. 319–320), stated in part (R. 321):

> The present HOLC corporation is only a minor consideration: (a) Either innumerable others will follow or (b) a large all-embracing organization will succeed all smaller enterprises. The first eventuality is not of great concern to us. Competition will kill them and since they cannot be large enough to supply a proper quality of medical care or hospitalization on their own account subscribers will gradually withdraw. Also the Medical Society by its present control over its members, and through them of the hospitals can adequately fight (if it is so desired) these small units. * * *

The report stated that if an organization to cover all Government employees should be formed it would be assured of adequate financial support and would be able to secure qualified personnel (ibid.). The report then continued (R. 321–322):

> The Medical Society must therefore adopt a definite policy toward the cooperative batting or controlling any such scheme" as that proposed, "(1) through disciplining our own members who undertook to participate, and (2) the possibility of doing something to recalcitrant hospitals through pressure on their staffs" (ibid.).

movement as a whole, and at once, without wasting a great deal of time on the HOLC project. The alternatives of policy are primarily:

1. Approval of cooperatives as at present outlined.

2. A laissez-faire attitude of seeing what will happen.

3. Disapproval and active combat with all measures at our command.

4. Disapproval of all other plans and the offer of prepaid medicine through the Medical Society (a) either as a Society subsidiary or (b) through a change in the Medical-Dental Service Bureau.

The first of these, approval, is manifestly an impossibility. The second alternative threatens through inertia more than any other factor.

Active opposition is possible at present. Whether it is advisable is another matter, unless some substitute plan can be suggested. Failure to place the cooperative on the approved list of the Medical Society would automatically forbid any consultations by members of our Society. Any full-time employees of the corporation could probably easily fail to be put on the courtesy list of the hospitals for one reason or another without the fact of his connection with a cooperative being even mentioned. In fact any combative method would necessarily have to be camouflaged to the nth degree.

The report recommended that the Society form its own organization "for the distribution of prepaid medical care as a distinct unit competitive with any other organization that may be formed" (italics supplied) (R. 322).

Meanwhile, the AMA maintained an active interest in the matter. In June 1937, Woodward, director of its Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation (R. 1538), rejected a suggestion made by a Society member to West, AMA secretary and general manager (ibid), that the Society might "attempt to go along with this outfit [Group Health] if it is possible to do so and retain our faces" (R. 315, 316); Woodward stated that such an attempt at cooperation would violate AMA's Principles of Medical Ethics (R. 317). He promptly reported the matter to AMA's board of trustees, which authorized West and Fishbein, the Journal editor (R. 1538), "to proceed to inform the profession of the country as to the efforts of the HOLC to enter into the practice of medicine." The board also authorized Woodward and Leland, director of the Bureau of Medical Economics (R. 1538), to go to Washington "to try to advise the Medical Society of the District of Columbia if that Society is willing to accept advice" (R. 316–317).[18]

[18] Woodward, West, and Leland thereafter conferred on numerous occasions with Society representatives in Washington (R. 327, 337, 345–346, 891–893, 963, 1029–30). Woodward and Leland participated in Society meetings concerning Group Health (R. 903, 908, 963–964) and at their own request were kept fully informed of all local action and developments (R. 318–319, 326, 342, 352–354, 359, 922).

On July 26, 1937, the special subcommittee appointed by the District Society to deal with the Group Health problem (supra, p. 17) met with the Board of Trustees of Group Health and certain of its officers.[19] The subcommittee warned Group Health that unless it was "approved" by the Society all members of the Society would be prohibited from accepting employment with Group Health or consulting with doctors on its staff (R. 178–180). The suggestion was made that Group Health "convert itself into a financial organization" so that medical care would be provided, not through salaried doctors, but through such members of the Society as might agree to serve Group Health subscribers on some fixed fee schedule (R. 181, 185).[20]

A special meeting of the members of the Society was held on July 29 for the purpose of arriving at some conclusion concerning the action to be taken with reference to Group Health (R. 347–348). At this meeting, as the secretary of the Society

[19] The discussion at this meeting was transcribed by HOLC employees (R. 156) and the transcript was introduced in evidence as Gov. Ex. 10 (R. 176–197).

[20] A member of the subcommittee stressed the competitive threat implicit in the Group Health plan if it should obtain maximum enrollment. After noting that there are about 180,000 Government employees in the District of Columbia, he said (R. 191): "Multiply that by 3.3, you see what it would do here as an economic thing. * * * It would simply result in the necessary exodus of a large part of the medical profession of the District of Columbia * * *."

reported to AMA, "various opinions were expressed by individual members ranging from the taking of most drastic measures in the way of boycott, etc., to various conciliatory propositions" (italics supplied) (R. 354). The meeting approved the appointment of a new subcommittee to make a report on the matter to the Executive Committee (R. 351).

The subcommittee reported to the Executive Committee on September 8, 1937 (R. 357). Its report, which the Executive Committee "accepted," consisted of three conclusions—(1) that Group Health is "unethical" and that participation therein by any Society member would render him "subject to disciplinary action by the Society," (2) that at this time it had no definite recommendation to make for "combatting" the activities of Group Health "other than is embodied by implication" in the first conclusion; and (3) that the Society "should maintain close contact" with AMA "in an effort to formulate a suitable and effective policy with respect to combatting the activity of the Group Health Association" (R. 357–358).[21]

[21] A member of the Executive Committee, advocating more definitely aggressive action, said that he looked upon Group Health as an organization "coming in and interfering with his business": that he expected to be in practice for some 20 years and did not propose, if it could be avoided, to have an organization of this kind "interfere with his work and income," adding, "Just what are you fellows going to do about it?" (R. 358.)

Thereafter, in the October 2 issue of the AMA Journal, an article prepared by Woodward [22] pursuant to the directions of AMA's board of trustees to inform "the medical profession of the country as to efforts of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to enter into the practice of medicine" (supra, p. 19) denounced the Group Health plan. The article embodied suggestions to the District Society of a course of action which might successfully cripple and perhaps destroy Group Health (R. 384, 385):

> As the members of the salaried staff of the association are likely to be looked on by the profession generally in the community as on the outer verge of ethical practice, if not altogether beyond the pale, it is not clear how they are to obtain qualified consultants or procure hospital service for their patients.
> In any event, medical service under the association would be likely to be handicapped by difficulty likely to be experienced in obtaining the best consultant service and hospital accommodations. Physicians who sell their services to an organization like Group Health Association for resale to patients are certain to lose professional status.

[22] The article, which was introduced in evidence as Gov. Ex. 293 (R. 368–386), was prepared at the request of AMA's board of trustees (R. 316, 367). It was written by the director of its Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation and was extensively revised prior to publication by the editor of the Journal (R. 893–894).

The article also stressed the economic dangers to the local profession presented by Group Health. It pointed out that Group Health could potentially reach and withdraw from private practice three-fourths of the population of the District of Columbia and that even if half this number were withdrawn, this would "materially disturb" medical practice in the District (R. 385).

At a meeting of members on October 6, three days after publication of this article, the Society adopted (R. 387–390) the following resolution (R. 388–389):

> Whereas, The Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation of the American Medical Association has prepared and published a comprehensive report on the activities of Group Health Association, Incorporated; and
> Whereas, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia is in full accord with the content of said report, both as to the established facts set forth therein and the implications drawn therefrom; therefore, be it
> Resolved, That the Medical Society of the District of Columbia cause a copy of said report to be sent to each of its members as an indication of its future policies with respect to combatting the activities of said Group Health Association and also with respect to the ethical responsibilities of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and of its individual members.

OPERATION OF THE CONSPIRACY

A. Boycott of Group Health and its Staff by the Petitioners and Their Members

At a special meeting of the Society's Executive Committee on July 12, 1937, it adopted, pursuant to Chapter IX, Article IV, Sec. 5, of its constitution, a list of "approved" organizations and individuals practicing medicine in the District of Columbia (R. 327, 332–334). Group Health was not included in the list.

The evidence establishes that the omission of Group Health from this "white list" was for the express purpose of bringing into play against it the provision of the same section of the constitution (R. 331) that "no member of the Society shall engage in any professional capacity whatsoever with any organization * * * which has not been approved by the Society." At the meeting at which this white list was adopted the subcommittee reported that the failure to put Group Health on the approved list "would automatically forbid any consultations by members of our Society" (R. 322).[2] In response to a member's inquiry as to the medical personnel of Group Health it was stated that Group Health "would have to be approved as a single unit" (R. 333). When the list was sent by registered mail to every Society member, as directed by the Executive Committee, the letter of transmittal not only quoted the constitutional provision prohibiting members from having professional relations with any organization not approved by the Society (R. 334), but enclosed a second letter which, with direct reference to Group Health (R. 1197), said (R. 341):

[2] When the list was submitted to the committee one paragraph included as "approved" all the medical personnel "connected with" the Federal Government (R. 332–333). Group Health might be said to be connected with the Federal Government and the Committee accordingly substituted the words "employed by" for the words "connected with" (ibid.).

> It may have come to your attention that there is an organization or organizations that are interested in gaining medical personnel. Your attention is called to Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5 of the constitution, quoted in full.

The Society's exclusion of Group Health from its approved list operated, without further action by the Society, to prevent its members from joining Group Health's staff and from consulting with doctors on its staff. The District Society's failure to approve Group Health not only prevented it from obtaining members of the Society for its staff (R. 151–152), but also prevented it from obtaining other AMA members for its staff (R. 237, 1357–8).[24]

[24] The Journal article denouncing Group Health and suggesting that "it is likely to be handicapped by difficulty experienced in obtaining 'consultant service' and hospital accommodations" (supra, p. 22) was written by AMA representatives with full knowledge that the Society had issued the white list excluding Group Health and that the subcommittee had reported that no Society member could retain his AMA or Society membership if he participated in Group Health (R. 892, 922).

The Society and AMA undertook to enforce the boycott resulting from its white list. Group Health, prior to the opening of its clinic on November 1, 1937, had persuaded two members of the District Society, Drs. Lee and Scandiffio, to become members of its staff (R. 652, 1442). On October 29, AMA notified the Society that these two doctors were members "in good standing" of the Society (R. 410). Although both doctors, late in October, submitted resignations as members of the Society (R. 453), the Society on November 2 summoned them to appear before its CC&IM Committee (R. 453–454). When they failed to appear this committee charged them with violating the Society's constitution by having relations with an organization not on the approved list and by failing to submit a copy of their agreement with Group Health to the CC&IM Committee for approval (R. 455–456).[28]

On the second day of the hearing before the Executive Committee, to which the charges were referred, Dr. Lee was notified that the proceeding against him would be dropped if he would promptly submit to the Society a copy of his resignation from Group Health (R. 558, 653–654). Dr. Lee complied and the proceeding against him was dropped (R. 460–461). The proceeding against Dr. Scandiffio continued and resulted in his expulsion from the Society on March 16, 1938, for alleged violation of Chapter IX, Article III, Secs. 1 and 2, and of Chapter IX, Article IV, Sec. 5, of the constitution (R. 558–563).

[28] At a conference in Chicago on November 6, AMA's representatives were informed of the expulsion proceedings instituted against the two doctors, and were kept advised of the subsequent course of the proceeding (R. 563–564, 900).

Another Society member, Dr. Richardson, who was employed by Group Health to make house calls, resigned from its staff in July 1938 because of fear of losing hospital privileges (R. 630–631, 717).

The Society also rigidly enforced the prohibition against consultation with Group Health doctors. After one of the Society members had, solely for this reason, refused two requests for consultation, one in the case of a patient suffering from acute heart trouble and another in the case of an elderly lady who was so ill that the Group Health doctor thought she might die in the office (R. 951–954), the president of Group Health reported the matter to the president of the District Society (R. 544–545). The latter replied that he had personally advised the doctor in question that the Society's constitution prohibited consultation with any Group Health doctor and that it was his duty to advise that, under the constitution, consultation with "the hired agents" of Group Health is forbidden (R. 545–547).

When it was discovered that a Society member, Dr. Trible, had permitted a Group Health doctor to be present at an operation performed by Dr.

Trible on a child of a Group Health member and had later written the medical director of Group Health in response to a request from him for information concerning the case, the CC&IM Committee found Dr. Trible "guilty" of violating the provision of the constitution prohibiting professional relations with any organization not approved by the Society (R. 666–669, 670–671, 678). The Executive Committee, after receiving Dr. Trible's assurance that he would not in the future "in any way knowingly violate the ethics of the profession or the Constitution" of the Society, dropped the charges (R. 680) but sent him a letter warning him not to repeat his actions (R. 672).[28]

B. Boycott of Group Health and Its Staff by the Washington Hospitals

For doctors in general, access to hospital facilities is "valuable and important"; for the surgeon, it is "essential." The privilege of treating his patients in a hospital is obtained in one of two ways, by being a member of the hospital's "regular staff" or by being a member of its "courtesy staff." While the business and financial affairs

[28] In May 1938 the Society adopted a motion "that the Medical Society of the District of Columbia go on record as forbidding its members to receive monies or checks for services rendered to beneficiaries of Group Health Association, Inc., from or over the signature of Group Health Association, Inc., or its agencies and so notify the membership of the Medical Society" (R. 611–612).

of most hospitals are under the control of a lay board, its medical affairs are in the hands of a group of doctors known as the regular or attending staff. This staff determines the professional policies of the hospital and is responsible for the treatment of charity patients. Since the available positions on the regular staff are limited, the bulk of the profession obtains the privilege of treating its patients in a hospital by being included in the so-called courtesy staff. The doctors on the regular staff determine appointment to the courtesy staff. (R. 211–213.)

Both AMA and the Society proceeded to bring pressure to bear upon the Washington hospitals to exclude Group Health doctors. AMA's action took the form of forcing the hospitals to comply with the Mundt resolution of 1934, providing that hospitals approved for interne training should be limited in their staffs only to doctors who are AMA members.[27] In June 1937, the Council on [27] AMA had similarly on other occasions followed the practice of invoking the Mundt resolution to compel hospitals to exclude doctors connected with medical service plans of which AMA disapproved. In 1938, immediately after the Judicial Council had affirmed the expulsion of certain Milwaukee doctors from the Milwaukee Medical Society because they were engaged in a group-practice prepayment plan, Cutter, secretary of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals (R. 1538), advised the Milwaukee hospitals that the Mundt resolution required them to limit their staffs to members of the Milwaukee Society and that they were therefore obliged to withdraw privileges from the group Medical Education and Hospitals conducted, for the first time since the adoption of the Mundt resolution in 1934, an inspection of Washington hospitals (R. 784–785). Following this inspection, Cutter, secretary of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals (R. 1538), addressed letters to five of the local hospitals enclosing a copy of the applicable inspection report. The letters, after calling attention to the Mundt resolution, asked "What possibility, if any, exists for the observance of this recommendation?" (R. 265–266, 268, 270, 272–275). When he failed to hear from one of the hospitals he sent a second letter inquiring whether any action had been taken to enforce the resolution and he was then informed that it would be enforced except as to the teaching staff in its psychiatric department (R. 273–274). Another hospital, similarly pressed for a reply, responded that all except one member of its staff were members of the District Society and that the Mundt resolution "meets with the approval of the Medical Board as respects future appointments" (R. 275–276).

practice doctors (R. 253–258, 814–821, 829–831). When two hospitals hesitated to do this, Cutter secured their compliance by notifying them that approval of the hospitals for interne training would be withdrawn unless they conformed with the requirement of the Mundt resolution (R. 258, 803, 821–823, 832).

The Council on Medical Education and Hospitals withdrew its approval from a hospital in Little Rock, Arkansas, and from a hospital in Tampa, Florida, because they permitted doctors engaged in prepayment plans to remain on their staffs (R. 247–249, 848–849, 863–864).

The Society implemented the AMA action in respect of hospitals. The white list adopted on July 12, 1937 (supra, p. 24), was sent to the various Washington hospitals.[*] After the Society had decided to model its policy on the "facts" and "implications" of the Journal article of October 3, 1937, in which it had been stated that Group Health was likely to experience difficulty in obtaining hospital accommodations (supra, p. 22), a division of opinion arose in the District Society as to the most effective way to induce a boycott of Group Health by Washington hospitals.

One group favored sending a letter to the hospitals informing them of the particular sections of the constitution relating to approval of hospitals and warning them that "if they failed to cooperate in every way that they might not be on the approved list" (R. 402). A letter giving effect to this proposal was drafted and approved by the Executive Committee (ibid.). But when the proposed letter was submitted to the Society membership on November 3, 1937, one of the members pointed out that this was not a wise way to accomplish the Society's objective because it "carried a veiled threat to the effect that if the hospitals did not comply the Society would unstaff them" (R. 424). He urged that the Society's Hospital Committee (one or more of whose members were on the regular staff of each Washington hospital) would be a more suitable medium to handle the matter and he proposed the following resolution, which the Society then adopted (R. 422-423):

> Whereas, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia has an apparent means of hindering the successful operation of Group Health Association, Inc., if it can prevent patients of physicians in its employ being received in the local private hospitals; and
>
> Whereas, The Medical Society of the District of Columbia has no direct control over the policies of such hospitals as determined by their lay boards of directors, except through its control of its own members serving on their medical staffs; and
> Whereas, Conflicts between the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and any local hospitals arising from an attempt to enforce the provisions of Chapter IX, Article IV, Section 5, of its Constitution should be assiduously avoided, if possible, because of the unfavorable publicity that would accrue to its own members; therefore, be it
> Resolved, That the Hospital Committee be, and is hereby, directed to give careful study and consideration to all phases of this subject and report back to the Society, at the earliest practicable date, its recommendations as to the best way of bringing this question to the attention of the medical boards and boards of directors of the various local hospitals in such a manner as to insure the maximum amount of practical accomplishment with the minimum amount of friction and conflict.

The Hospital Committee complied with this resolution by presenting a report to a meeting of the Society held eight days later recommending that the Society adopt a resolution that the hospitals permit Group Health patients to be treated only by the doctors on their respective staffs and that a copy of the resolution be sent to the various local hospitals (R. 441, 449). The recommendation was deemed unsatisfactory in that it gave no assurance that Group Health doctors "might not become members of the staffs of the local hospitals" and it was therefore recommitted to the Hospital Committee (R. 449–450).

At a meeting on December 1, 1937, the Society adopted a new resolution proposed by the Hospital Committee. This resolution set forth that the Society "strongly recommends" that all hospitals follow the recommendation of AMA [29] "regarding the constitution of their entire Medical Staffs, namely, that each appointee be a member of" the District Society or of the local medical society where he was resident and a member of AMA (R. 459). The Society also adopted a motion to transmit a copy of this resolution to each local hospital (ibid.).

[29] The recommendation referred to was that embodied in the Mundt resolution (supra, pp. 10–11).

This resolution, if complied with, would bring about the desired boycott of Group Health by Washington hospitals. Since Group Health doctors were barred from membership in the District Society (the only medical society open to doctors residing in the District of Columbia), if the hospitals limited their staffs to such membership, Group Health doctors would automatically be excluded from Washington hospitals.

The District Society had effective means for inducing or coercing compliance with its recommendation. Its constitution prohibited its members from serving on the staff of any hospital not approved by the Society (supra, p. 13). Since nearly all of the doctors on the staffs of the local hospitals were members of the Society,[20] the Hospital Committee could unstaff any local hospital by the expedient of eliminating it from the approved list.

At a meeting of the Society on February 2, 1938, a motion that the proper agency of the Society be instructed to present at its next meeting "the facts relating to the present status of Group Health physicians at the various Washington Hospitals preliminary to appropriate disciplinary action, in event any hospital has ignored the Medical Society's wishes in the premises," was referred to the Executive Committee, and on February 21, 1938, was referred by that committee to the Hospital Committee (R. 475, 477). Pursuant to this motion, the Chairman of the Hospital Committee requested each of its members to inquire of the hospital which he represented whether it had taken any action on applications of doctors connected with Group Health and whether it had "recently revised" its staff list (R. 244–245, 549). The chairman also sent to each hospital a questionnaire requesting information concerning its correspondence with Group Health, the names of Group Health doctors having staff privileges, whether it is "in sympathy with" the policies of the District Society, whether it requires Society membership as a qualification for staff appointment, and the percentage of its staff holding membership in the Society (R. 244, 595–596).

The report based on responses to this questionnaire was submitted to the Executive Committee on March 28, 1938, and was adopted by the Society at a meeting on April 6, 1938 (R. 556, 565–567). The report, after stating that the by-laws of all but three of the local hospitals provide that no doctor may practice in the hospital unless he is a member of his local medical society, states further (R. 557–558):

> All of the local private hospitals are cooperating fully with the Medical Society in respect to Group Health Association, Inc. At the present time only one of the local hospitals has on its staff list the name of a physician connected with Group Health Association, Inc. This hospital does not revise its staff list annually, as do the other hospitals, but it has assured the Chairman of the Hospital Committee that steps have been taken to deny this physician hospital privileges.

By reason of these various acts of the District Society or by reason of action taken by AMA (supra, pp. 29–30), the local hospitals (with one or two possible exceptions) limited their staffs to AMA or Society members. In the fall of 1937 or the first half of 1938, five hospitals (Children's, Columbia, Georgetown, Homeopathic, Providence) formally adopted such a rule,[39] and two others, Garfield and Sibley, gave assurances to the District Society that they would carry out the policy expressed in its December 1 resolution (R. 600, 608, 609). Casualty Hospital advised the Society in February 1938 that it had no applications from Group Health doctors and that it had undertaken to revise its list of staff doctors (R. 553). Emergency Hospital's rule, adopted in 1936, limited its staff to members of the Society but it had not actively enforced the rule until, after receiving the Society's inquiries, it ordered that its courtesy list be checked and that doctors not members of AMA "be notified that they must join the Medical Society, or the hospital will be obliged to revoke their privileges" (R. 587, 591–592).

Despite repeated applications in the period from November 1937 to December 1938, all of the local hospitals excluded all of the Group Health doctors because of their connection with that organization. Since it was essential for the Group Health surgeon, Dr. Selders, to have hospital privileges, the efforts by Group Health to obtain hospital privileges for its staff centered around him. All of the local hospitals either failed to act upon his request for hospital privileges [32] or denied it.[33] Similar treatment was accorded the applications of all other Group Health doctors.[34]

[34] When Dr. Lee, having joined Group Health's staff, submitted his resignation to the Society, Emergency withdrew his staff privileges and restored them only when it was assured that he was still a member of the Society (R. 586–587).

Dr. Hulburt had been granted privileges in Georgetown in 1935 (R. 625). After he joined the staff of Group Health Association, he was told by the superintendent of Georgetown that he no longer had hospital privileges (R. 627–628). Within a month after Dr. Hulburt resigned from Group Health Association, he was formally granted courtesy priv-

One instance of treatment of a Group Health member by a Group Health doctor in a Washington hospital provoked prompt counter-action. Garfield Hospital, pursuant to its usual practice with respect to applicants, granted Dr. Selders temporary privileges pending action upon his application (R. 658–659). A Group Health member injured in an automobile accident was taken by ambulance to Emergency Hospital and, after it had refused to allow her to be treated by Dr. Selders, she was transferred to Garfield and treated there by Dr. Selders (R. 656–657). The following day the president of Emergency addressed a letter to the president of Garfield requesting "a full explanation of the circumstances under which this patient has been permitted to enter Garfield" (R. 658–659). A copy of the letter was sent to the District Society (R. 659). The secretary of the Society replied that the "important subject matter will be given prompt consideration" and referred the letter to the Hospital Committee (R. 660–661). Thereafter ileges by Georgetown (R. 628). He received somewhat similar treatment from Columbia (R. 630).

Dr. Halstead joined the Group Health staff in August 1938 (R. 709). He applied for privileges at five of the hospitals, including Georgetown, where he had interned (R. 709). No action was taken on his applications (R. 701).

Dr. Price applied for privileges at Homeopathic and Garfield in the spring of 1938 (R. 949). Homeopathic never granted him privileges and Garfield did not do so until December 19, 1938, the day before the indictment in this case was returned (R. 949, 1180).

Garfield, notwithstanding its well-established rule that any doctor may treat his patient there in an emergency case (R. 494, 1176–7), was careful to prevent Dr. Selders from using its facilities even in emergency cases.[35]

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

I

A. Petitioners conspired to boycott Group Health in order to prevent it from marketing medical services in competition with petitioners' doctor members. This Court has consistently held that such a boycotting combination to exclude a competitor from the market is a restraint of trade prohibited by the Sherman Act. These decisions have not been rested upon the ground that there had been price-fixing or that competition had been suppressed to the extent that market prices were substantially affected.

This Court did not hold in Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, that the restraints of trade condemned by the Sherman Act are limited to those involving price-fixing or a suppression of competition which substantially affects market prices. The case held only that the restraints prohibited by [35] For the facts concerning Garfield's refusal to allow Dr. Selders to perform an emergency appendicitis operation, see R. 693–696, 753–754, 757; 762–763. Following this incident, Garfield, which had not previously defined "emergency," adopted a definition which specifically stated that it applied to Group Health (R. 1176–7).

the Act are those which suppress or substantially restrict competition in the marketing of goods or services and price-fixing was referred to merely as one conspicuous example of the type of restraint declared illegal. This interpretation of the Apex case is confirmed by Fashion Originators' Guild, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457, which held that an intent to increase prices is not "an ever-present essential" of conduct constituting a violation of the Sherman Act.

B. The conspiracy to prevent Group Health from successfully carrying on its business of furnishing medical service to members of the consuming public was a restraint of trade prohibited by the Sherman Act. The act applies to restraints upon competition in providing services as well as goods and Congress cannot be presumed to have intended to exclude consumers of medical service from the protection extended generally to purchasers and consumers of goods or services.

Group Health was engaged in a large-scale undertaking to provide medical service in exchange for payment of dues. This exchange of service for money is trade in the primary and most usual meaning of the word. The fact that Group Health is a non-profit corporation is immaterial. Its business operations were trade, although carried on for the benefit of its consumer-members rather than for the benefit of stockholders.

Under the district court's charge to the jury, petitioners' convictions must be sustained if the restraints upon the trade of Group Health are within the ban of the statute. But if the application of the Act to restraints upon individual doctors in the pursuit of their calling is an essential issue in this case, such restraints are within the scope of the common-law concept, embodied in the Sherman Act, of restraint of trade.

II

Section 20 of the Clayton Act grants immunity only where there is dispute concerning some question of employment involving the employer-employee relationship. Petitioners cannot subsume themselves under the class of employee representatives under the Act since petitioners' members were not employees and did not want to be employees. Rather, petitioners are analogous to a trade association representing independent business units. Nor was the controversy itself of a kind contemplated by the Clayton Act. The dispute between petitioners and Group Health was as to whether the latter's method of providing medical services should be permitted to operate. A controversy of this kind, between competitors and concerning competition, is not within the scope of Section 20. Columbia River Packers Ass'n, Inc. v. Hinton, 315 U. S. 143. A further factor establishing the inapplicability of the Clayton Act is that, even assuming that petitioners were "employee representatives," there was no employer-employee relationship in respect of Group Health and its doctors. As the court below observed, the Group Health doctors are independent contractors, not employees; the relationship which was of concern to Congress in its enactment of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts, therefore, is entirely lacking here.

ARGUMENT

I

THE ACTS FOR WHICH PETITIONERS WERE CONVICTED CONSTITUTE A CONSPIRACY IN "RESTRAINT OF TRADE" WITHIN THE MEANING OF SECTION 3 OF THE SHERMAN ACT

Petitioners were convicted of conspiring to prevent Group Health and the doctors on its staff from rendering or providing medical service to that portion of the general public represented by Government employees and their families, in competition with petitioners' doctor members. Petitioners contend that this is not a conspiracy in "restraint of trade" within the meaning of Section 3 of the Sherman Act. They contend that there was no showing that they conspired to fix prices or to suppress competition "to the extent that market prices are substantially affected to the injury of the public" and that therefore there is no "restraint" of trade within the prohibitions of Section 3. They urge also that their conspiracy restrained only the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical care and that restraint upon such activities is not a restraint of "trade" within the meaning of Section 3.

It is our view that the issues thus presented cannot be resolved, as petitioners assume, by inquiring into the meaning of the single word "trade" and of the single word "restraint" divorced from their context in the phrase "restraint of trade." The question of statutory interpretation presented rather is the meaning of this phrase. "The common law doctrines relating to contracts and combinations in restraint of trade were well understood long before the enactment of the Sherman law," and Congress, in adopting the Sherman Act, found ready at hand "the common law concept of illegal restraints of trade" and "took over that concept." Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, 497, 498.[38] The words of the phrase must, therefore, be construed as a unit and with reference to the common law concept from which it originated.

The legislative history of the Act affirms this conclusion. In the debate on the bill Senator Hoar, a member of the Judiciary Committee, stated that the Judiciary Committee had, with reference to interstate and foreign commerce, "affirmed the old doctrine of the common law" (21 Cong. Rec. 3146). At a later point he declared: "The great thing that this bill does * * * is to extend the common-law principles" to such commerce (21 Cong. Rec. 3152). Senator Edmunds, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, explained that the intent was to define the offense in "terms that were well known to the law already" (21 Cong. Rec. 3148).

A. Petitioners' Conspiracy to Exclude a Competitor from the Market, by Means of Boycott, is a Conspiracy in RESTRAINT of Trade Prohibited by Section 3

Petitioners' contention (Br. 32–44) that there is not restraint of trade unless prices are fixed or competition is suppressed to the extent that market prices are substantially affected to the injury of the public is without support in, and wholly negatived by, the uniform course of holdings by this Court. It has long been firmly established that the Sherman Act prohibits as in restraint of trade a conspiracy by any dominant group engaged in offering goods or services to the general public to use the weapon of the boycott in order to exclude competitors from the market or to fix the conditions upon which competitors may enter the market.[37] In none of these decisions,

Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, is sometimes cited as a contrary authority. That case held that an agreement by members of an exchange, composed of traders in livestock on a stockyards, not to deal with any nonmember trader did not violate the Sherman Act. The decision has subsequently been treated as resting on the holding that the facts did not from Montague v. Lowry, decided in 1904, to the Fashion Guild case, decided last year, did the decision turn upon the ground that the boycotting group had fixed prices or had suppressed competition to the extent that market prices were substantially affected.[38] Indeed, except in Straus v. American Publishers' Assn., which involved a boycott to enforce resale price maintenance, there was no evidence in these cases of price-fixing and none that competition had been suppressed to the extent claimed necessary by petitioners.

In the present case the conspiracy to prevent the successful operation of Group Health and to eliminate it as a competitor was entered into because petitioners believed that Group Health's method and plan of operation—providing medical care for persons of low income by means of group medical practice and the advance payment of uniform dues—threatened the economic interests of petitioners' doctor members. In several of the decisions condemning boycotts as unlawful restraints of trade the objective was similarly to prevent a form of competition deemed to be inimical to the economic interests of the boycotting group.

[38] While these decisions involve Section 1 of the Sherman Act, the prohibitions of Section 3, couched in the same language, are at least as broad in their scope as those of Section 1. Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers, Inc. v. United States, 286 U. S. 427, 434–435.

For example, in Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Ass'n v. United States, 234 U. S. 600, associations of retail dealers circulated among their members lists of wholesalers who sold direct to consumers, with the understanding that their members would refuse to deal with wholesalers thus listed. Sales direct from wholesaler to consumer by-passed the retailer and the retailers retaliated by combining to prevent the loss of business resulting from this form of competition, just as the present petitioners combined to prevent the loss of business which they feared would result from the operations of Group Health. And indeed, the boycott was even more complete and sweeping in the instant case since petitioners utilized not only their own members—whose positions paralleled the fellow-retailers in the Lumber Dealers case—but they forced third parties, the Washington hospitals, into the boycotting combination.

In this respect, the instant case closely resembles the situation condemned by this Court in Fashion Originators' Guild, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, 312 U. S. 457. In that case garment manufacturers who claimed to be creators of original designs agreed to boycott retail stores which sold clothes copied from their designs by other manufacturers. The Guild members, by this means, induced or coerced some 12,000 retail stores to "cooperate" in the boycott of copied garments. The Guild also employed "shoppers" to discover and report whether stores were carrying copied garments and it established tribunals to determine whether particular garments were in fact copied from a Guild member's design.

The introduction of the retail stores into the boycotting combination is, we submit, in all respects analogous to the utilization of the Washington hospitals in the boycotting combination directed against Group Health. And the potential power of that combination fully equalled that of the combination of Guild members. While the "cooperating" retail stores numbered some 12,000, many remained outside the combination, while all of the non-Government Washington hospitals were induced to participate in the combination against Group Health. Moreover, the petitioners coerced this participation (supra, pp. 29–36), just as the Guild members used coercion to secure the cooperation of retail stores.

The policing methods employed in the present case to effectuate the combination are similarly analogous to the methods for policing their conspiracy used by Guild members. Petitioners, utilizing various "rules of conduct" embodied in or adopted under the District Society's constitution or AMA's Principles of Medical Ethics, established a "white list," investigated and brought to trial alleged infractions of these "rules," and probed into and exercised control over the affairs of the Washington hospitals—all for the purpose of destroying the business and operations of Group Health.

This Court, in holding that the combination of Guild members was "well within the inhibitions of" the Sherman Act,[9] used words which, so far as the unlawful character of the restraint is concerned, apply with equal force to the present case (pp. 467–468):

> * * * the aim of petitioners' combination was the intentional destruction of one type of manufacture and sale which competed with Guild members. The purpose and object of this combination, its potential power, its tendency to monopoly, the coercion it could and did practice upon a rival method of competition, all brought it within the policy of the prohibition declared by the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

And this Court's statement in that case (pp. 465–466), that > * * * the combination is in reality an extra-governmental agency, which prescribes rules for the regulation and restraint of interstate commerce, and provides extra> judicial tribunals for determination and punishment of violations, and thus "trenches upon the power of the national legislature and violates the statute." Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 242.

[9] The Federal Trade Commission, in a proceeding under the Trade Commission Act, had found that the practices of the Guild members, done in combination, constituted unfair methods of competition. This Court, in reviewing the Commission's order, held (p. 463) that practices which violate the Sherman Act may properly be found to be unfair methods of competition, and the Court therefore considered and passed upon the question whether the combination came within the condemnation of the Sherman Act.

is (except that this case concerns trade only in the District of Columbia) of equal applicability here.

But without referring to these cases involving restriction of competition by boycotts, petitioners insist that Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, establishes that the Sherman Act prohibits only those restraints which involve price-fixing or suppression of competition to the extent that market prices are "substantially affected". But no such narrow and inflexible rule can be deduced from the wholly different situation with which this Court dealt in the Apex case.

The Apex case involved not a boycott by one competing group against another; but a strike by employees against an employer, which effectively brought a cessation of the employer's interstate business. This Court did not question the authority of the boycott cases but observed that they involved a "suppression of competition" (310 U. S. at p. 506) and were not, therefore, decisive. And indeed, the Court, in the Apex case explicitly referred to price-fixing as only one of the indicia of the type of restraints of trade which the Sherman Act condemns. Thus it said (pp. 500–501):

> Restraints on competition or on the course of trade in the merchandising of articles > moving in interstate commerce is not enough, unless the restraint is shown to have or is intended to have an effect upon prices in the market or otherwise to deprive purchasers or consumers of the advantages which they derive from free competition. * * * [Italics added.] [46]

The Court, therefore, held in the Apex case, that since the defendants there involved made no attack on competition in the market, and their purpose was not to suppress or restrict competition, but rather to attain some labor objective, their activities did not fall within the prohibitions of the Act. The Court specifically left untouched the boycott cases and, indeed, affirmed the doctrine of those cases that the range of proscribed restraints is not exhausted by price fixing and such suppression of competition as substantially fixes price. And this conclusion is reenforced by the Fashion Guild case, supra, decided subsequent to the Apex case. In the Fashion Guild case which, as we have noted, closely parallels the instant situation, the contention was made that the combination there involved could not violate the Serman Act since there was no finding that it fixed or regulated prices, limited production, or resulted in a deterioration of the quality of goods. The Court, in rejecting this contention, declared (p. 466) that "action falling into these three categories does not exhaust the types of conduct banned by the [46] For other similar statements in the Apex case, see pp. 493, 497.

Sherman and Clayton Acts" and (p. 467) that "While a conspiracy to fix prices is illegal, an intent to increase prices is not an ever-present essential of conduct amounting to a violation" of those Acts.

In any event the very test of suppression or restriction of competition embodied in the Apex case is plainly met here. The purpose of the conspiracy in this case was to eliminate the competition of Group Health, and thereby to deprive purchasers and consumers—potential patients in need of medical care—of the advantages which accrue to them from free competition in the market. The suppression of competition by these means is plainly no less onerous than the suppression arising when market prices are manipulated or controlled.[9]

B. Petitioners' Conspiracy to Restrain Group Health in Its Business of Providing Medical Care and Hospitalization Was in Restraint of TRADE Within the Meaning of Section 3

If, as we submit, petitioners' activities constituted a "restraint" within the intendment of the [9] While the words "marketing" and "market" are not customarily used with reference to medical service, the various physicians who, in a given locality, hold themselves out as ready to serve the public are, from the standpoint of restraint of trade or restraint of competition, in all respects analogous to the body of vendors who, in a particular locality, are engaged in offering goods for sale to the public. The market is the composite of all purveyors of goods or services, on the one hand, and of all potential purchasers or consumers thereof, on the other hand.

clause "restraint of trade" as used in the Sherman Act, we reach the second branch of the case, whether that which was restrained was "trade" within the meaning of the same clause.

Preliminarily, the exact nature of this second issue must be delimited; petitioners, we submit, have mistaken its scope. In examining whether "trade" was involved here, petitioners' main contention (Br. 29–31) rests upon the hypothesis that, for their conviction to be sustained, it must be established that the word "trade" encompasses an individual doctor's practice of his calling and that any restraint upon such practice is a restraint of trade within the meaning of the Act. But no such broad issue is tendered by this case. Rather, the "trade" which was here the object of restraint was Group Health's business of providing medical care and hospitalization in return for the payment of money as dues. The issue on this branch of the case, therefore, is whether the restraint of that business of Group Health was a restraint of trade.

That this is the issue appears plainly from the indictment and the district court's view of the case. The indictment charged a conspiracy to prevent Group Health from providing medical care by means of group practice on a risk-sharing prepayment basis. It alleged that AMA had been long opposed to practice on this basis (R. 7); that it had used its Journal to express publicly such opposition (R. 9); that it had used its Principles of Medical Ethics to condemn such practice as "unethical" (R. 10); and that after Group Health had been organized to furnish medical care on the basis opposed by petitioners they conspired to restrain it from succeeding in its endeavor (R. 14–15).

The indictment also charged that, as part of the conspiracy to destroy Group Health, petitioners combined to restrain the members of Group Health, the doctors on its staff, other doctors, and the Washington hospitals (R. 14–15). Petitioners assert (Br. 32) that the district court instructed the jury that restraint on the trade of any one of these five "classes" was sufficient to convict. On the basis of this interpretation of the instructions, they urge that if restraint on the activities of any one of the five is not a restraint of trade prohibited by Section 3, the judgments of conviction should be reversed,[42] and that, therefore, it is necessary to determine whether Section 3 applies to restraints [42] Petitioners also contend (Br. 32) that their motions for judgment n. o. v., for a new trial, and in arrest of judgment, present the same issue, namely, whether the convictions can stand if restraint on any one of the five activities in question is not forbidden by Section 3. But these motions raised no such issue. They challenged convictions upon grounds not now material and upon the ground (1) that the entire evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction and (2) that the indictment failed to charge any offense under Section 3 (R 1517–24).

upon "the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services" (Br. 81).[43]

Petitioners have, however, mistaken the district court's instructions to the jury. Under these instructions the jury, before convicting, was required to find that petitioners were engaged in a conspiracy to restrain the operations and business of Group Health. The district court advised the jury that the indictment alleged that petitioners conspired to restrain Group Health, the doctors on its staff, other doctors, and the Washington hospitals (R. 1507–8). But it further advised the jury that the indictment alleged that the "plan and purpose" of the conspiracy was to "hinder and ob-

[43] More precisely, petitioners insist (Br. 29–32) that each of the following five activities must be shown to be "trade": (1) Group Health's activities; (2) the activities of Group Health's members; (3) the activities of the medical staff of Group Health; (4) the practice of medicine generally; and (5) the activities of the Washington hospitals.

The district court made no mention of the allegation that petitioners conspired to restrain the members of Group Health (R. 1507–8) and thus it brought to the jury's attention restraint of four types of activity, not five. While we submit that the issue involves only the first activity—of Group Health—we show at a subsequent point (pp. 61–64) that in any event restraint of an individual in the practice of medicine is a restraint of trade. Our argument on that point covers both the third and fourth activities mentioned above. That the restraint of activities of the hospitals constituted restraint of trade is shown both by our argument relating to Group Health (infra, pp. 57–61) and by the argument concerning the broader issue whether restraint of the practice of medicine or rendering medical services is a restraint of trade.

struct" Group Health and the doctors on its staff, in certain specified ways (R. 1508). It then instructed the jury (ibid.):

> To sustain that charge the Government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a conspiracy did in fact exist to restrain trade in the District in at least one of the several ways alleged, and according to the particular purpose and plan set forth. * * * [Italics added.]

Under this instruction the jury, in order to convict, was required to find not only that there was a conspiracy to restrain trade in one of the several ways mentioned by the court (i. e., to restrain Group Health, its doctors, other doctors, or the hospitals) but also that the plan and purpose of the conspiracy was to obstruct and interfere with Group Health in its business of providing medical care for its members. The jury was instructed, in other words, that restraint upon the business of Group Health was an essential element of the conspiracy charged against petitioners.

That this was the effect of the district court's instructions is further shown by the portion of its charge dealing with the opposing contentions of the parties. The court charged (R. 1509):

> The Government claims that the evidence proves the medical societies were opposed to Group Health and its plan of group medical care on a fixed prepayment basis; that they feared competition by that method of practice as against the fee-for-service method of organized physicians; that to obstruct and destroy such competition the medical societies, with certain officers and members of the hospitals, conspired to prevent successful operation of Group Health's plan by imposing restraints on physicians affiliated with Group Health * * *.

* * * * *

If you believe the contention of the Government is established beyond a reasonable doubt, then the conspiracy is made out * * *.

It also charged (R. 1510):

If it be true, as defendants claim, that the District Society, acting only to protect its organization, * * * adopted reasonable rules and measures to those ends, not calculated to restrain Group Health, there would be no guilt * * *." [Italics added.]

"The Court charged that there would be criminal intent if the defendants' purpose was to do acts the natural and probable effect of which would be to impose "any of the restraints alleged" (R. 1510). But if there was ambiguity in this language or in that quoted from R. 1508 (supra, p. 55), petitioners are not entitled to reversal by reason of such ambiguity since they did not take exception thereto and did not ask the court to clarify these portions of the charge. Only in exceptional circumstances will an appellate tribunal set aside the verdict of a jury for an error not brought to the attention of the trial court, for example, if the error is "obvious" or would "seriously affect the fairness, integrity or public reputation of judicial proceedings." United States v. Atkinson, 297 U. S. 157, 160.

The court below adopted the Government's view as to the issue presented. It said that, "entirely apart from any direct restraint upon the practice of medicine itself," if a conspiracy was shown to restrain competition, raise prices, or otherwise control the market to the detriment of purchasers or consumers of medical or hospital services, "by destroying or injuring Group Health Association, it was sufficient to sustain conviction" (R. 1890).

In our view, therefore, the issue here is only whether restraint of the business of Group Health in supplying medical services and hospitalization is restraint of trade. We submit that there was such restraint.

In determining the range of activities which are protected against restraints prohibited by Sections 1 and 3 of the Sherman Act, Congress intended that the words of the Act be given a broad and liberal interpretation. Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers, Inc. v. United States, 286 U. S. 427, 434–435. The Act, as this Court noted in the Apex case (310 U. S. at pp. 493, 495), affords protection against restraints upon the marketing of both goods and services. The judicial history of the Sherman Act establishes the wide range of this protection, which extends to every commodity or service which is the subject of commerce, from railroad transportation (United States v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 226 U. S. 61) through commodities such as petroleum and its products (Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1) to the service of dyeing or cleaning clothes (Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers, Inc. v. United States, supra).

It can hardly be assumed that Congress intended to carve from this wide field of protected goods and services so basic and vital a service as the providing of medical care. For this, as we have noted, was precisely the business of Group Health. That organization had embarked upon a large-scale enterprise involving provision of medical service and hospitalization for some 2600 members and their dependents in return for the payment by these members of monthly dues.[45] In exchange for such payments, Group Health provided certain specified service. It was therefore engaged in a continuous course of dealing involving exchange of service for money and it was engaged in "trade" under the primary and most usual meaning of that word.

Petitioners contend (Br. 29) that since Group Health is a nonprofit organization its activities could not constitute "trade." But an organization may be engaged in trade although it does not carry on its operations for the purpose of earning a profit for itself or its stockholders.[46] Such an [45] Potentially the enterprise might embrace the 100,000-odd Government employees in the District of Columbia and their families. Petitioners' appreciation of the potential scope of Group Health's operations was, indeed, one of the primary considerations actuating them in forming the conspiracy to combat Group Health (supra, pp. 20, 23).

[46] See In the Matter of the Duty on the Estate of the Incorporated Council of Law Reporting for England and Wales, 22 Q. B. 279, 293, per Lord Coleridge:

"* * * it is not essential to the carrying on of a trade that the person engaged in it should make, or desire to make, organization may be engaged in "commerce" within the meaning of the commerce power of Congress. Associated Press v. National Labor Relations Board, 301 U. S. 103, 128–129. There are many nonprofit consumers' cooperatives engaged in wholesaling or retailing. Plainly they are not the less engaged in trade, nor is a restraint upon their business operations the less a restraint of trade, simply because they return to their customers, in lower prices or in "patronage dividends", the equivalent of the ordinary dealer's profit. Nonprofit cooperative associations have been held to be "doing business" in a variety of situations.[*] If their nonprofit character does not exclude them from this phrase, it clearly does not exclude them from the broad phrase "restraint of trade."

a profit by it. Though it may be true that in the great majority of cases the carrying-on of a trade does, in fact, include the idea of profit, yet the definition of the mere word 'trade' does not necessarily mean something by which a profit is made." * * *

Under a statute regulating corrupt political practices: La Belle v. Hennepin County Bar Ass'n, 206 Minn. 290, 294.

Petitioners also emphasize (Br. 17–20) this Court's references in the Apex case to the Sherman Act as prohibiting restraints of "business and commercial" transactions and restraints on "commercial" "business" competition; and they contend that restraints on competition in providing medical care and service cannot be regarded as within the Act since the competition is not "commercial" or "business." But, as we have noted, Group Health was engaged in business; the controversy between petitioners and Group Health, indeed, involved an effort by the former to destroy the business activities of the latter. Petitioners, representing one group of persons offering medical services, sought to eliminate the competition of another group with a different technique of offering such services. In any event, it is plain that this Court's use of the words "commercial" and "business" was only to underscore the distinction, there relevant, between restraints on the marketing of goods or services to purchasers or consumers and other kinds of restraints which merely impede commerce. For, as the Court observed (310 U. S. at pp. 486–487) a conspiracy to derail and rob an interstate train would not necessarily involve a violation of the Sherman Act. In such a case the essential element of "business" or "commercial" competition would probably be lacking, as it was in the Apex case; the Court utilized the words only in this sense, not in the sense of drawing distinctions between one kind of calling and another.

Thus we submit that since Group Health's business was the object of petitioners' restraint and since that business was trade in its primary sense, there was a "restraint of trade" within the meaning of the Act. It is therefore unnecessary to determine whether the restraint of an individual doctor in the pursuit of his calling is as such a prohibited restraint of trade. But if we are wrong in our view of the issue we submit that restraint upon the individual doctor in the practice of his calling falls within the prohibitions of the Act [48] since restraint upon this type of activity was included in the common law doctrine of restraint of trade.

The common law concept of restraint of trade was, as we have noted (supra, p. 43), incorporated into the Sherman Act. See Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469, 498.[49] Concerning the scope [48] Even the broader issue must, of course, be resolved with reference to the critical circumstances of the case—that the restraint upon the practice of individual doctors was entirely ancillary to, and for the purpose of, restraining the operations of an organization which, in substantial competition with petitioners' doctor members, had entered the field or market of providing medical care.

[49] In United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co., 85 Fed. 271 (C. C. A. 6) (affirmed 175 U. S. 211), which first judicially expounded the view that the Sherman Act was to be construed with reference to the common law doctrine of restraint of trade, the court said (p. 278), "it is certain that, if the contract of association which bound the defendants was void and unenforceable at the common law because in restraint of trade, it is within the inhibitions of the statute".

of the common law doctrine of restraint of trade, this Court said in Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 51:

> It is certain that at a very remote period the words "contract in restraint of trade" in England came to refer to some voluntary restraint put by contract by an individual on his right to carry on his trade or calling. * * * [Italics supplied.]

In England, from as early as 1793, a contract limiting a doctor in the pursuit of his calling has been consistently referred to as involving the doctrine of "restraint of trade."[50] Early American cases decided before the enactment of the Sherman Act recognized and followed the reasoning of the English cases.[51] In Gilman v. Dwight, 79 Mass. 356 (1849), the court, while holding that the contract limiting a doctor's practice was only in partial restraint of trade and therefore not unlawful, said (p. 359): "There is nothing in the nature of the business or profession [of a doctor], to which the contract relates, which takes it out of the ordinary rules applicable to contracts in partial restraint of trade." cited by the court below in United States v. American Medical Ass'n, 110 F. (2d) 703, 710.

The facts in Pratt v. British Medical Ass'n, [1919] 1 K. B. 244, are strikingly like those here.[52] This was a tort action to recover damages for a conspiracy to boycott the plaintiff doctors. They had joined the staff of an organization which had fallen under the ban of the defendant medical society because its members were opposed to what was called "contract practice." The plaintiffs were thereupon expelled from the society, and its members were, under the rules of the society, forbidden to consult with them. The court, in holding that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, said (pp. 274–275):

> Upon considering the rules in question I have arrived at the conclusion that they are in restraint of trade, and are void on the ground of public policy. They gravely, and in my view unnecessarily, interfere with the freedom of medical men in the pursuit of their calling, and they are, I think, injurious to the interests of the community at large. It may well be that the opinion I have just expressed will, if upheld, destroy the cogency of the defendants' scheme of boycott; but it leaves them with the safer and more kindly weapons of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument.

[52] The critical comments on the Pratt case in Ware and De Freville, Ltd. v. Motor Trade Ass'n, [1921] 3 K. B. 40, do not overrule or disapprove its basic doctrine.

In the present case the court below, in sustaining the validity of the indictment, carefully reviewed the authorities and concluded: [53]

> The indubitable effect of all of these cases, English and American, is to enlarge the common acceptation of the word "trade" when embraced in the phrase "restraint of trade" to cover all occupations in which men are engaged for a livelihood. * * *

The cases cited by petitioners (Br. 13–27) do not hold to the contrary. Most of these cases deal with the meaning of the word "trade" in a setting wholly foreign to the phrase "restraint of trade" as it is used in the Sherman Act.[54] Nor do the three cases—Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469; Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers, Inc. v. United States, 286 U. S. 427; and Federal Baseball Club v. National League, 259 U. S. 200—which arise under the Sherman Act reach the issue here. The Apex case, as we have noted (supra, p. 60) referred to "business" or "commercial" competition or [53] United States v. American Medical Ass'n, 110 F. (2d) 703, 710.

[54] In Federal Trade Commission v. Raladam Co., 283 U. S. 643, this Court was concerned with the question whether any competitor was shown to have been injured by the unfair trade practices of respondent, who sold an obesity remedy. Insofar as the Court referred to doctors at all, it held only that medical practitioners were not in competition with respondent; that they followed a "profession and not a trade, and are not engaged in the business of making or vending remedies but in prescribing them" (p. 653). Thus while the Court held doctors not to be competing with respondent, it stated that they were engaged in a business.

transactions in a context wholly unrelated to the question now presented. The Atlantic Cleaners case included (p. 436), in the course of its holding that restraint upon the service of cleaning and dyeing clothes was a restraint of trade forbidden by Section 3 of the Act, a quotation from The Schooner Nymph, 1 Summ. 516, 517–518, which stated that "Wherever any occupation, employment, or business is carried on for the purpose of profit, or gain, or a livelihood, not in the liberal arts or in the learned professions, it is constantly called a trade." That portion of this sentence upon which petitioners rely was plainly not pertinent to the question before the Court in the Atlantic Cleaners case, or before the court in The Schooner Nymph case. Similarly, the Baseball Club case is not decisive. It turned on the meaning of the word "commerce" as used in Sections 1 and 2 of the Act, and its holding that the restraint of baseball leagues was not a restraint of "trade or commerce" rested largely on the ground that there was no restraint of interstate commerce (pp. 208–209). That question, of course, is not present here.

PETITIONERS ARE NOT WITHIN ANY IMMUNITY CONFERRED BY SECTION 20 OF THE CLAYTON ACT

Section 20 of the Clayton Act provides that in any case "between an employer and employees" growing out of a dispute "concerning terms or conditions of employment" certain specified conduct—strikes, peaceful picketing, peaceable assembly, ceasing to patronize—shall not "be considered or held to be violations of any law of the United States." The section is not limited to disputes between an employer and his immediate employees; it extends its protection to disputes (otherwise within the scope of the section) where the parties to the controversy do not stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee. United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219.

Petitioners contend that Group Health engaged the services of doctors on a full-time, salaried basis; that it engaged the services of doctors who held membership in petitioners' organizations; that petitioners objected to these features of Group Health's plan of providing medical care; that the present case therefore grew out of a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment; that this dispute was between an employer (Group Health) and employees (petitioners);[55] and that, accordingly, petitioners' conduct is rendered immune from prosecution by Section 20 of the Clayton Act.

[55] Although petitioners were engaged in boycotting the doctors on Group Health's staff and were endeavoring to bring them into disrepute with their fellow doctors, under the contention now being considered petitioners cast themselves, as the court below said (R. 1894), "in the role of" organizations representing the interests of these boycotted doctors.

We submit that petitioners are clearly not within any immunity conferred by Section 20. It grants immunity only when there is a dispute concerning some question of employment involving the employer-employee relationship. Here there was no such dispute.

Three essential and related factors present here sharply distinguish the controversy between petitioners and Group Health from the kind of controversy which is immunized by the Clayton Act: first, the nature of petitioners and their members; second the nature of the controversy itself; and third, the nature of relationship of the doctors on the Group Health staff to Group Health. Any one of these elements precludes subsuming the instant situation under the class of labor disputes contemplated by the Act.

One element normally essential to a dispute protected by the Clayton Act is the presence on one side—the side the activities of which are immunized from prosecution—of employees, or their representatives, or both. This element is entirely lacking here. There were no employees, potential or otherwise, connected with petitioners. The doctor-members (other than the doctors serving Group Health, whose status is discussed below) whom petitioners represented were not employees of any employer; rather they were independent entrepreneurs who sell their services on a case-to-case basis. The doctor-members' income was received from patients, and it can hardly be contended that an employer-employee relationship exists between the doctor-members and their patients. Each doctor member is, therefore, actually in business for himself, and each comprises an independent selling unit analogous to any other individual enterprise. Plainly, if all individual independent business men operating in a given field combined, their combination would be not a labor union, since they are not employees and do not wish to be employees, but rather a trade association. Just as an organization representing its members who catch and sell fish is not protected by the Clayton Act,[56] so petitioners, since not representing employees, are not protected here.

For similar reasons, the instant controversy was not a labor dispute within the meaning of the Clayton Act. Here petitioners sought to obstruct and defeat the operations of Group Health. The indictment charged and the evidence showed that the reason for forming this conspiracy was petitioners' fear of the competition of that organization and of the plan under which it offered medical service to members of the public. As the court below said, "The fact of commercial and business competition is the predominant note in the controversy which preceded the initiation of criminal prosecutions in this case" (R. 1890). The controversy out of which the present case arose was between petitioners, representing the body of organized doctors practicing on a fee-for-service basis, who desired to retain their existing monopoly of the business of furnishing medical care, and Group Health, an organization which challenged this monopoly by offering to provide medical care by means of group practice on a risk-sharing, prepayment basis. The situation is analogous to that which would exist if concerns engaged in marketing some commodity should combine to prevent a new competitor from intruding into their field of trade and should profess that the purpose of their combination was to protect the public against purchase of inferior goods.

The relationship between petitioners and Group Health was thus that of competitors, not that of employer and employee. Petitioners were not engaged in promoting, nor did they have any desire to promote, the interests of the employees of Group Health (assuming arguendo that the doctors on its staff are properly designated as employees). They were not seeking to procure for these doctors higher pay or more favorable working conditions. They were not seeking recognition as the collective-bargaining representative of Group Health doctors. They were not seeking jobs on Group Health's staff for their own members. On the contrary, as in Columbia River Packers Ass'n, Inc. v. Hinton, 315

U. S. 143, petitioners did not seek "employment" with Group Health and it was petitioners' desire that its members and other doctors "continue to operate as independent businessmen, free from such controls as an employer might exercise" (p. 147). Indeed, it was the very essence of petitioners' objective to destroy Group Health altogether so that it could not utilize the services of any doctors at all."[57]

We submit that the Columbia River case is decisive on this aspect of the case. The plaintiff there operated a fish cannery. The defendants were a union affiliated with the CIO, its members, and officers. The union acted as sales agent for its members in selling the fish caught by the members; in its sales contracts the union required the buyer to agree to purchase fish exclusively from union members. When the plaintiff cannery declined to make such an agreement, the union members refused to sell to it and it sought an injunction,

[57] It is in this respect, among others, that New Negro Alliance v. Sanitary Grocery Co., 303 U. S. 552, relied upon by petitioners (Br. 54–55) is inapposite. In that case, the objective of New Negro Alliance was the seeking of employment for those whom it represented. The groups which New Negro Alliance picketed and boycotted were, directly or indirectly, potential employers and the persons whose cause the Alliance espoused were their potential employees. In the instant case, the situation is exactly the contrary, for petitioners did not in any way seek "employment" for its members, but wished to end any possibility of such "employment."

charging a violation of the Sherman Act. This Court held that the jurisdictional limitations imposed by the Norris-LaGuardia Act were inapplicable because the case did not involve a labor dispute within the meaning of that act.[58] The Court said (pp. 145–147):

> That a dispute among businessmen over the terms of a contract for the sale of fish is something different from a "controversy concerning terms or conditions of employment, or concerning the association * * * of persons * * * seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment" calls for no extended discussion. This definition and the stated public policy of the Act—aid to "the individual unorganized worker * * * commonly helpless * * * to obtain acceptable terms and conditions of employment" and protection of the worker "from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor"—make it clear that the attention of Congress was focussed upon disputes affecting the employer-employee relationship, and that the Act was not intended to have application to disputes over the sale of commodities.

[58] The holding and the reasoning of the Court obviously apply with even greater force to the narrower language used in Section 20 of the Clayton Act, namely, disputes "between an employer and employees * * * concerning terms or conditions of employment." Cf. United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U. S. 219.

> * * * the statutory classification, however broad, of parties and circumstances to which a "labor dispute" may relate does not expand the application of the Act to include controversies upon which the employer-employee relationship has no bearing. Our decisions in New Negro Alliance v. Grocery Co., 303 U. S. 552, and Milk Wagon Drivers' Union v. Lake Valley Co., 311 U. S. 91, give no support to the respondents' contrary contention, for in both cases the employer-employee relationship was the matrix of the controversy.

In addition, even assuming that petitioners and their members can be subsumed under the class of employee representatives and employees contemplated by the Clayton Act, the latter's protection is still inapplicable because of the relationship of Group Health to the doctors which comprise its staff. Here we assume, contrary to the actual situation, that petitioners can be regarded as trade unions representing their doctor members with reference to employment, and that petitioners also sought to "represent" the Group Health doctors. Nevertheless the relationship between Group Health and the doctors on its staff lacked the essential element of the kind of employer-employee relationship contemplated by the Clayton Act.

The Group Health doctors were not employees. As the court below observed (R. 1895)

"For a fixed sum they assumed to render services when needed. In the rendering of those services, when needed, they are not subject to supervision by the Association [Group Health]. Originally independent contractors, they do not lose that status by contracting to perform unsupervised services." It is unnecessary for this Court to decide whether doctors can ever be in such a position as to create an employee-employer relationship in respect of their medical services. Indeed, it may be that if doctors engaged on a contract basis in industrial medicine, or internes of a hospital working on a salary basis, formed a union for collective bargaining purposes, they would be protected by the Clayton Act. No such issue was presented here, however, since whatever characteristics of an employer-employee relationship may exist in other situations involving doctors, that relationship was absent in the instant case in respect of Group Health and the doctors who were on its staff.

We submit that on the basis of any one of these three factors—the nature of petitioners and their members, of the controversy here involved, and of the relationship between Group Health and its medical staff, the Clayton Act is inapplicable. It follows that these three elements combined patently remove the instant case from the operation of that Act.

The United States of America.

On Writs of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

[January 18, 1943.]

Mr. Justice Roberts delivered the opinion of the Court.

Petitioners have been indicted and convicted of conspiring to violate § 3 of the Sherman Act,[1] by restraining trade or commerce in the District of Columbia. They are respectively corporations of Illinois and of the District of Columbia. Joined with them as defendants were two unincorporated associations and twenty-one individuals, some of whom are officers or employes of one or other of the petitioners, the remainder being physicians practicing in the District of Columbia and members of the petitioners serving, as to some of them, on various committees of the petitioners having to do with professional ethics and with the practice of medicine by petitioners' members.

For the moment it is enough to say that the indictment charged a conspiracy to hinder and obstruct the operations of Group Health Association, Inc., a nonprofit corporation organized by Government employes to provide medical care and hospitalization on a risk-sharing prepayment basis. Group Health employed physicians on a full time salary basis and sought hospital facilities for the treatment of members and their families. This plan was contrary to the code of ethics of the petitioners. The indictment charges that, to prevent Group Health from carrying out its objects, the defendants conspired to coerce practicing physicians, members of the petitioners, from accepting employment under Group Health, to restrain practicing physicians, members of the petitioners, from consulting with Group Health's doctors who might desire to consult with them, and to restrain hospitals in and about the City of Washington from affording facilities for the care of patients of Group Health's physicians.

The District Court sustained a demurrer to the indictment on the grounds, amongst others, that neither the practice of medicine nor the business of Group Health is trade as the term is used in the Sherman Act.[2] On appeal the Court of Appeals reversed, holding that the restraint of trade prohibited by the statute may extend both to medical practice and to the operations of Group Health.[3]

The case then went to trial in the District Court. Certain defendants were acquitted by direction of the judge. As to the others, the case was submitted to the jury which found the petitioners guilty, and all the other defendants not guilty. From judgments of conviction the petitioners appealed to the Court of Appeals, which reiterated its ruling as to the applicability of § 3 of the Sherman Act, considered alleged trial errors, and affirmed the judgments.[4]

We granted certiorari limited to three questions which we thought important: 1. Whether the practice of medicine and the rendering of medical services as described in the indictment are "trade" under § 3 of the Sherman Act. 2. Whether the indictment charged or the evidence proved "restraints of trade" under § 3 of the Sherman Act. 3. Whether a dispute concerning terms and conditions of employment under the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts was involved, and, if so, whether petitioners were interested therein, and therefore immune from prosecution under the Sherman Act.

First. Much argument has been addressed to the question whether a physician's practice of his profession constitutes trade under § 3 of the Sherman Act. In the light of what we shall say with respect to the charge laid in the indictment, we need not consider or decide this question.

Group Health is a membership corporation engaged in business or trade. Its corporate activity is the consummation of the cooperative effort of its members to obtain for themselves and their families medical service and hospitalization on a risk-sharing prepayment basis. The corporation collects its funds from members. With these funds physicians are employed and hospitalization procured on behalf of members and their dependents. The fact that it is cooperative, and procures service and facilities on behalf of its members only, does not remove its activities from the sphere of business.[5]

If, as we hold, the indictment charges a single conspiracy to restrain and obstruct this business it charges a conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce within the statute. As the Court of Appeals properly remarked, the calling or occupation of the individual physicians charged as defendants is immaterial if the purpose and effect of their conspiracy was such obstruction and restraint of the business of Group Health. The court said:[6] "And, of course, the fact that defendants are physicians and medical organizations is of no significance, for Sec. 3 prohibits 'any person' from imposing the proscribed restraints . . ." It is urged that this was said before this court decided Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U. S. 469. But nothing in that decision contradicts the proposition stated. Whether the conspiracy was aimed at restraining or destroying competition, or had as its purpose a restraint of the free availability of medical or hospital services in the market, the Apex case places it within the scope of the statute.[7]

Second. This brings us to consider whether the indictment charged, or the evidence proved, such a conspiracy in restraint of trade. The allegations of the indictment are lengthy and detailed. After naming and describing the defendants and the Washington hospitals, it devotes many paragraphs to a recital of the plan adopted by Group Health and alleges that, principally for economic reasons, and because of fear of business competition, the defendants have opposed such projects.

The indictment then recites the size and importance of the petitioners, enumerates means by which they can prevent their members from serving Group Health plans, or consulting with physicians who work for Group Health, and can prevent hospitals from affording facilities to Group Health's doctors.

In charging the conspiracy, the indictment describes the organization and operation of Group Health and states that, from January 1937 to the date of the indictment, the defendants, the Washington hospitals, and others cognizant of the premised facts, "have combined and conspired together for the purpose of restraining trade in the District of Columbia, . . ." In five paragraphs the pleading states the purposes of the conspiracy. The first is the purpose of restraining Group Health from doing business; the second, that of restraining members of Group Health from obtaining adequate medical care according to Group Health's plan; the third, that of restraining doctors serving Group Health in the pursuit of their calling; the fourth, that of restraining doctors not on Group Health's staff from practicing in the District of Columbia in pursuance of their calling; and the fifth, that of restraining the Washington hospitals in the business of operating their hospitals.

After reciting certain of the proceedings and plans adopted to forward the conspiracy, the indictment alleges that the conspiracy, and the intended restraints which have resulted from it, have been effectuated "in the following manner and by the following means"; and alleges that the defendants have combined and conspired "with the plan and purpose to hinder and obstruct Group Health Association, Inc. in procuring and retaining on its medical staff qualified doctors and to hinder and obstruct the doctors serving on that staff from obtaining consultations with other doctors and specialists practicing in the District of Columbia." It states that, pursuant to this plan and purpose, the defendants have resorted to certain means to accomplish the end, and recounts them.

In another paragraph, the defendants are charged to have conspired with "the plan and purpose to hinder and obstruct Group Health Association, Inc. in obtaining access to hospital facilities for its members and to hinder and obstruct the doctors on the medical staff of Group Health from treating and operating on their patients in Washington hospitals." It is alleged that, pursuant to this plan and purpose, defendants have done certain acts to deter hospitals with which they were connected and over which they exercised influence, from affording hospital facilities to Group Health's doctors.

The petitioners' contention is, in effect, that the indictment charges five separate conspiracies defined by their separate and recited purposes, namely, conspiracy to obstruct the business of Group Health, to obstruct its members from obtaining the benefit of its activities, to obstruct its doctors from serving it, to obstruct other doctors in the practice of their calling, and to restrain the business of Washington hospitals. The petitioners say that they were entitled to have the trial court rule upon the sufficiency in law of each of these charges and, as this was not done, the general verdict of guilty cannot stand. They urge that even though some of the named purposes relate to the business of Group Health, and that business be held trade within the meaning of the statute, yet, as the practice of medicine by doctors not employed by Group Health is not trade, and the operations of Washington hospitals are not trade, the last two purposes specified cannot constitute violations of § 3 and the jury should have been so instructed. In this view they insist that the jury may have convicted them of restraining physicians unconnected with Group Health, or of restraining hospitals, and, if so, the verdict and judgment cannot stand.

If in fact the indictment charges a single conspiracy to obstruct and restrain the business of Group Health, and if the recited purposes are really only subsidiary to that main purpose or aim, or merely different steps toward the accomplishment of that single end, and if the cause was submitted to the jury on this theory, these contentions fail.

When the case first went to the Court of Appeals that tribunal construed the indictment as charging but a single conspiracy. It said:[8] "The charge, stated in condensed form, is that the medical societies combined and conspired to prevent the successful operation of Group Health's plan, and the steps by which this was to be effectuated were as follows: (1) to impose restraints on physicians affiliated with Group Health by threat of expulsion or actual expulsion from the societies; (2) to deny them the essential professional contacts with other physicians; and (3) to use the coercive power of the societies to deprive them of hospital facilities for their patients."

[8] 110 F. 2d 711.

In the trial, the District Court conformed its rulings to this decision and submitted the case to the jury on the theory that the indictment charged but one conspiracy.

We think the courts below correctly construed the indictment. It is true that, in describing the conspiracy, five purposes are stated which the conspiracy was intended to further, but, in a later paragraph, still in the charging part of the instrument, it is alleged that the purpose was to hinder and obstruct Group Health in various ways and by various coercive measures, which are identical with the "purposes" before stated. The trial judge, after calling the jury's attention to the juxtaposition of these two formulations of the charge, added:

"These purposes, it is alleged, were to be attained by certain coercive measures against the hospitals and doctors designed to interfere with employment of doctors by Group Health and use of the hospitals by members of its medical staff and their patients. . . ."

In immediate context the judge added:

"To sustain that charge the Government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a conspiracy did in fact exist to restrain trade in the District in at least one of the several ways alleged, and according to the particular purpose and plan set forth."

At another point the trial judge summarized the Government's claim that the evidence in the case showed opposition by the petitioners to Group Health and its plan; that they feared competition between the plan and the organized physicians and that, to obstruct and destroy such competition, the petitioners conspired with certain officers and members and hospitals to prevent successful operation of Group Health's plan by imposing restraints upon physicians affiliated with Group Health, by denying such physicians professional contact and consultation with other physicians, and by coercing the hospitals to deny facilities for the treatment of their patients. Again the judge charged: "Was there a conspiracy to restrain trade in one or more of the ways alleged?" And again: "If it be true . . . that the District Society, acting only to protect its organization, regulate fair dealing among its members, and maintain and advance the standards of medical practice, adopted reasonable rules and measures to those ends, not calculated to restrain Group Health, there would be no guilt, though the indirect effect may have been to cause some restraint against Group Health."

We need add but a word as to the sufficiency of the proof to sustain the charge. The petitioners in effect challenge the sufficiency, in law, of the indictment. They hardly suggest that if the pleading charges an offense there was no substantial evidence of the commission of the offense. But, however the argument is viewed, we agree with the courts below that the case was one for submission to a jury. No purpose would be served by detailed discussion of the proofs.

Third. We hold that the dispute between petitioners and their members, and Group Health and its members, was not one concerning terms and conditions of employment within the Clayton[9] and the Norris-LaGuardia[10] acts.

Section 20 of the Clayton Act, as expanded by § 13 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, is the only legislation which can have any bearing on the case. Section 20 applies to cases between "an employer and employees, or between employers and employees, or between employees, or between persons employed and persons seeking employment, involving, or growing out of, a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment . . ."; and provides that none of the acts specified in the section shall "be considered or held to be violations of any law of the United States."

Section 13 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act defines a labor dispute as including "any controversy concerning terms or conditions of employment, or concerning the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing, or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment, regardless of whether or not the disputants stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee." It also provides that "A case shall be held to involve or to grow out of a labor dispute when the case involves persons who are engaged in the same industry, trade, craft, or occupation; or have direct or indirect interests therein; or who are employees of the same employer; or who are members of the same or an affiliated organization of employers or employees; whether such dispute is (1) between one or more employers or associations of employers and one or more employees or associations of employees; (2) between one or more employers or associations of employers and one or more employers or associations of employers; or (3) between one or more employees or associations of employees and one or more employees or associations of employees; or when the case involves any conflicting or competing interests in a 'labor dispute' (as defined in this section) of 'persons participating or interested' therein (as defined in this section)."

[10] 47 Stat. 70, §§ 4, 5, 6, 8 and 13, 29 U. S. C. §§ 104, 105, 106, 108 and 113.

Citing these provisions the petitioners insist that their dispute with Group Health was as to terms and conditions of employment of the doctors employed by Group Health since the District Medical Society objected to its members, or other doctors, taking employment under Group Health on the terms offered by that corporation. They assert that § 20 of the Clayton Act, as expanded by § 13 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, includes all persons and associations involved in a dispute over terms and conditions of employment who are engaged in the same industry, trade, craft, or occupation, or have direct or indirect interests therein. And they rely upon our decisions in New Negro Alliance v. Sanitary Grocery Co., 303 U. S. 552, and Drivers Union v. Lake Valley Co., 311 U. S. 91, as bringing within the coverage of the acts a third party, even though that party be a corporation not in trade, and employers and employers' associations even though they be only indirectly interested in the controversy. They insist that as the petitioners and Group Health, its members and doctors, other doctors and the hospitals, were either directly or indirectly interested in a controversy which concerned the terms of employment of doctors by Group Health, the case falls within the exemption of the statutes and they cannot be held criminally liable for a violation of the Sherman Act.

It seems plain enough that the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts were not intended to immunize such a dispute as is presented in this case. Nevertheless, it is not our province to define the purpose of Congress apart from what it has said in its enactments, and, if the petitioners' activities fall within the classes defined by the acts, we are bound to accord petitioners, especially in a criminal case, the benefit of the legislative provisions.

We think, however, that, upon analysis, it appears that petitioners' activities are not within the exemptions granted by the statutes. Although the Government asserts the contrary, we shall assume that the doctors having contracts with Group Health were employes of that corporation. The petitioners did not represent present or prospective employes. Their purpose was to prevent anyone from taking employment under Group Health. They were interested in the terms and conditions of the employment only in the sense that they desired wholly to prevent Group Health from functioning by having any employes. Their objection was to its method of doing business. Obviously there was no dispute between Group Health and the doctors it employed or might employ in which petitioners were either directly or indirectly interested.

In truth, the petitioners represented physicians who desired that they and all others should practice independently on a fee for service basis where whatever arrangement for payment each had was a matter that lay between him and his patient in each individual case of service or treatment. The petitioners were not an association of employes in any proper sense of the term. They were an association of individual practitioners each exercising his calling as an independent unit. These independent physicians, and the two petitioning associations which represent them, were interested solely in preventing the operation of a business conducted in corporate form by Group Health. In this aspect the case is very like Columbia River Packers Association, Inc., v. Hinton, 315 U. S. 143. What was there decided requires a holding that the petitioners' activities were not exempted by the Clayton and the Norris-LaGuardia Acts from the operation of the Sherman Act.

The judgments are affirmed.
